Some Advantages Offered By The Presbyterian College of South Carolina

By Dr. D. M. Douglas

This is the time young men expecting to graduate from high school this spring begin to decide upon the college they will enter in September. I have been asked to set forth some advantages offered by the Presbyterian College of South Carolina.

First. Location—The location of a college contributes greatly to the happiness and efficiency of a student. When he goes to college he does not want to feel that he is getting out of the world. He wants to feel that he is accessible to all parts of the state, and can be easily reached by home folks. Besides he wants to be in a town where something is going on and he feels that he is in touch with people, and have some form of amusement and entertainment. Clinton is a town of 4000 inhabitants. It has every modern improvement, including paved streets and sidewalks. It is accessible to all parts of the state, being located on the Seaboard Air Line from New York to Birmingham, and on the Atlantic Coast Line from Charleston to Greenville. It can not only be reached in six or eight hours from any part of the state by rail, but is equally accessible by automobile. It is on the Piedmont Highway from Charleston to Asheville, and the Calhoun Highway from Cheraw to Athens. It is 40 miles from Spartanburg, 45 from Greenville, and 65 from Columbia.

Clinton is not only a town of life and activity, and easily accessible from all parts of the state, both by rail and automobile, but it is healthy and enjoys a stimulating climate. It has an elevation of over 800 feet and is free from malaria. Practically every student who enters the College gains weight and is built up physically.

Second. Scolarship—It may seem like a strange statement, but the world is far more serious today than it was five years ago, is calling for a higher state of efficiency and demanding a fair return for its money. When a young man is selecting his college one of the first things for him to determine is the scholarship requirements of the institution, not only the entrance requirements, but the kind of work required by the college of its students. When a young man enters college he should enter with the determination to get an education and seek a college education which is going to require him to study and make a man of himself through hard, efficient work. The time for young men to enter college to have a good time has passed.

The Presbyterian College is a member of the American Association of Colleges and Universities. It has been rated high by everyone who has investigated its work and equipment. Its graduates are not only accepted by the best universities and post graduate schools in America but after being accepted are taking their places among the very first in their classes. There are 16 men devoting their entire time to the work of the College. There is a full professor, doing nothing but teaching, to every fifteen students. This assures good teaching and close individual attention.

Third. Athletics—No young man should enter college simply to take part in athletics ,though every full-blooded, healthy American is interested in athletics and should be. But only athletics will not contribute much to a student's success after graduation. A young man should enter college in order to secure an education and take part in athletics for the pleasure he gets out of it and the good of the college. The Presbyterian College has the best athletic director in the state, Mr. W. A. Johnson. He has been with the College eight years. Everybody in the state interested in athletics knows him. He is not only an excellent coach, but a hightoned gentleman. He has contracted to be with the College for the next two years so there is no place where a young man can bet better training in the different branches of college athletics.

The College is now completing a new modern athletic field. There are football and baseball grounds enclosed in a quarter mile running track. An architect is drawing plans for a handsome gymnasium containing swimming pool and every modern improvement. It will cost something like $80,000. This gymnasium will be built as soon as sufficient money is collected from the Million Dollar Campaign to justify the College in giving the contract.

Fourth. Military Training—After the war there was considerable prejudice against military training. No one can object to it as it is conducted in this College. On the contrary everyone must recognize the advantage it affords. Our military training is in the hands of the Government. The officer assigned is Col. Edward L. Glasgow, a colonel in the United States Army, a real Christian gentleman, and a most efficient military officer. The training is not strenous. The Government requires only five hours a week, a good part of which is devoted to setting up exercises and other physical training such as every young man needs. There are only two drills a week. The text book work is on subjects such as sanitation, map reading and drawing, such information as any educated man should have. It is wonderful to see the improvement most men make under this training. Often a scrawny humpshouldered freshman enters college and graduates with a good figure and attractive carriage.

This military training is also a financial assistance to the students, The work is compulsory to Freshmen and Sophomores but optional with Juniors and Seniors. During the Freshman and Sophomore years the Government gives a complete uniform but nothing else. During the Junior and Senior years the Government gives in addition to uniform, 40 cents a day for the entire twelve months of the year, which amounts to $146. Students have the privilege of attending summer camps at the expense of the Government.

Fifth. Moral Influences—Frequent-

AN APPRECIATION

Sometimes when report of a man's death is "highly exaggerated," he has the pleasure of reading his own obituary and it must be very entertaining. Writing an appreciation of a living man is like writing an obituary before the event, for on the one side you may be thought to be too scant in your terms of approbation and on the other you have to avoid the charge of being fulsome. If you criticize you may offend, if you do not criticize you may be charged with lack of courage. So you must necessarily steer your course, as best you may, between Scylla and Charybdis. Some one has pled that we bestow flowers in this life instead of waiting to heap them on the grave. Perhaps it is in that spirit that we now write.

Intrinsically the idea "Dr. Douglas" and "P. C." are so interwoven and blended as to imply one the other, as almost, in people's minds, to be synonymous, certainly to be complementary. From that Commencement day of 1911, when Dr. Douglas came straight from "the Vestibule" to the platform and in a brief address won his place in the hearts of the throng in the packed auditorium, an identity was established and every year, as the College, through his untiring efforts, has "lengthened its cords and strengthened its stakes," the blend of ideas, the identity has become more complete.

With advancing ideas that never were regarded as impractical and visionary, with a horizon ever widening but always retaining contact with the "earth earthy," with proposals that were bold and forth-reaching, but never counted vagarious, he has steadily enlarged the plant, improved the equipment, developed the curriculum and the teaching force and increased the attendance; and this in spite of well organized and shrewdly conducted opposition from a certain quarter. When he assumed the presidency of the College many regarded it as a first-rate high school and frankly said so; today it is recognized as ranking with the best colleges in the South. Then many Presbyterians in the Synod did not know there was such an institution; now the large majority in the Southern Assembly

Walter A. Johnson, The Coach Who Put Presbyterian College On The Map

By L. S. McMillan

The students and friends of the College are delighted to know that Coach Johnson has decided to come back and handle the athletics of the college for two years more. We do not boast when we say that in Johnson we have one of the best all-round coaches in the South. He knows all departments of athletics and knows how to handle men to obtain the best results. There has been many things said and written about Coach Johnson since he has been connected with this institution, and many more things could be said in regard to his wonderful record at P. C., but just at present we wish to take up his high school career.

Walter Johnson is a native of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He received his preliminary education in the public schools of the South Side of the city. While in the South Division High School, he won fame in all branches of athletics. The Milwaukee Journal says: "In football, Johnson is considered one of the most reliable men on the team, and the most consistent ground gainer and open field tackler that has worn the school's colors in a long time." He was chosen as the city all-star fullback for two seasons. His wonderful work at fullback while on South Division's team, won the only the championship for his school, but won a name for himself that will ever stamp him as Milwaukee's greatest fullback.

After finishing the high school in 1911, Johnson decided to carry on his work in athletics. So he chose the best physical school in the country, Normal School of Physical Education, Battle Creek, Michigan. In this institution where all the students were good athletes and competition was of the highest degree, we find Johnson taking part in all branches and making good in everything undertaken. The school put out several winning teams. In football, Johnson was again selected as one of the most reliable men on the team. He was captain of the famous eleven that gave the University of Detroit a tough battle. He was also guard on a championship basket ball team. We cannot go into detail of Johnson's career while at Battle Creek, but we will say that he was one of the best all-round athletes in the institution and stood high in his classes.

Our next picture will be of Johnson at the Presbyterian College of South Carolina. He came here in 1915 and labored hard to put P. C. on the map. His work has not been in vain. As a physical director, he ranks among the best in the country. The R. O. T. C. inspector while making his tour of inspections said of Johnson's physical exercises: "They are the best I have seen anywhere."

Not only is Johnson proficient in physical work, but he is one of the best coaches in the state. His record in football has been published in the Greenville News and other papers of the state. He has put out winning teams in all branches—football, basket ball, base ball and track.

We are proud of our Coach and we are certainly delighted to know that he will be with us again. He hopes to do more next year in developing more efficient teams, and we know that he will for he never gives up. A Freshman schedule in football will be arranged and a competent Assistant

COACH JOHNSON

Coach will aid Johnson in giving the Freshmen material the very best possible instruction.

P. C.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES AT P. C.

In order that the friends of P. C. may get a better understanding of a very important phase of college life, we thought it advisable to say a few words about the social activities at P. C.

To begin with, friends, if you ever possibly entertained the notion that Clinton is a dead town, get that colossal incongruity out of your cranium with as much speed as possible. The folks of Clinton, regardless of their religious affiliations, are always ready to welcome P. C. boys into their homes and to entertain them royally. In fact, every year all the young peoples' religious societies of Clinton give the P. C. Freshmen a reception. At P. C. there is always something going on, tho not in such a way as to interfere with study. Probably the first function to which a new man will go is the annual Y. M. C. A. "Rat" reception. Probably he will be astonished at the wonderful array of beauty which he will encounter at this reception. If space permitted us we would describe this in detail, but we must mention the other social functions he will attend. In a few weeks after the opening of college Dr. and Mrs. Douglas entertain the rats, and another glorious time is enjoyed. Then come invitations to the homes of Clinton for Sunday dinners, with that good old fried chicken, candied yams, and—well no use to go farther ,just imagine for yourself.

Then along about the first month the Christian Endeavor invites the rats to a reception that warms their hearts, and sometimes it must be confessed causes them to lose said hearts. Soon follow parties given individually by the young ladies of Clinton, and by the B. Y. P. U. and other young people's organizations.

Departing not from the usual custom, we feel it our duty and privilege to express our appreciation of the honor bestowed upon us in putting us at the head of the Blue Stocking. There is also another custom connected with the editing of a paper, and that is the use of the first person, plural. Kings are also privileged to use the term. When the king or editor has anything to say, it is always "we", never "I." Nor shall we depart from this custom.

We realize that a great task is before us in editing the newspaper of our College. We shall do the best we can, but of course, realize that the editor alone can not make a paper a success.

The staff we have selected will do their part, of that we are confident. Yet unless the entire student body cooperates to make the Blue Stocking a success the staff can do little of itself.

We would like for every student at P. C. to consider himself a member of the staff and consequently privileged to contribute matter, and if need be, to criticise. We want your ideas, we solicit your criticisms and your suggestions.

And with your help and co-operation we shall attempt the task, yet the privilege, of editing the Blue Stocking.

FOOTBALL PROSPECTS FOR 1922

The ruling of the S. I. A. A. has affected most every college in the South and more especially the smaller colleges that have been the shining light in the football world for the past year or two. These have depended on the new material that has come under their charge through the Freshman class as part of the brawn of their wonderful teams that they have been able to put out in the past, and to some this ruling of not allowing Freshmen or first year men to participate in any varsity game in the future will be very detrimental. In fact, many have raised objection to this ruling which in many respects is an excellent one, for it helps to serve the purpose that it was intended, that of keeping professional football out of the college.

The Presbyterian College is extremely fortunate in the fact that they have always adhered strictly to the rules, for we have most of the team that fought so hard under what seems to have been the greatest year of misfortunes that visited any team during the past season, however, this is not an excuse but a reason for the fact that the Blue Stocking team did not win any more games than it did during the most disastrous season in the football history of the Presbyterian College of South Carolina, and with ten good men to work with from last year's team we have several men that were not able to play during the past season due to the fact that they were not eligible. But when the whistle blows September thirtieth you will see the Blue Stockings line themselves against the Davidson Wild Cats on the Presbyterian College new athletic field with men that have never before donned a varsity uniform, but in such men as Moore, Brown and others, we have men that will equal the ability and science of men such as the Woodsons, Galloway, McFee, Bell, the Fultons, McKeown, Belk, McMillan, DuRant, Richardson, Eichelberger, Kirven and many others who have played a wonderful part under the instruction of our beloved Coach, Walter A. Johnson, helping to make the record that the Blue Stockings in the past have made. And we dare say that the memory of these men and their records will inspire the team that will represent the Presbyterian College of South Carolina in 1922 to uphold that record, for they have greater material than ever before to build a new record for the future.

In Moore the Blue Stockings will have one of the greatest fullbacks that ever donned a football uniform in South Carolina and there have been some good ones. If any of you ever had the pleasure of seeing Gillo of Colgate, the all-American fullback, play, you have said that he was wonderful, but P. C. has in Moore a real reproduction of this master football player. Then on the other hand, when Brown takes his position at tackle you almost recognize Josh Cody as he used to strut out and take his position that was always felt by the opposing tackle. These are only two of the several men that were not able to play during the past season, but they will be a power that every team which meets P. C. next fall will have to deal with; while along with Moore, we have the midget marvel, Jack Wilson, who is one of the greatest broken field runners in the state today, and who last year made the longest run in the United States for a touchdown, 103 yards from kick-off. With Shorty Pearce as his running mate we have the two smallest halves in the state but they never ask anyone any odds for when it comes to speed Baddock has nothing on Pearce. We are fortunate in having two of the best quarters in the state, although both were handicapped last fall, one with a broken shoulder in early practice and the other having lost his father before the season started, but next fall will see both Wilson and Hindman in a Blue Stocking uniform. The center will be filled by the scrappiest man in the state and one that will always be a dangerous foe for the pivot man of the offense to face, for in this kid Miller we have a wonder. Then when it comes to ends we have them, Captain Clowney will fill his usual position at end while Mason will hold down the other in fine style, with Kirven and Banks as sidekicks. In tackles, we have men such as Brown, who was mentioned above, and Bomar, who is a razor back from Arkansas, but who helped deliver the goods last fall. Within another year he will be able to put that 175 pounds and six feet of height into a battle that will make all take notice. At guards we have the old standby, Williamson, who has as much strength as a wild cat, weighing 170 pounds, and one who can always be counted on to uphold the middle of the Blue Stocking. With him we have a number of good men such as J. B. Brown and Norton, who have displayed wonderful ability and have great promises.

However, this is only a brief of the possibilities that are in store for Blue Stocking victories next fall, for there are many others that will be there daily struggling for a place on the wonder team of 1922.

Below is the schedule for 1922:
Sept. 30—Davidson at Clinton.
Oct. 7—Carolina at Columbia.
Oct. 13—Clemson at Clemson.
Oct. 20—Erskine at Greenwood.
Oct. 27—Citadel, place not decided.
Nov. 4—Open game at Clinton.
Nov. 10—Wofford at Spartanburg.
Nov. 17—Trinity, tenative.
Nov. 30—Newberry at Clinton.

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL FOR 1922

Never before in the history of the College has the Freshman had the possibilities of coming into the limelight as he has in the coming years, for the Freshman class is beginning a new era in the athletic world and his prominence will be felt and appreciated more in the years to come than at any time in the past.

This has been brought about by several reasons, first by the fact that the coaches are realizing that the future depends on the development of the Freshman, and that they will furnish the brawn and gray matter that is so essential to the present-day scientific method of football, and the Freshman in the future will receive more recognition in the next year or two than he has ever before had the opportunity to receive. Second, the S. I. A. A. has adopted an excellent rule whereby a Freshman connot play his first year in school, which has its disadvantages as well as its advantages, but most of all it is going to do more to keep down professionalism than any other act that could be passed. Since this rule will be rigidly enforced the Freshman football team will demand and get almost as much prominence in the future as the varsity of the same school, for instance, the Freshman team of this college in the fall will have a Freshman team that could compete with the teams that this institution has had in the past, and they will have a full schedule that will be very similar with the varsity schedule and with the same schools, of which will demand equally as much attention from the public as well as his colleagues. There will be a Freshman coach that will spend his entire time for the upbuilding of the Freshman team and their interest and the Freshman can and will demand and will get as much support as the varsity team of 1922, which will or should be the best that ever donned a Blue Stocking uniform, for with the last year men back with us and the several Freshmen that were not eligible last fall, we expect to meet the heavy schedule that we have without a defeat.

Below is the proposed Freshman schedule for next fall which will probably be completed as it now stands without a change:

know of it as a College the Church can be proud of. Then the patronage was drawn from a few localities in South Carolina; now the patronage is drawn not only from all over this state, but from six neighboring states. Then the alumni were apologetic when acknowledging their alma mater; now they are proud to wear her insignia. Then her athletic teams scarcely knew the thrill of victory, now their mettle is recognized and her players star on all-state aggregations. Then her future was viewed with misgiving, her life was regarded as precarious; now her destiny is assured.

To account for the success of his administration it is necessary to sketch first his preparation for this work.

Biologists tell us that the finest human specimens are produced from an intermingling of racial streams. The name Douglas suggests the highlands of Scotland from which have issued streams to make glad the City of God in this land of ours, in Canada, Australia and New Zealand. From them have also emanated streams of Presbyterian light to lighten these lands, strains of Presbyterian stock that is true blue and incorruptible. The name also suggests Scotch-Irish ancestry. Dr. Douglas' great-grandfather came from North Ireland and settled in South Carolina in 1790. On his mother's side there was an admixture of French Huguenot blood as well as Scotch.

Dr. Douglas' father, Rev. James Douglas, though thoroughly educated, a graduate of Davidson and of Columbia Seminary, had a country charge, and so a comparatively meager salary, and a large family. By a wonderful and admirable system of family finance and co-operation, which no doubt played its part in developing upstanding men and women, this large family of children received college educations. And they have occupied prominent places in the church and the state.

The subject of our sketch taught school one year before going to college and two years between Freshman and Sophomore classes. He graduated with A. B. from Davidson College in 1895. Decided that summer to enter the ministry. Attended Louisville Seminary the following session. From '96 to '97 supplied churches of Bowling Green and Ramah. Attended Columbia Seminary '97--'99, graduating with degree of B. D., at the same time receiving his A. M. from University of South Carolina, where he had taken post-graduate work in History, English and Psychology. The next year he took a full post-graduate course at Princeton Seminary, besides Politics, Jurisprudence and English in Princeton University, having benefit of such teachers as Woodrow Wilson and Van Dyke. He served for the next four years the churches of Brevard and Davidson River, N. C. During this time, Sept. 16. 1903, he was married to Miss Lydia Welch of Pittsburg, Pa. From 1904 to 1911 he was pastor of the Maryland Avenue Church in Baltimore, and during two of these years was a student at Johns Hopkins University in the subjects of Philosophy, History and Hebrew. He received the degree of D. D. from his alma mater, Davidson College, in 1912. This sketch, with special note of number of institutions attended and variety of courses pursued, shows how well equipped our President was to undertake the work of college administration with assurance of success.

But training never entirely supplies the place of natural aptitude for a position and we propose now to briefly point out some of the characteristics naturally fitting him for filling the place he has filled and still fills so well.

First, we mention, in connection with preceding sketch, enlarged experience and breadth of culture, his having touched life at many points and being able to stand on a pinnacle from which he can see the reach and bearing of all the realms of human science and can evaluate them with some precision.

Second, we would designate an attractive personality, a manly man of dignified bearing and affable address, able to at once win his way into the hearts and confidence of patrons, students, Board and Faculty, and monied people.

Third, we find tact with positiveness, enabling him to deal deftly with situations that arise among teachers and students during the course of a year's work.

Fourth, one will notice persistent and unfailing good humor and genuinity under trying circumstances that emerge from time to time.

Fifth, we mention transparent integrity, fairness and frankness, so that no one feels that anything is being shrewdly kept back. No one can ever charge that he has concealed important facts, because he was afraid for them to come out.

Sixth, a very important characteristic is independence of judgment, so that he does not have to keep his ear to the ground and work by indirection, a policy which will almost surely bring ultimate disaster.

Seventh, by no means the least important is contagious optimism, which is constitutional and serves to keep things afloat in times of stress, because it begets hope in those more gloomily disposed.

Eighth, he is an idealist governed by common sense. The dreamer, the seer, is not necessarily visionary. The dreamer, the idealist, is the one who is ever pushing us up toward better things. Without the balance wheel of common sense or reflective judgment he might wreck the whole works.

Ninth, by reason of these things and an assured confidence in the worth of his cause he has remarkable ease of approach to monied men and money sources. No overweening effrontery and cheek, but a confidence that begets and supports persistence.

Tenth, he has a breadth of sympathy that enables him to take part in matters of public welfare and of politics. He was one of the few preachers that was sent as a delegate to the Democratic Convention at San Francisco, perhaps the only one.

Eleventh, it is perhaps not out of place for us, just among ourselves, to bestow a little posy (a shower bouquet would be more in order) on his better-half and say that he has a "helper as over against him" who is admirably adapted to be a college president's wife, by reason of her interest in everything pertaining to the college and its students, showing itself in her gracious and winning courtesy to all, and urbane hospitality to college guests.

In conclusion, Dr. Douglas has, in the nearly eleven years he has been our President, doubled the Faculty and more than doubled the salaries; planned a most attractive campus and done much work towards beautifying it; built a large dormitory; added to another; filled all with students, so that another must soon be erected; built a large science hall and library; graded a new athletic field; developed an athletic department to be proud of; secured a coach and physical director that can't be beaten; added three entirely new academic departments; separated several others and made them independent; introduced a fine R. O. T. C. unit; built a heating plant that supplies steam heat to four of the largest buildings; built one beautiful new residence, changed the location of two others; greatly improved the library and placed a librarian giving his whole time and making the library a real feature in the College work; vastly increased the scientific equipment; greatly increased the endowment; improved every building on the ground; almost doubled the patronage; gained friends for the College everywhere, North and South; has vastly improved the dining department; has established the office of Bursar and Business Manager and employed a man for that place; and has everything in readiness to begin building a large gymnasium with swimming pool. That is a record.

He is in the prime of life and we trust that he will live for many years to carry forward the work he has so well begun, but when he comes to lay down his work here and "pass on" to hear the "well done" for the good use he has made of his talents, he will need no monument besides the "Greater P. C.", which under God's blessing he has, and shall have, builded.

FRATERNITIES AND CLUBS AT P. C.

In the spring of 1920 the students at P. C. petitioned the trustees to allow open fraternities. The petition was granted and four organizations were formed. The College authorities gave their hearty co-operation and P. C. is now one of the three fraternity colleges in South Carolina. Four national fraternities were petitioned, Pi Kappa Phi, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, and Pi Kappa Alpha. Two of these have already obtained their charters, and there are two clubs now petitioning for charters.

The Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity re-established Beta Chapter at P. C. in 1921. The members of this fraternity have a hall up town, and at present have ten active members, and five pledged members.

In November 1921 the O. B. U. M. Club became Mu Chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha. The Pi Kappa Alphas have thirteen active members and seven pledges. Their fraternity hall is in the administration building.

The Aesir was formed in 1920, shortly after the College became open to fraternities. Its active members are twelve in number and five Freshmen have pledged themselves to become members. The Aesir hall is located on the third floor of the main building.

The Owl Club, formed in 1920, is also located in the administration building. The Owls have thirteen active members and have pledged four Freshmen to become Owls in the near future.

ly young men do not think much about this when they are selecting their college, but the greatest asset a young man can have is the establishment of a strong moral character founded upon an intelligent knowledge of the Bible. Every member of our faculty is required to be a consistent member of an evangelical church. A great number of our students are sons of church officers and many of them students for the ministry. Everything is done to throw the best moral and religious influences around our students. Students not interested in evangelical religion and opposed to attending chapel exercises and church should not select the Presbyterian College as their college. One of the aims of the College is to provide spiritual leadership for the state and church.

Sixth. Campus and Buildings—The College owns 35 acres of land. It has been laid off by a landscape engineer of New York and is being developed into an unusually beautiful campus. All the buildings are new and well arranged for the purpose for which they are used. All visitors comment upon the beautiful campus and clean, handsome, modern buildings. This contributes much to the satisfaction and happiness of the students. All public buildings are heated from a central heating plant. $10,000 has been spent in the last few years on new scientific apparatus and half that amount for new books for the library.

Conclusion—The prospects are that every room in the dormitories will be taken long before college opens. The College does not expect to take more students than it can properly care for. Any student desiring to enter college this fall should take the matter up with the president as soon as possible, see that he can satisfy the entrance requirements, and have a room reserved.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES AT P. C.

The Thornwell girls, what a rush of pleasant memories that thought brings. Man, if you have never in your life experienced a good time, prepare to do so now, for you are going to a Home of Peace party. The girls at Thornwell give about three or four of these a year, and a rat that doesn't have a good time there—well, form your own opinion of him when you attend one yourself.

Of course, the fraternity "feeds" are not to be forgotten, nor the annual fraternity banquets. Some of these are graced with the presence of fair ones; and some are good old "smokers," with hearty cheer, abundant cigars, and the friendly handclasp. Each fraternity gives several of these every year.

Of course a Freshman does not attend the Junior-Senior banquet, unless he happens to be the one lucky rat annually invited but at any rate it is a thing to look forward to. This is one of the finest affairs of its kind held each year in South Carolina. We would have to read up on our Byron to adequately describe it.

This is merely a brief review of a few of the important social events held at P. C. and in Clinton each year. Besides all this there is the Lyceum course, the Redpath Chautauqua, and always the movies, to carry "her" to. Then, of course, you know that a student is privileged to have a date in Clinton at any time he so desires.

Yes, he will find it at P. C., anything a man who expects to enter college desires in the way of social activity. Clinton is very much alive socially, as well as in other respects.

ALUMNI NOTES

C. E. Galloway, of the class of '18, is beginning his third year with Connie Mack's "Athletics." "Chick" played shortstop for P. C. four years, was quarter back in football and a star in basket ball. He is coming in the big leaugue.

If any of the students get hailed before the "Mayor's Court" of Clinton remember that the Mayor, Dr. J. R. Copeland, was a member of the class of 1891. This won't reduce the fine—but remember it anyway.

And when Dr. S. C. Hays is fixing your busted bones at the Hospital, remember he studied the "PQ" formula in 1906.

If you have Dr. Davis down to give you some mercurous chloride, or magnesium sulphate ask him if he could read French without knowing the vocabulary in 1890.

Dr. Byrd, of Chicora, of the class of '89, and a member of Mu Chapter, Pi Kappa Alpha, was in Clinton on the 22nd with the Chicora Glee Club.

Mr. R. H. King, '95, is Southern Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. He is actively engaged in waking up our Alumni to the necessity of boosting our college. He's doing the job well, too.

C. Darby Fulton, '11, is now a missionary in Kobe, Japan. Fulton won the State Tennis Singles while he was in College, in addition to preaching, and playing the violin in the College Orchestra.

And A. H. Miller alias "Cap'n" is teaching the dusky inhabitants of the Congo how to play football like it was done here in 1914 when he was captain of the Varsity—as well as doing mission work in that part of the globe.

Mr. H. E. Davis, prominent lawyer of Florence, S. C., is another active Alumnus. His sheepskin was issued here in 1902. He holds the altitude record thus far at P. C. for scholarship. Who's going to beat it,

W. C. Austin, '15, is a professor of Chemistry in the Charleston Medical College. He has just received a fellowship at The University of Chicago where he has been pursueing post-graduate work.

H. J. Winn of the class of '13, is cashier of the First National Bank of Greenville, S. C. He is close enough to get back to the College occasionally.

Dr. W. S. Bean, M. D., is stationed at the U. S. Marine Hospital in New Orleans. He practiced on cats and frogs while he was at P. C. in '09.

H. F. Dick, '18, has headquarters in Atlanta where he represents the Southeastern Underwriters Association as special agent.

—P. C.—

Early one morning last week, Rat Smith could be seen hurrying towards town.

Wilds (seeing his evident hurry)—"What's the matter?"

Smith—"One of my teeth dropped out last night."

Wilds—"Well, where are you going?"

Smith—"You nut, to a horse doctor, of course."

—P. C.—

It was in the midst of one of those long, monotonous Bible classes. Dr. Brimm said, "Mr. Clowney, what are we studying for to-day?"

Someone whispered, "Nineveh."

Coon, who had been asleep, shouted, "Minerva! Minerva!"

ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION FAVORS PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

One Hundred and Twenty-Five Thousand Donated to College

The General Education Board, otherwise known as the Rockefeller Foundation, will donate $125,000 as soon as certain stipulated conditions are complied with. This news came to the campus in the form of a telegram to President D. M. Douglas from Dr. Trevor Arnett, secretary of the board.

The Conditions

The $125,000 was appropriated towards $375,000 for increasing the endowment of the college. In other words, the Board will give $125,000 as soon as the College raises $250,000. It may be of further interest to know that the board will make no gift while any form of debt hangs over the College. Thus, this will necessitate the College paying off its general indebtness of $30,000.

Just how this $250,000 will be raised is yet a matter unsettled; but this much is known: if all the money subscribed in The Million Dollar Campaign is collected, no canvass for additional money will be necessary. Nevertheless, the facts as they now stand are these: the College has an indebtness of $30,000; the institution expects to build in the near future a new gymnasium costing $30,000; to erect two new professors' homes; to construct another dormitory; and to add two or three professors to the teaching force. In view of the foregoing conditions, either every pledge of the Million Dollar Campaign will have to be made good or another money-drive will have to be engineered in order that the Rockefeller gift may be secured.

Report of Different Visiting Educators

In order that a college may be recommended as one worthy of consideration by the board, the institution must pass a critical inspection by one or more experienced educators. Dr. E. C. Sage visited P. C. last Spring. His report was extremely favorable and the board immediately appropriated $5,000 for the increase of professors' salaries. Dr. Trevor Arnett visited the College in the Fall. He remarked to Dr. Douglas at the time that he was highly delighted with everything about the College and commented upon the attractiveness and cleanliness of the buildings. The environmental surroundings being of the highest type naturally impressed him. Hence, the report Dr. Arnett sent to the board was appreciably gratifying. A

Students Enjoy Series of Inspiring Talks

Dr. Vander Meulen The Guest Of Presbyterian College.

Dr. Vander Meulen, president of Louisville, Ky., Theological Seminary, was the guest of Dr. Douglas and of P. C. for the latter part of the past week. This really great preacher won his way into the hearts of the students the first time he spoke to them, and continued to hold them until the very last of his series of talks. We use the term advisedly, for sermon is too dry a word to describe the heart to heart messages given by Dr. Vander Meulen. Preaching often without definite text he would in a few minutes time move his hearers to laughter or to tears.

Dr. Vander Meulen is a preacher by profession, a humorist by nature, a natural psychologist, and an all-around, two-fisted man's man. He is not of the type who sometimes unfortunately we see that are wonderfully pious, but whose religion seems to give them an awful pain. On the contrary, Dr. Vander Meulen appeals at once to the intellect, the emotions, and the practical side of life. He presents Christianity from a different viewpoint. His religion is not a "hell-scared" faith, but he appeals to a man to follow Christ because it is the right thing to do.

Arriving Wednesday evening on the vestibule, Dr. Vander Meulen came directly to the College and before he had spoken five minutes the students realized that they were listening to a preacher that was different, and also one who could hold their individual attention. His talk was brief, rich in humor, appealing, and convincing. Dr. Vander Meulen gave two talks during each day of his stay, one in the morning and one after supper. On Sunday morning he filled Dr. Woods' pulpit in the First Presbyterian church, after dinner he addressed the Y. M. C. A. at P. C., which had the largest attendance in its history, in the afternoon he preached at Thornwell chapel, and in the evening he again conducted the services at the First Presbyterian church. This concluded his series of talks.

While here Dr. Vander Meulen held personal interviews with many of the students, advising them and helping them with their problems. He brought a message to all the students, not taking to the ministerial ones alone. He stated that there is a place for every type of man in the Kingdom of Christ, and that teachers, doctors, lawyers and other professions are needed as well as preachers.

The students of P. C. were much inspired by Dr. Vander Meulen, and every single one enjoyed his services. We trust that he will return to P. C. at some future date and again bring to us a better knowledge of the Savior.

FAIR WARNING

"No, Harold," said the only girl in the world, "I can never be your wife, but I will be a sister to you."

JUNIOR CLASS ENTERTAINS AGGREGATION FROM SISTER COLLEGE

Chicora College Glee Club Gives Delightful Entertainment

On the evening of February 22, the Chicora Glee Club sang to a full house, at the orphanage chapel. The Glee Club came to Clinton under the auspices of the Junior class. Although the Juniors had very short notice, an intensive advertising drive was put on and a splendid crowd rewarded the efforts of the diligent Juniors.

The young ladies arrived in Clinton on the one-fifty and were entertained in Clinton homes during their stay. At supper the fortunate Juniors, after a frightful struggle as to who would be the lucky ones, escorted the fair songsters into the spacious P. C. dining hall to one of Mrs. Hunter's delightful suppers, so home-like and attractive. The P. C. student body fairly rent the air with yells to their sister college, and good cheer overflowed.

The young ladies, after supper had been eaten, took their leave and were escorted by the rest of the Juniors to the homes where they were stopping. At eight thirty o'clock the Chicora delegation gave their delightful concert at the orphanage chapel, kindly loaned to the Juniors for the occasion by Dr. Lynn. The concert was proclaimed a success by all who were so fortunate as to hear it. The Chicora girls fairly won the hearts of the entire audience, who did their part by rendering a hearty applause.

After the concert the young ladies were invited to a reception in the College auditorium, which they attended. Several young ladies from Thornwell Orphanage and from Clinton were present also, besides a "delegation" from Laurens.

During the remainder of their stay in Clinton the Chicora girls were entertained by the Junior class, the members of which were very generously given a holiday by Dr. Douglas. All day Thursday the gallant Juniors were seen with the fair visitors, and when they departed from our midst there was wailing and gnashing of teeth.

Also, it seems to be a well established fact that certain members of the Senior class were severely wounded by the rosy archer, during the Glee Club's stay in Clinton.

Their stay was so much enjoyed by the entire student body, that everyone at P. C. expresses the hope that they will again favor us with their presence.

TERRIERS BOW TO BLUE STOCKINGS

In the best game of the season on the local court, P. C. more or less decisively vanquished the Wofford quintet on March 2. The contest was fast and spirited, the superior aggressiveness of the Blue Stockings giving them the game 36-30. Mason, Presbyterian forward, drew first blood by caging an exceptionally hard basket soon after the first whistle. His team-mates ran the lead up to six points. Wofford tightened up and tied the score at six all. Then it was that the Blue Stockings girt their several loins for action, the said action being not long in forth-coming. So fast and furious was their attack that, at the whistle for the first half, they had acquired the commanding lead, 17-9. But a Terrier is never quiet until it is all over. Thus it was that the Terriers from Wofford came back strong in the second period. They made a desperate attempt to wrest the lead from their hosts, but the said hosts were not quite generous enough to heed the implied request of the visitors. Hence the result that is always so dear to Presbyterian supporters—P. C. maintained the lead.

Johnson's system of play appeared to better advantage than did Major's. The passing of the Blue Stockings at times baffled the visitors, while Wofford offense did not annihilate the local defense to any great extent. At times the pass-work of the Presbyterians was superb, while their general floor-work was always of good quality.

Williamson again proved a large factor in the Presbyterian victory. Out of the 36 total "Big Boy" accounted for 21. He had a big night at shooting foul baskets, accumulating 9 out of 12 tries. Captain Scott and

R. O. T. C. SUMMER CAMP AT CAMP BENNING, GA.

The war department has officially announced that the Students R. O. T. C. Summer Camp will be located at Camp Benning, Ga., for the summer of 1922, according to the local department of Military Science and Tactics.

Camp Benning is located near the boundary line of Georgia and Alabama, and about six or seven miles from Columbus, Ga. After the signing of the armistice, the war department decided to scrap a large number of the camps. On account of the size, location, and general facilities of Camp Benning, this cantonement was converted into an Infantry Trainig School for officers. At present it is still being used for this purpose.

This camp is beyond a doubt the best equipped school for the instruction of Military Science and Tactics in the United States. The corp of instructors consists of the most efficient and experienced officers in this branch of Uncle Sam's service. To these facts the selection of Camp Benning as the R. O. T. C. camp is largely due.

Columbus is situated in one of the most prosperous sections of Georgia. The attractiveness and the beauty of the city is worthy of note. To give some idea of the size of Columbus, the population is about 31,125. The city affords places of amusements galore to serve as a relief to the monotony of army life.

Last year, the summer camp was located at Camp Knox, Louisville, Ky. P. C. was well represented there and according to those who went to Camp Knox, the six weeks "visit" was as a whole, one that was enjoyed. Since Benning is probably a better camp than Knox is, the men who go this

YOUNGSTERS DEFEAT OLD-TIMERS

"East is East, and West is West,
And ne'er the twain shall meet."

This we cannot deny, but we can, undoubtedly and undeniably, refute a like saying of our own formulation and pharaphrasing, which is as follows:

"Age is age, and youth is youth,
And ne'er the twain shall meet."

On the night of February 28th, age did meet youth, much to the probable "after-effects" of certain units of the "age" machine. Sailing under the attractive cognomen, "all-stars," the citizens of to-day were slightly bested by the citizens of to-morrow, the said citizens-to-be being popularly known as the Blue Stocking Basketball Varsity of more or less well-known fame. The constituents of the all-star machine are all well-known. Seeing them in action one can readily perceive the way and wherefore of the wonderful P. C. athletic record. In Coach Johnson the on-lookers saw a man who can transform theory into practice, a man who most capably illustrated all the qualities that have been inculcated into all P. C. machines under his direction, namely, ability, speed, and spirit. Eichelberger and McMillan each demonstrated that a year of athletic inactivity and money-making (?) had dimmed none of their old-time lustre and brilliance which had made P. C. famous on diamond, gridiron, and court in years not yet far distant. And in Hunter, our genial bursar, we have a splendid speciman of what P. C. produced back in ancient history, somewhere about '16, '17 and '18. Like the others, Hunter bears the uneradicable stamp of Walter Johnson's training. To complete their roster, however, the "old-timers" had to borrow from the youngsters."

BLUE STOCKINGS TROUNCE COLLEGE OF CHARLESTON

When a good team strikes its stride things usually happen. Consequently a multitude of things happened to the Maroon quintet of the College of Charleston. These young gentlemen arrived in Clinton February 16th for the avowed purpose of adding another collective scalp to their collective belt. A scalp was taken that night, but it was not the one eyed so longingly by the aspiring Charlestonians. Hence, our assertion that the Maroons underwent various ordeals on the night of February 16th at the hands of Walter Johnson's Blue Stockings. To make a long story short the Presbyterians steam-rolled, out-played, and out-scored the College of Charleston quintet to the extent of 32-10.

The Presbyterians played a splendid brand of basketball. They had a strong offensive attack which was manifest in the 21-5 score at the end of the first half. In the second period the over-agerness of the Blue Stockings to pile up a big score somewhat retarded their attack, for they took long chances when such were not necessary. However, the defense of Johnson's proteges was well-nigh impregnable. At no time did the Charlestonians get near enough to the Presbyterian's goal to try reasonably safe shots. Their four goals from the field were results of long chances from the middle of the court. McGilliwany, of the visitors semed most proficient at this art, getting two out of four baskets. For the locals Williamson was the shining light, in fact, the star of the entire contest. Williamson's huge figure was all over the court, ringing up baskets when the chance presented itself. In between chances he amused himself by breaking up, time after time, threatening attempts

We are expecting great things from the newly born Dramatic Club.

"The Private Secretary" should give us some information regarding the merits of the Club.

However, "The Private Secretary" has been living up to his name. We haven't been able to penetrate his secretive veneer, as yet.

Men, we want to make "The Blue Stocking" the best college paper to be found. Are you with us in this endeavor? Show your colors!

—P. C.—

On a recent morning Dr. Douglas called the attention of the student body to the fact that the board bills are being left unpaid by a number of students. Gentlemen, we all realize that our College furnishes the best board to be had at any educational institution in South Carolina at any price. That this board can be furnished for the marvelously small figure per month that it is, is due to the fact that the College is making not one cent out of the boarding department. In fact, it is steadily losing, yet it cheerfully does this in order to provide its students with a refined, home-like dining hall, at the same time giving them the best board in the state. Our hats are all off to our matron, who has made a real home for us out of old Judd Hall. We also appreciate the board we get, but when the time comes we lie down and let the other fellow pay for it. It we expect to keep conditions as they are we must realize that the bills must sometime be paid. If this institution would not admit students for the second semester until all the bills from the first semester were paid, we would accept this as a matter of fact and the bills would be paid. However, because Dr. Douglas is lenient enough to let our bills wait awhile we are lenient enough to let Dr. Douglas wait awhile longer. Of course, we realize that we are in the midst of a financial crisis but, strange to say, we can find money for everything else except our board bill.

Gentlemen, we all agree that we want to keep our dining hall as it is. Then is there a motion that we try to pay the College authorities what our board has cost them.

P. C. SPIRIT

The purpose of this brief editorial is not to condemn but quite to the contrary, to commend. Ordinary College Spirit and P. C. Spirit. One glance at this phrase reveals to the eye a startling difference somewhere Where? The one seems trite and commonplace, resting on a low plain of the ordinary; on the other hand, P. C. Spirit seems to suggest a higher degree of emotional nature, a stick-to-it determination even in the face of defeat, and courtesy to visiting teams. How many times have we been complimented along those lines! Nor does this end the characteristics of P. C. Spirit. The noticeably, keen, animated interest displayed by the students in the general welfare of the College is another remarkable trait. Probably this one difference more than any other marks P. C. Spirit as expressly individual and commendable.

Yes, there is no denying the fact, P. C. boys are guilty of conceit so far as their opinion of P. C. is concerned. Nevertheless, this conceit is justifiable. P. C. is one of the best if not the best College in the state. And it is now recognized as one of the leading colleges in the South. Moreover, its future cannot be measured in terms of greatness. The limit is almost beyond conception. P. C. will never stop growing!

To the men and women who are instrumental in the growth of P. C., the students of the College are extremely grateful. We are behind the College ,whole heart and soul and P. C .Spirit is going great guns. What about it men?

—P. C.—

"Does this train make any stops between here and Philadelphia?" asked the rather ragged passenger who had come aboard at New York.

"None whatever," replied the conductor with pride, "This is a through express—wouldn't stop for anything."

"That's all right, then," returned the passenger, settling back in his seat with a relieved air. "You can put me off when we get to Philly. I haven't any ticket."

—P. C.—

Lately a letter has come to light.

Bill Porter, while he was in France with the A. E. F., wrote Dr. Woodworth, professor of English, a letter in which he couched the following, "Yesterday I stood on the spot where Shakespeare wrote 'Scott's Lady of the Lake'; and I don't doubt Shakespeare's being able to write it, because anyone would receive an inspiration while standing on this spot."

LET'S HAVE SOME CHEERS!

As we look forward to P. C.'s fight on the diamond this year, we can but realize that our coach will have a hard time. With this in view, we must stand behind him strong. We, who can not play the "old game" can at least yell. But what are we going to yell? The Fifteen Rah's, the Hi's, the Sky-rocket, and "We Will Ride Them on the Rail," are as old as the hills, and are used by every college in the country. Why not have our own P. C. yells and songs?

Our friends ask us what our college song is and what our college yells are. What are we to tell them? The cheer leader holds an important and responsible position. If he does his duty, he will be before the student body at every game, and seeing that some real rooting is done. When the team is losing is the time that the cheer leader must exert himself the most to keep up the spirit, for much of the spirit depends on him, and also how the student body backs the team. But what about some "sure enough" P. C. yells. There are men here on the campus who compose poetry and songs and yells. Organize the canvas, and boost it with all our might. Then we may substitute these yells for the old worn-out ones.

To Represent College

Louis C. LaMotte, a member of the senior class of the Presbyterian College, has been selected to represent the college in the state oratorical contest to be held at Greenwood next month. Second place was awarded J. M. Dick of the senior class also. Mr. LaMotte represented the college in this state meet last year and won third place, making an excellent showing. His friends are delighted that he has again been thus honored and it is predicted that the college will be well represented in his selection.

Work on the cinder track around the athletic field will not be started until after base ball season closes. The reason lies in the fact that the ball diamond would be cut up while working on the track.

—P. C.—

Specks, as we all know, has some very funny jokes. He was telling this one not very long ago:

A deaf and dumb man was riding in a car with another man and two girls. This man told a joke to the girls about the deaf and dumb man, which of course he (the deaf and dumb man) could not hear.

The deaf and dumb man saw this other man again for the first time the next Sunday, at which time he immediately, showing a wicked knife, ran after him.

At this point of the joke someone interrupted, "Why was the deaf and dumb man running after the man for?"

Specks—"Because he pulled a joke on him."

"How did this deaf and dumb man know?"

Specks—"He heard about it."

TALES OF ABOU BEN BLOWHARD

The Parable of the Two Youths and the Gaping Multitude.

Long ago, in the year that the sages talked of relatively and the fourth dimension, there dwelt in the land two youths. They were both of fair countenance, and of goodly raiment, but the one was wise and diligent, the other slothful and given to folly.

Now the wise youth knew how to gain access to the hearts of the people, and he wist well what the people admired, so he bestirred himself, and gained access even unto the hearts of all the multitude. He sought knowledge of the sages, Captain Billy, and the wise Ethiopian Hambone, and was full of the knowledge of many jests gleaned from the Wampus Cat, and the Hot Dog, and other scrools and parchments. And words of knowledge flowed from his mouth, and he was greeted as without a peer by the multitude who marveled at his knowledge. He knew all the music of the jazz, and could contort his perspiring body into many shapes to the music of pipes and of stringed instruments. Therefore the maids of the land loved the wise youth, and ministered unto him. And the youth grew in great favor with the multitude. So the youth danced, and ate and drank and made merry, and consumed precious liquors, brought many miles in secret, that the wicked officers might not fall upon it, and seize it, and destroy it. And when the youth walked upon the streets a curious instrument projected from the hole in his face which served for a mouth, and at the end of the instrument was a tube of paper containing a rare insence, and it was on fire and thin smoke arose from it. And the youth was held in high esteem by all the people. And they nodded their heads and said, "This is a merry youth indeed, he drinketh a gallon in a night and is not disturbed." And another said, "Yea, and he is a sorcerer at the cards, and when he danceth one is reminded of the lovely devil's-horse." "Yea," said a third, "The youth speeketh wisdom, all the maidens love him, for he can quote the words of the sage, Billy, and knoweth many suggestive tales. So the wise youth waxed in popularity and was beloved by the multitudes.

But the foolish youth heeded not the admonitions of his friend the wise youth. Rather he listened to the foolish prattle of the elders. He was even such a fool that he read trifling tales, such as the wretched Shakespeare, and the abominable Dickens, and he even went so far as to prepare the lessons that the elders assigned unto him. And no words of wisdom proceeded out of his moiuth, for, tho he sometimes read such good substantial books as the Whiz Bang, he never quoted from them, so he was no better off than if he knew them not. He was such a sluggard that he had never learned to imbibe the juice of the wine, neither could he dance to the beautiful discords of the jazz. He had no real knowledge of music, he only knew a few of the composition of Handel, Wagner, Chopan, Mendlesshon and such churlish minsrels, he did not know "Wigglin' Willie's Wild Woman," from "Thy Whiskers are Like Files, Dear," "The Howl of a Heartbroken Hobo," he wist not, neither knew he a vast store of delightful jests that spake of Fords parked by the wayside at midnight, so he could not delight the maidens with jests as could the wise youth. And upon a certain day a damsel spake unto him, saying, "Knowest thou not the story of the pampered poodle, and the prosperous peddler?" "Nay," said the foolish youth, and blushed, for tho he had heard the merry tale he feared to repeat it. "Hast thou heard that divine melody, 'Jazzing Jenken's Jubalee?" And the poor sluggard was forced to admit that he knew it not. Then she asked him if he had heard "Blondie Blues." "Nay," said he, "but I will play you a piece of exceeding beauty." So he sought the piano, and played one of Chopan's worthless nocturnes. Then the damsel asked innocently, "Is the author of that dinky sob still composing?" "Nay," said the youth, "He is decomposing," and he arose and banged the lid of the piano down and siezed his headdress and departed.

Now the multitude despised this foolish youth and when he appeared at a festivity they mocked him, and said, "Begone, thou foolish bookworm." And they marveled at his ignorance of the sages and authorities of the land, Capt. Billy, and Frank R. Adams. And they held him in contempt for that he knew not how to dance the Terrapin Toddle, or sing the "Groundmole Grunt." So they mocked him, and gaped at him, and took him outside the walls of the city and stoned him with stones that he died. But the wise and diligent youth, they exalted and cherished, and ministered unto him, and he reaped the reward of his diligence and wisdom.

Moral:—If everybody else insists upon reverting to swine the wisest plan is to develop a snout and learn to root.

McADOO TO VISIT P. C.

The commencement address of this year is to be made by Hon. Wm. G. McAdoo, of nation-wide fame. Mr. McAdoo served the government during President Wilson's administration, and had charge of the railroads during the war, when the United States Government had them in charge. He is one of the ablest statesmen, and one of the finest orators of the day, and P. C. feels highly honored that he shall be her guest for the approaching commencement. Dr. Douglas wished to secure him last year but was unable to do so on account of Mr. McAdoo's previous engagement.

Mr. McAdoo expressed a wish at that time to visit the college, and make the commencement address at some future date. He expressed an interest in the College and it was not a surprise that Dr. Douglas succeeded in securing him for the commencement address of this year.

It is to be hoped that every student at P. C. will remain for the commencement exercises, as a full house is desired and expected to hear this great statesman. To leave College before commencement this year, unless upon urgent reasons is nothing short of disloyalty to the Presbyterian College. Not only should every student desire to hear Mr. McAdoo, but each student should feel that it is his duty to see to it that Mr. McAdoo does not speak to empty benches.

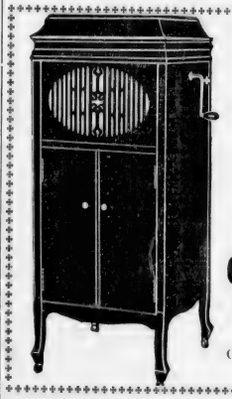
The proprietor of a certain shop is forever scolding his employes for their indifference in the matter of possible sales.

On day, hearing an assistant say to a customer, "No, we haven't had any for some time," the proprietor, unable to countenance such an admission, began to work himself into the usual rage. Fixing a stony eye on the assistant, he said to the customer, "We have plenty in reserve, madam, plenty down-stairs."

Whereupon the customer looked dazed, and then, to the amazement of the proprietor, burst into laughter, and walked out of the shop.

"What did she say to you?" demanded the proprietor.



"We haven't had any rain lately."

TERRIERS BOW TO BLUE STOCKINGS

Wilson, with Williamson, proved veritable engines of destruction to the Wofford hopes. "Scotty" played his best game of the season, being everywhere that the ball was, in addition to accounting for 10 tallies. Jack Wilson's work worried his opponents considerably. In fact, the dash and spirit of the entire squad was too much for the Terriers.

The visitors, too, put up a spirited game, as the score indicates. It was by no means a walk-over. Lindsay and Collins led in the visitor's attack, each ringing up 9 tallies. Tillinghast and Dillingham followed up with 6 each. But, taking all in all, the superior work of the locals carried them a victory. Line-up:

manipulated by the Charlestonians. All told, Williamson accounted for 7 field shots and two free goals, an even half of the Presbyterian bag. Jack Wilson and Walker were in excellent form, the agressiveness of the former, coupled with his baffling floor-work, being a veritable thorn in all the sides of the Maroons. Each of these lads accounted for 3 field baskets. These facts, in addition to the fight, pep and determination which are always characteristic of Coach Johnson's teams, enabled the Blue Stockings to add one more victory to their string. Line-up:

year should enjoy the "vacation" equally as much.

That the camp authorities of Benning boost athletics to the highest notch, will be of interest to the sport loving sons of P. C., who sign up "to go South." Last fall, their football team won recognition in the collegiate world by their hard and fair play. This summer a winning base ball aggregation is evidently expected, for on the schedule are twenty-four games. Two or three of these games are to be played against league teams who are training in the South. The other games are with the best collegiate teams of the South. About twenty of the games are to be played in Columbus.

Our football team made a trip to Benning last fall and the entire squad was pleased with the royal reception tendered them by the men of the Infantry School.

YOUNGSTERS DEFEAT OLD-TIMERS

Kirven and Galloway took turns at forward for the all-stars, and both played good ball.

The Blue Stockings of the present day had a merry time with the Blue Stockings of yesterday. The game was fast and spirited, bearing out the old proverb that "a family quarrel is —etc." The final score, 24-23, bears witness to the closeness of the struggle. When it is remembered that the winning point was counted several minutes before the final whistle, the "nip and tuck" finish can be appreciated. For the younsters, Mason at forward, and Wilson at guard, each had the time of his young life. Each rung up four baskets. For the stars, Johnson, McMillan and Kirven all had a hand in the scoring, each counting three baskets from the floor. The stars have the honor of playing an entire game without having a foul called on them. Line-up:

The photographer favored Henderson with a lofty look of disdain.

"You should have thought of that before you had them taken," was his reply as he turned back to work.

PaC-SaC GOES TO PRESS; SIX DIVISIONS IN ANNUAL

Presbyterian College Annual Is Dedicated To Professor M. G. Woodworth

Editor-in-chief L. C. LaMotte put the finishing touches on the 1922 PaC-SaC and placed it in the hands of the publishers on schedule time. In view of the fact that Jacobs & Company offered a more attractive bid than did the other college annual publishers, the Clinton concern was given the contract of the 1922 Year-Book of P. C.

The Dedication

Each year it is the custom to dedicate the Annual to a man or woman who is an active instrument in the work of making the institution a GREATER P. C. This year the PaC-SaC is dedicated to Professor M. G. Woodworth, head of the Department of English and it is the general feeling that the dedication is well placed. Professor Woodworth has been connected with the College for some number of years and has always shown that he has the interest of the College and the students at heart. Thus the students are trying to show their appreciation of his efforts by the dedication of the Annual.

The Contents

The Editor-in-chief has worked out a scheme of six Books for the Annual. The six Books in order are: (1) The College; (2) The Classes; (3) Literary; (4) Athletics; (5) Organizations; (6) Humor.

Book I, The College, consists of the name of each member of the faculty with a short sketchy history of the career of each as educators. Campus scenes are also artistically arranged in this Book, and will satisfy the tastes of the most discriminating individuals.

KING BASKETBALL IS DETHRONED

Poets tell us to "let the dead past bury their dead, etc." But before doing so let us recall to mind exactly what we are burying. The Blue Stocking basketball record for the season just closed was not as good as it might have been, but neither was it as bad as it might have been. Out of twelve opportunities Dame Fortune smiled upon the sons of P. C. six times, while for a like number of times that fickle Madam simply frowned upon the efforts of the aforesaid young gentlemen. In other words, out of twelve games, Walter Johnson's warriors won six and lost six. Two of these twelve contests were more or less family quarrels, with Coach Johnson himself taking the leading part in the effort to "show up" his youngsters. But the youngsters refused to be "shown up;" they actually framed up among themselves, and, consequently, both times it was the old-timers that bowed in submission.

In addition to these local scalps, the Presbyterians annexed four other similar tokens of victory, the unfortunates being B. M. I., 26-11; Whitmire Y. M. C. A., 62-16; College of Charleston, 32-10; and Wofford, 36-30. On the other hand, the Blue Stockings lost twice to Clemson, 29-17 and 25-10; twice to Newberry, 47-13 and 56-20; and twice to Carolina, 35-9 and 32-13.

From these figures it can be seen that the Presbyterians scored a total of 238 points against 291 for their opponents. For Johnson's lads, Williamson was the highest individual scorer, accounting for 69 tallies, even though playing stationary guard in about half the contests. Scott came next with 61 counters. Wilson and Edmunds came third and fourth with 32 and 30 respectively. Mason, Walker and Kirven accounted for the remainder, none of whom, however,

DRAMATIC CLUB MATERIALIZING

In the fall of this year, Dr. Brimm suggested, in fact, advised, the organization of a Dramatic Club. Many students were very enthusiastic, and such a club was organized with an enrollment of about thirty.

After many weeks of hard laborous work under the excellent training of Mrs. D. J. Woods, whom Dr. Brimm was so fortunate in securing as a directress, and with Dr. Brimm as a supervisor, or the backbone of the thing, we might say, the Dramatic Club is about ready to present "The Private Secretary," which is one of the most popular plays, affording much joy and laughter.

The question arose in the beginning as to the feminine parts. It was suggested that the parts be played by members of the club. But Rat Clarke, (observing that there were several "touching" scenes, more or less blushing, in "The Private Secreary," and being one of the Romeo's of that play) was of the opinion that there were no members who were so femininely endowed as to be able to act the parts. So the club went forth into the multitudes of Clinton, and were very fortunate in securing the services of four charming young ladies, who not only give great dramatic value to the club, but serve as an inspiration to spur the romantic lads on to greater things.

The Dramatic Club consisted of a larger number than was possible to have in one play, so two plays are to be staged this year in order to give all of the members a chance to display their dramatic qualities.

The second play has been selected and parts given out. As much interest is being taken in this play as was taken in the previous one. The club hopes to present the second play, "The Fortune Hunter," the latter part of April or the beginning of May. "The Fortune Hunter" is also

GLEE CLUB WILL REMAIN ON CAMPUS

No Trip This Season For P. C.'s "Howling Mob."

The Glee Club of the Presbyterian College, contrary to its usual custom, has decided to make no trip this year, owing to unsettled financial conditions.

Last season it will be recalled, the silver-throated lads made a trip to the lower section of the state, meeting with wonderful success. However, owing to the present state of business and the wave of financial pressure it has been decided to make no trip this season.

As is well known the Glee Club is a self-supporting, independent organization, receiving no recognition, or financial support for its work, altho it is an excellent means of advertising the college. Therefore, if a trip were made, which should not prove a success financially, the members would find themselves in an embarrassing predicament. Quite an extensive itinerary had been arranged including Abbeville, Union, Winnsboro, Chester, Rock Hill, Fort Mill, and York, but as none of these places were willing to guarantee more than a certain percentage of gate receipts the members of the Glee Club decided that it would not be wise to risk a trip without financial backing.

Contrary to certain rumors, the Glee Club has adequately learned an excellent selection of songs this year and continued practice up to the very moment when it was decided not to make the trip. Among the selections on its repetoire are: "The Gypsy Trail," "Mother of Pearl," "Mammy's Lullaby," "A College Medley," "Caroline," "I'll Forget You," and a host of humorous selections, besides several instrumental pieces. But for the unforeseen financial conditions this undoubtedly would have been the most successful year in the history of the Glee Club.

It is with keen regret that the members of this organization have given up their 1922 trip, as it is always a pleasure to make a tour of the state, and to achieve success without any outside aid, and in the face of cynicism, libel, and slander.

However, we predict that next year the Glee Club will again come to the front, stronger and better than ever, and will succeed as it has done in the past, standing upon its own feet and asking quarter of no one.

FRESHMEN DEBATERS READY FOR THE FRAY

The annual tri-angular debate to be held between Wofford, Newberry and P. C. will afford an excellent opportunity for P. C.'s younger sons to show their superiority in debate. The four men chosen to uphold the Garnet and Blue are: Affirmative, McLaurin and Weldon; Negative, Clarke and Whildon. These men are excellent debaters as is shown by their victory over the numerous Freshmen aspirants for this coveted honor. Hence, we all feel sure that both our affirmative and negative will bring back the laurels.

ANNUAL BEAUTY SHOW TO TAKE PLACE SOON

Juniors and Seniors Making Big Preparations for Banquet To Be Held in April

In the Spring the lordly Seniors
Walk about with beaming looks
In the Spring a wasting fever
Eats the Juniors' pocket-books.
In the Spring a thoughtful furrow
Deepens on the Juniors' brow.
In the Spring the Seniors' fancy
Lightly turns to thoughts of "chow."

Yes, the time at last is drawing nigh for the great annual beauty show, the classic event held each year at P. C., nothing less than the Junior-Senior Banquet. On April the fourteenth, the doors of Judd Hall will be opened and the feast will greet the eyes of the elect.

This event is held annually by the Junior class in honor of the Senior class. It is one of the finest functions of its kind held in South Carolina.

Fair ones from all over South Carolina and from several adjoining states will be present.

As is customary representatives have been invited from the Sophomore and Freshman classes. Mr. W. W. Lewis is to represent the Sophomore class, and Mr. Frank Clarke is to uphold the dignity of the Freshmen. The faculty will be represented by Dr. Douglas, Dr. Spencer, Professor Sturgeon and Coach Johnson. Mr. L. S. McMillan will also be a guest.

The various committees form the Junior class have been appointed and are already at work upon the arrangements for the banquet. The banquet is to be furnished by one of the ladies' organizations of Clinton, and the menu has already been arranged.

It is believed that the banquet this year will be one of the most enjoyable ones ever held. Certainly if enthusiasm and work count for anything it will be a success.

We hope the present Sophomores will closely observe the event this year and be prepared to "put out" in 1923.

BASEBALL PRACTICE NOW IN FULL SWING

To the average fan, the moulding of a team with only five veterans with which to form a nucleus is no easy task. Yet that is exactly what Coach Johnson is called upon to do—to wield into shape a team worthy of the name it bears, and having in the process a catcher, a first-baseman, an outfielder, and two pitchers, who saw action last year. Evidently, Coach Johnson has no easy task this Spring. But neither has he at any time had an easy task since he has been connected with the Blue Stockings. Hence, the process of development has connected with it an interesting and hopeful atmosphere.

The squad is being whipped into good shape, there's no doubt about it. Out of the large number of men out for positions, about twenty-four are showing the greater promise. These are divided among classes as follows: two Seniors, three Juniors, twelve Sophomores, and seven Freshmen. It is evident that if we are fortunate in having a strong nine this Spring that we shall have as good or better for two or three seasons to come.

Of the twenty-four men, six are mound candidates. Lewis and Kimble saw service last year; DuRant, a Senior, is out for the first time; Hannah and Hindman, C. C., are the two side-wheelers battling for berths, both being first-year men; the sixth, but not by any means least, is Dampier, a husky twirler form Bennettsville, who appears to have excellent form as a pitcher—and utility outfielder if need be.

Lewis, who seems destined to bear the major portion of the twirling, appears in fine form. Twirling fine ball last season, he is said to be even better still. The newly developed "cross-fire" appears destined to rival the famous "fade-away." Kimble and DuRant are determined to make their

THE PHILOMATHEAN LITERARY SOCIETY

On the evening of the ninth of March, the Philomatheans assembled in their hall for their regular weekly meeting. Instead of the usual program, the election of officers was held. The gavel passed from the hands of Mr. Leland Edmunds into the hands of Mr. H. E. Montgomery; Mr. D. F. Kirven, vice-president; Mr. C. J. Milling, critic; Mr. W. D. Hall, secretary; Mr. J. E. Raffield, treasurer; Mr. R. A. Buckner, corresponding secretary; Mr. F. B. Mayes, first monitor; Mr. M. A. Macdonald, second monitor; Mr. J. L. Plexico, conductor, and Mr. H. M. Evans, door-keeper.

The Philomatheans are congratulating themselves on electing a staff of officers composed of such reliable and competent members. They are confident that the good which characterized the out-going officers will be continued. However, not only continued, but carried out to a much greater extent, because the numerous hindrances prevalent during the last term and common to the basketball season, which handicapped and retarded the work of the society to no small degree, is past.

There is every reason to believe that the loyal support characteristic of the Philomatheans and the untiring efforts put forth by each individual, also the ardent coopreation between the officers and members and the genuine effort of the officers, will contribute to no small degree in making this term the best term in the history of the college.

The literary work as a whole, during the past term has been very good, considering the numerous difficulties encountered. However, there is always room for improvement and by willingness to work, cooperation with the officers, regular attendance and order in the hall, it will be possible for us to raise the efficiency of the society one hundred per cent.

The Blue Stocking wishes to extend to all the students the wish that they will have a most pleasant time during the holidays. We hope that every man at P. C. will come back refreshed and invigorated, ready to begin work and to make the remaining Spring months count for a large share of the year's work and play. Ahead of us is the baseball season, which we hope will be an honor to P. C., not only in the winning of games, but also in the clean, scrappy fight which has always brought us recognition. While you are at home don't fail to boost P. C. to everybody interested in her, especially to all high school fellows who are looking for a good college.

—P. C.—

The chief vision of every P. C. student is a football team that will be the wonder and envy of every college in the South. A team that will fight its way to the top and continue to put up a clean, hard scrap, until every athletic fan in America will point with admiration to the Blue Stockings. A team that will make old P. C. known wherever football is discussed, and will have a reputation for cleanness, hard fight, vitality and pep. And not only in football, but in the other branches of athletics do we wish to excell. We all look forward with confidence to the day when we will have such athletics at P. C.

But gentlemen, there is one thing which could be easily corrected that delays our ascension to the top of the ladder. We have the best coach in South Carolina, and we have the men of brains and brawn necessary to put out a great team. But we must face the fact that in order to take active part in inter-collegiate athletics a man must conform to certain requirements in his scholarship. These requirements are quite well known to every one of P. C.'s men, whether athletic or otherwise. They were made by the S. I. A. A., and we are proud that as she has always done, P. C. intends to stick to them TO THE LETTER.

Therefore, any man who has the interest of P. C. at heart and who expects to play next year will see that the least he can do is to pass his work. Aside from the fact that an education is his principal reason for being at P. C., he should realize that the welfare of P. C.'s teams depends upon him. If every athlete could be made to feel that upon him alone depended the success of the team it is no doubt true that every athlete would be found burning the midnight oil. It is no excuse to say "I can't study and play at the same time." There have been men here of no exceptional ability who have been great athletes and good students. Also some of the best athletes have been men ranking highest in scolarship. Hewitt Fulton, valedictorian of '20, was the quarter-back of the Blue Stocking machine, and Pete Beckman right next to the top in scholarship, twirled the old pill for P. C. in the same year. A host of others might be mentioned but these two will serve for examples.

Let each man then assume that P. C.'s future depends upon him alone, and next year will show a big improvement in scholarship as well as in athletics.

ALL OUT FOR TRACK

Track Men Paving Way To Victory

With four of last year's varsity back, and excellent material among the new men, P. C. is bound to put out a winning team this season. Capt. Bailey, Bowie, Cherry, and Laws need no mention. Those of us who saw them work last year can vouch for that. However, they will have to work hard to keep such men as Wm. Bailey, Hudson, and Perry from snatching first place from their grasp.

The morale is also admirable, taking into consideration the fact that our new track is not quite complete. Every day the men undergo strenuous practice, anl every day they are becoming more proficient in their different branches of track. With this consistent practice, combined with our good material, even the pessimist is predicting that Coach Hoy will send a track team to Columbia that will clean up the majority of points in the Inter-Collegiate Meet to be held there in May.

TALES OF ABOU BEN BLOWHARD

The Tragic Tale of Aaron dan Paschid

In the year that Henry the Ford succeeded in getting himself talked about, the youth Aaron dan Paschid, arose and kissing his parents, took his staff and departed for the place of learning. Now this Aaron was a diligent youth and given to learning, and he applied himself to his task.

But lo! it came to pass that many neighbors of Aaron infested his room, and plagued him at all hours. In the morning if he studied between classes they delighted to worry him. They sat upon his trunk and told many tales and poor Aaron could not study for them.

They sat all day in his lodging place, and tormented his soul. And they asked him many questions and he could have no rest. And when he fain would study at night they congregated in his room and did even worse than they had done by day. And when the lad fain would sleep and take his rest there came a multitude of men and overturned his couch so that he slept upon the floor. Then came they again in the morning and sat about his abode so that he could not read the lessons which the elders had assigned unto him.

Now when Aaron first came he bought a vast pile of books for which he had to pay many shekels of gold from his scanty store. But low the vast pile of books waxed small and dwindled until but one book remained, a book of mathematics, and no one took that for they wanted it not, neither, however, did Aaron desire it. And when Aaron saw that he could not study and that his books were gone, and that he had no gold wherewith to purchase more books he swore a mighty oath, and strode from his room. And when he returned he studied no more at all, neither slept he at all. And he did naught but loaf around, and make strange noises and listen to the music of pipes and stringed instruments.

And lo! when the marks came in and he found that he had flunked he returned unto his father, and the old man wept bitterly. So now he feedeth swine, and doth plow and work in the vineyard of his father.

THE EUKOSMIAN LITERARY SOCIETY

March 14. President Williamson called the meeting to order and after the usual preliminaries, the debaters of the evening were called to the rostrum. The query for debate was: Resolved, "That, the Dyer Anti-Lynching Law is a Benefit to the United States." Mr. L. L. Perry and Mr. McMahan expressed their sentiment in favor of the law in strong terms. Mr. Cureton and Mr. Frost upheld the negative side of the question, throwing out undefeatable points. The rebuttal speeches were exceptionally good. To judge which side was due the decision was a position for experienced judges. The points of the affirmative and negative were both strong. So be it, the decision came in favor of the negative. The debate as a whole was one of the best of the year and would do credit to a varsity debating team.

The declaimer of the evening was Mr. S. W. Whitside. "The Return of Regulus" proved to be an interesting declamation.

Messrs. Wilson, Bomar and Chapman gave extemporary speeches worthy of good report.

Interest and spirit characterized the meeting. The literary value of such meetings cannot be measured in terms of mere words. Let's keep up the "pep", "Euks," and make every meeting a mark of progressiveness.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

There was a time when the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church of Clinton, was the banner society of the state. That time has not been so very long ago. Many of the boys at P. C. took part in the society luring those days, and many more of us have heard much talk of those good days. Is there a young man at P. C. who would not like for the society to come back to its own? Do we not all want to see it accomplish now what it has accomplished in past years? The answer is obvious. P. C. is filled with men who believe in progress; men who are willing to do their part in order that movements may go forward; and men who want to stand up for what they know to be high and upright and noble; and shall they fall down on one of the most important phases of their training?

It is not the purpose of this article to censure anyone for his short-comings (all have far too many), but merely to remind some that they are not taking the part in Christian Endeavor work that they are capable of taking. Even many of the pledged members seem to have forgotten the society. Those of you who heard Wilkes Dendy speak when he was here some time ago will perhaps recall that he said that if there was any part of his speech to linger with us more than any other part, he wanted it to be: "Take Christian Endeavor seriously." That very thing, it seems, is where our society lacks strength. We do not take the work seriously enough.

It would be false to convey the idea to any one that the society is not now doing good work. Those who attend the meetings can testify to the statement that we do derive much spiritual benefit from the services, in addition to the training in speaking in public and in other phases of leadership. Those who are not taking advantage of C. E. are missing one of the greatest opportunities a young person may have for self-improvement and service to Christ.

This article may seem to the reader to be just an unconnected grouping of words and sentences without any definite meaning; but won't those of you who read it stop long enough to ask yourselves these questions: "Am I taking Christian Endeavor seriously? Am I contributing my share to its meetings? Am I serving Christ in this society as I have pledged myself to do, and as I know I ought to do?" Do you not believe that if you will do this quietly and honestly and prayerfully that you will gain spiritual strength thereby and that your spiritual betterment will shine forth in a more zealous Christian Endeavor society in Clinton, in which P. C. men will play a prominent role?

Be a C. E. booster; be a C. E. worker.

BASEBALL PRACTICE NOW IN FULL SWING

last year in College a most effective one.

Everything points to Capt. Williamson as doing the bulk of the receiving. Tho' bothered some at present by a sore pegging wing, the big boy gives promise of being a very important pivot in the defense of the Blue Stockings. Then, with the development of a keenness of eye, he bids fair to better his record of being second only to "Dunk" Alford last season in the final hitting averages.

Moore is perhaps the best utility man in this section of the country. He is equally proficient at pitching, catching, and in fact, any position in the infield, and is almost certain to hold down a position in one of these departments. In case further first-class catching is necessary, Buckner stands ready to fill the need.

Miller, a veteran, and Brown are monopolizing first base. Both are most excellent diamond artists and, in case Brown draws the initial assignment, Miller may be shifted to another infield position, as he is too good to discard.

Heyward Hindman is setting a merry pace at second base, fielding and hitting in splendid fashion. So is Joe Mason, who is bidding fair to make good in all three sports this year.

Holladay, Pearce, and Beckman are three candidates for short-stop. Tho' all are going good Holladay, especially, is going at a fast clip. His activities are not confined to short, however, ranging all the way from second to third.

At the hot corner Warner seems to be the "Horatio at the Bridge." This lad is going good, and his actions, speaking louder than words, say that the man who beats him at third must be a good one. A. B. Henderson is trying to show Coach and Warner that he is that man, and, hence, an exciting battle is on for this position.

But all dope may be upset. Hence it may be that this pot of dope is even now rocking at its foundations, for, in the last day or two, Miller and Moore have exhibited such well-marked ability at second, short, or third, as well as with the stick, that a shake-up to include them may be possible. Moore has an arm possessed of a kick equal to that of a 16-inch naval gun, and the recipient of his peg usually feels called upon to rub his hand. Both these men are of such good quality that it must be a very, very fast club that does not include them in its line-up.

The out-field is going to be well cared for. Galloway, perhaps the fastest man out excepting possibly Pearce, is almost sure to hold down center field. Matheson, Gene Wilson, and Norton are scrapping for the other two, while MacDonald, too, is pushing hard. An out-field composed of three of these men will be able to vie with any in the state.

Taking all in all, the Presbyterian College baseball club this year gives promise of being one of the strongest of recent years. Competition is so keen that several games may be played before the regular line-up is selected. If good coaching and hard work count for anything, the record this year should be one of which to be proud.

A small girl asked her mother: "If I grow up, will I have a husband like papa?"

"Yes, my dear," mother replied.

"And if I do not get married, will I be an old maid like Aunt Susan?"

"Yes," was the reply.

The little girl thought for a moment, put her hands to her head and said: "Well, I am in a fix."

PaC-SaC GOES TO PRESS

and Sophomores in the groups of their respective classes; but this year the editor has varied from the time-worn habit and has placed individual portraits of the Sophs in the Sophomore section. This is one of the many new features which adds to the attractiveness of the new Annual. As usual, each Senior has his characteristic pose on the page of his portrait. This will prove interesting to the student of human nature for just about every form of that much discussed theory has a type in the present Senior class and will be brought before the eye in the form of a snap-shot. In addition to this each one of them is labeled with his eccentricities penned by the side of his portrait. What chance has he of escaping his past reputation after the PaC-SaC of 1922 comes into the world?

This Book also boasts of the section given to the honored beauties of the high places of P. C. The Editor-in-chief called into play all his artistic ingenuity in order to arrange the portraits representing Vanity Fair. His talent, combined with the natural beauty of the Sponsors, has made this section a veritable Book of the Gods. An Annual without sponsors is likened unto a world without sunshine, and the sponsors of P. C. certainly represent the brightest rays of the sun.

Book III, Literary, exhibits "the congressional" organizations which settle all the important queries of the day; and the Oratorical organizations which bring new truths to life and which reveal old truths in their true light. Thus this Book gains its title from the efforts of the future Edmunde Burkes and Woodrow Wilsons. The group pictures and rosters of the Eukosmian and Philomathean Literary Societies, Debating Clubs, and the Oratorical Club are found in this section.

Book IV, Athletics, with the exception of the Sponsor section, is the "Cream of the Annual." This fourth Book contains the individual pictures of the football players with the scenes of different games in which they fought, as the background. Underneath each picture is a note written in appreciation and acknowledgement of the players' service as gridiron warriors. The group picture of the basketball quintet with their record; snap shots of the 1921 base ball team and review of the season; and a group picture of the cross-country runners and the men of the cinder-track fame, all are given a conspicuous place. The pictures of all the teams have been charcateristically arranged and should prove a source of admiration.

Book V, Organizations. County Clubs, Town and City Clubs, The Block Letter Club, the four Fraternities, the Military Organizations, the clubs of various names and purposes are pictured in a manner that will carve another niche in the gun-stocks of success for the 1922 PaC-SaC.

Book VI, Humor. Cartoons and jokes of recent birth will furnish many happy moments for you and yours. The cartoons used to introduce the different Books were drawn by P. C. artists. The work done is good and will excell that of a great many stock cuts drawn by the artists employed by the annual publishers. The home-drawn cartoons have been lacking in the Annuals for the past years and we are glad to see that it is not so with the 1922 PaC-SaC.

The Advertisers

There is one other division: The Advertisements. These advertisements make the PaC-SaC and other college publications possible. It is the duty of every student to patronize the advertisers and show them that you appreciate their aid. Most of the men do, we can safely say, but make it 100 per cent and we will never have any trouble getting ads.

The review of the Books of the Annual is only a sketch. Many other things will appear in the PaC-Sac that have not been noted in the sketch. Those who are on the "inside" predict the 1922 PaC-SaC to be a true success and to outdo the previous Year-Books of P. C. Certainly Editor-inchief LaMotte and his capable assistants are to be congratulated upon the amount of earnest and consistent work performed in the attempt to make the PaC-SaC a true representative of P. C. talent.

a very popular play, being used by many ameteur clubs. Although not as humorous as "The Private Secretary," yet equally as entertaining.

Although the Dramatic Club is of recent organization, we feel sure that it is going to be a howling success, doing the college much credit. With the years the club will grow, affording more and better equipment, allowing the club to work on a larger basis.

So, encourage the romantic lads, so that they may accomplish great things; and probably when they leave P. C.—who knows?

played the entire time. Miller, Warner, Douglas and Moore also saw action, but, playing guard, they had not many chances to count.

The above figures do not include the two games with the all-stars.

Thus ended the 1922 season basketball campaign. The results, numerically speaking, were better than those of the late football season, and the rate of increase argues well for the baseball season which now looms near.

With dynamite he filled his hod
And now he's on the stoking squad.

Alas, dear friends, these scattered bones
Are all on earth of Simpson Jones;
He wouldn't treat his little cold
And now he plays a harp of gold.

Too sad a fate met Hiram Tate,
He tried to beat a local freight.

Beneath this stone lies William Blake,
He tried to tame a rattlesnake.

Lies buried here poor Clarence Bean,
He lit the stove with gasoline.

VOL. III — Presbyterian College of South Carolina, April 8th, 1922 — NO. 10

S. I. N. A. TO MEET AT GREENVILLE APRIL TWENTY-EIGHTH AND NINTH

C. J. Milling and H. J. Hindman, Jr. To Represent Presbyterian College

The Southern Intercollegiate Newspaper Association will hold its first convention at Furman University, Greenville, S. C. The date set for the meeting is April 28th and 29th. This is the news that was received a few days ago from the headquarters of the association located at the University of Richmond, Va.

Every school in the association is permitted to have not more than two delegates. At a recent meeting of the Blue Stocking staff, C. J. Milling, editor-in-chief, and H. J. Hindman, Jr., associate editor, were selected to represent the P. C. paper at the convention.

The association is purely a students' organization. The purpose of the association is to aid and stimulate the college press for it is an admitted fact that every college paper is the window through which the outside world looks into the realm of collegiate activities. The East and West already have strong newspaper associations and the Southern organization is destined to rank among the leading societies of its kind in the country.

Already the newspapers everywhere are endorsing the Southern association and this alone practically assures its success. The following is a copy of a bulletin sent to all members of the association:

S. I. N. A. Headquarters, University of Richmond, Va.,—After considerable delay the time and place of the second annual Southern Intercollegiate Newspaper Association convention have been decided and Furman University at Greenville will be the host April 28 and 29.

Efforts were made early in the year to locate the next gathering of the college journalists more in the center of the territory covered by the youthful organization. Greenville, located in the Northern part of South Carolina serves this purpose.

With final selections made invitations have been mailed to every college and university in the South to send representatives and this convention is apparently to be largely attended. Both men and women are eligible as delegates. New members have been reported by the regional vice-presidents, and the membership of the association will evidently increase materially by the meeting time.

Keen interest has developed in the editorial contest, which is open to every Southern college and university, the subject being, "Contributions of the College Newspaper to College Life." Additional interest is likewise aroused in the journalistic contest.

As yet definite arrangements for the program have not been completed, nevertheless the most absorbing item that will likely come up before the open discussions will be ways and means of making the association a greater functioning body. Many things have developed since the initial gathering at the University of Richmond that will call for legislation.

The Southern Association of Newspaper Publishers has heartily endorsed the association by agreeing to contribute annually the gold medal for the editorial contest.

Rules for Editorial Contest

1. Open to every white college and university from Mason and Dixon line to Gulf and Mississippi to the coast.
2. Subject is "Contributions of the College Newspaper to College Life."
3. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to winners of first, second and third places. Certificates of Honorable Mention will be awarded the winner in each school.
4. Each school must choose a local

TRIANGULAR DEBATE WON BY NEWBERRY

On the night of March 23rd Newberry College won the annual triangular debate between the Presbyterian College, Wofford, and Newberry. Newberry's affirmative won the decision over Wofford's negative at the Presbyterian College, while her negative defeated the Presbyterian College affirmative at Wofford; thus giving the victory to Newberry.

The query for debate was: "Resolved, That a system of compulsory arbitration of strikers should be established in the United States."

The teams debating at the Presbyterian College (that is, in the orphanage chapel) were Newberry's affirmative, composed of L. E. Blackwelder and H. C. Frick; and Wofford's negative made up of H. T. Coggin and T. R. Mims. The teams debating at Spartanburg were the Presbyterian College affirmative, consisting of W. D. Hudson and M. C. Dendy; and the Newberry negative made up of A. M. Setzler and J. W. McCain. The teams

FRATERNITIES RE-MODEL THEIR HALLS

Additional improvements have been made in the four fraternities and clubs that are now at the Presbyterian College. About five weeks ago the Pi Kappa Alphas began the good work, which the Aesir in turn did likewise. After a brief period of time the Owls began the task of improving their hall and now the Pi Kappa Phis are beginning improvements on their hall.

Among the various internal rearrangements taking place are the enlargement of the halls and more room and space is being acquired. The walls and floors are being refinished and retouched. Additional fixtures, in the way of furniture, lights, carpets and numerous other ornamental adornments are being added which contribute in no small way to beautifying the already attractive halls.

SEASON OPENS WITH VICTORY

B. M. I. Gives Presbyterians Hard Battle.

On March 29th Coach Johnson's cohorts, who hope to carve a niche in the Hall of Fame during this the 1922 collegiate baseball season, struck the first blow in the excavation of said niche by downing the extraordinarily fast B. M. I. baseball squad 2 to 1. It was a good game of baseball with both hurlers doing splendid work. Lewis, the handsome, blonde, Blue Stocking ace, had the prep school lads eating out of his hand, especially when over-indulgence of the hitting preogative would have meant runs. He took things easy until danger threatened; he let the visitors get on bases occasionally just for the novelty of the thing; but when the boys from Bailey sought to take liberties with this kind generosity and endeavored to cross the old rubber, why, presto! Lewis immediately and forthwith changed from a kind, indulgent, easy-going lad into the gruffiest, crustiest old miser possible. When he said "ground out!" easy grounders bounded from their bats. And so it went. The visitors coulln't get the semblance of a hit when they threatened danger. That is, except on one occasion.

Whiteside, too, the Bailey heaver, hurled an excellent game. He too was rather stingy with hits when runs threatened. Hence the small score.

The Presbyterian outfit played good ball—the more danger threatened the better they performed. Bailey advanced to third several times but, as we have said, the excellent delivery of Lewis and the jam-up backing accorded him by the infield eased the Blue Stocking machine over the rough places. Only one goose egg were the visitors able to break. This happened in the fifth inning. Johnson smacked out a sharp two-bagger and stole third. Fields completely ignored the fact that his team should not damage Lewis' record by scoring on him, for he bingled clearly, Johnson counting once, and only once.

The Blue Stockings, on the other hand, extracted the "goody" from two goose eggs. In the fourth Holliday got on by Lillard's eror. Brown slapped out a sharp single which enabled Holliday to score from first. Norton delivered himself a double, but it went for naught. Again in the eighth the locals crossed the pan. Galloway singled and scored when Johnson fumbled Norton's long fly to right field.

Johnson's team played well considering the fact that it was their first game that counted, and the fact that, of the original line-up, five were Freshmen. The whole squad gives excellent promise of developing into a fast ball club under the rigid tutorship of Coach Johnson.

"THE PRIVATE SECRETARY" TO BE PRESENTED SOON BY DRAMATIC CLUB

Newly Born Organization To Stage Famous Play. Synopsis of Play.

"The Private Secretary" will be presented soon by the P. C. Dramatic club. The play will be staged at the orphanage chapel due to the stage space required by the setting of the play. The settings and "props" are by no means a meagre affair. They are themselves very appropriate to the locations of the scenes of "The Private Secretary."

The Success of the Play Assured

"The Private Secretary" is the first attempt of the new-born Dramatic Club but there is no doubt but that the presentation will be a criterion for the other plays that are to follow. The roster of the clug consists of the most accomplished and talented members of the student body and the cast selected have adapted themselves to their parts with comparative ease and naturalness. The one virtue that marks the success of all plays is the natural ease with which the characters enact their parts. This characteristic is certainly manifest in the cast of "The Private Secretary."

"The Private Secretary" is by no means an obscure play. It is known everywhere theatrical performances are enjoyed. This is shown by the fact that the Club has had numerous requests to visit different cities. The never faltering strain of humor and the delightful story is one of "The Private Secretary's" many winning features.

The male roles are of course characterized by the students of the College. But the cast does not lack its array of the fair sex. On the other hand the fairest specimens of Clinton's bed of roses have been plucked to enlighten and to vivify the stirring love tale which is predominant through out the continuity of the play.

The Cast

The following is the cast selected which will present the play:

Directress ..... Mrs. D. J. Woods
Supervisor ..... Dr. D. J. Brimm
Mr. Marsland ..... L. N. Edmunds
Harry Marsland ..... F. K. Clark
Mr. Castlemole ..... D. L. Williamson
Douglas Castlemole (his nephew) Douglas Hudson
Rev. Robt. Spaulding ..... J. M. Dick
Mr. Sidney Gibson (tailor) E. D. McMahan
John (a servant) ..... A. E. Barnadoe
Knox (a writ server) ..... H. J. McLaurin
Edith Marsland (a daughter to Mr. Marsland ..... Miss Marie Cozby
Eva Webster (her friend) Miss Sarah Hunter
Mrs. Stead (Douglas' landlady) Miss Lois Blakely
Miss Ashford ..... Miss Myra Leaman

Synopsis of Story

Douglas has a rich uncle who insists on his nephew's sowing his wild oats. Douglas is by nature a very steady young man and doesn't know how to go about. However, he piles up bills and one of his creditors, Gibson, brings about some embarrassing—and amusing—incidents. Douglas has a friend, Harry Marsland, who is going down and wishes to take Douglas along. But Douglas is not invited. However, Mr. Marsland's private secretary, whom he has just hired, appears and the scheme is arranged for Douglas to take the secretary's place. The two young men arrive at Mr. Marsland's home. There matters are very much complicated by the two good-looking girls, Miss Ashford (an old maid who believes in spiritualism) and by the appearance of Uncle Castlemole, Gibson, and and the true private secretary. However, all complications are cleared up, everything explained and naturally the love story running thru the play ends as it should.

BASEBALL SCHEDULE IS ANNOUNCED

Manager Crawford has announced the following schedule of games, which will keep the several interests of the Blue Stockings sufficiently keen in the national American game. It will be of especial interest to the Juniors and Seniors that two games are booked for Clinton on April 13 and 14. The total number of engagements is 16, of which 9 are at home and 7 on the road. The annual home contest with Newberry will close on May 10.

STANDING OF P. C. LEAGUE

The standing of the P. C. League teams including games played Tuesday, April 4th, is as follows:

	Won	Lost
Canary Birds	3	0
Owls	3	0
Aesir	2	1
Boll Weevils	1	3
P. K. A.	0	2
P. K. P.	0	3

—P. C.—

There's a good one going around on Rat Perry's father. When his young hopeful returned to P. C., keen interest was felt in the family as to the youngster's passing a certain exam. He was told to telegraph the result. Perry, senior, received the following wire: "Yes." Although brevity passes as the soul of wit, this extreme paucity was scarcely satisfying. He wires back, "Yes what?"

The answer arrived in due course, "Yes, sir."

The recent evangelistic services held at the Methodist church were well attended by the P. C. students. Dr. Bridgers proved to be an impressive speaker with a message for everyone who heard him. It is to be hoped that the P. C. men who had the opportunity of hearing him will take to heart what he had to say, and that his services will have a lasting effect upon the student body.

We were impressed with two things that Dr. Bridgers mentioned in his sermons as applying to the students of P. C. and for that matter of any college of the present day. One was the much discussed tea-hound, whom he declared did little else but stand on the corner inhaling smoke through a cigarette holder of the fishing-cane type, and discussing the girls of the present day that constantly pass in review before his cynical eyes.

The other point which Dr. Bridgers touched, which unfortunately hits some us squarely between the eyes, was this very attitude toward the young women of the day. How many of us have paused to consider that in all probability the girls which we so often make remarks about, act in that manner, use that conversation, and dress that way purely because they think it pleases the boys.

We do not deny that some of them deserve criticism, but its not going to make them improve a bit if we gaze at them with an unblinking stare, and make remarks as they pass that would do credit to the "Whiz Bang" and make the "Wampus Cat" hang its head in shame.

Whether the tea-hound on the flapper will go first remains to be seen, but one thing is certain, the tea-hound it not going to help matters any by groping around in search of the mote in his sister's eye when his own eye contains a large and unsightly beam.

———P. C.———

In glancing over the various papers of our sister colleges we find that in most of them there are many articles in each issue contributed by men outside the staff. It is true that we have from time to time published excellent contributions from other students. But the idea is that we want more of these. The staff alone cannot make a paper what it ought to be. Every student should feel free to bring in copy at any time. If it should not be published do not be discouraged, try again. We have a great need for jokes, articles, poems and literary matter of various kinds.

The students must contribute if the life and the "pep" of the paper is to be kept up. If you see anything in the columns of the Blue Stocking that you disagree with, write up an article and we will publish it. This is what contributes to the success of a paper. We will always be glad to publish both sides of a question, even tho one view may be contrary to ours.

Take this to heart gentlemen, and next time let us have a whole file full of contributions, so that the voice of the whole college will speak through its paper.

P. C. LEAGUE NOW REALITY

Some Good Baseball In New Bush League.

Thanks to the activity and energy of President Sturgeon, of the Athletic Association, a new baseball league has appeared to spread its soothing and benign influence over the spirits of those students of the Presbyterian College who may be suffering from love or other diseases, or who may desire to play the national American pastime as it really should be played. And play ball these new "Grasshopper" leagers do! The shades of former or present diamond stars of national fame are literally put to shame by the efforts and accomplishments of the players in this league. In each game undeard-of developments arise, and are solved in a wise and sagacious manner comparable only to the methods of Solomon. It is even rumored that sixteen big league owners are expending large sums of money enlarging their corps of scouts so that this splendid new source of material may be thoroughly investigated.

Yes, the new league is now a living reality. Only those men who have not played varsity ball, or who are not now candidates for the varsity are eligible to participate. Six teams compose this league—four fraternity teams and two teams from the student body. The latter two labor under the attractive cognomens "The Boll Weevills," and "The Canary Birds," or some such handle.

To date three games have been played. The Canaries swamped the Weevils by a score of——that is, up to the time the adding machine ran a hot box—about 20 or 30 to 2 or 3 or 4 or something like that. Then the Owls and the Aesir settled their difficulties via the "bat and ball method," the former damaging the latter 12 times, while the latter damaged the former 11 times. After this battle the Owls crossed bats with the Pi Kappa Phi. This was probably the best game, from a baseball standpoint, so far, for the Owls scored the winning run of a 7-6 score in the last inning.

The results and batteries of the three encounters are as follows:

Boll Weevils 1
Canary Birds 14
Wood, Hayes and McIlwain; Evans and Walker.

Aesir 11
Owls 12
Raffield and Clowney; Montgomery and Edmunds.

Pi Kappa Phi 6
Owls 7
Brimm and Hay; Montgomery and Edmunds.

Other games will be played at every opportunity. It is expected that many knotty baseball problems will be solved, and that many new methods of play will be developed from the activities of the league.

———P. C.———

Mr. E. V. Lucas in one of his essays cites as two classic examples of American humor the stories: (a) of a man who jumped off the 25-story building with his rubber boots on into a fire net and bounced up and down so many times that the sheriff had to shoot him to keep him from starving to death; and (2) of the jerkwater railroad that had the cowcatcher on the rear end of the trains to keep the cows from running after the last car, climbing aboard and biting the passengers.

To my mind, a better example is the advice of the Tammany boss to the politicians who contemplated suing the newspapers for libel.

"Don't sue," he said. "They might prove it on you."

TALES OF ABOU BEN BLOWHARD

The Story of Abdul el Bonehead and Hamed the Hobo.

It came to pass that in the days of the president who loved the Ethiopians, one Abdul el Bonehead girded up his loins and fared forth upon a pilgrimage toward Mecca, the holy city to which every true believer must go before he is planted beneath the jimson weeds. Now by the wayside Abdul met a poor man whose raiment was ragged and soiled and whose grizzly beard had for many weeks gone unshaven. He leaned upon a staff and carried with him a bundle of wretched food which he had begged by the wayside.

When Abdul saw him his heart was moved to tears, and he stopped by the way and spake to him. "Why art thou so weary and in so sad a condition?" he asked him. "If thou wilt tell me the tale of thy life I shall give thee a gold dinar with which thou shalt purchase clean raiment and a shave."

"Know then," said the beggar," that I am Hamed the Hobo, than whom there is no more miserable a man. In my youth I was of a great strength and accounted bright of mind, and I learned well at the school and my parents had great hopes that I would comfort them and care for them in their old age. But alas I went to college when I had finished at the school, hoping to acquire more knowledge. I was faithful with my work and I went in unto all of my classes but, lo! the masters of instruction assigned each one a task longer than the others. As you well know, Oh Most Exalted One of Believers, and Favorite among the Prophet's children, the day is divided into but twenty-four hours. This fact alone is the cause of my downfall.

Hear! Oh, Beneficient One, of my tale of misery. I went into the class of one who taught the mysterious workings of the mind of man, and lo! he said to us, "Spend ye at least five hours upon the lesson which I have assigned to ye." Then was my heart heavy, and I went unto the class of one who taught the art of speech, and of letters, and he said unto me, "My son, see to it that thou spendest three hours upon thy work which I, thy professor have assigned unto thee." Then I sighed and my countenance darkened, but yet I went unto the class of one who taught of the frogs, and of the bones of the cat, and of the flies, and mosquitoes, and ere I departed he said unto me, "Thou shalt read ninety and seven pages in this book, and forty and nine pages in that one, and seventy and seven in that one. Thou shalt learn why the beaver shovels dirt with his tail instead of with his feet as does the mole, and thou shalt learn of the difference between the elephant and the oyster. Yea, thou shalt also read about thy ancestor, the earthworm. This should take thee seven hours, thou canst not read it in less." Then I wept and plead with him but it was of no avail, and I again went into a class, that of the master of the science of figures, and he assigned unto me seven theorems, and ninety and nine problems, and remarked that by hastening I could get up my work in the space of nine hours. Then I wept bitterly and rent my garments in twain, and cursed with a mighty oath. But I resolved to do it all if I could. So I studied the entire time I had aside from my classes which was of course less than twenty-four hours, but I could not learn the half of that which had been assigned unto me.

The next day it was the same way, I had other classes but when my assignments were made they required more time than there is in a solar day. I had no time for sleep, and I ravenously swallowed my meals when I could. And lo! I waxed thin, and my strength was all gone, and my mind was becoming rapidly insane.

So I arose one day and rent my garments and dashed to pieces my writing utensils, and destroyed by fire my books, and ever since then I have been Hamed the Hobo, for from that day forth I have journeyed about, a nervous wreck, and a beggar.

When Abdul el Bonehead had heard the tale he wept at the story of Hamed the Hobo, and he gave him ten shining dinars and departed toward Mecca, meditating sadly at the wrecked life of poor Hamed the Hobo.

Moral: The sun rises at dawn, shines for a space and is gone, then the light is turned on and destroyeth the vision. Truly Solomon hath said, "much study is a weariness of the flesh."

SEE OUR TEAM WORK

Pre-Season Training Very Promising

"Practice makes perfect." The raw material of yesterday is swiftly being shaped into one of the best baseball teams seen on P. C.'s diamond for seasons. If in doubt ask any member of the Clinton Mill League.

This veteran squad of husky spinners faced P. C.'s varsity with the intention of using an adding machine as assistant score-keeper. But they were doomed to disappointment. Coach Johnson's team, which had never fought together before, worked as a machine, so perfect was the "team work." Nor was there any discord when the Scrubs were allowed to try out their skill on the diamond, the same consistent playing was continued.

Among the many stars of the afternoon, perhaps the brightest was Moore, who "poled" the "pill" over the right fielder's head for a "homer" in a manner that would make Babe Ruth jealous.

Finally, when the supper bell called time, one team was very badly beaten. (And it wasn't P. C.'s, either.)

In watching this game the fans enthusiastically noted that the infield, with one exception, was composed of Freshmen, while the Sophs monopolized the outfield. Who said the one-year rule would affect us? And in the years to come won't P. C. have a baseball team to brag on?

Such is a sample of the work the Blue Stockings have been doing during the training season. They have worked hard, and the jagged kinks are being rapidly ironed out. The orphanage team also crossed bats with their "big brothers." These boys displayed a splendid ability at batting and tossing the ole pill around. The Presbyterians appreciate what these teams have done toward helping them to round themselves into first class condition. If they can maintain the pace they have set in practice the 1922 campaign will be very similar to the memorable campaign of 1916.

NEW BOOKS ADDED TO THE LIBRARY

Library Now Contains Over Six Thousand Books.

The Library of the College has procured a great many new books recently. Among the new additions are books for reference and books for pleasure, in other words novels. Listed below are a few of the new editions lately received. All of the books cannot be listed for lack of space. However, as each issue of The Blue Stocking goes to press, a list of the new books to date will be published for the convenience of the students who make use of the Library.

Economics Department

"Business Barometers," by Babson.
"An Approach to Business Problems," by Shaw.

Sociology Department

"The Kallikak Family," by Stoddard.

Literature Department

"Studies in Literature," by Quiller-Couch.
"The Art of Reading," by Quiller-Couch.
"The Art of Writing," by Quiller-Couch.

Bible Department

"The Origin of Paul's Religion," by Machen.
"The Bible History," by Edersheim.
"The Bible Hand-Book," by Angu-Green.

Classical Department

"Horace and His Age," by D'Alton.
"Cicero—Life and Works," by Taylor.

Poetry Department

"The Crescent Moon," by Tagore.
"Stray Birds," by Tagore.
"The Treasury of War Poetry."
"Poetry of the People."

Fiction Department

"The Theory of Relativity," by Einstein.
"Physics of the Air," by Humphreys
"The profession of Chemistry," by Pilcher.
"Science and Life," by Soddy.

The Library now contains somewhat over six thousand books. A short time ago Mr. Stringfellow, of Chester, gave to the Library a large number of books of all kinds. Now the Library of the Presbyterian College is as complete as one could wish a college library to be. Notwithstanding the fact, however, the management continues to add books and at the present rate we are destined to have one of the largest libraries in the South.

ALUMNI NOTES

It is the purpose of the Alumni Editor to present to the Blue Stocking readers the positions and addreses of the alumni from the class of '14 through the class of '22. If any member's name is overlooked it will be due to lack of information as to their whereabouts. Any information given the editor will be appreciated.

In looking over the roll of teachers in South Carolina we find E. S. Bennett, '14, principal of Clio High Schools, and H. M. Byrd, '14, holding a similar position with the Graniteville schools.

Among the business men of Society Hill, S. C., we have E. W. Carrigan, '14, among the leaders.

W. P. Jacobs, '14, is with the firm of Jacobs & Company, Clinton, S. C. He is not only playiny a leading part with this company, but is a leader in most of the commercial affairs of the city

When in New Orleans, La., go to St. Charles Avenue church and hear a sermon by Rev. J. S. Land, '14.

If your head aches or you have a prescription to be filled, stop at Sadler-Owens Pharmacy, Dr. R. E. Sadler, '14, will fix you up.

The people of Central, S. C., need not worry about tooth ache any longer, they have J. B. Falls, '14, to put them out of misery.

TRIANGULAR DEBATE WON BY NEWBERRY

rendering the debate at Newberry were Wofford's affirmative, consisting of J. P. Anderson and B. H. Womack; and the Presbyterian College negative made up of L. C. LaMotte and W. T. Wade.

The following is an excerpt from "The Old Gold and Black," of Wofford:

"The chapel at Wofford was the scene of one of the hottest debates ever witnessed in Spartanburg, and it was a pity that there were not more town people out to witness the fray. The P. C. team put up a game argument, but were downed by the eloquence of Setzler and McCain, debating for the Lutherans. Both sides are worthy of praise for the interest shown and the excellence of their speeches. The rebuttal was unusually good, waxing at times to fever heat.

JUNIOR-SENIOR BANQUET A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

P. C.'s BIGGEST SOCIAL EVENT OF THE YEAR ENJOYED BY ALL.

The Annual Junior-Senior Banquet, so long looked forward to, proved to be a brilliant success. It was held on the evening of April the fourteenth, and was attended by a number of fair guests from all parts of South Carolina, and from several of the neighboring states.

At eight thirty o'clock the guests assembled in the College auditorium where a reception was held. Promptly at nine o'clock everybody assembled in P. C.'s historic dining hall which they found attractively decorated with the Junior Class colors, and the colors of P. C.

The principle design was a web woven of blue and old gold crepe paper in the center of which hung an immense spider of garnet and blue pattern. The windows were decorated with a garnet and blue design and contained potted plants. The tables were arranged in a hollow square around the room and were beautifully decorated with flowers, and gold crepe paper.

At each plate the guests found an attractive souvenir, dainty silver pencils for the ladies, and bill folds for the gentlemen. Each guest also received an attractive menu cord, with space for autographs as a memento of the occasion.

After a blessing had been asked by Dr. Douglas a delightful repast was served, consisting of:

Fruit Cocktail
Carolina Turkey
Steamed Carolina Rice
Cranberry Sauce
Giblet Gravy Macaroni
Potato Compote
Spiced Dressing Pickles
Hot Biscuits
Orange Basket Salad Cheese Straws
Saratoga Chips
Blanched Almons, Roasted
Crackers
Ice Cream
Angel Cake Fruit Cake
Mocha
Mints '23 Punch

Toastmaster Dendy welcomed the guests with his characteristic cordial manner; and after the repast the following gave enjoyable toasts:

P. C. LEAGUE IS STILL THRIVING

The P. C. League, alias the Grasshopper League, alias the Hoppergrass League, alias other names, is still going, and going strong. The several teams have almost caught up with their schedules, and games are being played more or less regularly. Since the last report several games have been played. The Jay Birds defeated the Owls 7-5, but two days later, the Owls turned tables 14-8, thus regaining a hold on the top rung. The Jay Birds took revenge on the Aesir 7-4, who in turn defeated the Boll Weevils 7-5. The latest game resulted in a victory for the Owls over the Boll Weevils. Thus it can be seen that the Owls are setting the pace with six wins and one loss. The Jay Birds are a close second with five wins and one loss. Some real heavy hitters have been discovered. The leading teams have retained their positions thru heavy hitting and fairly good fielding.

League standing:	Won	Lost	Pct.
Owls	6	1	.857
Jay Birds	5	1	.833
Aesir	3	3	.500
Boll Weevils	1	5	.166

MRS. HUNTER ENTERTAINS BANQUET GUESTS

On the evening of April 15, the fair guests who had attended the Junior-Senior Banquet the previous evening, were given a delightful supper in the dining hall by Mrs. Hunter.

A most enjoyable course was served, the tables being decorated with lovely flowers. The members of the student body who were not so fortunate as to have guests present added to the life of the occasion by rending the air with lusty cheers for the visitors. It almost seemed as if a second banquet was in progress, as the original decorations had not yet been taken down and the supper was so delightful.

After the groaning tables were finally relieved of their contents the guests adjourned to the fraternity halls of the Aesir, Owls, and Pi Kappa Alphas, where informal receptions were held in honor of the lovely visitors.

This supper on the evening following the banquet certainly added much to the occasion, and adds one more reason to the host of reasons why the P. C. students all love Mrs. Hunter as they do.

HEIGHTH OF IGNORANCE

At the Chester banquet, when the salted peanuts were passed around, Holladay "raked" half of 'em off in his plate and proceeded to eat them with a fork.

PRESBYTERIANS STRIKE STRIDE

BULL DOGS RECEIVE FULL FORCE OF BLOW.

Yes, sir! we have gone and done it! Citadel went and did something at the same time, but the two things were most entirely dissimilar. In fact, they were absolutely unlike. The one thing brought joy and happiness—and incidentally sorrow and weeping, the other brought forth sorrow and weeping—and incidentally joy and happiness, it all depends upon the viewpoint.

Smarting under the shabby trick played by one Mr. J. Pluvius in thwarting them of a nice batting feast at the expense of the Maroon Collegians from Charleston, the Blue Stockings came back strong April 7 and amply gorged themselves with runs and those such welcome hits brought especially for the purpose from the Citadel. The final count was 9-4 in favor of the hosts.

It was a good game considering everything. Not a hit had been garnered, manufactured, smuggled, or in any wise delivered up until the last half of the third. Billy Lewis was twirling masterly ball, as was Rogers, the opposing slabsman. Rogers' luck broke first, and, incidentally, was broken the most. With one down in the third Warner came to bat. He had previously made all calculations, so there was nothing else to do but do it. And he did it. As all plans had been carefully laid everybody knew just what to do. Rogers did his part nobly by putting just the right one over. Warner took his cue and connected with the ball, which straightway described the calculated arc. As per arrangement, the left fielder gave chase and finally and triumphantly retrieved the recalcitrant pill which was gleefully chattering in Prof. Graham's garden. The whole thing worked out beautifully. Warner got his home run, Rogers got a chance to grin manfully to show his sportsmanship, while the husky guardian of left field showed his excellent training by giving immediate chase so as not to delay the game. Anyway, that blow decided things, for the Blue Stockings went on a rampage the very next inning.

Starting the merry-go-round Wilson got on by a bobble at second base. Brown singled. Moore did likewise, scoring Williamson. Then it was that Billy Lewis established himself as a slugger of note, for by a mighty blow he gained the freedom of all territory around third base, scoring Brown and Moore. Dampier grounded out; Matheson singled, Lewis tallied; Warner singled; Holliday grounded out; Galloway bingled once, ringing up two tallies in the persons of Matheson and Warner. Williamson, up the second time, grounded out.

Again in the eighth the Presbyterians did things against the Citadel. Dampier singled; Matheson went to first via short's error; Holladay negotiated a free ticket; Galloway singled,

SECEDERS BOW IN DEFEAT BEFORE BLUE STOCKINGS

PRESBYTERIANS WIN BRILLIANT GAME AT CHESTER BY 3 TO 0 SCORE.

Presbyterian College crossed bats with Erskine on neutral ground Tuesday, April 18, and won by a 3-0 score. It was a brilliant game, and meant much to P. C.'s prestige in the City of Hills, in the whole state for that matter. It showed that Coach Johnson has a real baseball team in the making, for Erskine is recognized as one of the state's leading teams. The Blue Stockings played a brilliant game; every man was on his toes, and the pep, dash, and vim, which are characteristic of Walter Johnson's teams, were things beautiful to behold. Billy Lewis, Chester's pet product and P. C.'s best bet, twirled what was perhaps the most brilliant game of his career. He allowed only four scattered hits, and was well-nigh invincible. P. C. is proud of her Ace, as Chester well may be of her product. The Presbyterians fielded brilliantly. A pretty piece of work was a fast double play, edited and published and delivered by Messrs. Warner and Holladay. In fact, the whole infield played ball of the same high caliber, and as for the outfield—well, when the ole' pill, soaring over that sacred territory, seeking a resting place in that Utopia where such things as bats are unknown, sought to land it was easily surrounded and captured by the speedy outer-gardeners.

Erskine, too, played good ball, but not as air-tight as did the Presbyterians. However, they did not lose the game on loose playing. The Blue Stockings earned their victory by virtue of eight hits, tried and true, of which Brown secured three.

Score by innings:

Erskine ..... 000 000 000—0
P. C. ..... 100 020 000—3

Batteries: Beard and Evans; Lewis and Moore.

Erskine Downs Blue Stockings

Previous to the game reported above the Seceders entertained the Presbyterians at Due West and vanquished them by a 4-0 score. Wolfe, twirling for the hosts, treated the visitors badly, allowing them only two hits. However, the 4-0 score would never have been had the Blue Stockings played jam-up ball. It was another game of "give and take", the Calvanists giving and the Reformers taking what was offered, which was perfectly natural.

However, the score is even now. As events have proved the Presbyterians won the second encounter by almost the same score as they lost the first.

Score by innings:

P. C. ..... 000 000 000—0
Erskine ..... 000 000 13x—4

Batteries: Lewis and Williamson; Wolfe and Evans.

CHESTIONIANS HONOR P. C. BASEBALL TEAM

Long will the visit to Chester linger in the minds of the members of the team of '22. Long will the visit to Chester linger in the minds of the students who accompanied the team. Never will the delightful banquet given them in honor of the victors be forgotten. What better token of appreciation could be tendered The Blue Stockings than a bounteous feast such as was given by the Chester Presbyterians and the friends of P. C.

So be it that on the night of the 18th, a Feast of the Gods held sway in the spacious new Sunday School annex of the Presbyterian church of Chester. Everything about the place gave forth in profusion the atmosphere of enjoyment, merriUment, and care-free spirits. Especially were the courses a delight to the eye. It was as if each P. C. student present were a progidal son, and that a fatted calf had been killed to rejoice in his return.

And to cap the climax, what could be more pleasing than to have this sumptous banquet served by Chester's fairest maidens. And 'twas at this point, that many of the young men's fancies lightly turned to thoughts of—see members of the team.

Later in the evening when the plates were growing empty and other things full, Mr. Arthur Gaston, of Chester,

PI KAPPA ALPHAS GIVE SOCIAL

A most delightful party was given by the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity on April 15. Following, as it did, the sumptous banquet of the Juniors and Seniors, the social offered many of the fair visitors an additional, though less elaborate, occasion for enjoyment. The party was held in the local halls of Mu Chapter, which were attractively decorated. Card games, conversation and dancing afforded abundant amusement for all present. Several members of the Chicora glee club were among the visitors, and those of the fraternity whose young voices were still mellow with the richness of youth, joined the ladies in song. "Dream Girl of Pi Kappa Alpha," was the favorite. Punch and candy were enjoyed by the merry-makers. The charming chaperone for the occasion was Mrs. Hunter. The party lasted until shortly before twelve o'clock, and even then the mirthful couples were loathe to depart. Those present were Mrs. Hunter; Miss Hatton, Jimmie Dick; Miss Hunter, Howard Wilson; Miss McCord, Hal Fewell; Miss Pagget, Van K. Bland; Miss Stamps, Roy Moore; Miss Young, G. W. Sturat; Miss Copeland, M. S. Dickson; Miss Williams, Nichols; Miss Miller, C. E. Piephoff; Miss Patterson, J. L. Nickles; Miss O'Daniel, Brown.

When such an important event as the Junior-Senior Banquet is being held, it would seem that the light fingered men in our midst would have consideration enough to wait until the guests were served before engaging in the nefarious practices. Not that we condemn them too severely for the gentle art of pilfering, as it is within our own recollection of the time when we were disposed to help enjoy the banquet dainties uninvited. But the point is that they might have waited until they were sure the cream would hold out before appropriating it to their own use. Think of the embarrassment which would have been suffered by the good ladies of the U. D. C., not to mention by the Junior Class, had the ladies been unable to secure more cream in time.

Gentlemen, if this keeps up for many more years the students will be unable to secure any ladies' organization of the city to furnish the banquet for them. Then to whom will they go?

Besides this the ladies of Clinton are too good to the P. C. students for said students to impose thus upon their good nature. Of course, the deed was done thoughtlessly and in a spirit of mere boyish mischief, but is it very likely that the ladies all look upon it in this light?

It would be ridiculous to have to station a policeman on duty at the dining hall, but that is exactly what will have to be done if such pranks go on many more times.

Ministerial Association Conducting Chapel Services.

Students continue to be actively engaged in the chapel exercises of the college each morning. For some time now students have been conducting these exercises, and this week the Ministerial Association has this work in charge. Next week the Y. M. C. A. members will lead chapel.

The central theme for this work is "Lessons of our Failures." Monday morning, W. M. Clem, president of the Association, began the series of talks. Tuesday, M. I. Crutchfield continued the theme, and following for the rest of the days of the week J. D. Messick, J. H. Dollar, J. T. Harrod, and G. A. Pearce will speak, using some topic of the general theme.—Maroon and Gold.

MARINES VISIT PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Besides the fair visitors during the recent gala occasion, P. C. entertained some less fair visitors Thursday and Friday of last week. These were Uncle Sam's husky, sun-burned Marines from Paris Island, S. C. They proved themselves a bunch of ball players who knew how to be good winners, and who apparently knew how to be good losers should need be. However, there was no "need be" for the latter.

The first game was not a game. Though the participants wore gloves and mitts, and each side had nine men, and each man more or less eventually returned each ball that was thrown or knocked to him, it was not a baseball game—at least, from the Presbyterian side of the argument. The most apt way of describing it is to characterize it as a game of "give and take," with the Blue Stockings giving and the Marines having a monopoly on the taking end of the thing. The sons of Calvin garnered 7 hits from Uncle Sam's lads, while the lattetr secured 12 more or less damaging bingles.

The second game, played on Friday in the presence of many of our fair visitors, was a far better affair. It seemed that a totally different team battled the visitors. It was almost a real ball game. As may be guessed, the "Ole Reliable," Billy Lewis, was the Calvinistic master of ceremonies. The heavy-hitting Marines were only able to bag 5 lonely bingles. However, they somehow manufactured 5 runs with the aid of one or two free-will offerings. On the other hand, the Blue Stockings touched the visiting heaver for 8 safties, one being a 4-bagger by Galloway. Notwithstanding, Johnson's lads were able to tally only thrice.

OWLS ENTERTAIN

To keep up the happiness of last week, and to aid our fair visitors in their mirth, the Owl Club gave a very enjoyable entertainment on last Saturday night. The club room, which had just received a fresh coating of coloring was very pretty. The girls too, some of whom possibly might have just received a fresh coating of coloring, were even prettier. Mrs. Arthur Copeland, who acted as chaperone, kept the party on the "qui vive" all of the evening. In fact, father time slipped upon the young people and Sunday morning was hastening in before any one realized it. Young Miss Margaret Copeland, who served punch was kept busy the entire night. Her position was a very imoprtant one and we hope that she did not keep count on any of the boys. The evening passed with much laughing and talking and "tres" much glee. At about ten o'clock refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake, were served by the stags of the party. The waiters took every precaution and no accidents occurred. The young ladies who were our guests for the Junior Senior banquet seemed to have enjoyed the affair very much. Those present were: Mrs. Arthur Copeland and Miss Margaret Copeland; Mr. M. A. Durant with Miss Maude Ellis of Clinton; Mr. L. N. Edmunds with Miss Jeannette White of Winthrop; Mr. Marion Cothran with Miss Elizabeth Lynn, Mr. J. K. Wilson with Miss Emmie Pittts, Mr. C. K. Douglas with Miss Rowena Jones, Mr. W. P. Gourdine with Miss May Owens, Mr. John Shaw with Miss Victoria Bagnal of Manning, Mr. Don Matheson with Miss Frances Witherspoon, Mr. Gene Wilson with Miss Natalie Green of Spartanburg, Mr. Frank Clark with Miss Cornelia White of Winthrop, and Mr. D. D. Edmunds with Miss Annie B. Adair. The stags were: E. L. Wilds, S. H. Edmunds, Shorty Pearce, F. B. Mayes and R. H. Whilden.

"THE ONE PRICE STORE"

TALES OF ABOU BEN BLOWHARD

The Adventure of Abdullah, the Ignorant, and His Friend, Achmet, the Ugly.

In the year that Conan the Doyle ceased to write of ruthless villians, and centered his efforts upon communicating with his departed ancestors, it came to pass that Abdullah the Ignorant arose and putting his house in order left the family cat in charge of a friend and journeyed forth to visit Achmet the Ugly.

Now Achmet was the friend of his youth and repoiced to see him, and he ran forth to meet him and embraced him, and prepared clean raiment for him, and called his sons and made a great feast. And when evening was come Achmet said unto Abdullah, "Come, let us go forth to the street, and I shall show thee the town, and we shall take in a show, and after the show, perhaps I shall find thee a drop to drink that thou mayest cheer thyself after thy journey."

So they went forth unto the street, even unto the pricipal street of the city, where all was gaity and the lights shone brightly. Now Abdullah the Ignorant was a husbandman who tended fruit trees and tilled the soil, and he had read much recently pertaining to the flapper and the teahound but he had not seen them. And as they walked arm in arm, Abdullah meditating about the boll weevil, and Achmet about Fatty Arbuckle, they met a youth with his raiment of the latest cut. His hair was exceeding long and his trousers being in folds about his ankles, and a listless air possessed him. He hummed a tune that sounded even as the rap of the undertaker's hammer upon his own mother-in-law's coffin.

"Seest thou yon disagreeable youth?" said Abdullah the Ignorant. "I'll lay thee a wager that he is one of the tea-hounds of which so much hath been written." "Nay, good Abdullah," replied his friend, "yon stripling whom we passed is none other than Haroun the Holy. He is president of the Christian Endeavor, teacheth a Sunday School class and maketh many protests against dancing. Indeed he is the worst enemy to the teahound of which thou speakest. Last Sabbath he addressed a meeting of the Anti-Saloon League and received great praise." "Lo! thou astonishest me," replied Abdullah, and they walked on in silence for a few minutes. Finally they reached a cigar store and went in to purchase a bit of the fragrant weed. "It seemeth to me that yonder young man is a goodly youth," said Abdullah, pointing to a stripling in neat but conservative raiment. "He wears not the outward aspect of a teahound ,is he not also an example to hold up to the youths of the city?" "Nay, good Abdullah, thou art again wrong," replied Achmet. "Know thou that thou lookest upon Palon the Parasite. He is indeed the village cut up, is never sober and is noted for his filthy jests and dissolute ways. The cops of the city are constantly after him, and he causeth his white-haired father much grief. Men predict that he will not much longer deprive the state of his services as a rock breaker, and a swinger of the pick. Only his father's prestige hath kept him out of the jail this long."

"Indeed I marvel at what thou tellest me good Achmet," said Abdullah, as they lit up their expensive ropes and whiffed the cool Havana aroma. Then they went up the street until they came to a cafe and entered therein that they might break bread with one another as was their wont when in college together. Then Abdullah saw a maiden dressed in as little as possible sitting with an elderly man at a table to the right. Her cheeks were red as the June apple, and lo! her raiment was even as the transparent cobweb, and more could be said of her but we leave that to thy imiganation. "Tell me friend Achmet," questioned the husbandman, "is yon maiden not surely one of the flappers of which I have read in the Whiz Bang. Surely her raiment marks her as one. And who is the poor old boob with her. I'll wager she hath made him pile up a goodly bill." "Thou are again mistaken, oh friend of my youth," said Achmet. "The maiden is none other than Rachael the Righteous, and the man with her is her father Aaron the Excellent. She is mistress of the Girl Scouts, singeth in the choir at church, and is an active member in no less than seven religious and philantropic organizations. Her father hath brought her here that they might eat supper, as her mother is away at a convention of the Woman's Auxiliary." "Thou makest me to marvel indeed, and were it not thou who tellest me I should not believe thee!" exclaimed the dumdfounded Abdullah. "Surely mine eyes have deceived me, or I am about to go mad, or am possessed of a demon."

Then entered they the house where a play was played, and Abdullah enjoyed it and made merry with his friend. And when the show was over they went unto the cafe of Bulbul ben Bootlegger, who secretly sold strong drink served in tea-cups. There Abdullah saw seated at a table a demure maiden modestly clad in simple raiment, and the maiden looked so sweet and innocent that Abdullah was constrained again to question his friend. "Surely yon slip of a girl is not here for to drink strong drink. It must be that she is studying actual conditions in order that she may better understand the evil ways of the multitude." "Again, Oh Abdullah, my friend, art thou greatly mistaken," lamented Achmet. "Yon young woman whom thou seest is one Jezabel the Jazzer, she is the vamp of the village and hath won notoriety by making fools of just such asses as thou." "Almost thou constrainest me to anger," replied Abdullah, "tonight I have been greatly deceived, and no more will I form judgements so swiftly."

So the two friends went to the abode of Achmet and sought their couches, and Achmet threw his treasured Whiz Bang in the fire and it was many hours ere he slept for that he had been sorely deceived.

Moral: The apparel oft proclaims the man, but not always.

VOLIVA'S CELESTIAL CITY

With Humble and Profuse Apologies to Rev. John Newton.

Curious things of thee are spoken,
Zion City, Illinois;
He whose head cannot be broken
Formed thee for his girls and boys,
On the Middle Ages founded
What can shake thy sure repose.
With the skeptic's talk surrounded
Thou may'st well be right, who knows.

See the stream of Ocean's waters
Springing from the glacial rim.
Zion City's sons and daughters
All believe their leader's whim.
Who can view from lofty places
And believe the earth is round,
Surely such a one shows traces
Of a mind not very sound.

See the sun at twilight setting
Down to Hell it surely goes.
And to Hell, Voliva's betting,
Will be sent Voliva's foes.
When at dawn the sun doth brighten
All earth's surface with its ray,
It the flat earth's weight doth lighten,
Traveling through the sky all day.

With the North Pole at the center,
And the glacier round the edge,
And a hole for Sol to enter;
Nothing can the doctrine hedge.
Though we think the sky but ether,
Voliva contends it's tin,
And to think that it is neither
Surely is a dreadful sin.

So the youth of Zion City
They are taught this doctrine queer;
This I think is quite a pity
It will run them "bugs," I fear.
Yet Voliva, he proposes
Fitting out a steamer trim,
If it's lost it thus exposes
How it went beyond the rim.
—C. U. Later.

There was a young man named McQuinn,
Who sat in his chair on a pin,
He arose very quick
As he felt the sharp prick
And committed a terrible sin.

Donnie: "Whiteside, I bet you can't find the word 'Tea-Hound' in the dictionary."

Whiteside: "Maybe not, but I bet I can find 'tea' and 'hound' in there."

There once was a lady named Reaux
Who numbered by dozens her Beaux,
And the reason they came,
(It was really a shame)
Was because of the roll of her Heaux.

In the year that Conan the Doyle ceased to write of ruthless villians, and centered his efforts upon communicating with his departed ancestors, it came to pass that Abdullah the Ignorant arose and putting his house in order left the family cat in charge of a friend and journeyed forth to visit Achmet the Ugly.

Now Achmet was the friend of his youth and repoiced to see him, and he ran forth to meet him and embraced him, and prepared clean raiment for him, and called his sons and made a great feast. And when evening was come Achmet said unto Abdullah, "Come, let us go forth to the street and I shall show thee the town, and we shall take in a show, and after the show, perhaps I shall find thee a drop to drink that thou mayest cheer thyself after thy journey."

So they went forth unto the street, even unto the pricipal street of the city, where all was gaity and the lights shone brightly. Now Abdullah the Ignorant was a husbandman who tended fruit trees and tilled the soil, and he had read much recently pertaining to the flapper and the teahound but he had not seen them. And as they walked arm in arm, Abdullah meditating about the boll weevil, and Achmet about Fatty Arbuckle, they met a youth with his raiment of the latest cut. His hair was exceeding long and his trousers being in folds about his ankles, and a listless air possessed him. He hummed a tune that sounded even as the rap of the undertaker's hammer upon his own mother-in-law's coffin.

"Seest thou yon disagreeable youth?" said Abdullah the Ignorant. "I'll lay thee a wager that he is one of the tea-hounds of which so much hath been written." "Nay, good Abdullah," replied his friend, "yon stripling whom we passed is none other than Haroun the Holy. He is president of the Christian Endeavor, teacheth a Sunday School class and maketh many protests against dancing. Indeed he is the worst enemy to the tea-hound of which thou speakest. Last Sabbath he addressed a meeting of the Anti-Saloon League and received great praise." "Lo! thou astonishest me," replied Abdullah, and they walked on in silence for a few minutes. Finally they reached a cigar store and went in to purchase a bit of the fragrant weed. "It seemeth to me that yonder young man is a goodly youth," said Abdullah, pointing to a stripling in neat but conservative raiment. "He wears not the outward aspect of a tea-hound ,is he not also an example to hold up to the youths of the city?" "Nay, good Abdullah, thou art again wrong," replied Achmet. "Know thou that thou lookest upon Palon the Parasite. He is indeed the village cut up, is never sober and is noted for his filthy jests and dissolute ways. The cops of the city are constantly after him, and he causeth his white-haired father much grief. Men predict that he will not much longer deprive the state of his services as a rock breaker, and a swinger of the pick. Only his father's prestige hath kept him out of the jail this long."

"Indeed I marvel at what thou tellest me good Achmet," said Abdullah, as they lit up their expensive ropes and whiffed the cool Havana aroma. Then they went up the street until they came to a cafe and entered therein that they might break bread with one another as was their wont when in college together. Then Abdullah saw a maiden dressed in as little as possible sitting with an elderly man at a table to the right. Her cheeks were red as the June apple, and lo! her raiment was even as the transparent cobweb, and more could be said of her but we leave that to thy imigaantion. "Tell me friend Achmet," questioned the husbandman, "is yon maiden not surely one of the flappers of which I have read in the Whiz Bang. Surely her raiment marks her as one. And who is the poor old boob with her. I'll wager she hath made him pile up a goodly bill." "Thou are again mistaken, oh friend of my youth," said Achmet. "The maiden is none other than Rachael the Righteous, and the man with her is her father Aaron the Excellent. She is mistress of the Girl Scouts, singeth in the choir at church, and is an active member in no less than seven religious and philantropic organizations. Her father hath brought her here that they might eat supper, as her mother is away at a convention of the Woman's Auxiliary." "Thou makest me to marvel indeed, and were it not thou who tellest me I should not believe thee!" exclaimed the dumdfounded Abdullah. "Surely mine eyes have deceived me, or I am about to go mad, or am possessed of a demon."

Then entered they the house where a play was played, and Abdullah enjoyed it and made merry with his friend. And when the show was over they went unto the cafe of Bulbul ben Bootlegger, who secretly sold strong drink served in tea-cups. There Abdullah saw seated at a table a demure maiden modestly clad in simple raiment, and the maiden looked so sweet and innocent that Abdullah was constrained again to question his friend. "Surely yon slip of a girl is not here for to drink strong drink. It must be that she is studying actual conditions in order that she may better understand the evil ways of the multitude." "Again, Oh Abdullah, my friend, art thou greatly mistaken," lamented Achmet. "Yon young woman whom thou seest is one Jezabel the Jazzer, she is the vamp of the village and hath won notoriety by making fools of just such asses as thou." "Almost thou constrainest me to anger," replied Abdullah, "tonight I have been greatly deceived, and no more will I form judgements so swiftly."

So the two friends went to the abode of Achmet and sought their couches, and Achmet threw his treasured Whiz Bang in the fire and it was many hours ere he slept for that he had been sorely deceived.

VOLIVA'S CELESTIAL CITY

With Humble and Profuse Apologies to Rev. John Newton.

Curious things of thee are spoken,
Zion City, Illinois;
He whose head cannot be broken
Formed thee for his girls and boys,
On the Middle Ages founded
What can shake thy sure repose.
With the skeptic's talk surrounded
Thou may'st well be right, who knows.

See the stream of Ocean's waters
Springing from the glacial rim.
Zion City's sons and daughters
All believe their leader's whim.
Who can view from lofty places
And believe the earth is round,
Surely such a one shows traces
Of a mind not very sound.

See the sun at twilight setting
Down to Hell it surely goes.
And to Hell, Voliva's betting,
Will be sent Voliva's foes.
When at dawn the sun doth brighten
All earth's surface with its ray,
It the flat earth's weight doth lighten,
Traveling through the sky all day.

With the North Pole at the center,
And the glacier round the edge,
And a hole for Sol to enter;
Nothing can the doctrine hedge.
Though we think the sky but ether,
Voliva contends it's tin,
And to think that it is neither
Surely is a dreadful sin.

So the youth of Zion City
They are taught this doctrine queer;
This I think is quite a pity
It will run them "bugs," I fear.
Yet Voliva, he proposes
Fitting out a steamer trim,
If it's lost it thus exposes
How it went beyond the rim.

There was a young man named McQuinn,
Who sat in his chair on a pin,
He arose very quick
As he felt the sharp prick
And committed a terrible sin.

Donnie: "Whiteside, I bet you can't find the word 'Tea-Hound' in the dictionary."

Whiteside: "Maybe not, but I bet I can find 'tea' and 'hound' in there."

There once was a lady named Reaux
Who numbered by dozens her Beaux,
And the reason they came,
(It was really a shame)
Was because of the roll of her Heaux.

BAG LIMIT NOT YET REACHED

P. C. Sluggers Still Within Limit

Below is found the results of the P. C. batting efforts. The B. M. I. game is not included, neither is the fragmentary College of Charleston affair. To date Citadel diet has proved the most nourishing to the thriving appetites of the several Blue Stocking Kings of Swat, for almost a third of all safeties bagged to date were selected from the choicest offerings of the Cadets' larder.

Batting averages through game of April 14:

	AB	H	R	Av.
Hindman	2	1	0	.500
Macdonald	2	1	0	.500
Lewis	9	3	1	.333
Brown	23	7	1	.304

PRESBYTERIANS STRIKE STRIDE

Dampier tallying; Williamson singled, bringing Matheson home.

The Citadel put in their dirty work in the sixth and seventh frames. Two doubles by O'Shaughnessy and Rogers accounted for one tally in the sixth. The Bull Dogs garnered three more in the next frame on three singles, a base on balls, and a fielder's choice.

Thus ended the game 9-4. Some errors were made by both teams, but it was an enjoyable game. The hitting of the locals was especially encouraging. Taking all in all, the Blue Stockings won by heavy hitting, good pitching, and good fielding. Lewis caused 7 Cadets to whiff futively.

ecting as toastmaster, called upon several of the alumni of P. C. Those answering to the call were: Mr. Jim Key, Dr. Robert Abell, both of Chester, and Mr. Harry Hicklin, of Richburg, S. C.

Coach Johnson, Captain Williamson, and Manager Crawford made excellent speeches.

Deep regrets were expressed by the toastmaster for the impossibility of Dr. Douglas' presence.

The entertainment will long be remembered and as Manager Crawford stated in his toast, "One thing we did do in Chester, we made the A. R. P.'s wish to the devil they had never drawn out of the Presbyterian church."

A COMFORTING THOUGHT

The Junior-Senior Banquet!
Just watch the Seniors smile.
They seem to think they rank it;
But, Oh, the Juniors' "pile."

The Seniors laugh so gaily.
The Juniors, they laugh too;
But when it's over, truly;
Well, the Juniors, they'll be blue.

But what about the Freshman
And too, the Sophomore;
Are they not God's creation,
Endowed with wants galore,

Control yourself, my little rat,
And you, my dear "wise fool."
If only you those wants combat,
You'll find they're filled ere you leave school.

E. D. M., '24.

Shaw: "Anderson, do you know the difference between a dromedary and a camel?"

Anderson: "Come on, old man, I've had that pulled on me before."

Kirven: "A dromedary has two humps while a camel has only one."

Whiteside: "You are wrong. A dromedary is one of those dates you eat."

Mr. J. C. Young and Miss Jennie Mae Weir.
Mr. W. W. Lewis and Miss Elizabeth Harris.
Mr. F. K. Clarke and Miss Cornelia White.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the Carolina Syncopators.

Thanks are due to the ladies of the Stephen D. Lee Chapter, U. D. C., who furnished the repast for the Junior class.

VOLUME III — PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, MAY 6th, 1922 — NUMBER 12

L. C. LAMOTTE WINS SECOND PLACE IN ANNUAL ORATORICAL CONTEST

ERSKINE IS FIRST HONOR INSTITUTION. NINE COLLEGES REPRESENTED.

Louis Cossitt LaMotte speaking for P. C. in the Annual Intercollegiate State Oratorical Contest, convening at Greenwood, April 22, in the auditorium of Lander College, won second place with his oration entitled "Wasted Resources". Erskine's speaker, J. C. Reid, Jr., of Charlotte, N. C., came first with his speech, "A Nation's Temptation," while Karl Kinnard of Greenwood, representing Newberry, was voted third best. His topic was, "The Price of Permanent Peace."

The speech delivered by the P. C. Representative, L. C. LaMotte, presented a timely theme, indeed, and threw out to the audience in a masterful manner the crying need of better educational facilities in the South Carolina city system of schools as well as the much neglected rural districts. An oration of this sort is sure to win recognition of the most critical audience and cause a stamp of honor to be placed upon the author of the speech.

LaMotte, winner of the red ribbon division, is a member of the present graduating class. Last year he won third place in the annual collegiate orators meet and it was voiced by many at the time that he deserved second place, if not first. However, those are bygones and anyway this year he climbed one more rung in his ladder of fame. He received two first place votes and had he one more year, we would not be far amiss in predicting that first honor would be his. In short, P. C. has in him an orator of no ameteur ability, but a finished product in the silver-tongued world.

Nine Colleges Represented

When one considers the fact that nine colleges were contesting for the high honors, it is obvious what winning first, second, or third place really means. The winners are to be congratulated. The following is a list of the other speakers, their colleges, and speeches:

R. B. Herbert, Wofford, "The Right of All and the Desire of One."

A. C. Phelps, The Citadel, "A Place in the Sun."

Fant Kelly, Carolina, "The Sovereignty of Good Will."

R. W. Coursey, Clemson, "An Ideal National Character."

R. G. Campbell, Furman, "Crowning the Uncrowned."

Isadore Givner, College of Charleston, "America's Need."

Lander Students Entertain

In the intermission between the speeches, musical numbers were sung by Lander students and faculty members. While waiting on the decision of the judges, a duet was sung by Mrs. S. W. Page and W. A. Huey.

George G. Buell, Jr., of the College of Charleston, president of the oratorical association, presided.

The judges were: Dr. William Way, Chester; Dr. A. Sheppardson, Chester; A. C. Todd, Laurens; Judge C. C. Featherstone, Greenwood; J. B. Park, Greenwood.

WILLIAMSON OUT FOR REMAINDER OF SEASON

Blue Stocking Captain Suffers Broken Leg.

Lee Williamson, captain of the 1922 Presbyterian College baseball team, broke his leg while sliding into third base in a practice game on April 25. The left leg was the unfortunate member this time, it being broken just above the ankle, the small bone being damaged. Just a week previous, April 18th, was the second "anniversary" of a previous similar misfortune sustained in a like manner during "Big Boy's" Freshman year.

Dr. Davis adujusted the injured locomotor agent, and the owner of the damaged foot has been resting more or less fairly well since. A trip to Laurens for an X-ray picture was not conducive of results as the pictures failed to pan out. Another trial will be made today.

Williamson has been prominently connected with Presbyterian athletics ever since he entered college in the fall of '19. He won a letter in football, basketball and baseball that year,

T. G. DULIN ELECTED RECORDING SECRETARY

Of The South Carolina Oratorical Association.

At a recent meeting at Greenwood, of the executive committee of the S. C. I. O. A., new officers for the ensuing year were elected. R. G. Herbert of Wofford, was chosen president. This and all other offices of the association rotate among the colleges, each college being honored with a different office and one higher than the one it held the preceding year. That is, of course, until the college has had the presidency and then preforce it must start at the bottom and climb up again. In due time which will be in 1925, a P. C. representative will have the highest office given him.

The subordinate officers are: H. M. Lightsey of Clemson, vice-president; T. G. Dulin of P. C., recording secretary; R. W. Coursey of Clemson, corresponding secretary; J. H. Love of Erskine, treasurer.

The executive committee: W. P. Connelly, Newberry; Jack M. Cantey, Jr., the Citadel; Devore Andrews,

ANNUAL BANQUET BY PI KAPPA ALPHAS

EVENT'S SUCCESS INSURED BY FAIR VISITORS.

The annual banquet of Mu chapter of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity held sway in the Commercial Club hall on the evening of Friday, April 28th. This occasion marked the zenith of Mu's first year at P. C. Not one thing which insures the success of every banquet had been neglected. So from assembling to the departure of the merrymakers, the happy and joyous atmosphere replaced the more ordinary, world, and sordid things of life and paradise was found only to be lost in the past which preforce dissolves all things.

The banquet hall was beautifully decorated with the Garnet and Old Gold, the colors of the fraternity, and the Garnet and Blue, the colors of P. C., ferns and palms were tastefully arranged about the hall in a manner that, figuratively speaking, made the Sahara a veritable Eden. These beautiful decorations proved a fitting background for the fair ladies who graced the occasion with their presence.

The termination of the short reception ended part one of "The Rapture of the Banqueteers." At the call of the orchestra, the Pi brothers, Pi sisters, and guests assembled about the tables which were significantly arranged in the design of a Greek letter Pi. Dr. Douglas gave thanks.

Each of those in attendance found an attractive souvenir folder by each plate, giving the menu, program, and roster of the Pi Kappa Alpha in Clinton. The following delightful menu was served:

Fruit Cocktail
Carolina Turkey
Giblet Gravy — Spiced Dressing
Steamed Rice — English Peas
Macaroni
Pickles — Cranberry Sauce
Hot Biscuits
StuffedOlives — Cheese Straws
Fruit Salad
Crackers — Saratoga Chips
Ice Cream — Angel Cake
Mints — Punch — Mocha

Mr. D. W. A. Neville, acting as toastmaster, extended a hearty welcome. The following program held interest:

P. C. BOXING TEAM WINS

The following telegram was received Thursday from the ring-side in Columbia, which tells an exciting story in a few words:

What more could we wish. Good work, Brimm and Scott. Congratulations.

"THE PRIVATE SECRETARY" GIVEN BY DRAMATIC CLUB SCORES BIG HIT

INITIAL PERFORMANCE IS EXCELLENT. CLUB SHOWS DRAMATIC ABILITY.

"The Private Secretary," presented by the P. C. Dramatic Club on the evening of April 14th, scored a big hit with the large audience congregated to witness the initial presentation of the young stock company. If there were any present whose main object was to criticize the play, were there any present who journeyed forth to view the play as a result of an acute attack of curiosity or were there many among the crowd who came merely to patronize the college production as a sense of duty—no matter what their object for coming—they were all highly entertained every minute from the rise of the curtain to the familiar "and they lived happily ever after" scene.

"The private Secretary" is a patented funny bone tickler. The play is chuck full of occasions which give rise to spontaneous laughter and those hilarious incidences are not few and far between. There is a continuous flow of mirth and wit throughout the course of the performance.

The actors and actresses were well chosen and each seemed to have been born for his or her part. The matter of picking the shining lights from the cast of stars is almost an impossibility: they all performed in a manner that would do credit to any William A. Brady play. Due however, to the odd parts and the portrayal of eccentric characters, "Jimmie" Dick, with his laughter provoking ejaculation of "Do you know," and his burdensome "chattels," together with "Big Boy" Williamson, who portrayed a character "nutty" about having his nephey sow wild oats, seemed to hold the audience in spasmotic laughter. Thus being well suited for their parts, they made the hit of the evening. Nevertheless, Hudson, "Crummy" Edmunds, Clark, and "Fice" MaMahan come in for special mention for the way in which they enacted their parts.

For the feminine members of the cast—but who can pick one or two from such an array of talent. Miss Cosby's fortune undoubtedly seems to be hidden behind the glimmering footlights. Miss Myra Leaman is already a finished product of dramatic art, while Miss Sarah Hunter has no business teaching school, conserving her loving personality while the teatregoers are perishing from the lack of the sunshine which radiates from her smile. No one could have played the part which Miss Lois Blakely took other than herself.

We predict a great future for this youthful organization if the first appearance is any kind of a sign of the forthcoming productions. Although there will be no other plays this year, the beginning of the session of 1923-1924 will find the actors hard at work on the second production.

With all the array of talent that the Dramatic Club possesses the success of the play, "The Private Secretary," is partly due to the untiring efforts and valuable aid of Dr. D. J. Brimm and Mrs. D. J. Woods.

CLEMSON TIGERS VISIT BLUE STOCKINGS

Jungleers Defeat Presbyterians Twice.

Coach Johnson and Company were hosts to Doc Stewart and Company for two days, April 21 and 22. The first encounter was the only official one of the two, the second being merely an exhibition game.

The first was a beautiful game of baseball even though the Tigers outcounted the Blue Stockings 8-0. It was anybody's battle until the sixth inning, when things happened. It was a pitchers' battle between Billy Lewis and a husky Tiger, one Mr. Rhem, until the aforesaid sixth inning, at which time the heretofore air-tight support accorded Lewis began to—and did—crack. The crack was big enough to admit two counters. The fissure was still open in the ninth, when another Tiger sneaked across the rubber.

The exhibition game was likewise a good one until somewhere about the sixth or seventh. Tho the count was 8-3 against them the Blue Stockings

PI KAPPA ALPHA GIVES A PARTY

Delightful Event On Night Following Banquet.

On the night following the annual Pi Kappa Alpha banquet a delightful party was held in the fraternity halls of Mu chapter. Although several of the attractive guests of the night before had departed, there were still a number present. The party was an informal one, an occasion for enjoyment of the "get-together" type. The brothers of the chapter met, in turn, the fair visitors who so graciously lent their enchantments at the banquet. Conversation and music were the chief amusements. The rooms were appropriately decorated with flowers. Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and candy were served. The charming chaperones for the social were Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Boyd and Mrs. Hunter. The couples gathered at an early hour, but time flew by as time has a habit of doing when pleasure is at its height, and only too soon the enjoyment ceased. Whether it was the sweet fragrance of the

It doesn't take a mathematician to figure out how many more days there are in this year, Thank Goodness!

But it does take an expert accountant to figure how we are going to pay for the Annual with the two-bits we have left.

If experience is a good teacher we should certainly be a good loser.

However, we don't intend to monopolize that form of experience.

One consolation, hard luck can't follow us into the next world, and any way, a wise old sage remarked that such luck can't go on forever.

Since the Shifter's organization is the product of woman's mind, we must give them credit for being the first to commercialize "Love" on an extensive basis.

However, it seems that Shifters in many cities are becoming shiftless.

And so it necessarily follows that the Floppers will have to go back to the old fashioned way of making love.

Mr. Advertiser: The absence of an advertisement in the Blue Stocking is a "boll weevil" in your money crop.

———P. C.———

Running wildly about the dormitory and shrieking like barbarians is all right for a prep school but we are of the opinion that college students should know better. Last Tuesday night we were awakened by alarming cries of "Fire!" and heard the hurried tread of many feet rushing from the dormitory. Hastily donning our slippers and bathrobes we too rapidly descended the stairs only to find that some humorous individual had created a false alarm probably thru some perverted sense of a joke.

Please don't do it again, as in our haste we became somewhat tangled up in the lower end of that somewhat old-fashioned garment we wear when we retire.

———P. C.———

The Blue Stocking is now a member of the Southern Inter-Collegiate Newspaper Association, enjoying every advantage and privilege of its membership. We now have many of the principal Southern college newspapers on our exchange list, and expect to derive great benefit from the exchange of news and ideas. This means a step forward in the development of a real, first-class, progressive, and live college newspaper, and consequently will be a help to the college and the student body.

We should all feel proud that our newspaper is a member of such a fine organization and should work in every way possible for its improvement. By next year it is our earnest wish to make the Blue Stocking a weekly, or at least to publish an insert page in it. Already it has outgrown its present size.

Of course, everyone realizes that it takes money to publish a paper, and our advertising does not nearly defray the expense of publication. Our publishers do everything in their power for us, and render us the finest possible service at the best possible rates, and to them is largely due the success of the paper at the present time.

But if we wish to enlarge it will take more funds and unless these be forthcoming we cannot hope to do more with the paper than we are doing now. There are several sources from which we hope to draw these funds, viz: more extensive advertising, a greater subscription list, and a higher rate per year.

Our advertising rates are the lowest of any college newspaper in the Southern Intercollegiate Newspaper Association. And surely by this time advertisers realize that they are not giving to charity when they advertise in our columns. COLLEGE BOYS DO PATRONIZE BLUE STOCKING ADVERTISERS.

Then as to the matter of subscriptions. Surely every student will be willing next year to pay fifty cents more for his "Blue Stocking" as he will be getting many times the value of that amount in added news, etc. At any rate he should be willing to do it for P. C. Then we expect EVERY SINGLE MEMBER of the present Senior Class to subscribe for next year before he leaves school. This money, with that obtained from a subscription campaign, which we expect to launch among the Alumni the early part of next year, will be a great help to us in our undertaking.

If we succeed in this undertaking (and we can't afford to fail) every subscriber and every advertiser will find that he gets his money's worth and more besides.

So come on fellow students, get together. Boost the Blue Stocking to advertisers, tell them that you read their ad in your own college paper, boost P. C., thank them for their hearty support and the fact that they make possible this publication. And don't fail to let the merchants of Clinton know that you are behind them and appreciate what they do for you.

All pull together for a greater Blue Stocking in the near future.

CLIPPINGS FROM THE FILE

Davidson To Be Honored By Visit of Famous Poet.

Vachel Lindsay, one of the foremost poets of America, will visit Davidson on April 26. If he cannot be called the one leading poet, he is certainly among the first four, and his visit to Davidson will linger long in the memories of those who hear him.

Not only is he one of the chief contemporary poets of America, but he is also a distinguished lecturer and possesses many of the qualities of an orator. Mr. Lindsay regards poetry as something to be spoken, not merely read. The possession of all of these excellent qualities, together with the fact that the poetry which he will read on the stage in Shearer Hall, at 8:00 p. m. on April 26, is of his own production, will make his performance not only thoughtful and interpretative, but highly interesting.—Davidsonian.

TALES OF ABOU BEN BLOWHARD

The Parable of Thoughtless Young Men and Their Sad Disappointment.

It came to pass in the year that Willian Jennins Bryan declined to believe that his honored grandsire was an ape, that certain young men in the place of learning completed their learning and arranged for suitable exercises to show to their friends and the elders of the city that they were sufficiently educated to cease tending the vineyards of their fathers and to tend vineyards of their own.

Now they had great men to come from remote distances to speak to them, and invited many people, so that a great multitude were to be guests at the occasion.

And it came to pass that the time drew nigh for them to hold their exercises, and lo! day by day the other young men of the place of learning left the city so that none were left in the place of learning save only the faculty and a few good hearted youths who stayed out of charity.

And lo! when the multitude arrived on the great day when the exercises were to be held no youths were to be found except the ones who had completed their learning, so the multitude got a dreadful impression of the place of learning and went away saying in their hearts. "Let us shake the dust of this place from our sandals and return unto it no more, for even the very students are gone."

And the great speakers had to orate in vain to empty benches for the young men were gone. Then did the faculty hang their heads in shame and great was their sorrow for the youths had departed for their homes, and had not stayed to see their fellow students receive their sheep skins. And so the exercises fell flat and the young men who should have been honored greatly were left on the campus with only a few companions.

And the people of the city greatly marveled that no youths stayed to be with their fellow students who were departing and when finally the exercises and the feasting was over the youths departed with heavy hearts feeling that they were not loved by the younger men at the place of learning.

But lo! the next year came, and the students who had departed so early came to make ready to depart from the place of learning and tears were in their eyes and they expected that a great multitude would be ready to see them become educated. But lo! they were punished for their wickedness of the previous year, and their iniquity was visited upon them, for every single one of the youths of the place of learning departed a week before the time, so that not one remained.

And when the young men saw that every one was gone they wept bitterly, and too late they remembered how they had done the year before, and there was wailing and gnashing of teeth.

But if you are rough and rowdy you'd better not come
Because you might have to go back home dumb.

S. I. N. A. CONFERENCE A BIG SUCCESS

"Blue Stocking" Now a Member of Association.

Greenville, S. C., (By Southern Intercollegiate News Service)—Southern collegiate journalists, who met at Furman University, Greenville Woman's College cooperating, April 28 and 29, in the second annual convention of the Southern Intercollegiate Newspaper association, by sound legislation insured the permancy of that infant organization which had its birth at Richmond last Spring.

In the two days meeting speakers of note were heard on different phases of newspaperism, round table discussions took place, business sessions were held, and the annual banquet with other lighter features were enjoyed.

Emory University, Ga., won first place in both the Editorial Contest and Journalistic Contest and likewise the convention selected Charles H. Deterly of the same school as president to succeed Chas. F. Leek of the University of Richmond. Other winners in contests were: Editorial: C. J. Broome of Mercer University, Ga., second, and Seth M. Mimming of Piedmont College, Ga., third; Journalistic: The Richmond Collegian, University of Richmond, Va., second, and The Orange and White, University of Tennessee ,third.

The Henry Grady District, comprising states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida took first place in the membership drive with the admittance of nine new members, namely: Georgia Tech, Mercer, Piedmont and Agnes Scott of Georgia; Furman, Presbyterian and Greenville Woman's College of South Carolina; and Rollins and Southern of Florida; Martha Washington of Virginia; St. John's of Maryland; Bethany of West Virginia; and Trinity of Washington, were admitted in the Woodrow Wilson District. From the Henry Watterson District, Georgetown College of Kentucky was taken in. Virginia had the largest delegation with eleven.

A Southern Intercollegiate News Service for member papers was established with "centrals" at Emory University, Ga., and University of Richmond, Va. Many changes were made to the original constitution, one of the chief being that each state be represented on sub-committees under the chairmanship of the three regional vice-presidents. Wm. Ellyson, Jr., editor of The Richmond Collegian was the only vice-president chosen and the executive committee will select regional heads for the Henry Grady and Henry Watterson districts later.

The association incorporated in its immediate policy the fostering of the organization of state associations that would operate harmoniously with the larger Southern body.

Atlanta will be the meeting place for the association April, 1923.

P. S.—Every college and university newspaper in the South should hold membership in the Southern Intercollegiate Newspaper Association. Prof. Myron McCurry of Georgetown College, Ky., who was one of the speakers, said that the association is a functioning body. . . .

even tho he sustained a badly broken right ankle in the middle of the baseball season. Notwithstanding that handicap, he again made varsity in all three branches the next year. Always one of Coach Johnson's hardest workers, Williamson has already completed the football and basketball campaigns of this year, and was captain of the squad for the present baseball season. But he is bearing his misfortune like a man, always cheerful, never complaining. His team-mates and fellow-students sympathize most deeply with their popular and hard-working captain, and all wish him a complete and speedy recovery.

So here's to you "Big Boy!" You have "put out" and suffered for P. C., and we are with you.

C., and to the Association.

In addition to the election of officers, a resolution was passed forbidding a winner of the second division honors to receive the same honor in the future, the winner of third place to receive the second place medal if it so happens that a previous second honor man is re-chosen for the same place.

Also, another resolution: No student winning first place will be allowed to reenter the meet in the future.

OWL CLUB GIVES ANNUAL BANQUET

First Yearly Festival A Brilliant Success.

On the night of May 5, the Owl Club held its first annual banquet since the beginning of the active life of this local fraternity The occasion marked an epoch in the history of the Owls, as it presented a here-to-fore unapproached season of merriment and good cheer. Such an initial success augurs well for the success of similar events to take place in the future.

The spacious Commercial Club hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion. The large room was divided by a center partition of of a very delicate and effective pattern. The outer part formed a reception room for the assembly of the guests, while the inner sanctum formed a veritable Mecca for all who were privileged to be present. The color scheme was splendid. College colors prevailed in the partitioning design and in the reception apartment. In the Palace of the Owls, the club colors, of course, were dominant, arranged in a most ingenious manner by two skilled Birds. On the wall opposite the entrance arch the Owl insignia greeted the guests as they entered.

Of course no affair of this kind can be successfully staged—or at all, for that matter—without the presence of those sweet things originally created from a rib of man, the ladies. Whoever heard of a group of mere men spending days in decorating a hall as this banquet hall was decorated for the sake of mere men only? Why, no one, of course. The very idea is simply preposterous. Hence, it is needless to say that on this night of nights the several Owls and their guests were complimented, supplemented, and otherwise graced by the divine presence of about 28 of the fairest of the fair. They came from all over South Carolina, and one even came from far Alabama especially for the occasion. And the Owls do not hesitate to say that this galaxy of charming femininity can vie on equal terms with the choicest of any similar group of the better halves of mankind.

It was expected that the numbers of the Owls in collegio would be augmented by the presence of Owls who have flown, or, in ordinary parlance, who have graduated. But, due to the conflict of higher scholastic duties, the majority of the expected brethren were unable to attend in the flesh tho' each of the absentees could be seen floating around in spirit. AESIR BANQUET GOES BEYOND EXPECTATIONS

Beauty and Chivalry Reign Supreme at Feast of Vikings.

The annual banquet of the Aesir held sway in the Commercial Club hall on the evening of the 16th of May, and proved a brilliant success, despite the undesirable climatic conditions. The fair sex were represented by twenty-three beauties from all parts of the Piedmont hills of Carolina and it was indeed a rare collection of beauty and a scene which was very pleasing for the eye to look upon.

The Commercial Club hall was literally transformed into a veritable paradise by an elaborate and attractive decoration which contributed in no small way to the brilliant success of the occasion. The club was partitioned off and divided into two main parts, the reception hall and the final destination of the banqueteers. This division was marked off by the P. C. colors of Garnet and Blue, in the middle of which was an arched shaped door which was characteristic of skilled craftsmanship. In the banquet hall proper was seen an elaborate decora-

SEN. A. O. STANLEY OF KY., TO DELIVER COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

Dr. Douglas has secured Senator A. O. Stanley, of Kentucky, to deliver the Commencement address on May 31st, 1922. The college is very fortunate in obtaining Senator Stanley for this occasion. The Senator is known about the diplomatic circles, of Washington as being one of the most eloquent speakers in Congress.

Former Secretary of State W. G. McAdoo had been scheduled for this event but due to some unforeseen circumstances, Mr. McAdoo has been forced to break his date. Immediately after this cancellation, Dr. Douglas got in touch with Senator N. B. Dial of South Carolina, and it was through this channel that Senator stanley was recommended and secured.

Dr. S. M. Wells of the Columbia Theological Seminary, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon on May 28th, and Dr. R. C. Grier, president of Erskine College, will speak before the Y. M. C. A. on May 28th. This will undoubtedly insure the best commencement program that has been presented in years. Every student will do well to remain through it all and it is hoped that a great many will.

Win Second Game After Losing First

Walter Johnson's base ball outfit wound up the 1922 base ball campaign in a blaze of glory on May 10 by decisively defeating the Newberry Indians in a brilliant 2-1 game on the local grounds. It was a glorious victory, coming as it did immediately after P. C. had suffered a 4-2 defeat on the Indians' camping ground. These two games with Newberry wound up the P. C. campaign. On May 5, the Johnsonites crossed bats with the Newberryites on the Lutherans' field. All dope pointed to an Indian victory, and the dope proved correct, though not as decidedly so as was commonly expected. The Indians were very much in the race for championship honors, while the Blue Stockings were out of the race for first honors. Therefore, since Citadel had two days previously downed the Presbyterians in Charleston, it was commonly conceded that the Lutherans would have an easy day—that is, conceded by nearly everybody save Johnson and Company. As usual the opinion held by the latter gentlemen proved the most nearly correct, as the Calvanists were outcounted by the unexpected small score of 4-2.

Then came that day that will be always remembered by Presbyterian College supporters—the day of revenge, which was none other than May 10, 1922, just five days after the previous defeat. The Lutherans came up to Clinton to play off a little scheduled affair in order to get in shape for a decisive encounter with Clemson. No trouble was expected by the nonchalant visitors, no, none at all. It was to be just a little warming up affair made necessary by contract. It was to be only one more step toward the coveted state championship. So the Indian reasoned. But he neglected one thing—no, ten things, namely: Walter A. Johnson and nine wearers of the Garnet and Blue, who were out for blood, and nothing but blood.

The day was just right, the weather was ideal, a large crowd was on hand ,and everything was at high pitch. As the hosts, the Calvinists took the field first. The second Indian up got a single, but Billy Lewis, the blonde Presbyterian pitching star, tightened up and called a halt then and there. He made it distinctly understood that he would not tolerate such treatment thereafter. And the Indian obeyed, as events proved. Then came the Presbyterians' turn at bat. Galloway, second man up, singled and thereupon did, feloniously and with

BLUE STOCKINGS VANQUISH MAROONS

Presbyterians Gain Decisive Victory In Charleston.

No one is willing for an unsettled argument to go on indefinitely without a definite, conclusive settlement. Walter Johnson and his Blue Stockings are no exception to this general rule. An unsettled, or exceedingly doubtful argument has been on the books for some weeks, ever since April 5, in fact. On that date the College of Charleston squad journeyed all the way to Clinton to conclusively prove their superiority—baseba l l i c a l l y speaking—over the Blue Stocking aggregation. However, the weather man interfered in the third inning with the visitors actually in the lead 3-1! And the funny part of it is that they actually thought that they could have maintained this lead. Now, it was to correct this erroneous impression that the Presbyterians traveled all the way to Charleston on May 2. And correct it they did! They took the Charleston collegians into camp on their own grounds and finally, effectively and conclusively proved to

PI KAPPA DELTA HONORARY FRATERNITY TO BE INSTALLED HERE

The literary fraternity, Pi Kappa Delta, will be installed here in the very near future, so says a notice received from the men higher up in this organization. Application for this fraternity was made by those interested shortly after school opened this year. And after the necessary red tape and procedure of investigation the higher officials found the applicants desirable for membership.

The Pi Kappa Delta is strictly a national forensic and oratorical society. No one is eligible for membership unless he fittingly performed in the debaters' or orators' world. This fraternity is a society of high ideals in the literary world and is itself a criterion of honorary fraternities. P. C. is indeed fortunate in being granted this chapter.

At present there is only one other chapter of the Pi Kappa Delta in South Carolina. This chapter is located at Wofford.

The membership of the local chapter will be as follows: Dr. D. J. Brimm, coach; J. M. Dick, president; M. C. Dendy, secretary; L. C. LaMotte, W. W. Lewis, A. B. Godfrey, H. E. Montgomery, F. K. Clark, V. P. Weldon, H. J. McLaurin, W. T. Wade, W. D. Hudson, W. J. Cherry.

PI KAPPA PHI STAGES ANNUAL BANQUET

Odd and Different Features Mark Gorgeous Affair.

Beta chapter of Pi Kappa fraternity honored its first year of existence in the form of its annual banquet held this year on the thirteenth of May in the Commercial Club halls. All told, there were seventy Pi Kapps, Pi Kapp Sisters and guests, assembled to celebrate Beta's annual event. This banquet was marked especially by its individual features. Two of these unique individualities which created most interest were the banquet caps made of gold and white crepe paper which were worn to, at, and from the hall; and the significant design in which the tables were arranged, being in the form of the fraternities' pin. There was nothing about the affair which suggested the commonplace.

A number of the "old guard" were on hand. Among the Pi Kappa Alumni present were: Bros. W. G. Neville, J. C. Neville, H. L. Eichelberger, A. C. Spencer, J. P. McMillan, S. B. Ray, M. R. Carrigan, Thomas Jacobs, J. H. Hunter and Prof. H. E. Sturgeon.

The Commercial Club hall was changed from a bleak, bare and unattractive structure to a place of rarest beauty, a veritable meeting place of the gods. Ordinarily this spacious hall is one large extensive room. But for this occasion, the space was divided by a partition constructed in a fanciful design of Garnet and Blue, colors of P. C. This separated the reception room, which was also decorated with the colors of the college, from the banquet hall. The door which admitted entrance from the reception room to the banquet hall was worked into the design of the partition in a manner which suggested the efforts of a master craftsman.

The banquet room proper was beautified by the colors of Pi Kappa Phi, colors which suggest loyalty and friendship, Gold and White. The tables were arranged in the design of the pin of the fraternity, a diamond in shape. The inner side was covered with dark blue crepe paper which formed an attractive back-ground for the gold scroll and the letters Pi Kappa Phi, which is engraved upon the scroll of the pin; and the star in one point with the student's lamp in the other. No work was spared to duplicate the pin exactly, and such efforts were rewarded.

Well, Seniors, you will soon be Rats in the College of Life.

—P. C.—

Good luck and God bless you, Seniors.

—P. C.—

Commencement comes not only to the Seniors; but think of us other poor devils that have to commence—to work as soon as we get home.

—P. C.—

The field of education is no one horse farm.

—P. C.—

And there is no such thing as "laying by" in the cultivation of knowledge.

—P. C.—

Vacation to most students just means a change in jobs.

—P. C.—

The evening we repulsed the attack of the Indians, we were feeling good enough to laugh at anything—even Jess Pugh.

—P. C.—

The cheapest and best hose in the world: 18 pairs of Blue Stockings next year for only $2.00.

—P. C.—

Alumni! Defy the hosiery trust and get your Blue Stockings from your Alma Mater at a cheaper rate and be assured of good service.

—P. C.—

The beauty about those forthcoming Blue Stockings is that they will be made full and snappy. The kind that you love to look at.

—P. C.—

Remember, fellows! Every student an agent this summer for the college paper.

—P. C.—

Alumni! Get the latest sport dope of your Alma Mater direct from the athletic field, pure and unadulterated, written by a reporter who knows the games! Keep up with P. C.

—P. C.—

Mr. Advertiser: The present students are the future citizens of the world. Your ad in The BLUE STOCKING and COLLEGIAN will make the college boy your life long friend. Did you ever think of that?

The Blue Stocking and Collegian are the advertiser's radio-phone. They broadcast his name wherever the college paper goes.

—P. C.—

And there is no place in the state where their voices are not heard.

—P. C.—

Oh! My! My! Can no one beat those Newberry Indians except P. C.?

—P. C.—

Some one is going to accuse P. C. of stacking the deck just because we are going to have two "Aces of Diamonds" next year.

—P. C.—

And we feel sure that some one else will say that we have nine "Kings of Clubs" up our sleeve!

—P. C.—

Men! Make this your slogan during the summer months: "A Good Man for the Team and a Subscriber for The Blue Stocking."

—P. C.—

We are going to expect our sister publication, The Collegian, to show the literary magazines of other colleges how it is done next year.

—P. C.—

Welcome! Pi Kappa Delta.

—P. C.—

Evidently it was in the dear dead days beyond recall when there were no exams.

—P. C.—

And after next week, we wonder how many of us will hear the still small voice: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast passed thy exams; enter into the joys of promotion."

—P. C.—

Word has been received from the men higher up that the Rat Diplomas have arrived and are ready to be passed around to the deserving Freshmen.

—P. C.—

Invitations to be present at the exercises will be sent out in a few days—by the Freshmen.

—P. C.—

Well, fellows, here's wishing you all a happy vacation, and to the football men, we take this chance to ask you to be back in the fall in condition, ready to carry that old pig skin that disputed ten, and to hit the other fellow for a loop. And when we hear Coach's voluminous voice on the athletic field the first day of practice, we will know that a season of success will have begun. And say! Don't forget that we will have a little brother out there beside the Varsity. It's that Freshman team! The future Varsity. Get those good men! And bring them back! Go get 'em, fellows! Go get 'em!

—P. C.—

In the last issue of The Blue Stocking for the present scholastic year, we wish to thank the student body for its hearty co-operation with the staff. You have enabled us to build up a Blue Stocking of which we are justly proud. You have also shown your fine spirit by voting a raise in the subscription price for the ensuing year.

Next year we earnestly hope to be able to publish a weekly Blue Stocking, a paper that will equal any in South Carolina. We expect to do this if it can possibly be financed. And, altho we labor under many disadvantages, we are conferring with our publishers, and hope to arrange for a weekly paper next year.

Owing to the kindness of Dr. Douglas we are able to put out a six page issue this week. This is a big step in the right direction, and the staff is sincerely grateful to Dr. Douglas for his splendid co-operation with us.

Gentlemen, there is one thing of which we wish to remind you before we close this present volume of our paper. That is the proposition of Mr. Wade, our alumni editor. Don't forget to see every alumnus of P. C., or any other party that would be interested in a subscription as soon as you get home for the summer. Do this right away or you are likely to forget it. Take a copy of this last issue with you and tell him that he owes it to his college to dig down in his jeans and produce two shining simoleons. Then send a money order or check with the address to Mr. Eugene T. Wilson, Montreat, N. C.

Then another thing you can do to put our old paper on its feet is to secure advertising for our columns next year. If you know of any one who has an interest in the College, tell him that our rates are twenty-five cents per inch, single column, the lowest of any college publication in the state. Tell the prospective advertiser that we are a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Newspaper Association, and that his ad will be read all over the South where college papers are read.

We are sending about three hundred of these papers to high school prospects this issue, but of course that will not reach every one we would like to have a copy. Save your paper, and when you have shown it to as many alumni and advertisers as possible, give it to some high school fellow you are interested in.

When you go home don't fail to boost your College and its paper and consider yourself an appointed agent for its subscriptions.

Do this and Watch The Blue Stocking grow.

—P. C.—

The Blue Stocking staff wishes to extend to everybody the best wishes for a pleasant and successful vacation. Best o' luck on examinations, a big trip at camp or in the mountains ,and the hope that we may all return next year to find P. C. bigger and finer than she ever was before.

To the faculty also we extend cordial wishes for a fine holiday season, and thank them for their splendid hearty co-operation with us.

And we cannot let this opportunity pass without telling the good people of Clinton how we appreciate them and what they mean to us. They are real home-folks, and are a real big part of our college life. And the P. C. boys are truly appreciative of what they do for us. Any one who stays for four years in Clinton and doesn't form a real attachment for its hospitable citizens does not have the real P. C. spirit. And to these dear friends of ours we desire to express the wish that they too may enjoy the summer months, and that the advancing hoardes of boll weevils may not wreak as much havoc upon their crops, as the Blue Stockinged lads did upon Newberry.

And to our sister institution, Thornwell, we extent the heartiest of greetings, and hope that their holidays will be the jolliest and most pleasant they ever experienced. What would P. C. mean without Thornwell, the institution where Southern hospitality reigns supreme, and where P. C. men are always looked upon as brothers?

So we hope that the summer months will be kind to every one, and that when the P. C. fellows return to work next fall they will have the most successful year in the history of the College.

WARNING!

An editor once paid a visit to Hell,
And there 'mid the smoke and the sulphurous smell
He saw in the midst of the ruin and the wreck
A bunch of poor fellows tied fast by the neck.
They squirmed and they twisted, they plunged and they reared,
They jerked and they jumped just as high as they dared;
While flames scorched their whiskers and ate at their hide.
The editor asked who were they and 'ere they died.
"Oh, they were the fellows," said Nick with a smile,
"Who tried to amass quite a nice little pile;
Their own college paper they never would take,
And thoughts of subscribing kept them wide awake.
Whenever a student on finances bent
Approached them, they swore that the had lost their last cent.
Or cried that the weevil had eaten their all,
Or promised to send in two dollars 'next fall.'
And though they were told that the paper was broke,
They laughed to themselves, and they thought it a joke.
So now they are punished for being so mean,
And ugly, and evil, and cross and obscene,
And stingy, and worthless, too low-down to beat,
For not helping put the old 'Sock' on its feet.
Yes, they are alumni whom warning nor bribe
Could force to dig down in their pants and subscribe."
"I marvel," the editor said in amaze,
As further they went through the sulphurous haze,
Till they came to a cauldron of black molten pitch,
Just over the brink of a bottomless ditch,
From the depths of the cauldron a heartrending wail
Explained why the sufferers rested in jail.
"Oh, we were the men who would not advertise;
We always explained with excuses and lies.
We read the Blue Stocking, but never an ad
Would we give to assist the poor hard working lad.
We always complained of the frightful high rate;
'Though full well we knew 'twas the best in the state.
And though we desired the college boys' trade,
To give them our ads we put off and delayed,
Till at last they turned from us in honest disgust,
And all the trade went to the fellows they trust.
So now we continue to boil and to scorch,
While Satan annoys our hides with his torch."

MORAL:

Take warning, ye tightwads, and loosen your coin,
Or the ranks of the sufferers soon you will join.

P. C. PROFESSOR COMPLIMENTED BY THE SYSTEM BIBLE CO.

Dr. F. Dudley Jones Contributor To Recently Published Work.

A few days ago Dr. F. Dudley Jones, professor of Psychology, Philosophy and Bible, at the Presbyterian College received the following letter from The System Bible Company of Chicago:

"Dr. F. Dudley Jones,
"Presbyterian College of S. C
"Dear Dr. Jones:

"Under separate cover we are forwarding you a complimentary volume of the System Bible Study, to which you are a contributor. Your contribution will be easily found by referring to the table of contents.

"It is our earnest desire that you will feel disposed to give this work a careful examination and you are invited to offer any criticisms or suggestions which, in your judgement, you feel might be used to advantage in subsequent editions.

"We have earnestly striven to give the people the most useful book of Bible helps ever issued, and thus far, everyone who has examined the work tells us that this high purpose has been accomplished. One very prominent minister wrote us that it was in fact 'the masterpiece of all books of Bible helps.' We hope that it will be as satisfactory to you that you are a contributor, as it is to us that you have extended a helping hand in producing this important work.

"Hoping that you will find the work a valuable addition to your library, and assuring you of our sincere appreciation of your kindness in helping us to make the work what it is, we are, with gratitude,

"Cordially and sincerely yours,
"The System Bible Company,
"J. Wesley Dickson."

The work to which Dr. Jones is a contributor is an system of Bible helps for the minister, teacher or layman. Its pages are the work of forty-one contributors, among them such names as Francis E. Clark, Henry Van Dyke, Campbell Morgan, Edgar Y. Mullens, Miss Ida M. Tarbell, R. A. Torrey, and John Timothy Stone.

CLINTON FIRMS WHO ARE BEHIND THE BLUE STOCKING

Advertisers Who Are Patronized By P. C. Students.

It is always a good plan to keep the advertisers in the minds of the subscribers of a college paper. This is the policy of the Blue Stocking, and we are glad to contribute this space with the compliments of the Blue Stocking to the firms of Clinton who make possible this publication.

Of course not a great number of the dormitory students keep cars in Clinton, but they are all behind E. W. FERGUSON, and appreciate his ad in their paper, and this summer those of us who pass thru this city will all buy our necessary auto accessories from that firm.

And we have said enough about the PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA for you to know that it is the best college in the state, finest faculty, best coach, and highest toned bunch of fellows to be found anywhere.

THE CHRONICLE PUBLISHING CO. prints the Blue Stocking—'nough said. Their courteous service, flawless printing, and good terms make it indeed a pleasure to deal with them.

And you all know DILLARD & DILLARD, the place where you can loaf around and park your feet against the stove and discuss anything from politics to baseball. The place also where you can obtain anything you want in the way of gents' furnishings.

J. B. FRONTIS is the jewelry man, and of course P. C. boys buy their engagement rings and other articles from him.

HUGH L. EICHELBERGER, known to all of us as "Ike" is one of her sons of which P. C. is proud to boast. Does he love his college? "I'll say he do," and Ike can always be counted on to help the P. C. fellows in all their activities, or to write them a reliable insurance policy.

And J. I. COPELAND & BRO. will sell you anything you want in the hardware line from a pump auger to a left-handed monkey wrench. They are glad, too, for you to visit their big store and play their phonograph.

COPELAND-STONE CO. love to have college boys visit their establishment and talk things over ,or rent a dress suit, or buy anything imaginable for their wardrobe. This is indeed a place where service and courtesy is the motto.

And GALLOWAY-SIMPSON FURNITURE CO. takes great pleasure in selling the fraternity men anything they want for their halls. Also students who expect to settle in Clinton will get their homes furnished by this firm.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," is the old saying, and when P. C. fellows are not boning on their studies they find a great place to loaf in SADLER-OWENS PHARMACY. Here is where you can get anything from a banana split to a tooth brush, or from a fine Havana cigar to a sack of nature-cured Bull Durham. And here is where you are always welcome whether you are "flush" or "broke." It makes no difference, you are a P. C. boy and you are welcome. Dr. Sadler is right behind every college activity, and the college boys appreciate it, and altho he does so much simply because he loves P. C., still he finds that it pays from a financial standpoint also.

"Crack! crack! crack! spoke the trusty rifles, and a score or more of Yankees bit the dust"—extract from a thriller purchased at COLEMAN'S BOOK STORE, where the latest magazines and the best fiction are to be found at reasonable prices, and where you can get cigars, place cards, wedding invitations, or anything else you want.

Do you need rocking chairs, blankets, or furniture for your frat hall? ADAIR FURNITURE CO, has them. And before you tie up for life take the girl around to this store and let her look at some furniture for the vine-clad bungalow.

We know a fellow who had a very good pair of shoes (when they were bought about eight years ago), but the soles were completely gone. However they would have been all right if they had had any upppers left, but the trouble was that about all left to them was the tongue and the strings. But this fellow knew where to take them, and in a jiffy the CLINTON ELECTRICAL SHOE SHOP had them as good as new.

"What Do P. S. JEANES Do?" He runs a ten-pinnet alley where fair play and clean sport is the motto. Also he sells cigars, cold drinks, and fruit. It's a place where all P. C. men love to loaf in their spare time.

If you are thinking of pressing your suit let THE CLINTON PRESSING CLUB do it for you. They know how better than you do for they are in the business for that purpose.

KELLERS DRUG STORE has the honor of owning the first radio apparatus in Clinton. Besides this they sell drinks, candies, cigars, and prescriptions to students of Presbyterian College.

Let ADAIR-McMILLAN CLOTHING CO. fit you in a suit of clothes or sell you anything from a necktie to a collar button. You can rent a dress suit here or buy a pair of "Bevedees." You always see a crowd of college boys hanging around "Pressie's" store, for they know a good place when they see it.

And last but by no means least we call your attention to THE COMMERCIAL BANK, the place where the Blue Stocking's account is kept. The bank where sound business principles, the highest sense of honor are ever present, and where fine, true, gentlemanly courtesy prevails. The place where your money is taken care of.

Of course there are other firms in Clinton, but they have not yet found the advantage of advertising in the Blue Stocking. However, we trust that they will depart from the error of their ways and that our pages will contain big ads from all of them.

P. C. LEAGUE HAS CLOSED SEASON

Owls Prove Themselves Champions.

The P. C. League closed its busy season Monday when Galloway's picked Tadpole team defeated the P. K. A.'s 11-3.

Great has been the enthusiasm and keen the rivalry which existed between the different teams, and the Owls should feel very honored by being the undisputed champions of P. C.'s great league. But they didn't win the coveted honor without a hard fight. The strong Jay Birds ran them a close race the entire season, ending just one hundred per cent behind.

This league, begun and fostered by Prof. Sturgeon, has proven a great success, not only as a pastime, but also this league afforded an excellent opportunity for all students to develop themselves physically. The league surpassed even the fondest hopes of those interested, by producing some excellent and exciting base ball games. In fact, the great majority of the games played were fast and with a remarkably few number of errors. Next year's varsity should contain a goodly number of P. C. leaguers, if they improve as they have in the past few weeks of practice.

And great will be the disapointment of all P. C. base ball fans if the P. C. League does not come strong again next season. League standing:

Lewis leads the pitchers in strike-out, having caused 37 batters to swing uselessly. Hanna has caused 9 batters to frown upon him, while Moore caused intense heart-rendings on the part of 3 opposing batsmen.

In base-running Galloway still holds the lead with 7 thefts committed with malice aforethought, Moore has 5 to his credit, Dampier 4, Holladay, Brown, Williamson, Hindman, Lewis and Warner one each.

PI KAPPA PHI STAGES ANNUAL BANQUET

ceiling. Across the center of the diamond, an arch was suspended and in this were the Greek letters Pi Kappa Phi.

The lights of the reception room were dimmed by Garnet and Blue, while the lights of the banqueting place threw forth rays of Gold and White. The color scheme of Garnet and Blue, and Gold and White was carried out to a perfection. Truly it were as if some magician with unlimited powers had stretched forth his wand and bade a time-worn and worldly place to change to visions which one sees only in dreams.

Such a sight greeted the entering merry-makers. A short reception of introduction took place and then the march to the place of destination began. When all had gathered about the Pi Kapp "Pin", Brother J. H. Hunter gave thanks.

And now as we looked about, something else had been added to beautify the already dazzling elegance of things. Thirty-five of the most attractive maidens that had been put upon this old earth to brighten man's darkest moments were seated about the banquet board. Their merry voices lent music to the air and—time flew too fast.

Each fair member found at her place an American Beauty Rose, an emblem of Pi Kappa Phi. At every place was an attractive menu souvenir with a dark brown leather cover with Pi Kappa Phi embossed thereon in gold. Upon inspection of the first page the following list of honorary guests were found: Dr. D. M. Douglas, Prof. A. T. Fant, W. A. Johnson, R. M. Cothran, Owl Club; H. M. Wilson, Pi Kappa Alpha; J. T. McDonald, Aesir; A. E. Galloway, student body; Dr. D. J. Woods of Clinton.

And as the pages were turned, the following delightful menu was read and later—enjoyed:

Strawberries
Spring Chicken — Spiced Dressing
Giblet Gravy — English Peas
Steamed Carolina Rice — Hot Rolls
Sliced Tomatoes — Pickles
Chicken Salad
Nut Bread — Potato Chips
Ice Cream — Cake
Coffee — Mints
Pi Kapp Punch

On page six, the roster of the Pi Kappa fraternity enlightened the readers of Who's Who in Clinton.

Probably the most unique and odd feature about the banquet was brought to light when the souvenir menu was opened to page four. Here is the program of the evening as presented, which speaks for itself:

Beta Opera Company
M. C. Dendy, Conductor

Prologue—Bro. M. C. Dendy.

Vesti La Guibba (Pagliacci)—Leoncavallo.

"On With the Play"—Bro. H. Crawford.

Dio Che Nell 'Ama (Don Carlos)—Verdi.

"Infuse Friendship Into Our Souls"—Dr. D. M. Douglas.

O Soave Fanciulla (La Boheme)—Puccini.

"Thou Sweetest of Maidens"—Prof. A. T. Fant.

L'Ultima Canzone—Tosti.

"The Last Song"—Bro. H. L. Eichelberger.

This program was rendered in grand (opera) style and the toasts were excellent.

Those present who enjoyed this evening of infinite pleasure were: W. W. Brimm and Miss Helen Bailey, H. J. Hindman, Jr., and Miss Hattie Bankhead; Herbert Crawford and Miss Louise McFadden; R. A. Buckner and Miss B. Copeland; J. P. Young and Miss Sarah Swygert; J. J. Cornwell and Miss Toccoa Gray; W. H. Dendy and Miss Cynthia Teams; R. G. Henry and Miss Mary McClure; M. C. 1922 BEST YEAR IN HISTORY OF JUDD HALL

Mrs. Hunter's Home-like "Eats" Appreciated By Visitors As Well As "Natives."

That the fare of Judd Hall, commonly known as the P. C. dining hall is appreciated by visitors as well as by the P. C. student body, is evidenced by the number of them who have dined there during the year, and the favorable comments heard.

There is no doubt in the world that the present year is the best in the history of the college, and all the P. C. men, as well as members of visiting teams and banquet guests will rejoice to know that Mrs. Hunter will be with us another year.

At the beginning of the year when day after day such home-like meals appeared the boys could scarcely believe that they were not dreaming, and used to pinch each other from time to time to make sure. But gradually it dawned upon them that in reality they at last had a matron who was giving them real honest to goodness grub.

Then outsiders began to get wind of Mrs. Hunter's famous dinners and since the beginning of the year there has scarcely been a day that someone outside of the student body has not dined in Judd Hall and gone on his way rejoicing.

On one occasion members of a visiting team were seen depositing biscuits in their pockets that they might take them back to their college and prove to their friends that they were telling the truth.

But now it is well known all over the state that P. C. has the best dining hall in South Carolina, and this should be a point considered very carefully in the selection of a college. For good food means good health, and good health insures a strong body, and an active vigorous mind.

Hats off to Mrs. Hunter!

AESIR BANQUET GOES BEYOND EXPECTATIONS

tion of the Aesir colors, Purple and Gold, coupled with P. C. colors, which were arranged in a most attractive manner.

The two principle designs were the ladder-like affair made of purple and gold crepe and constructed in the center of the hall, while the other was the coat of arms of the Aesir, a massive shield of purple, the hammer and the two battle axes of gold, which hung directly over the toastmaster's chair.

The tables were so arranged as to conform to the letter A, and attractively decorated with flowers and crepe paper. At each plate was found an attractive souvenir of a dainty design with space for autographs as a memento of the occasion. Also a beautiful American Beauty was placed at each of the fair maiden's plates.

After the blessing had been asked by Dr. Douglas a delightful repast was served, consisting of:

Fruit Cocktail
Spring Chicken
Steamed Carolina Rice
Cranberry Sauce — Potato Compote
Giblet Gravy — Spiced Dressing
Hot Rolls
Fruit Salad — Saratoga Chips
Stuffed Olives
Blanched Almonds — Cheese Straws
Crackers
Ice Cream — Angel Cake
Mints — Demi-Tasse
Aesir Punch.

Toastmaster Kirven welcomed the guests with his characteristic cordial manner and after the repast the following gave enjoyable toasts:

"Greetings" ..... Toastmaster
"Who's Who" ..... R. S. Miller
"You Young Gentlemen" ..Dr. Douglas
"Southern Beauties" ..... C. J. Milling
"Marginal Humor" ..Dr. J. B. Kennedy
"Relativity" ..... W. S. Scott
"Au Revoir" ..... J. T. McDonald

After Mr. McDonald's toast the guests departed from the hall, all proclaiming that they had had a most enjoyable evening.

The following were present: Honorary guests: Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Douglas; Dr. J. B. Kennedy; Coach W. A. Johnson; Mrs. Myrtle Hunter; Mr. W. W. Brimm, Pi Kappa Phi; Mr. James Pearce, Owl Club; Mr. H. M. Wilson, Pi Kappa Alpha; Mr. W. S. Scott, student body.

The total list of those who participated in the festivities follows: C. J. Milling and Miss Edna Daniell; M. A. MacDonald and Miss Martha Saxon; J. T. McDonald and Miss Sara Bishop; W. D. McMurray and Miss Frances Witherspoon; J. E. Raffield and Mrs. Myrtle Hunter; A. H. Simpson and Miss Grace Young; W. R. Anderson and Miss Sara Saxon; P. H. Bomar and Miss Frances Bryson; J. B. Clowney and Miss "Monk" Gray; R. L. Edmunds and Miss Thelma Coffman; A. B. Godfrey and Miss Emmie Young; W. L. Hicklin and Miss Marie Cosby; D. F. Kirven and Miss Helena Bultman; H. L. Laws and Miss Janet Mackorel; R. S. Miller and Miss Annie E. Hatton; J. F. Mason and Miss Rebecca Adams; W. S. Scott and Miss Dorothy Guinn; W. W. Brimm and Miss Louise Smith; Jas. H. Pearce and Miss Toccoa Gray; H. M. Wilson and Miss Sarah Hunter; Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Douglas; Dr. J. B. Kennedy and Miss Helen Bailey; Coach W. A. Johnson and Miss Elise Spencer.

The ladies of the U. D. C. deserve the thanks and sincere appreciation of every member of the Aesir for the delightful repast which they furnished.

BLUE STOCKINGS SCALP INDIANS

malice aforethought, deliberately stole second base. Moore smote the Indian cruelly with a two-ply blow which scored the fleet-footed Chick Galloway.

Thus matters stood until the fifth inning when the Lutherans crossed the pan first, last, and only time for them during the contest. With the score one all, the sixth and seventh innings passed.

Then it was that the Indians became peeved at the slow progress of things, and decided upon drastic measures. In the eighth inning Luther was to go in the box in order to insure absolute and total helplessness on the part of the exceedingly thoughtless Presbyterians. With their hosts thus safely muzzled by the mighty Mr. Luther, the Indians were then to feed liesurely upon the choice offerings of Mr. William Lewis. So, when the Blue Stockings came to bat in their half of the eighth, said Mr. Luther smilingly and nonchalantly displaced Shealy from the mound, and prepared to uncork those dazzling slants which no Blue Stocking was supposed to touch.

At last, he was ready. So Galloway went up to take what was intended by Mr. Luther to be only three more or less healthy swings. But one was all Chick wanted, and of course, one was all he took. On the first ball delivered by Luther, Galloway pounced savagely. Result—a most unexpected three-bagger. Roy Moore came to the bat. He immediately knocked a hot one too hot to be handled easily by third, and Chick scored the winning run.

Yes, it was a glorious victory. It showed that Walter Johnson has finally moulded a ball club that will deliver the goods in time to come. The whole outfit played excellent ball, though the excellent work of Matheson and Galloway in the outfield and of Warner, Holladay and Henderson in the infield was perhaps the most outstanding. In fact, the whole Presbyterian outfit played errorless ball. For the Indians the outfield performed consistently, while parts of the infield cracked at times under the strain. Taken all in all it was a most excellent game from a base ball standpoint and from the Blue Stocking standpoint, but, of course, not from the Newberry point of view, as it removed further away the coveted championship.

In passing, it is well to remember that Luther is the losing pitcher, as the score was tied when he took the mound. Galloway's mighty blow was sufficient to do the work. Box score:

BASEBALL AND BASKET-BALL CAPTAINS ELECTED

At a meeting of the basketball letter men, J. F. Mason, of Clinton, was elected captain for the ensuing campaign of 1923.

At a meeting of baseball letter men held at the same time, W. W. Lewis, Chester, S. C., pitching star, was elected captain to lead the 1923 Blue Stocking baseball outfit to victory.

These are two captains of whom P. C. is proud. They are clean-cut athletes, and each is a star in his particular field. Under their leadership much is to be expected for the '23 teams.

TALES OF ABOU BEN BLOWHARD

The Vision of Kahmet Kahn

In the days of the president who preferred golf rather than the affairs of state, it came to pass that Kahmet Kahn the seer laid him down to rest and behold a vision appeared unto him.

And he saw in the vision a college, and lo! everybody at the college worked at his appointed task, neither was there any loafing there. And the faculty were universally loved by the students, and there were no winter resorters or tea-hounds on the campus and every student faithfully discharged his duty.

And he saw in his vision a team that won every game, and there was no crooked playing, and every one of the players played for the love of the game, and none of them neglected even the least study for the sake of the team.

And behold no one cheated on the examinations which were held, yet every one made not less than an hundred upon them. And the professors all gave out the questions the day before the examination, yet did the students refuse to look at them.

And lo every one of the students went to church three times every Sunday, and attended every religious exercise. The faculty urged them not to attend so often lest they impair their health yet they refused to obey the admonition of the faculty and did insist on going. And when the faculty passed a rule saying, "Thou shalt not go to church but twice a day," the students held a mass meeting and threatened to walk out of college if they be not allowed to go four times daily.

And the students loved every man his brother, and there was no criticism of any one. And if a student did anything every one was satisfied with it, and praised him for it.

And none of the students indulged in card playing or the wicked game of craps, but every one played drop handkerchief one with the other. And lo there was no strong drink taken by the students.

And behold, Kahmet Kahn saw in his vision a fine number of rats, and they were treated in every respect like unto seniors, and the sophomores willingly ran errands for them, and the rats had never felt the cruel paddle, but from time to time the faculty played "cut the book" with the rats, and the rats waxed fat and prosperous, and every one of them studied, and none of them spent the substance of their fathers.

And in his dream Kahmet Kahn saw the merchants of the city giving of their merchandise to the students without charge, yet did the students refuse to accept it. And also one offered a huge donation to the president yet he would have none of it, for he needed it not.

And behold Kahmet Kahn saw a glee club of grent renown, and every one of the students were behind it, and preferred its songs to those of the Criterion Quartette. And the athletic association offered the glee club a gift of a thousand gold sheckels, but the glee club would not take it, as they had already received ten talents of gold and five talents of silver from the boxing team.

And behold the rats had a great fight over which one would sign up first for the Sophomore Math course, and one or two were badly injured, but were patiently nursed back to health by the ever faithful Sophomores.

And lo Kahmet Kahn's vision faded from his sight, and he awoke and girded up his loins and went forth in search of this college, but when last heard from he had not yet found it.

Moral: Moore never got rich from royalties on Utopia.

PI KAPPS ENTERTAIN LIEURANCE'S LITTLE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The members of Lieurance's Little Symphony Orchestra were honored by the men of Beta chapter of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity on the evening immediately following their appearance on the chautauqua platform with an informal reception in the halls of Pi Kapp fraternity.

The first ring of merry voices were heard in the Pi Kapps shrine immediately after the Little Symphony's evening concert. From the appearance of the first couple to the lothful departure of the last person, gloom was chased to the place where fire and brimstone reign supreme.

With the female contingent of the Little Symphony among those present, the scene of all this joy and fine spirits seemed to be laid in a flower garden of rare floral species. One could hardly compare this with Eden, for in that famous garden, there was only one beautiful woman. Here there were many. If "Bill" Shakespeare had been present, he would have changed his little bit of philosophy relative to the fair sex from "Woman, thy name is frailty," to "Woman, thy name is beauty."

Time flew by until three-fourths of the evening was well spent. Then messengers emerged from a mystic place bearing tokens of refreshing gladness frozen into the form of delicious ice cream with Beta cake.

The honored guest of the occasion was Mr. Harold Lewis, of the University of Nebraska, and member of Mu chapter of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity at that institution of learning. Mr. Lewis is the leader of Lieurance's Little Symphony Orchestra and is the pianist of the company. Mr. Lieurance who coached this wonderful little orchestra and who wrote the famous song, "By the Waters of Minnetonka," is also a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity at Nebraska.

The list of guests were: Mr. Graham Miller, Mr. Howard Wilson and Miss Sarah Hunter, Mr. Pearce, Mr. James E. Raffield, Mr. Robert Edmunds, Miss Motley, Miss Stevens, Miss Mueller, Miss Teshner, Miss Sherefield, Mr. Shrervinsky, and Mr. Lewis. The last seven named of the musical company.

—P. C.—

A student, coming to a hard question on his examination paper, wrote for his answer:

"God only knows—I don't."

Next week the paper came back with the following note in the professor's handwriting:

"God gets the credit—you don't."

—P. C.—

"Oh, John, I have an awful confession to make. I have been deceiving you for the last ten years. I have saved half of each month's allowance during all that time and now have over $10,000 in the savings bank."—Harpers.

Chink: "Friedberger, are you ticklish?"

Ikie: "No, Jewish."

FACULTY TRODDEN UPON BY SENIORS

It is known by some P. C. students, and others, that the noble class of 1922 has recorded upon the pages of its history many dark and terrible deeds. In fact, sometime away back in antediluvian days, this class has even been accused of eating "the forbidden fruits" and of terrorizing poor, innocent Rats.

However, these crimes, heinous as they may be, are naught compared with the atrocities committed by them last week when they "licked" the faculty in a base ball game.

Just concentrate your minds for a moment so you may be able to partially grasp the horror of such an ungrateful act done by our Senior class to those who have so tenderly and vigilantly cared for them during the past long years.

The faculty, however, did not submit to their dignity being trodden upon without a brave fight. And it is believed by many that they would have won by an overwhelming score if all their varsity could have been present and with "Big Dick" as umpire. But the inclemency of the weather made it necessary for Professors "Woody" and Hoy to send in their places their subs: Professors "Bones" Hampden Montgomery and Donald Kirven.

First base was held down extremely well by Prof. Sturgeon, who holds the formula for all bases, tho he was out-starred altogether by his co-worker, Prof. Marcus Prince, whose beautiful one-hand catches and numerous home runs roused the great throng of spectators to intense excitement and admiration. He was undoubtedly the individual star of the game.

Prof. Miller caught an excellent game; in fact, he caught everything pitched by Prof. Coach Johnson that was missed by the eagle-eyed Senior sluggers. Prof. "Bursar" "Hawk" Hunter handled the hot third corner in style a la A. B. Henderson, while Prof. Bob Edmunds covered all center-field that needed to be covered.

However, Dr. Spencer, Dr. Brimm, Dr. Woodworth, Dr. Kennedy, Prof. B. Graham, Prof. Martin, Dr. Jones, Col. Glasgow, Prof. Fant, and Dr. Hoy were greatly missed by the faculty line-up. Their slugging especially was needed.

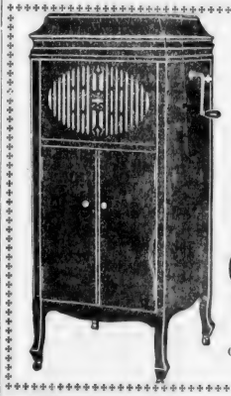
No serious accidents have followed as yet, but Seniors, take a word of warning and don't play the faculty again until after exams.

—P. C.—

STUDENT BODY ELECTS OFFICERS

At a recent meeting of the Student Body, the election of new officers who will officiate during the coming year, was held. This was one of the most spirited elections that has taken place in quite a while. The results were as follows:

President, D. F. Kirven.
Vice-President, J. C. Young.
Secretary and Treas., W. W. Lewis.
Editor-in-Chief of PaC-SaC, M. C. Dendy.
Business Manager of PaC-SaC, W. T. Wade.
Editor-in-Chief of Collegian, H. E. Montgomery.
Business Manager of Collegian, H. J. Hindman, Jr.



No other student body officers were elected at this time. A more extensive write-up of the meeting is impossible because of lack of space at this late date.

OWL CLUB GIVES ANNUAL BANQUET

Dendy, Malcolm Williamson, and Christy Matheson were three out-of-town Owls who found a hearty welcome awaiting them.

But, to get back to the feast. Promptly at 9 o'clock the guests filed by pairs into the banquet hall, and in time found the place cards that had been so successfully hidden. The good ladies of Clinton had prepared the following delicious and bountiful menu for the delightful repast:

Fruit Cocktail
Carolina Turkey Cranberry Sauce
Steamed Rice Giblet Gravy
Macaroni
Green Peas on Rosettes
Spiced Dressing Pickles
Hot Rolls
Waldorf Salad
Cheese Straws Stuffed Olives
Saratoga Chips
Strawberries with Whipped Cream
Mints Angel Cake Demi-Tasse
Hoo-o-o-ch

With such a repast before him and such a gathering of feminine charm and masculine dress suits around him, who could not have a real good time?

At the conclusion of the feasting a formidable array of after-dinner speeches was unlossed upon the extremely good-natured gathering. The following program held sway:

"Glad To Have You"
Toastmaster L. N. Edmunds
"The Owls Who Have Flown"
H. E. Montgomery
"Back to the Nest".....R. G. Matheson
"Vanity Fair".....S. W. Dendy
"Fraternity".....Dr. A. E. Spencer
"Air Castles".....M. R. Williamson
"Sense and Nonsense"
Prof. B. Graham
"All for P. C.".....C. J. Milling, Aesir
"Whoo! Whoo!".....C. K. Douglas

In reply to Bro. Dendy's tribute, Miss Maude Ellis made a most charming response.

The Owl Club was honored by the presence of the following honorary guests who did so much toward making the gala occasion the success that it was: Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer; Prof. and Mrs. B. Graham; Coach W. A. Johnson; Mrs. H. Arthur Copeland; Mrs. Myrtle A. Hunter; Mr. Herbert Crawford, Pi Kappa Phi; Mr. Lawrence E. Brown, Pi Kappa Alpha; Mr. C. J. Milling, Aesir; Mr. Matthew H. Lynn, student body.

All good things must end. Such is the sole and only reason for the final breaking up of the Feast of the Owls. In due course of time the several couples took fond leave of each other, and thereupon each couple wended its way homeward where—well, where further disintegration more or less sorrowfully took place. The list of those who performed the aforesaid initial parting in couples and final parting as individuals, is as follows: Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer; Prof. and Mrs. B. Graham; Mrs. Myrtle Hunter; Mrs. Arthur Copeland; W. A. Johnson and Miss Helen Gandy; Herbert Crawford and Miss Elise Spencer; L. E. Brown and Miss Marie Cosby; C. J. Milling and Miss Edna Daniell; M. H. Lynn and Miss Jaunita Henry; S. W. Dendy and Miss Florence Collins; M. R. Williamson and Miss Warlick; R. G. Matheson; R. M. Cothran and Miss Marie Vaughan; C. K. Douglas and Miss Gene Rabb; M. A. DuRant and Miss Maude Ellis; L. N. Edmunds and Miss Bernice Hazelden; J. K. Wilson and Miss Emmie Pitts; S. H. Edmunds and Miss Marie Nash; W. P. Gourdin and Miss May Owens; H. E. Montgomery, Jr. and Miss Mary Moffatt; J. W. Shaw, Jr. and Miss Helena Bultman; D. S. Matheson and Miss Frances Witherspoon; F. B. Mayes and Miss Ruth Doty; J. H. Pearce and Miss Lillian Barrow; E. T. Wilson and Miss Bertha Pressly; F. K. Clark and Miss Lois Blakely; D. D. Edmunds and Miss Long; R. H. Whilden and Miss Annie B. Adair; E. L. Wilds and Miss Theo Gause.

the world that the Blue Stockings were not destined to defeat on April 5 had rain not interfered. What better proof than the 6-1 score in faovr of the Presbyterians?

Hanna, Johnson's crack Freshman south-paw, was in the box and he had the Collegians eating from his portside appendage. In all they were able to secure only five scattered hits, no two of which came in one inning. Their one run came in the second inning as a result of a base on balls, followed by a very timely single. On the other hand, the sluggers from Clinton knocked out 14 safe blows. Henderson led in the rampage with three doubles out of four tries, Warner following a close second with two doubles and a single out of three tries. The six runs came as a result of bunched hits with one exception—one run resulted in the fourth as a result of two consecutive errors by the Maroon pitcher and short-stop respectively.

Taken as a whole, the game conclusively proved Blue Stocking supremacy over the Maroon nine—baseballically speaking, once more. Box score:

DR. DUDLEY JONES TO LECTURE IN FLORIDA

Dr. Dudley Jones, Professor of Philosophy and Pyschology of P. C., will make a trip to Florida during the early part of the summer to attend the young peoples' conference of the Presbyterian Sunday School and Christian Endeavor. Dr. Jones before going South will deliver a lecture at the conference to be held here. Then he goes to Palmer College, De Funiak Springs, Fla., where he will deliver a series of lectures to the young peoples' meeting there. His addresses will last from June 14th to 18th.

CLIPPINGS FROM THE FILE

Coach Durfee and Rhett Turnipseed were the only men on the trip that were lucky enough to cop a spin in Coach Johnson's Rolls-Royce de Henry while at Clinton. Ask any one who made the trip for particulars.—Tiger.

Success

"He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty, or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration and whose memory a benediction."—Hornet.

A Disertation On Girls

Girls are members of one of the most popular sexes. They are proof-positive that evolution really does. The girl who used to worry whether her petticoat showed is no more. Neither is the petticoat.

Short skirts, like bank loans, draw a high rate of interest but are often a poor investment.

Girls are one of the excuses for darkness.

Girls are a collection of legs, arms, and torso and vary in beauty according to the relative proportion of these parts.

Girls are the cause of colored glasses, prosperity, poverty, posterity, telephones, bankruptcies, mortgages, murders, suicide, lives, lies, paint, rouge, powder, fashions, thefts, choruses, morals, models, hair pins, bigamy, divorce, marriage, hermits, love, stags, dates, boudoirs, love nests, young men's fancies, "Police Gazette," "Cuties," "snakes," dances, and bust notices. Some girls are gold diggers. They deserve the degree of "Bachelor of Hearts!" They play "Kisses" on your mouth organ when you're flush and pass you by when you're broke.

Dancing, without girls, loses its cheek-to-cheek. Even Diana carried a quiver on her shoulder! It's a great life but, as the French will have it, "One Weakens!"—Davidsonian.

ALUMNI NOTES

The last few weeks have been largely made up of banquets and socials. Due partly to this fact, we have had quite a number of P. C. Alumni to visit us.

T. B. Hay, '20, attended the Pi Kappa Phi banquet last week.

W. G. Neville, '21, was on the campus a few days last week.

R. G. Matheson, '21, Wilkes Dendy, and M. R. Williamson, were visitors on the campus a few days ago.

"Cracker" Carrigan, '19, attended the Pi Kappa Phi banquet last week.

"Big Boy" Henderson, '21, was a campus visitor a few days ago.

J. B. Hicklin, '21, spent a few hours with us last week.

T. O. McKeown, '18, was a week-end visitor last week.

THE BLUE STOCKING

"ALL FOR P. C. AND P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME IV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, SEPTEMBER 23rd, 1922 NUMBER 1

COACH JOHNSON'S VARSITY MEN HAVE LITTLE BROTHERS NOW

"BLUE SOX" APPEAR FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY OF PRESBYTRIAN COLLEGE

Of course, everybody who knows anything at all knows the whence, why, and wherefore of the above-mentioned term "Blue Stockings." Hence they need no introduction. But the aforesaid "Blue Sox" are comparative newcomers. They were authrized to be created by certain Freshman athletic regulations enacted at the last annual S. I. A. A. meeting. Therefore, for the first time the Presbyterian College Freshmen are making their bow to the athletic world. They are the younger brothers of the older varsity Blue Stockings. Since young stockings, or abbreviated stockings, are usually termed socks, or sox, why not designate these young Blue Stockings as Blue Sox? When they get bigger—in experience—they will automatically develop into full-grown Stockings.

W. A. Johnson is known all over the South. He is the man who put the name Blue Stocking on the athletic map. When Coach Johnson came to Presbyterian College six years ago, Presbyterian College athletic teams ranked little higher than high schools. Today, after six years of development, Presbyterian College teams are respected and feared by every opponent. Coach Johnson is now entering upon his seventh year as director of Blue Stocking Athletics. The natural question is: What are his prospects for the forthcoming season? Will his teams rank as formerly? Hence the reason for this article—to introduce the 1922 Blue Stocking football squad and the 1922 Blue Sox football squad.

The 1921 squad bequeathed the 1922 squad 11 letter men, tried and true. An additional bequest involved many second-string men who wish to win their spurs. It is on these men that the hopes of Presbyterian College boosters are pinned.

In the fall of 1917 a little blonde lad with an exceedingly large nasal appendage bore the imposing title, "Right end for Chester high school eleven." After the lapse of some years several changes have taken place. The aforesaid blonde lad has grown larger, as has the alleged

W. S. PORTER HEADS R. O. T. C.

Work Of P. C.'s Soldier Boys Well Under Way.

Bill Porter, a faithful and popular member of the Senior class has the distinction this year of being in command of the R. O. T. C. batallion. Major Porter deserves this honor, and merits the congratulations of his classmates and many friends. He served his country with distinction during the World war, and has the interest of the unit at heart. He has steadily risen in military affairs here since his Freshman year, and is now quite competent to command the efficient unit whose representatives carried away first honors at Camp McClellan. An ardent soldier, Major Porter presents a commanding and distinguished military personality, combined with the graces of an officer and a gentleman. We feel certain that the unit will prosper under his command, and continue to reflect the credit upon P. C. which it has done for the past two years.

The R. O. T. C. work for the year '22-'23 is well under way, and as we go to press the uniforms of the Juniors and Seniors have already been issued. Col. Glasgow has secured commutation for uniforms this year for the two upper classes, and the men are all pleased with their new khaki.

Company commanders have not yet been appointed, and probably will not be for some little time. The officer personel follows below:

Major: W. S. Porter.
Adjutant: H. E. Montgomery.
Supply Officer: M. B. Prince.

Company A

1st Lieut.: D. L. Williamson.
2nd Lieut.: M. C. Dendy.

Company B

1st. Lieut.: S. H. Edmunds, Jr.
2nd Lieut.: C. J. Milling.

The batallion numbers over one hundred and fifty officers and enlisted men this year.

FRESHMEN BEAUTIFULLY ENTERTAINED AT ANNUAL RECEPTION

BRILLIANT AFFAIR GIVEN BY YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

One of the many happy experiences that a "rat" passes thru in becoming a human being is the Rat Reception. All of the old men know what an enjoyable evening this reception affords and the new men, after the pleasant experience of Friday night, will agree that the Y. M. C. A. could find no better way to introduce them to Clinton society than the pleasant social evening which is given for their special benefit. If any "rat" is asked what are some of the most enjoyable experiences of his year in college one of the first named will be the annual Y. M. C. A. Rat Reception.

After each "rat" had chosen his girl and made his date and introduced himself in the best way he could find, he escorted the lady to the college chapel where all the old boys were waiting, plotting against the poor rat for bringing certain ladies which they had in wild dreams called theirs. The chapel was full about eight-thirty and the grand affair began soon afterward.

The first part of the reception consisted of some short talks by the ministers of the town, members of the faculty and student body. Each minister made a short talk welcoming the old men back and the new ones to the churches of Clinton. Our ministers are always ready to help new and old men at any time and any place. We are proud of our Clinton ministers.

Dr. A. E. Spencer, in behalf of the Commercial club of Clinton, welcomed the rats to the town of Clinton. The Clinton business men appreciate the college boys trade and they show this by the interest they take in the college publications and athletics.

Dr. Jones next welcomed the rats to P. C. He told of how college life could be either good or bad, according to the attitude of the Freshman and the companions with whom he ran. The college man can exert a great influence and college life should be clean so that others may follow his example. Our faculty is ready to help the students at any time. They are looking out

Cureton Captain Of The Cross Country Team

Popular Runner Heads P. C.'s '22 Cinder Path Lads.

At a recent meeting of the last year's cross country team, Charlie Cureton, of Pickens, S. C., was unanimously elected captain of the team for the ensuing year.

Cureton has been seen continuously on P. C.'s track field for two years. He is the kind of fellow who does not allow himself to become discouraged. In the fall of 1920 Charlie suffered a sprained ankle which prevented him from making the team that year, but the fall of '21 saw him on the cinder path again. And on Thanksgiving day of that year he was one of the me nwho represented P. C. in the cross country run at Newberry.

Capt. Cureton says the prospects for a winning team this year are very bright indeed, and that he is going to do all in his power to put it across for P. C.

Upper Classmen Hold Elections

Officers Are Chosen By Seniors, Juniors and Sophs.

At a recent meeting of the Senior class the following officers were elected: President, Chapman J. Milling; Vice-President, M. A. Macdonald; Sec. and Treas., "Big Boy" Williamson; Historian, S. H. Edmunds, Jr.; Poet, W. T. Wade.

The result of the Junior elections is as follows: President, H. J. Hindman; Vice-President, W. J. Cnerry; Secretary, J. F. Mason; Treasurer, R. A. Buckner; Historian, "Shorty" Pierce; Poet, W. W. Lewis.

The Sopohomore class held a meeting on the evening of the 19th for the purpose of electing officers. Laurence Brown was elected president; "Red" McLauren, vice-president; Warner, secretary and treasurer; Whilden, historian; and Cornwall, poet.

The Freshman elections do not take place until later on during the year.

Alumni Athletic Asso. Thanks Subscribers

Contributions Still Needed To Carry On Good Work.

The P. C. Alumni Athletic association takes this opportunity to thank our loyal alumni who have subscribed to the campaign for better athletics at P. C. Our goal has not yet been reached but we have great hopes. Already we have heard from a great many, and each day we add a few more to our list of subscribers.

We realize the financial condition which many of us are in at present, and under such conditions we could not expect a very large contribution from any one.

It is gratifying to see so many of the alumni who graduated many years ago come to our support. We need more replies and we are expecting more in the near future. Your hearty co-operation will mean that P. C. Athletics will be equal to any in the state.

$25,000.00 On New Dormitory

Captain Smyth Makes Liberal Offer.

The growth of P. C. has been greatly thwarted by the fact that she is unable to accomodate more students. The enrollment for this year is 187, the largest in the history of the college, and would have been at least 200 if the students could have been taken care of.

At the last meeting of the Board of Trustees, President Douglas stated that a new dormitory accomodating 100 students could be filled. He said the dormitory would cost $75,000, but it would be impossible to raise this money unless our rich men contribute it. Soon after the meeting of the Board he received a letter from Capt. Ellison A. Smyth, of Greenville, S. C., stating that he would give $25,000 towards the erection of this new dormitory if the remaining $50,000 were subscribed within a year. Capt. Smyth in his letter stated that sixty days

Dendy, Malcolm Williamson, and Christy Matheson were three out-of-town Owls who found a hearty welcome awaiting them.

But, to get back to the feast. Promptly at 9 o'clock the guests filed by pairs into the banquet hall, and in time found the place cards that had been so successfully hidden. The good ladies of Clinton had prepared the following delicious and bountiful menu for the delightful repast:

Fruit Cocktail
Carolina Turkey Cranberry Sauce
Steamed Rice Giblet Gravy
Macaroni
Green Peas on Rosettes
Spiced Dressing Pickles
Hot Rolls
Waldorf Salad
Cheese Straws Stuffed Olives
Saratoga Chips
Strawberries with Whipped Cream
Mints Angel Cake Demi-Tasse
Hoo-o-o-ch

With such a repast before him and such a gathering of feminine charm and masculine dress suits around him, who could not have a real good time?

At the conclusion of the feasting a formidable array of after-dinner speeches was unlossed upon the extremely good-natured gathering. The following program held sway:

"Glad To Have You"
Toastmaster L. N. Edmunds
"The Owls Who Have Flown"
H. E. Montgomery
"Back to the Nest".....R. G. Matheson
"Vanity Fair".....S. W. Dendy
"Fraternity".....Dr. A. E. Spencer
"Air Castles".....M. R. Williamson
"Sense and Nonsense"
Prof. B. Graham
"All for P. C."....C. J. Milling, Aesir
"Whoo! Whoo!".....C. K. Douglas

In reply to Bro. Dendy's tribute, Miss Maude Ellis made a most charming response.

The Owl Club was honored by the presence of the following honorary guests who did so much toward making the gala occasion the success that it was: Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer; Prof. and Mrs. B. Graham; Coach W. A. Johnson; Mrs. H. Arthur Copeland; Mrs. Myrtle A. Hunter; Mr. Herbert Crawford, Pi Kappa Phi; Mr. Lawrence E. Brown, Pi Kappa Alpha; Mr. C. J. Milling, Aesir; Mr. Matthew H. Lynn, student body.

All good things must end. Such is the sole and only reason for the final breaking up of the Feast of the Owls. In due course of time the several couples took fond leave of each other, and thereupon each couple wended its way homeward where—well, where further disintegration more or less sorrowfully took place. The list of those who performed the aforesaid initial parting in couples and final parting as individuals, is as follows: Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer; Prof. and Mrs. B. Graham; Mrs. Myrtle Hunter; Mrs. Arthur Copeland; W. A. Johnson and Miss Helen Gandy; Herbert Crawford and Miss Elise Spencer; L. E. Brown and Miss Marie Cosby; C. J. Milling and Miss Edna Daniell; M. H. Lynn and Miss Jaunita Henry; S. W. Dendy and Miss Florence Collins; M. R. Williamson and Miss Warlick; R. G. Matheson; R. M. Cothran and Miss Marie Vaughan; C. K. Douglas and Miss Gene Rabb; M. A. DuRant and Miss Maude Ellis; L. N. Edmunds and Miss Bernice Hazelden; J. K. Wilson and Miss Emmie Pitts; S. H. Edmunds and Miss Marie Nash; W. P. Gourdin and Miss May Owens; H. E. Montgomery, Jr. and Miss Mary Moffatt; J. W. Shaw, Jr. and Miss Helena Bultman; D. S. Matheson and Miss Frances Witherspoon; F. B. Mayes and Miss Ruth Doty; J. H. Pearce and Miss Lillian Barrow; E. T. Wilson and Miss Bertha Pressly; F. K. Clark and Miss Lois Blakely; D. D. Edmunds and Miss Long; R. H. Whilden and Miss Annie B. Adair; E. L. Wilds and Miss Theo Gause.

the world that the Blue Stockings were not destined to defeat on April 5 had rain not interfered. What better proof than the 6-1 score in faovr of the Presbyterians?

Hanna, Johnson's crack Freshman south-paw, was in the box and he had the Collegians eating from his portside appendage. In all they were able to secure only five scattered hits, no two of which came in one inning. Their one run came in the second inning as a result of a base on balls, followed by a very timely single. On the other hand, the sluggers from Clinton knocked out 14 safe blows. Henderson led in the rampage with three doubles out of four tries, Warner following a close second with two doubles and a single out of three tries. The six runs came as a result of bunched hits with one exception—one run resulted in the fourth as a result of two consecutive errors by the Maroon pitcher and short-stop respectively.

Taken as a whole, the game conclusively proved Blue Stocking supremacy over the Maroon nine—baseballically speaking, once more. Box score:

DR. DUDLEY JONES TO LECTURE IN FLORIDA

Dr. Dudley Jones, Professor of Philosophy and Pyschology of P. C., will make a trip to Florida during the early part of the summer to attend the young peoples' conference of the Presbyterian Sunday School and Christian Endeavor. Dr. Jones before going South will deliver a lecture at the conference to be held here. Then he goes to Palmer College, De Funiak Springs, Fla., where he will deliver a series of lectures to the young peoples' meeting there. His addresses will last from June 14th to 18th.

CLIPPINGS FROM THE FILE

Coach Durfee and Rhett Turnipseed were the only men on the trip that were lucky enough to cop a spin in Coach Johnson's Rolls-Royce de Henry while at Clinton. Ask any one who made the trip for particulars.—Tiger.

The growth of P. C. has been greatly thwarted by the fact that she is unable to accomodate more students. The enrollment for this year is 187, the largest in the history of the college, and would have been at least 200 if the students could have been taken care of.

At the last meeting of the Board of Trustees, President Douglas stated that a new dormitory accomodating 100 students could be filled. He said the dormitory would cost $75,000, but it would be impossible to raise this money unless our rich men contribute it. Soon after the meeting of the Board he received a letter from Capt. Ellison A. Smyth, of Greenville, S. C., stating that he would give $25,000 towards the erection of this new dormitory if the remaining $50,000 were subscribed within a year. Capt. Smyth in his letter stated that sixty days

The Blue Stocking hoped to become a weekly publication this year, but failing to do this we are doing the next best thing. We are putting out a six-page bi-weekly. There are several things that the students can do to make this a successful publication.

(1). The last year's society dues must be paid. It is thru these that the college publications are run, and last year there were many students in arrears at the end of the term. Enough of this was paid to release the PaC-SaC from the hands of the publisher, but The Blue Stocking is still in debt. Now, fellows, if you want a good paper, which is a credit to your college, don't be slow about paying up these dues. Do it before this year's dues accumulate.

(2). Another thing you can do which will greatly help is to mail this copy of The Blue Stocking to some alumnus of the college as soon as you have finished it. Also write him a letter telling him that P. C. is on the map now, and is putting out a paper just chock full of the news of his Alma Mater. Then wind up by asking him to dig down in his pants and come forth with two berries, and mail the said berries to us; and add that we will be most happy to send him The Blue Stocking every time it is published, for nine long months. Also call his attention to the "Warning" which appears again in The Blue Stocking for the benefit of those who have not seen it.

(3). If you know any business man or firm anywhere who would be interested in an ad, write to him and also give us his address. You can assure him that his ad will be read, and that it will go wherever there are loyal alumni of P. C.

(4). So much has been said already about this fourth item, that we will not harp upon it. Briefly then, we want students to contribute as much copy to our paper as possible.

Attend to these matters AT once. The Blue Stocking grows.

— P. C. —

The Blue Stocking trusts that all the P. C. men, both old and new, have enjoyed a most pleasant summer. This wish is, of course, extended to the alumni of the college, and to the faculty. Prospects seem bright in every way for the year 1922-1923 and there is no reason why this year should not be the most successful in the history of P. C. For the benefit of the new men, and it must be admitted for some of the old ones, we wish to make the statement that the only way to make a real success of your college life is to work hard at everything you go into and play equally as hard when you play. The "lounge lizzard" does not make a success, neither on the other hand does the book-worm. There is as much benefit derived from college activities as from the subjects studied in the classroom, but these activities cannot be enjoyed to their fullest extent unless you have first conscientiously applied yourself to your classes.

Then another thing—get the undying spirit of P. C. into your systems as soon as possible. This is the secret of why P. C.'s sons love their school so. Everybody pulls for P. C. first and thinks of self afterwards.

— P. C. —

The record made at Camp McClellan this summer by the P. C. unit of R. O. T. C. is enough to make every man who has any pride in his school sit up and take notice, then go out and shoot up several large size firecrackers, yell his throat hoarse, and otherwise behave like a demented cow-boy, who has just received news of the death of his mother-in-law.

Boys, this record amounts to something. Some of the biggest colleges in the South were represented there, and also colleges recognized by the government as "distinguished military colleges."

We knew that P. C. was going to herself justice, but we could harly expect to take first place of all the R. O. T. C. units in the entire fourth corp area.

How did we do it? Well, the secret of our success lies not only in our work at Camp McClellan, but also in our training here on our own P. C. drill field. We have here at P. C. an instructor in military science, who besides being a wonderful instructor, is a thoroughbred Christian gentleman. And it is due to him that the men who represented P. C. at the summer camp conducted themselves in such a manner as to carry away this great honor. From the time he first arrived on our campus he has faithfully striven to impart to us the high principles of courtesy and manly conduct of which he is so striking an example. He has taught us that we must not only be able to drill men, but we must conduct ourselves as "officers and gentlemen." How well he has succeeded in this teaching is seen by examining our record at Camp McClellan.

WARNING!

(Editor's Note: The following little poem appeared in the last issue of The Blue Stocking which was published May 20, 1922. We are republishing it for the benefit of any alumni who happened not to see it in our columns last spring.)

An editor once paid a visit to Hell,
And there 'mid the smoke and the sulphurous smell
He saw in the midst of the ruin and wreck
A bunch of poor fellows tied by the neck.
They squirmed and they twisted, they plunged and they reared,
They jerked and they jumped just as high as they dared;
While flames scorched their whiskers and ate at their hide.
The editor asked who were they and 'ere they died.
"Oh, they were the fellows," said Nick with a smile,
"Who tried to amass quite a nice little pile;
Their own college paper they never would take,
And thoughts of subscribing kept them awake.
Whenever a student on finances bent
Approached them, they swore that they had lost their last cent.
Or cried that the weevils had eaten their all,
Or promised to send in two dollars 'next fall.'
And though they were told that the paper was broke,
They laughed to themselves, and they thought it a joke.
So now they are punished for being so mean,
And ugly, and evil, and cross and obscene,
And stingy, and worthless, too low-down to beat,
For not helping put the old 'Sock' on its feet.
Yes, they are alumni whom warning nor bribe
Could force to dig down in their pants and subscribe."
"I marvel," the editor said in amaze.
As further then went through the sulphurous haze,
Till they came to a cauldron of black molten pitch,
Just over the brink of the bottomless ditch,
From the depths of the cauldron a heartrending wail
Explained why the sufferers rested in jail.
"Oh, we were the men who would not advertise;
We always explained with excuses and lies.
We read the Blue Stocking, but never an ad
Would we give to assist the poor hard working lad.
We always complained of the frightful high rate;
'Though full well we knew 'twas the best in the state.
And though we desired the college boy's trade,
To give them our ads we put off and delayed,
Till at last they turned from us in honest disgust,
And all the trade went to the fellows they trust.
So now we continue to boil and to scorch,
While Satan annoys our hides with his torch."

MORAL:

Take warning, ye tightwads, and loosen your coin,
Or the ranks of the sufferers soon you will join.

Eukosmians Hold Initial Meeting

First Program For 1922-1923 Was Excellent.

As the curtain rose upon the literary world of P. C., the Eukosmians were found holding the first meeting of the new collegiate year on Tuesday night, September, 1922.

President Anderson presided over the concourse.

After chaplain service by Mr. E. D. McMahan, the debaters of the evening were called forward to settle the question regarding the compulsory arbitration of strikes in essential industries.

Mr. McMahan and Mr. Warren upheld the affirmative while Mr. O'Daniel and Mr. E. T. Wilson debated the negative side. The discussion was spirited and never lagged in interest. Credit is due both sides but some one had to win and the affirmative was favored by the committee of judges.

The extemporaneous speeches of Mr. Banks, Mr. Barnado, Mr. Williamson and Mr. Cherry were far above the average and these men deserve commendation for insuring the success of the program.

The first meeting was a marked success from the point of view of the program.

The new men were and are cordially invited to attend the weekly meetings of the Eeukosmian Literary Society.

for our welfare and we are proud of our faculty.

A large place in the hearts of students is held by athletics. The P. C. students are proud of their Coach and the record he has made for P. C. Coach has been with us for a number of years and has placed P. C. upon the athletic map. He loves P. C. and in the face of better offers from other colleges who are trying to get him he sticks by us and we love him all the more for it. Coach told of P. C.'s record and how he and P. C. always stood for clean athletics. He told us of the prospects for the coming year and how good they looked to him. "Beat Davidson or Bust" is his and our motto and we don't want to bust so we will beat Davidson. There is not a man in the whole student body who would not do anything in the world for Coach. We know we have the best Coach in the state and are all back of him and his team.

Mr. Hudson next told of the fraternity life in college. Of how all the frats were working together and the spirit of harmony that exists between them and the student body. This spirit is good to see and we know that it is going to exist for a long time.

Mr. Dendy next told of the PaC-SaC. Of how the last year's staff had set a pretty high standard but not too high for this year's staff to reach it and if he had not been too modest to say, surpass it. P. C. wants only the best and we know we are going to have a good annual and one that will be a credit to P. C.

Mr. Montgomery told us of what The Collegian had been in the past and what he is going to make it this year. We should all give him our ardent support because he has a hard job. Let's help him make The Collegian a big success this year and a credit to our beloved P. C.

The next speaker was Mr. Milling, who told us of The Blue Stocking. The Blue Stocking has always been good and all the P. C. students love it. It is hard work to edit a paper but we know that "Chap" is capable of doing it and we look for great things this year in the way of a paper and know we are not going to be disappointed.

The last speaker, but by no means the least, was Mr. Williamson, who welcomed the new men into the Y. M. C. A. He told of how the "Y" brought the men closer together and of the great good it was doing. The "Y" is a great thing and we know that all the new men are going to join and take an active part in its work. We all know how good our "Y" is and take off our hats to it.

The speeches being concluded the social side of the reception began. The rats were taken from girl to girl and in this way got to know them all. After a few minutes of socialibility the cry was heard, "To the mess hall!" All adjourned there and were served with ice cream and cake. Chairs had been placed under the trees and the couples were placed in a fine position to watch the moon. After the refreshments there came a period of conversation. This was enjoyed by all and the time for departing came too soon. Every one went away declaring that he had a marvelous time.

huge nasal appendage. Likewise has his title changed—and grown. Today the same lad who cavorted on the Chester field is known as "right end and Captain of the Presbyterian College football eleven." Gentlemen, allow me to introduce you to Captain J. B. Clowney, right end par excellence. This is Clowney's third season of varsity football, and needless to say, he wishes to make it the best of three excellent seasons. Should anyone question "Coon's" ability as an end, he is respectfully referred to one Mr. Hammett, one-time Davidson tackle with all-Southern aspirations. "Nuff sed" of Clowney's record as a player. If his record as captain proves as successful as his record as "buck private on right end" then it will be brilliant indeed. Heretofore, Mason has been the regular with Kirven standing ready to assume any burden proving too heavy. There are many who believe that Joe Mason played football of all-state calibre in 1921. Indeed had his team been more successful, Mason's work would have attracted more widespread attention. Wade and Bomar are two lettered tackles who are seeking highe rhonors. They both look good this year. Wade seems to have derived much profit, other than financial from his six weeks' "house party" in Alabama. Bomar appears hale and hearty, in spite of the arduous journey from Arkansas. "Big Boy" Williamson and "Venus D." Norton are two excellent examples of a husky guard, both weighing barely under 200 without much on. In fact, these two babes are the source of much of the alleged weight of the Blue Stocking line, which will average 165. Miller, a center composed of about 182 per cent grit, pep, and ability, and who is entering upon his second varsity campaign, weighs 155. Bomar will balance about 160 pounds of wild cats, with Wade being able to tip a like amount plus five pounds. Captain Clowney can safely offset but 142 pounds of fighting coons, with Mason outweighing his captain by fifteen pounds. Hence, it is seen that the two good-looking fellows at guard supply much weight to the common average. In addition to these letter men, Dulin, McLaurin, Banks, Ricker, and others are showing up well as line men.

The back field will be minus the services of one of two splendid quarterbacks, Hindman and Wilson. Gene Wilson will not be allowed to play this season because of throat trouble. However, Hindman is still very much on the job. With a year of experience behind him he is facing a most successful season. He has the ear-marks of a great field general, being able to pass, punt, carry the ball, run interference—all these exceptinoally well—as well as pilot the team. Next come Coach Johnson's two alleged "watch charm" halfbacks, Jack Wilson and "Shorty" Pearce. This pair is perhaps the lightest and fastest combination in South Carolina football. Always very fast pacers, they both seem to be speedier this year than ever before. Pearce is a veteran of one season, while Wilson is a grizzled warrior of three campaigns' experience. Moore, a husky Tar Heel product, is an excellent fullback prospect. This young mountaineer is a rookie so far as varsity experience goes, but one would never guess it from his pre-season performance thus far. Incidentally, Moore is the heaviest of the backfield candidates, weighing about 153, as compared to Hindman's 142, Pearce's 125, Wilson's 138. Thus it will be seen that the backfield as it stands at present will average under 140—a very light college backfield. The other candidates can hardly change this backfield average appreciably. Walker, Lewis, and Edmunds weigh under 140, while Montgomery hovers around 150. The remainder of the squad go in weight about as the average. Thus it will be seen that Coach Johnson has his hands full.

But things are looking bright. Two weeks of hard practice under Coach Johnson and Assistant Coach Eichelberger, have developed a squad that is light, but fast, spirited, and eager. The varsity showed up exceptionally well in a recent scrimmage with Coach McMillan's "Blue Sox," who will be discussed later. In view of these facts, Presbyterian College boosters are eagerly awaiting the results of the initial encounter with Davidson which is barely a week off.

This the beginning of a new era, the old pass on, and the new begins—the inauguration of the Rat football team of 1922.

This year's Freshman class bears the dintinction of introducing to the athletic world P. C.'s first Freshman team. Be yours, then, the honor of placing another gem in P. C.'s crown of glory. Freshmen, you also have a grave responsibilty placed upon your shoulders. You have given to you the name "P. C." without scar or blemish. It's up to you to keep it that way, whether on the gridiron or in the class-room.

Six years ago, out of the wilderness of the North, came a dashing fullback, dashing on to old P. C. He was the man behind the gun in 1920 when P. C. pierced every line in the state. He is our own Coach Johnson. Out of the wilds of Arkansas came a broad-shouldered, long, lean and lanky lad, destined to bestow honor upon himself and glory to P. C. He is the man who took the glory of all-state end from the many contestants for three successive years. All hail to Lonnie Mac!

Freshmen, you have the best Freshman coach in the state, nay, in the South. Coach McMillan has great hopes of putting out a strong team this year. He has several men out for each position which will be condusive to more work among the men and keener competition.

For quarterback he has Lindsay of Thornwell. Nothing else need be said if he is a product of Thornwell. Also Price of Westminter and perhaps Copeland of Clinton promise him some strong competition. The other backfield positions will be hotly contested between the following men: Clinton of Rock Hill, Holland of Savannah, Walker of Columbia, Montgomery of Wysacky, Robinson of Chester, and Blakely of Clinton. For center he has Edwards of Darlington, and Ferguson of Clinton. For guards, Camel of Austin, Texas, Sims of Dalton, Ga., and Sistar of Thornwell. For tackles, Rucker of Thornwell, Fountaine of Savannah, Josey and Martin. The positions of end seems to be the hardest proposition to solve, there being quite a number of contestants, such as, Nick Hunter of Chester, Bailey and Blalock of Clinton, Davis of Dalton, Ga., Moore and Brown of Black Mountain, N. C. These men, together with other good ones, are the prospects of our team.

Freshmen, all we can say is, go to it. You have the whole college behind you. We'll be behind every goal line waiting for you to bring that old pigskin over.

Tales Of Abou Ben Blowhard

The Parable of the Credulous Youth and the Man Who Delighted to Advise.

Editor's Note: This parable from the pen of Abou first appeared in the "Camp McClellan Courier," a paper published at Camp McClellan, Ala., and later was published in the "Anniston Star," a daily of Anniston, Ala., in the Sunday edition. We are again digging it up in the hope that it may be of interest to the readers of The Blue Stocking.

In the year that the miners and railroad workers took unto themselves the government of the state, there abode in the vineyard of his father a goodly youth, one Sinbad the Simple, who believed whatsoever was told unto him. The youth was so credulous that upon a certain day he met a friend and they fell to talking about the weather; and the friend said unto him, "Knowest thou, O Sinbad, that this morning when I arose I was forced to build a fire under the cow of my father in order to milk her"; and behold Sinbad the Simple believed him.

Now it came to pass that young Sinbad arose and went unto his father and said, "Father, the time is drawing nigh when I must depart from before thy face and go unto the camp and train me to be a soldier."

"Yea, my son," replied the white haired husbandman, "it is indeed time for thee to depart, but before thou goest, thou shalt seek thy cousin Reuben who went into camp last year; and he will tell thee what goods to take with thee, and what thou shalt find at the camp of the soldiers."

"Yea, most beneficent speaker of wisdom, and mine own sire," replied Sinbad the Simple, "I shall arise and do as thou sayest; I shall seek the good Reuben and mayhap his experiences will be of help to me." Thus saying, he arose and sought out his cousin Reuben, who he found by the riverside plucking ticks from the backs of his father's kine. "Greetings, good cousin Reuben. I go on the morrow for the camp of the soldiers, and thou shalt tell me what I must take with me and what shall be my adventures there."

"By the beard of the prophet," replied Reuben, extracting a flea from the ear of his faithful dog, "thou art fortunate in having me to advise thee," for naught did Reuben love more than to give advice.

Then Sinbad sat him down by the side of his kinsman who related unto him the experiences which are here faithfully transcribed. "Last year, I arose from the house of my father, and not being so fortunate as thee in having a kinsman to advise me, I journeyed unto the camp of the soldiers, which was at that time in a different place from the place where it now is. And I advise thee first, O Sinbad, if thou canst get out of going, do so without fail. But if thou must go prepare thyself for a fearful ordeal. I was forced to drill in the mid-day glow of a sun so terrible that it would dry up the River Oxus in the space of two days. Also, I was made to bear a pack of many sheckles weight, and mine armor waxed greviously heavy. I went daily on foot to a place called Rifle-range, and there suffered the tortures of the sorely afflicted. How I escaped being slain is a secret known only to the prophet. And I was seized and dragged to a house where one lacerated my arm with a grevious knife and poured upon it a potent poison which did cause it to swell and wax exceeding sore. And while he did it, another whom I verily believe was one of the geneii probed mine other arm with a long needle that did cause it to ache greviously. And my raiment was taken from me and I had naught to wear but the garments of war. And lo! frightful mosquitoes came unto my bed and devoured me, and many were the vermin which sought my blood. And I was forced to eat the flesh of horses too old to be of service to their masters, and the flesh of aged he-goats and of asses. Yea, my cousin, thou hast a grevious time before thee. If thou must go, take with thee a vial of kerosene, that for the red insects which will infest thee. Take also a vial of the potent Sketaskoot which will drive away the winged terrors of the night which will so greviously annoy thee. And take thou a vial of poison, so that if thou can stand it no longer thou mayest drink it and die. This, my good kinsman, is all that thou needest to take with thee. Farewell, and go thou with my wishes that thou mayest fare better than did thy hapless cousin."

So Sinbad the Simple arose and departed from the face of his kinsmen in sadness and took his staff and his spare raiment and departed for the camp of the soldiers on the next day. And Sinbad believed all that his kinsman had told him, unto the last word. An he was exceeding sorrowful.

Who Got The Jack?

Note: This touching little ballad was composed to the tune of a well known sacred quartette selection on the troop train leaving Camp McClellan, Ala. Laying his tattered suit-case across his emaciated knees, the writer hastily penned these lines and dedicated them to all the Camp McClellan Sufferers:

Oh! listen to the wondrous swindle
Pulled on us in Alabam,
Of how our pay was made to dwindle
All because of Uncle Sam.

Chorus:
Who stole our thirty cents a day?
Old Uncle Sam he cut our pay.
What did he do?
Beat me and you.
Why do us so?
I do not know.
Poor helpless R. O. T. C. boys.

No General could our pay have taken,
Even tho 'twere Gen. Winn.
And sorely was our firm faith shaken,
Surely 'twas an awful sin.

Chorus:
But now the days of Hell are ended
We will lug our packs no more
Now homeward are our footsteps bended
And we're wiser than before.

Chorus:

Y. M. C. A.

As we begin the year's work for 1922-1928 what are we going to do about Y. M. C. A.? What will the Young Men's Christian Association mean to college life this year?

Fellows, that depends to a great extent upon YOU—by "you" I mean EVERY MAN doing his part. The Cabinet can plan a very elaborate program and have plans for great things but we cannot carry them out without your co-operation—we are depending upon you—every man of you—to back us up in this work and to feel a personal responsibility for the Christian program of the college life this year.

We are coming to you in a few days to canvass you for membership and we hope to have every man in school a member of "Y" whether active or associate.

Mission Study

Missionary education and social study has been neglected in our college for the past two years and we hope this year to organize classes in all the dormitories to meet once a week for thirty or forty-five minutes for this study again. We are expecting you to back this work. We don't want to put something over on you. We simply want to, with your co-operation, study the world situation today from the missionary and social standpoint. No matter what we are to do in life, we are under obligation to know the condition of the world and we cannot really decide our life work as we should without some knowledge of the needs of the world. Our life's ambition should be service and we cannot serve best unless we know where the need is the greatest.

Weekly Religious Meetings

We expect to get the best speakers available from week to week to address our Sunday afternoon meetings. These meetings come immediately after dinner and we urge all to be with us. You will miss something well worth-while if you don't come. We plan this year, not only to have the preachers speak to us but men from all walks of life and we think you cannot afford to miss these addresses.

In addition to these meetings we hope to have with us this year such men as Dr. Searley, Arthur Pugh, and others whom the state committee will secure for us. We are planning to have the Columbia Seminary quartette with us for a few days to sing for us and bring a message. The old boys remember with pleasure their visit of last year. We may be able to get them this fall and again next spring.

These are some of the things we hope, with your help, to do for P. C. The Y. M. C. A. stands for a better and cleaner P. C. They are behind athletics and all college activities but stand for clean sport and fair play in everything.

Fellows, will you help us to make P. C. a better place to live in and a better college for that reason?

Our reason for being among you is service and to promote Christ's standard of living in every activity of college life. Unless we do this, at least to some extent, we are a failure. Will you help us serve?

EXCHANGES

The exchange department of The Blue Stocking has prospects this year for exchanging with a large number of the larger universities and colleges of the southeast. According to the rulings of the Southern Intercollegiate Newspaper Association, of which we are a member, every member is required to exchange with all the other members. Besides these, we exchange with a number of other college newspapers which are not members of the association. No exchanges have come in as yet for this year but we expect to receive some before the next issue of The Blue Stocking.

Important news and pieces of interest from these newspapers will be copied in this paper and then they will all be placed in the library. Fellows, all the news cannot be printed in this paper so in order to keep up-to-date on college news and activities you will have to go over there and read them.

$25,000,00 On New Dormitory

after he was notified that the college had in bona fide subscriptions $50,000 towards the erection of the dormitory, he would turn over to the college, in cash, $25,000.

This is a wonderfully liberal offer made by Capt. Smyth and everyone who loves the Presbyterian church and believes in Christian education has a great opportunity to do something for his church by making the erection of this dormitory possible. President Douglas feels that it is no longer a matter of getting students, but of taking care of them. The college can now get every student for which the church can provide instruction and accomodation. Eleven states are now represented in the student body.

In crossing crossings use great care
To cross them cautiously;
Some other crosser crossing there
Your crossing may not see.
If two uncautious crossers cross
Where caution should prevail,
They may be crossed from off the earth
Or cross again in jail.

about that society too. One was that it was the best society in South Carolina, and to prove that they had a beautiful silver loving cup sitting on the desk in the Sunday School room.

As the years have passed we have found that they were more friendly to us than we ever imagined they could be. Not only to the old boys but they always try to make the new men feel at home—another thing that has has happened in those years that have passed. That silver loving cup no longer sits upon the desk. Some other society has taken our—yes, OUR place as the best society. What are we going to do about it? The town people who are in charge of the work are the best friends we have and they want us to help them make the C. E. society of the First Presbyterian church the best in the state again. What do you say, fellows, let's make the state sit up and take notice and bring that silver cup back where it belongs. The society can do that if we do our part.

Again the C. E. is the medium through which we meet and know the town people. We know we all remember the socials they have given and ever look forward to the good times we have there. Let's show our appreciation and back them to the last ditch.

Out of the four men who represented us last year we have lost only one. We have back on the job "A. B." Henderson, Bailey, and Cureton.

Philomathean Literary Society

On the evening of the 19th of September the Philomatheans assembled in their hall for the first meeting of the year. After spending a very pleasant summer the men are all ready to begin the new year's work. The meeting was a most excellent and enjoyable one. At the very beginning the men performed their respective duties in a most creditable manner. A good example to follow.

The subject of the debate was: "Resolved, That the Monroe Doctrine should be abandonded." The affirmative was upheld by Messrs. Porter and Weldon, while the negative was debated by Messrs. Whilden and Clark. Excellent arguments were put forth by both sides and the debate as a whole was very good. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

The lone declaimer of the evening had a most excellent declamation and declaimed it well. W. H. Dendy will be an orator some day if he continues at his present gait.

The extemporizers were three in number. Mr. S. H. Edmunds, being the first, had a very timely subject and expounded his thoughts very well. His subject was "Beat Davidson or Bust." Mr. Milling, our second spokesman, related some harrowing tales of Camp McClellan, where some twenty unfortunate ones spent six weeks of the happiest moments of their lives? Our third speaker, Mr. Smith, had a good subject and spoke well.

The prospects in the Freshman class are very good. Some excellent material is contained in that class. We had a goodly number at our meeting and we hope to have more in the near future. We are delighted to have you, and you are most cordially welcomed.

In order to have a good society we must have the hearty cooperation of every member, willingness to perform his duties, a fraternity spirit and good conduct. We admonish and beseech every individual to strive to make this society the best in school. We have a good start—let's keep it up.

Blue Stockings Down Wildcats In Spectacular Game

Senior Class Guarantees Lyceum Course

Five of Redpath's Best Attractions Secured.

The Senior class has assumed the responsibility of a lyceum course for the coming season. The Redpath Bureau furnishes the talent, and five of their best attractions have been secured. Last year the Senior class promoted a course of the Alkahest Company, and the college and community were thereby benefitted.

Following in the footsteps of their illustrious predecessors the Seniors decided to promote a lyceum course again this year, and accordingly the contract for this course has been drawn up. The numbers selected are as follows: Coppy Picks, The Werno Quartet, Watkins, The Vierra Company of Hawaiians, and Alton Packard, the famous cartoonist. Dates have been arranged for the first three numbers, and will be announced soon.

An energetic drive for the sale of season tickets will soon be launched, and it is hoped that this will be an overwhelming success. All students are urged to purchase these tickets, as a good sum is thereby saved.

The Thornwell chapel has been secured as an auditorium and a full house is expected for each and every one of the attractions.

Euks Elect Officers To Fill Vacancies

New Men Initiated At Regular Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Eukosmian Literary Society did not experience the usual literary program, but on the other hand, a motion for new business, carried and so ordered, changed it to a busy hall of elections.

The offices of Conductor and First Monitor had been left vacant by men who had failed to return to school. Mr. Bomar and Mr. Pearce were elected conductor and first monitor respectively.

Having installed these two men, the society next turned its attention to the initiation of 25 new men. The Eukosmian feels as if it has secured men who will place the society far above the common level.

No further business came before the society and the meeting was adjourned.

Winning Cross Country Team

Many Men Out For Team This Year.

Two years ago when P. C.'s cross country team took first place in the state meet, P. C. students had an opportunity to be proud of their team, and they were. This year they are going to have the same opportunity, says Capt. Cureton, and what old Charlie says goes.

With the material out Capt. Cureton says that he will put out a winning team. He says all the men out are workers, and if it takes work to put out a winning team, he has it. Although handicapped with the loss of three men of last year's varsity team, our hopes are brighter than ever. Of last year's team we have Cherry, who all of us know to be a "clipper", and Cureton, that fast man of last year's team, and 1920 too, had not his ankle been sprained.

The five places on the team this year will be hotly contested for between the following men: Cureton, captain, Hunter, Belcher, Ussery, Brown, Cherry, Beckman, Seawright, Ramsay, Plexico, McMahan, Fuller, Sheldon, "Squirrel" Morrison, Whisonant and Weldon.

There are two months more in which to practice before the meet, and in this time these men will spend many an hour on the cinder path fighting for the glory of P. C. Boys, let's show them that we are behind them. Go out on the field sometime and encourage them. Let them know that they have your confidence and you will find nowhere a bunch of boys that will fight harder to regain the victory of 1920, and to write indelibly a page of victory in the history of 1922.

This year the annual track meet will be held in Clinton on Thanksgiving day, the same day as the P. C.-Newberry football game. So we have in store for Newberry that day, not one defeat, but two.

P. C.

The victim of a hold-up man gazed nervously down the barrel of a vicious looking Colt.

"Look out man," he jabbered, "that thing m-m-might go off!"

"Don't let that worry you," replied the stick-up, "there are five more bullets in the chamber."

Brother Rises Against Brother and Beats Him 8 to 7.

History was made in Clinton, S. C. on the afternoon of Sept. 29, 1922. Of course, ordinary history is being made, or is just happening, all the time; but this particular bit of the aforesaid history is not ordinary—it is extraordinary. Hence, it is worthy of note.

From out of the wilds of North Carolina, from the vicinity of Davidson College, to be specific, a horde of alleged bloodthirsty Wildcats burst forth on the memorable date. Their several and individual heads were set towards Clinton, S. C. The object of their quest was to tear asunder a number of Blue Stockings that had aroused their ire. But, alas! (a Davidson "alas"), the claws of Coach Grey's Davidson Wildcats were not numerous enough, nor were they strong enough, to tear Coach Walter A. Johnson's Blue Stockings. Indeed, what really happened is stranger than fiction. Eleven Blue Stockings first padded the hostile claws, then straightway, maliciously and revengefully, wrapped themselves around the throats of the aspiring Wildcats and caused to emit therefrom loud howls of submission. Perhaps "perspiring" would be a better word than "aspiring," for the visitors were constantly in "hot water."

Perhaps the reader has by now guessed that the writer is, by some roundabout way, trying to tell something that happened on the Presbyterian College gridiron last Friday. That is right, and a tremendous crowd saw what happened, too. The occasion was the annual P. C.-Davidson football game. Everyone knew that the game in question was to break a tie existing between the two institutions. Hence, interest ran high. By the time the rival captains had settled their respective goals, excitement on the side-lines was at fever-heat.

Then came the kick-off. P. C. kicked to Davidson. Everyone remembers the memorable struggle that ensued. Hence a general outline will suffice. The first quarter was largely a punting duel, with P. C. kicking dead against a strong wind. The ball went backward and forward, un-

P. C. To Tackle Gamecocks Twice

Games To Be Staged Friday and Saturday.

Doubtless by the time this comes from the press, two more encounters will have passed into history. On October 6th, Coach McMillan's young Blue Sox will tackle young Carolina chickens. The next day their older brothers, the Blue Stockings, under the leadership of Walter Johnson, will proceed to pluck feathers, more or less leisurely, from the full grown Roosters of Carolina. Both battles are to take place in Columbia.

Coach McMillan has been working his Freshmen hard in preparation for their initial struggle. His charges appear eager for the fray, but are, as yet, an unknown quantity. However, they are going to give a good account of themselves, as Blue Sox should. Lonnie McMillan and Brockington, Carolina Freshman coach, were for a number of years rival ends. This is the first experience of each in grooming Freshman teams, hence the struggle should be interesting from that standpoint.

Coach Johnson has had his Blue Stockings hard at work since the Davidson fracas. The morale of the squad is excellent, the vim, dash, and spirit exhibited in scrimmage, is something beautiful to behold. As the tale will doubtless be told ere these lines reach the public eye, speculation in these columns is useless. Suffice it to say that when the tale is told it will not be discreitdable to Walter Johnson & Company.

C. E. Entertains College Students

New Men See Social Side of the Society.

On the evening of Saturday, September 23rd, the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church delightfully entertained its members and the entire P. C. student body. The social was held out on the church lawn, lighted by the silvery glow of the harvest moon, and the harmony of rippling laughter, cheerfulness, and probably the sighs of a large number that attended.

Big Demonstration After Davidson Game

Spectacular "Shirt Tail" Parade By Side Line Supporters.

On the night of September 29, after the Davidson game, a ghostly looking column of white clad figures might have been seen moving inperfect time down Broad street.

But for the fact that they were not masked, and were anything else but silent, these men might have been taken for the Ku Klux Klansmen. The garments which looked suspiciously like breeches snowed from under their flowing robes, and they raised from time to time in their enthusiasm an unearthly din.

You have guessed it. They were not klansmen, nor were they yet members of some wierd fraternal order, but they were the men, who during the game held down so well the side lines. They were the loyal sons of P. C., who tho they had rooted their throats sore during the game, yet had enough pep left to stage a good old-time "shirt-tail" parade.

Marching down Broad street, they entered the Thornwell campus and cheered the fair family at the Home of Peace. Then down street they went and congregated about the Confederate monument they again let the P. C. grid warriors know that their work was appreciated. Leaving there they held a big snake-dance around the square, went thru the moving picture show, and broke up on the outside.

Who says P. C. has lost her pep?

Aesir Holds Attractive Function

Hall of Vikings the Scene of Mirth and Merriment.

On the evening of Friday, September 22nd, the Aesir club held its first social for the school year. There was a coterie of beautiful women present who lent charm to the occasion. The walls of the Aesir room were soon ringing with the laughter of the happy young people.

When the guests had arrived, all joined in a pleasant season of conversation, which was made the merrier by the music of our old friend, Victrola. Each wanted to tell the pleasant experi-

Good work, team! Great "pep" sidelines!

We are patiently awaiting Dr. Douglas' definition of the Flapper.

P. C.

The back-bone of Summer might be broken, but he's still living and doing well.

P. C.

No wonder things seem dead—the Student Council hasn't met this year.

P. C.

And we haven't heard a single Senior making plans for a double life!

P. C.

Times have changed!!!!!

P. C.

"Football Star Marries," headline. Well he's started a game that isn't played in fifteen minute quarters with time to rest between halves.

P. C.

And what's more, the penalty for calling time out in this game is starvation.

P. C.

The result of the Davidson game stages a come-back for P. C. It proves to any of the athletic fans who may have lost faith in us last year that P. C. is still on the map. In 1920 P. C. made a record that astounded the state, and gave her the name of "The Centre of South Carolina." With less than a hundred and fifty students to recruit a team from, Coach Johnson put out a team which lost only one game, and was admitted by all who saw it to have outplayed in that one.

Then in 1921 came a "hard luck" year, and tho P. C. fought as she has always fought, the "jinks" rode for the whole season on the Garnet and Blue.

But now that old "jinks" is gone, vanished, vamoosed! And the friends of the Blue Stockings are rejoicing wherever men love clean, hard football.

While this paper is being struck from the printing press, our men are even now fighting hard for old P. C. on the Carolina field. May the result be even more satisfactory than that of the 29th of September.

P. C.

Those of us who have been at P. C. for three years will all agree that P. C. spirit is bigger and better this year than it has ever been.

Not that the P. C. men have not always loved their school and pulled for her. But now all are pulling in the same direction, consequently the said pulling is stronger and much more concentrated.

In former years there was a certain amount of factionalism existing which cannot now be discovered. There were party lines drawn, even in our comparatively small student body. And college politics were not unknown.

Tho we hold that every man did what he thought best for the interests of his college, many diverse views existed, and there was a time in the not so far distant past when bitter feelings, and rankling grudges were all too familiar.

But now those seem to be a thing of the past. Of course, it is only human and natural that there should be personal likes and dislikes, and that some men should take one view and some another. Yet in what beautiful harmony we now pull together. Ancient fueds are forgotten, party lines have disappeared, and that grand old P. C. spirit of fraternity, co-operation, and love for our college, always present has at last burst forth in all its brilliance announcing the dawn of a new era for P. C.

But, gentlemen, while we have it here, let's keep it. Let us never again allow a time to come when there will be wranglings and bickerings, strife and discord. Let it ever be said of P. C. that there is still a college where God is worshipped, womanhood is reverenced, and college spirit is preserved.

ALUMNI NOTES

The Davidson-P. C. game brought back to the campus members from every class since 1900. From every town in the state and from many of the adjoining states, P. C. alumni came to see P. C. uphold the record she has had for many years. We are always glad to see you, Alumni. It makes us feel that you are with us.

Among the last week's visitors were. Dr. W. R. Wallace, James Key, "Pat" Johnson, T. O. McKeown, and Dr. R. E. Abel, of Chester, S. C.; Messrs. F. E. Clinton, A. B. Stallworth, B. McFadden, and R. S. Mr. George B. Bobo is professor of French and History at Harrison-Chilhowel Institute, Seymour, Tenn.

Mr. Herbert Crawford is teaching at LaGrange graded school, LaGrange, Ga.

Mr. J. T. McDonald, '22, of the Mountain School for the Blind, St. Louis, Mo., writes us that the girls are running over him.

Prof. John O'Daniel, '22, of the Fayetteville, N. C., high school, writes us that teaching is a snap.

Mr. J. M. Dick, '22, is doing mission work in Weston, W. Va. He will enter the seminary at Alexandria in 1923.

Mr. W. G. Stewart, '22, is teaching at Lake View, S. C.

Pi Kappa Alphas Give Social

Enjoyable Affair In Honor Of Davidson Guests.

A very delightful party was enjoyed by a large number of merry-makers in the Pi Kappa Alpha hall on the 29th. The main purpose of the social was the entertainment of the Davidson pikers who came down for the game, and it was greatly regretted that the visitors could not stay with us. However, enthusiasm ran high from the beginning to the end. Music and conversation were enjoyed by all. The charming chaperons for the occasion were Mrs. Hunter and Miss Jenson. Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake, candy and punch, were served. On account of the dance at the country club the merriment ceased about ten-thirty, but the couples seemed loath to leave. With the tune of "Kiss Mamma, Kiss Papa," still ringing in their ears, the guests reluctantly departed, all attesting to a wonderful time.

Be It Ever So Humble

Corporal Stepp—Get in line there! Don't you know where you belong?

Private Kearns (bursting into tears)—Yes, I belong at home.

Then Came the Barage

Talkative Barber—Do you want me to go over the top?

Dan Stewart—Yes, after you finish your gas attack.

Quantity Production

Jones—Gosh! I'm outa luck now.

Norman—How come?

Jones—I told my girl I admired her chin, and derned if she didn't grow another one.

Presto!

Barrett—Show me something cheap in a straw hat.

Anniston Clerk—Here's the hat. Look in the mirror.

In the Mess Hall

Private: Hey, Vick, get us some more bull.

Vick (on K. P.): Here it is. Grab it and growl.

A Whole Army of Them

Joyner—Look out. That aviator is going to drop a bomb.

Frank Baker—Naw, he isn't. There are too many bums here already.

A Higher-Up

Dougherty—They tell me that Big Dick Bostian has gone into uplift work.

Young—Yes, his favorite expression is, "I'll raise you one."

Private Parker (truding in dust): It'll have to swing d—n low to get me now.

Before We Came To Camp

Before we came to camp, our class
Was entertained for days
With endless bunk and tons of gas
Of pleasant camp-life ways.
They painted up in colors gay
The pleasant mountain tramp,
And how three months we'd like to stay—
Before we came to camp.

They said that every single night
We'd have free movie shows,
And week-ends we would have the right
To wear our Sunday clothes.
They told us every girl we'd meet
Would be a social vamp
Who'd win us by her manners sweet—
Before we came to camp.

They said we'd have the evenings off
For rest or work or play,
And that with every sneeze or cough
We'd drill no more that day.
And when we wrote our girl the news
They'd hand each man a stamp,
While husky porters shined our shoes—
Before we came to camp.

They said we'd have so many cooks
We'd have no more K. P.,
While all the corners, jams, and nooks
Would have ice cream and tea.
And from this store the cook would steal
And hand to us, the scamp,
The things we like for every meal—
Before we came to camp.

And when the range we went to find,
Each squad would have a truck,
With mules and niggers close behind
To help, in case we stuck.
While every tent would be supplied
A big electric lamp,
But now we know somebody lied—
Before we came to camp!

You Never Can Tell

By James J. Montague

When we read in the papers last winter
That skirts would be shortly worn long,
Restricting the ease of the feminine knees,
We thought that the papers were wrong.
"Now woman has tasted of freedom,"
We said with a wiseacre smile;
"No more she'll consent that her ankles be pent
In the garments demanded by style."

We talked in this fatuous fashion
To ladies we met now and then,
And they all of them vowed they would never be cowed
By modes that were made by mere men.
They said they would rather have comfort
And dress in a rational way,
Than to hobble their toes in the smartest of clothes
That are worn in the Rue de la Paix.

"We women have captured the ballot;
We have learned to do just as we please;
No longer," said they, "are we bound to obey
The dressmaker's stupid decrees.
We know that short skirts are becoming
They are easy and graceful to wear,
And they're going to stay as you see them today,
In spite of all Paris. So there!"

Some day we will learn about women
(If we live to a hundred) we hope,
But at present we find that the feminine mind
Is past our poor power to dope.
We wandered all over the city
Observing the fashions last night
For block after block, and we got a rude shock,
For never a knee was in sight!

There's Really Nothing Left To Wait For

In the last few seasons, as far as clothes buying was concerned, lots of men preferred to wait—for various reasons.

Some waited for lower prices---others for newer ideas---still others for particular patterns or weaves.

Right now, there's really nothing left to wait for---all the things you have waited for are here---you'll see that when you look at our fall stocks.

Prices are likely to go up before they go down---a great many new ideas are developed in our Alco and Fashion Park Clothes---and you haven't ever viewed a finer assortment of patterns than we are now showing.

CLIPPINGS FROM THE FILE

An Irishman working for a Hebrew asked for an increase in pay. The Hebrew replied: "If you are worth it, I would be pleased to give it to you. Now, let us see what you do in a year, Pat.

"We have 365 days in a year; you sleep 8 hours every day, which makes 122 days you sleep, taken from 365 days leaves 243. Now you have 8 hours' recreation every day which makes 122 days taken from 243 days leaves 121 days. We have 52 Sundays in a year which you have off, leaving you 69 days. You have 14 days' vacation; take this off and you have 55 days left. You don't work Saturday afternoons; this makes 26 days in a year. Take this off and you have 29 days left. Now, Pat, you allow 1½ hours for meals, which totals in a year 28 days. Take this off and you have 1 day left. I always give you Yom Kipper off, so I ask you, Pat, if you are entitled to a raise?"

Pat then answered: "Well, what the hell have I been doing, then?"—Industrial Collegian.

FOOLING HERSELF

By Strickland Gillilan

Whom do you fool, little girl, little girl,
With your cheek's false blush and your hair's false curl?
Whom do you fool with your penciled brows
And your neckless--almost waistless--boluse?
Whom do you fool with your skirts so brief
As to bring to our mind Eve's fig-tree leaf?
Do you think that you have fooled the modern youth?
He, too, is blase, and he knows the truth.

Whom do you lure with your vampish glance?
Is it age you fool? Why there's not a chance!
Don't you know that the rouge on your face and lips
Is as plain as the points in a minstrel's quips?
Has it never occurred to your foolish brain
Have you never known that the YOU beneath
Shines plain as day from your chemic sheath?

There is one that you fool, little girl, little girl;
There is one whose head you have set awhirl.
There is one, just one, in the world not wise
To the work you do with your shape and eyes.
There is one, just one, who doesn't know
You attract the least when the most you show.
The rest of us know you through and through—
The only one that is fooled is YOU. —Clemson Tiger.

Doctor Declares That a Real Kiss Is the Best Killer of Germs.

Dr. Simon Louis Katzoff, A. M., M. D., physician and psychologist, says: "Some bacteriologists would have us carry around a jugfull of carbolic acid or other germicide to wash our lips before kissing. They forget that heat is the greatest antiseptic known, and that the heat generated by a kiss destroys the supposed germs. Among sweethearts, kissing sends forth ethereal and hypnotic waves, traveling with great velocity, electrifying and rejuvenating every cell structure of the body so that next to love itself, it becomes the most potent agency for courage, optimism, hope, health, and longevity."—Clemson Tiger.

P. C. Lads Led Merry Life At Camp McClellan

Men From Christian Homes Wage War on Chiggers and Reds.

The Presbyterian contingent of Reserve Officers Training corp cadets, which won such signal honors for P. C., led quite a merry life while in sunny Alabama.

The military side of camp life has been discussed so thoroughly, that in this article it is our intention to tell something of the pleasures of a soldier's life in the torrid zone. Camp McClellan is situated in Alabama, to be more exact still, near Anniston, Ala. Anniston is a mining and iron smelting town. After going thru one of the foundaries there every one of the R. O. T. C. boys agreed to go faithfully to Sunday school for the rest of their natural lives.

When the P. C. lads arrived at camp they were each given a suit of clay colored bed-ticking, and a gun which looked as if it had been dropped by accident into a petrolium well, also they were introduced to slum, spuds and bevo. Slum, spuds and bevo were served always at supper. Dinner consisted of bevo, spuds and slum, and breakfast presented an attractive array of spuds, slum, with black coffee substituted for the bevo.

Soon it was found that the Reds, a savage Tennessee tribe, threatened to exterminate the R. O. T. C. boys, and therefore, it was deemed expedient to keep up a continual fire in the direction of Bain gap in order to keep the vandals out. The chiggers, another species of Reds, also infested the Choecoloceo mountains, but upon the arrival of the P. C. cadets, left said mountains and infested the cadets.

There was in camp a detachment of the 29th Infantry, consisting of Privates Walker and Tucker (for point of joke see H. E. Montgomery) both of whom were in the habit of being careless with ball ammunition. Finally this regiment defeated once and for all the craven Reds who troubled us no more. Both the inhabitants of Anniston came out to see the battle.

The inspector found a match stem on the company street upon one occasion and had to be taken to the base hospital. At the latest report he had not yet recovered.

The P. C. boys lived with the rest of the R. O. T. C. men in tents the color of the bride of Wm. Hung Lo, the Chinese laundryman. Their principal function was to absorb and prevent the entrance what little breeze Alabama afforded.

The men from the Christian institution were quartered with the Mississippi A. and M. cadets, who proved to be the best of fellows.

After a period of six weeks had elapsed the men were informed that their pay had been reduced from a dollar to seventy cents per day, and that they might go home. Strange to say the ungrateful wretches got mad and left camp.

But tho they went thru many harrowing experiences the fellows all agree that they would not take anything for their experience.

May next year's unit at camp enjoy as pleasant a summer.

Harding is My Shepherd

(Clipped from a colored Baptist paper and sent in to the Blue Stocking by Herbert (Count) Crawford, '22.)

Harding is my shepherd, and I am in want.
He maketh me to lie down on park benches.
He leadeth me beside the soup houses.
He restoreth my doubt in the Republican party.
He leadeth me in the paths of destruction for his own sake.
I do fear evil for thou art against me.
Thy police and thy profiteers they do frighten me.
Thou preparest a reduction of wages before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my income with taxes, my expenses runneth over;
Surely poverty and unemployment shall follow me all the days of thy administration, and I shall dwell in a rented house forever.

Cinder Path?

Segt. Hoban—Why are you running so fast?

Shag Johnson—I was afraid I was going to be late for sick report.

Courtesy and Modesty

The old South has long since been dead, and only a faint memory of it now remains in the minds of men. There are among us just a few old men and old women who lived in it, suffered for it, and still intensely love it. But they are fast passing on, and in a few years will all be gone, and then none will be left to revere it.

The world would be infiintely better off, and life would be sweeter and happier, if some of the things that lived in the Old South would never die. It had many high and holy customs in the daily life of its children, but its chief glory was the gentle courtesy of its men, and the sweet modesty of its women. Its men each day were gentlemen in the noblest sense, and its women each day were modest in the holiest sense. Reverence for sacred things, respect for age, polished urbanity of manner, sweetness of temper, and deep, abiding, pure homage for woman, were the ineffaceable qualities of the minds and hearts of the men of those days. And the women, in the finest and holiest sense, were worthy of the men. They held in their characters, and deep in their souls, that sweet modesty which is the ineffaceable glory of pure woman. The brazen look, the painted face, the indecenst dress, were as impossible for the women of the Old South as they are for the angels of heaven.

And they ought to be impossible among us today. Somebody ought to teach some of our young women about the finer and happier things of life they are missing. Immodesty in the woman will always attract the eyes of the man, as it always has, in all the history of the world, but it never has, and never will, attract his heart. It may obtain his attention, but it never will obtain his respect. The woman who is immodest, places an impassable gulf between herself and the respect and affection of a real gentleman.

The finest and noblest quality in a true man lies dormant in his mind and heart, and can only be brought to life and activity by a modest woman. The highest and holiest usefulness and happiness of a true woman can never be obtained in this life or in the life to come, unless she succeeds in awakening this thing that lies dormant in the man.

God has linked courtesy and modesty together, just as He has linked the destiny of the man and the woman together. When modesty dies, courtesy dies also. When there are in this world no more modest women, there will then be in this world no more gentlemen.

There ought to be preached in the pulpits and taught in the schools, and above all, lived in the homes, a revival of the old-fashioned courtesy and modesty of the Old South. If our boys are not to be courteous any more and our girls are not to be modest any more, then most of the hope and the happiness of life are gone.—By John D. Mell of Georgia, in The Christian Index.

Tales of Abou Ben Blowhard

The Parable of Kahmet the Careless and Ishmeal the Ignorant.

(First published in the "Camp McClellan Courier" of July 15, 1922.)

And it came to pass in the days of the President who loved poodle dogs that upon occasion there arose certain youths out of the land, and girded up their loins, and repaired unto a land far distant where the sun shineth, and heateth the earth to great heat.

Now upon their arrival these youths were conducted to a place where many men were encamped; and their raiment was siezed and buried in moth-balls; and they were given in lieu thereof khaki garments and the weapons of war.

And among the youths of the camp were two, Kahmet the Careless, and Ishmael the Ignorant.

And they were given even both of them a weapon filled with an ointment unctious unto itself. And lo! it did grease garments. And Kahmet the Careless did clean his gun well; but lo! he left it to lie in the company street at night, so that when the morning sun arose, the mist was deep upon it, but this he heeded not.

Ishmael the Ignorant knew naught of the art of cleaning his rifle, but he went unto the Captain of the Guard who instructed him in the cleansing secrets. And when Ishmael the Ignorant had finished it he had it not to do again; but lo! the gun of Kahmet was rusted in the morning, and he was forced to scrape upon it for many spare hours.

And when the morning was again come, lo! Kahmet arose and left his couch in an untidy condition, and thereby did lower the standard of his company; but Ishmael the Ignorant saw someone else arranging his, and he did likewise arrange his own, and was in nowise harmed. But unto Kahmet were many demerits given.

And when the seventh day was come, Kahmet the Careless journeyed unto the neighboring city, but Ishmeal remained behind and attended a voluntary; naught of good he received thereby, but may the gods of war excuse him, inasmuch as he was ignorant.

And Kahmet the Careless left many matches strewn upon the floor of his tent, and while he was gone unto the city, lo! one of the many inspectors made his rounds, and when he saw the match stems he did rend his garments, and swear a mighty oath, and also did instruct the Sergeant to place the name of Kahmet upon his list.

And when these two youths had first come to camp, Ishmeal the Ignorant knew not a Sergeant from a Captain of the Guard, or a mighty Major from a corpulent Colonel. But with observation he soon learned the difference, and received but few bawlings-out.

But Kahmet the Careless thought he know all things well, therefore he bothered not himselw to observe. And behold! one day Kahmet the Careless was placed upon K. P. duty. Now there entered the mess-hall a Major. Kahmet smiled, saluted him not, and spake thus: "Come in, Captain," and he offered him a cigarette. And lo! the guards siezed him and he was cast into the outer darkness of the guardhouse where there was wailing and gnashing of teeth.

Now these two youths went with their company and repaired themselves to the rifle-range. Ishmeal the Ignorant aimed full well at the target, but slew instead a swine across the mountain-side. And the next time he aimed he barely missed the foot of Kahmet the Careless who was coaching him at his right hand.

And lo! the Captain of the Guard admonished Ishmeal the Ignorant, saying unto him: "Thou fool! knowest thou not that thou mayest slay us all? Now return thou from off the parapet, lest thine Uncle Samuel be forced to bear the cost of thine interment."

So Ishmeal the Ignorant sorrowfully wended his way back to the fifth order and brooded there in silence, but even there he harkened to the voice of the instructor and heeded well his words.

However, Kahmet the Careless went unto the line and smote the bull's eye every time; but because of such skillful action as this, his head did swell, and he become cock-sure unto himself.

And on the day when came the final contest, the hour of record fire, Ishmeal the Ignorant smote the eye of the bull every shot save a few; for even though ignorant, yet could he learn.

But Kahmet the Careless was not careful of his aim, and shot a score that did seem only "fair." But worse than this, even did he keep his gun bolt closed all the time. And lo! the Captain of the Guard did see him and so bawl him out that poor Kahmet feared lest the ground should open and swallow him. And he did say: "By the beard of the ancient prophet thou art an ass; get thou back behind the line lest I get angry and smite thee, and thou diest. Thou knowest that I care not if thou shootest thyself, and by such action bless mankind, but thou mayest also kill someone who might prove to be a man of worth." Thus Kahmet was made so afraid that when he returned to shoot again he missed that target, and behold! he qualified not!

And he was exceeding sorrowful, and he lifted up his voice and wept, and indeed did loudly lament, and did blame all upon the rifle.

And he swore many oaths and did rend his garments in twain, and he was forced to have them repaired at the tailor shop. And lo! the tailor charged him many sheckles therefor.

And behold there came a great deluge, and Ishmeal the Ignorant loosed the ropes of his tent, because he heeded the voice of his instructor. But Kahmet the Careless did not, and when the rain was ceased, lo! Kahmet's tent was on the ground, but Ishmeal's was standing as solid as a loaf of army bread.

And Kahmet the Careless was wet, and angry, and went unto the tent of his friend, Ishmeal the Ignorant, saying unto him: "Behold, I am wet; lend thou me a change of garments." Then said Ishmeal, "Hast thou no dry garments? Where is thy laundry for which thine Uncle Samuel hath paid eighty-two pence per week for thee?"

"Behold, I forgot to send it in," sadly replied Kahmet the Careless.

"And why hast thou such a swollen lip?" asked Ishmeal.

"I heeded not the voice of the instructor, and that accursed gun waxed ferocious against me."

And lo! there was a great inspection, and the inspector came unto Kahmet the Careless and said unto him, after fruitlessly searching his pack, "My son, where are the toilet articles which thou shoudest have; thy razor, thy tooth-brush, and thy sundry other things?"

And Kahmet the Careless opened his mouth and said: "Er-er-er," which is, being interpreted, "Oh! I forgot them." Thereupon was Kahmet bitterly admonished, and forced to remain in camp on the seventh day of the week, since he was so careless.

Moral: He who knoweth all, loseth all; but he who knoweth that he hath a head of putty hath great wisdom.

"Yes, mamma," he replied, "but I walked backwards all the way, so I don't think anyone noticed it!"

Blue Stockings Down Wildcats In Spectacular Game

til, near the end of the quarter it was the Blue Stockings' ball on their 15-yard line. A misunderstood signal caused Hindman to be forced to kick on the spur of the moment. The kick was thus blocked and it was Davidson's ball almost at P. C.'s goal line. Even then it took four healthy tries to shove over a touchdown.

But the Blue Stockings came back strong. They rushed the Wildcats back, causing then to score a safety. The locals were threatening the visitors' goal again when the half was up.

Score: Davidson 7, P. C. 2.

In the third quarter, P. C. scored the winning touchdown. Hindman made a beautiful 80-yard punt, and Mason downed Davidson in his tracks on his 5-yard line. Davidson punted short and it was P. C.'s ball, with a net advance of 50 yards by the exchange of punts. Then a beautiful pass, Hindman to Wilson, scored the touchdown. From then on it was evident that the game was won. Final score: P. C. 8, Davidson 7.

The features of the game were the excellent Blue Stocking team work and the rooting. Coach Walter Johnson's efficient tutoring showed up splendidly in the magnificent manner in which his charges carried out their complicated system of play. The line worked splendidly, and the lightening backfield took advantage of every "break." The cheer leaders performed nobly, the Work of Scott being especially notable. They kept up a constant roar of cheer and enthusiasm from the Blue Stocking side-lines. It is not hard to win games when such co-ordination exists between the side-lines and team. So, keep it up, fellows!

P. C. made nine first downs gainst Davidson's seven; gaind 716 yards from scrimmage gainst 500 for Davidson; P. C.'s reight averaged 154 pounds gainst 166 pounds. Hindman averaged 40 yards on punts, Shepherd 33. For the locals, Jack Wilson gained 69 yards from scrimmage, Pearce 46, Moore 37, and Hindman 4. Hindman, quarterback, carried the ball only twice, each time over center. End runs seemed to net more ground for the locals than did straight line plays. Forward passes gained 40 yards against Davidson's 27-yard gain via the aerial route.

Taken all in all, it was a glorious game and a splendid victory. Line up:

ences of the summer which he had gone through, but there was a feeling in the heart of every boy that he was really glad to be back at P. C. once again.

After a period of conversation ice cream and cake were served, which was enjoyed by all.

The refreshments being served a happy period of rook playing was entered upon. Those who did not play rook amused themselves in various ways, some talking and some listening to the music.

The time for parting came entirely too early. The boys were loath to say good-bye to their Clinton and Laurens friends who had given them such a pleasant evening.

The Aesir wishes to thank Mrs. Hunter for her kindness, not only in chaperoning, but for the assistance which she gave us in making our social evening a success. We love to call on her because she lends her assistance so graciously. We were also proud to have as special guests, Coach Johnson and Miss Elise Spencer.

All pleasant things come to an end sooner than we hope for and the hour for breaking up came before we knew it. Every one went away saying that they had a pleasant evening.

The following is a list of those who were present: W. L. Hicklin, Miss "Monk" Gray; "Hub" Dunlap, Miss Rosa Gray; J. E. Raffield, Miss Eloise Clardy; M. A. Macdonald, Mrs. Myrtle Hunter; W. R. Anderson, Miss Sara Saxon; C. J. Milling, Miss Elizabeth Lynn; W. D. McMurray, Miss Marie Cosby; D. F. Kirven, Miss Annie E. Hatton; H. L. Laws, Miss Wall; A. H. Simpson, Miss Elizabeth Young; P. H. Philomathean Literary Society

On the evening of the 3rd of October, the Philomatheans assembled in their hall for the second meeting of the present scholastic year. This meeting was one of keen interest to the old men, due to the fact that a goodly number of new material was added to our depleted ranks. Twenty-nine Freshmen went through the ordeal of "riding the goat" and it is hoped that others will take advantage of that privilege.

The society opened with chaplain services and a very spirited debate followed. The issue discussed was that of the Bonus bill. The affirmative was upheld by Messrs. Dendy and Holloday, the latter being called from the house; while the negative was discussed by Messrs. Mayes and Edmunds. Both sides had good points and debated them very well. However, the offirmative had the best argument all thru the debate and the judges decided in the favor.

The extemperaneous speeches were three in number and they all chose timely subjects and discussed them in fine style. Current events were very good.

Let it be hoped that the new men will take advantages of their "golden opportunities" and learn to be orators and public speakers. All the men manifested a spirit of interest and enthusiasm towards the work so far, and it is hoped that this will continue throughout the year.

Let us all get the real Philomathean spirit which means work, punctuality, efficiency and co-operation, thereby making this the best society in school.

Delightful Party at Home of Peace

New Students Are Welcomed To Thornwell's Hospitable Halls.

The evening of September 23 was one of great moment to those of the P. C. students, both new and old, who were so fortunate as to attend the Home of Peace function. As is always the case, everybody had a most delightful time, especially the rats, many of whom visited P. C.'s sister institution for the first time.

A vigilant and energetic entertainment committee insured an introduction to as many of the fair hostesses as possible, tho it must be confessed this committee had a hard time persuading some of the guests to keep on the move.

Delightful refrshments consisting of punch and fancy crackers were served in the spacious hall, and the laughter of merry voices blended everywhere with the gentle sound of sweetly whispered words.

Songs were sung by a goodly number of guests who congregated around the piano in the sitting room, and merry indeed went the party till all too soon the time for leave-taking arrived.

Hats off to the Thornwell girls, and may they soon "do so again."

Joyous conversation was participated in by all throughout the evening, with the possible exception of some who more enjoyed the delights of blissful silence.

Things were kept moving by the ever active changing committee, who sometimes, it must be admitted, became quite a nuisance.

During the latter part of the evening delicious cakes and refreshing lemonade were served.

With resolutions anew of Christian Endeavor work for the coming year, the delighted guests were dismissed with the singing of a hymn, and the Mizpah Benediction.

Blue Stockings Fight Tiger To Standstill

Only To Meet Defeat In Last Two Minutes.

Six days after their encounter with the Carolina Gamecocks, Coach Johnson and his plucky squad of Blue Stockinged gridiron experts invaded Tigertown in quest of none other than the widely heralded Clemson Tiger. Find him they did, and for 58 minutes, more or less, these game hunters clad in Blue Stockings entertained themselves gleefully in twisting that spinal prolongation sometimes and rarely called the tail of the Tigor. Much delight was derived also from the fierce roars of pain and indignation that the Tiger uttered at such rank treatment in his own lair. That the lads of Walter Johnson really twisted the characteristic Tiger appendage for the aforesaid length of time is vouched for in the fact that during said space of time "Doc" Stewart's huskies gained barely three first downs, while the Johnsonites amassed the significant number of eight, not one of which resulted, directly or indirectly, from a forward pass. That the passes did not figure in, however, is not due to the efforts of the Tiger.

But, no matter how pleasant a discussion of 58 minutes of the game might be to the ears of P. C. backers, the tale of the final two minutes must be told. And the final two minutes upset all the good work resulting from the initial and major space of time. Dame Fortune—known locally by the fond name Dame Illfortune—combined with some beautiful passwork on the part of the Clemson Tigers enabled the Tiger to push over a longed for, prayed for, and very much worked for, touchdown. Then that old hag, Dame Hard Luck, stepped on the scene and appropriated a Presbyterian forward pass to the exclusive use of the Tiger, which pass the Tiger maliciously and joyously converted into another touchdown, with the end of the game a bare 20 seconds away.

After battling Clemson valiantly for almost four periods the Presbyterians went down in 13-0 defeat at the claws of the Clemson Tiger, the two winning counters being scored in the concluding seconds of a noble struggle.

As in the Carolina game, the Blue Stockings faced practically the same line-up that defeated them 34-0 in 1921. Neverthe-

Blue Sox Lost To Young Gamecocks

First Game of Season Results In Defeat.

The initial game for the Blue Sox was played on the Carolina athletic field two weeks ago, and after a hard fight for the pigskin, the Blue Sox were forced to yield to the Gamecocks by a score of 6-0. The game was played on a wet field and during the latter part of the third quarter it commenced to rain, which was against the Blue Sox, who depended on their end runs to a large extent. The game was a good one, both teams being in fine shape for a first game.

During the first quarter the ball was in P. C.'s possession most of the time and twice was Carolina's goal threatened. First after a series of end runs by Clinton, one of which netted 25 yards, onther netting 27 yards, this brought the ball to Carolina's 17-yard line, but here the wet field presented itself as an obstacle and a forward pass attempted by the Blue Sox slipped from the thrower's hand and was grounded. The ball went to the Gamecocks on downs, but the strong defense of the Blue Sox line soon forced the Gamecocks to punt. Once again the Blue Sox took the ball down the field to the 12-yard line, but this time they were unable to gain and the ball went to the Gamecocks on downs.

The second quarter was taken up in punting, neither side being able to gain through the other's line, and the end runs attempted by both sides proved fatal. Thus ended the second quarter with hte score 0-0.

The third quarter began by Robinson kicking to Boatright on the 30-yar dline, who returned 15 yards. Then by a long series of line bucks and end runs with "Jazzy" Weeks carrying the ball, came the lone touchdown of the game. It was in this series of line bucks that Campbell, P. C.'s Texas lad, showed the Gamecocks what a Texas bull looked like.

The fourth quarter was mostly a punters' battle, neither side being able to many any substantial gains, and the game ended with the score 6-0.

Thus ended the initial game of the Blue Sox—beaten?—no—for no one could say that P. C. had been beaten if they had first seen Carolina. Losers?—no—for they came off the field with as much as they went on with.

In Memoriam

MRS. D. J. BRIMM

BORN NOVEMBER 1, 1861
DIED OCTOBER 20, 1922

Mrs. Brimm was Miss Mary Elizabeth Muller before her marriage. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Muller.

Born in Columbia, S. C., on November 1, 1861, she was a member of the first class to graduate from what is now Winthrop College.

She was married August 2, 1893, in Columbia.

A consecrated Christian, and a most devoted wife and mother. For years an enthusiastic and tireless member of the First Presbyterian Church.

The heartfelt sympathy of the Student Body of the Presbyterian College is extended to her loved ones in the hour of their great trial.

Once a Blue Stocking Always a Blue Stocking

Three Former P. C. Men Refuse To Play In Carolina Game.

Never was the truth of this statement more forcefully brought home than in a certain episode in connection with the P. C.-Carolina game. Three men, as a consequence, are now possessers of a higher place in the regards and affections of all P. C. men, Hewitt Fulton, Marshal Woodson and "Hap" Neville, all P. C. stars who graduated in '19, and now taking post-graduate work at the University. Lured by their instinctive love for the grand old game, these boys are candidates for the Carolina varsity football game.

Each is a product of Walter Johnson's master hand. Each would be a star on a football team composed of stars. No one knows this fact better than does every P. C. man who has ever known Fulton, Woodson and Neville. Hence the question: Are these boys going to play against their Alma Mater, against the Coach who developed them, against some men who were actual team-mates of theirs?

Each of these boys had a problem to solve. Each loved the game for its own sake; each

Blue Sox Win Game From Little Terriers

Little Wofford Terriers Beaten By a Score of 7-0.

In a very spectacular game of football played last Friday, the Little Terriers were defeated by the P. C. Blue Sox.

Coach McMillan's blood-thirsty Blue Sox, after suffering a defeat at Carolina, went to Wofford determined to capture the pigskin, even if they had to take the pig and all, and they did it. The Terriers were quite sure that they would win, and were banking strong on their heavy line, of which the center alone weighs 210 pounds.

The game began by Captain Robinson kicking to Wofford. The Terriers were soon convinced of the strength of the combatants who held them for downs, and they were forced to punt. The Blue Sox then put forth their utmost and made two end runs, with Clinton carrying the ball, one of which was for 25 yards, the other 27 yards, placing the ball on Wofford's one-yard line. Copeland took the ball over for the touchdown. Robinson kicked goal. The rest of the quarter was spent in punting.

The second quarter was also a punters' battle, neither side making any remarkable gains.

In the third quarter Wofford opened up with some long end runs which netted considerable gain, placing the ball on P. C.'s 5-yard line, but once again the Blue Sox held them for downs and the ball was punted out to safety only to be again returned to P. C.'s five-yard line, but this time also the line held and Rucker threw them for a loss and so ended the third quarter.

During the fourth quarter the ball changed hands frequently, and during the last half Wofford opened up with some passes, which netted a few yards. This brought the ball to P. C.'s 30-yard line, and here the game ended, the score remaining 7-0.

The features of the game were the excellent Blue Sox teamwork, especially the good interference on end runs. Coach McMillan's efficient coaching showed up splendidly in the magnificent manner in which his men performed. The line-up:

Wofford	P. C.

Blue Stockings Almost Trounce Gamecocks

Put Up Brilliant Fight But Lose To Gamecocks.

Out-weighed many pounds to the man, out-scored by one lone touchdown, the Blue Stockings met the Carolina Gamecocks in Columbia on October 7, and were not out-played, out-classed, or out-fought. On the contrary Walter Johnson's plucky little team of bantams fought the big roosters blow for blow, tit for tat, and an equal something for everything. It was only by the will of that exceedingly fickle Dame Fortune that the Presbyterians were not able to put up touchdown for touchdown. Entering that game with the knowledge that all alleged experts predicted a sweeping Carolina victory, that they were face to face with the same team, practically, that beat them 48-0 in 1921, that all odds were against them, the Sons of Calvin girt their loins and fought so nobly and stubbornly that they left the Gamecock battered and dazed, thanking the gods of Destiny that he was so lucky as to escape with a 7-0 victory. In addition, Walter Johnson and his lads won a lasting place in the hearts of sportlovers for being the pluckiest, gamest aggregation that ever trod a gridiron.

We do not attempt to detract from the credit due the Gamecocks. They won their victory after 35 yards of straight line-smashing. Nevertheless, we still hold to our contention that those same 35 yards were the hardest and stiffest proposition ever encountered by a Carolina eleven. The big man fought a noble fight, the little man fought back at the big man as only a plucky little man can fight.

After the usual warming up preliminaries, Carolina kicked off to P. C. The first part of the game was a feeling-out, kicking duel with the P. C. quarterback, Hindman, having slightly the better of the argument. The exchange of punts put the ball deep in Gamecock territory. Finally it was P. C.'s ball on Carolina's 35-yard line. A Blue Stocking fumbled on the first play, whereupon Jack Wilson strutted his stuff. Recovering the fumble, the speedy, rabbit-like halfback ran, squirmed, wriggled, side-stepped, shimmied, and with other motions indicative of an accomplished dancer, paced off 20 yards in spite of the Gamecock's effort to pro-

Tho defeated at the last moment of play in the Clemson game, the Blue Stockings still have the respect and admiration of not only their opponents but also of all men who love the game.

With less than two hundred men to draw from P. C. has a team that is a foeman worthy of the steel of any aggregation. P. C. has always had a fighting team, made up of clean, gentlemanly sportsmen, men who are good losers as well as good winners. And we predict that for the rest of the season they will have the privilege of exercising the graces of a good winner.

The Blue Sox are not to be forgotten either. Those rats are true to the precepts taught them by their elder brothers. They know how to fight a hard game. They know how to lose gracefully; and what is equally as important, they know how to win gracefully.

Ere again we go to press another game will be history. And needless to say that the team which made the Gamecocks tremble, and the Tigers quake, will have carried off the honors at Greenwood by the time this paper is read.

The Blue Stocking wishes to thank those of its alumni who have subscribed. We appreciate every bit of support from our old men. If all the alumni would come across as you have done we would have no difficulty in making something out of the only college publication in the state of South Carolina which is still a bi-weekly. There is just one thing more you can do, alumni subscribers, to help us. We have prayed, petitioned, coaxed, cajoled, dingled, bootlicked and otherwise harassed the alumni to subscribe. We can do no more. We haven't even got funds to send them another dun around. So, if you, faithful alumni subscribers as soon as you read this, will wipe the tear from your eye, and sobbingly beseech some other alumnus to fork over, we will be forever indebted to you.

P. C.

The money thrown away by students each month would easily pay for the entire lyceum course for the whole year. Now of course, the money you throw away is entirely your own affair. But what we are worrying about is just this: Don't put up the excuse that you can't afford to buy a lyceum ticket when you are blowing in more money than what one costs every week. The Juniors who have just received their R. O. T. C. checks at least should have the money ready to dig up as soon as called upon to do so. And the rest of the students if they are behind the Senior class can borrow the "dough."

This is not purely a "charity" cause—you receive high-class entertainment at much less than it is actually worth. In fact, the numbers secured for the course come to us below their usual price, owing to the fact that Clinton is a stop-over on the route of most of them. Add the admission to all the entertainments and you will find that you are receiving a very considerable reduction.

Back the Seniors, boost the Lyceum, and enjoy good shows.

A rather fussy lady got into the smoking compartment of a train by mistake and sat down beside a weather-beaten old sailor. The sailor took out his pipe, filled it anl started to smoke.

The lady stood it as long as possible and then turned to the old salt with an icy stare and said: "Sir, smoking always makes me sick."

The old man contemplated her for a moment and then said: "Well, ma'am, if that's the way it affects you, I think I would cut it out if I were you."

First Censor: "Mr. R. W. Montgomery reported for not being recognized by president."

BOTH TEAMS RETURN WITH HONORS

The games of Oct. 19, were played too late for an extended write up in this issue. However results are too good to wait till the issue of Nov. 4th. to publish them.

Varsity 19—Erskine 0
Freshmen 7—Davidson 0

Despite the fact that Hindman was unable to play the team showed splendid form, and Montgomery proved to be an able general. We trust that the best quarterback of the state will soon be able again to lead his men to victory.

The Debating Club

Probably some may wonder why the Debating Club has been keeping so quite this year and has not come out with any elaborate write-ups in The Blue Stocking. Well, there could be a number of reasons for this apparent reserve. It might be that the club was ashamed to tell how little it was doing, or that it felt that it was doing so much that it should not make the other college activities feel badly by publishing any account of its wonderful achievements, or it might have been various and sundry other reasons. The truth of the matter is it seems to believe in the old adage which says in thought that those who say the least do the most. Whether such is the case or not, time alone can prove, and we trust that she will render her decision in the affirmative.

Laying aside some of that reserve, if such it be, it may be well for the club to divulge some of its secrets, at least to tell just a little of what it really has been doing at P. C. this year.

To begin with, a considerable number of freshmen have demonstrated their interest in debating by identifying themselves with the club. With the old members of the club from last year, and the new men, the club now has approximately thirty-five men. Much spirit has been shown in this department of college activities and it is to be hoped that even greater things than the most optimistic can now think will be accomplished this year.

The last meeting, October 9th, is an illustration of the way in which the old and new men are entering into the work of the club. There has hardly been more spirit shown in any debate on the campus this year than was shown by the men taking part in the debate of last Monday evening.

The question for discussion was: "Resolved, That the major powers of the world should cancel their war debts." On the affirmative, Messrs. Keller, Hardwick and Boozer, demonstrated their enthusiastic forensic talents. Mr. Hardwick, if one may have the use of a football term, starred for his team, while on the negative, Messrs. Hodges, Barnado and McCaskill showed a like amount of ability in the way they handled their premises and conclusions. Throughout the whole debate much real enthusiasm was shown on both sides and the men are to be commended for the showing made, especially the new men who are debating, some of them, for the first time. Keep it up—that is the way debaters are made.

Last year the club was given the authority by the student body to arrange for intercollegiate debates. As all the old men know, the regular Varsity and Freshmen debates were held with Wofford and Newberry, also a duel debate with Erskine. These same debates will be held again this year, and in addition to them the club has already arranged one or two other debates, and is going to make arrangements for still others if such plans can be completed.

Now for a matter which more vitally affects the whole student body, whether members of the debating club or not. To have intercollegiate debates there must be debaters. Of course all are eligible for these places of honor, and for the benefit of the new men might be added that here is a great opporunity for them to come in on some worthy intercollegiate contests.

Don't forget these debates, men; keep them in one corner of your brain, and when the time comes for the tryout be on the job and let's show all the colleges we go up against on the forensic platform this year that P. C. not only plays football, but also walks off the rostrum carrying her laurels in debating contests.

Delightful Reception Given At Chicora

P. C.'s Sister College Entertains Gamecocks and Blue Stockings.

A most enjoyable reception was given in Chicora's spacious reception halls to the P. C. boys who attended the Carolina games. Many of the Carolina boys were also invited, and a goodly number of Seminoles, as the Seminary boys are called by our sisters.

Attractive flowers everywhere greeted the gaze, tho their beauty was diminished by the loveliness of the fair hostesses. Soft silvery music floated thru the air from several secluded corners, blended with the music of rippling laughter, and half uttered sighs.

Delicious fruit punch was served from immense punch bowls and it was all the fair ones who served it could do to keep up with the demand.

After an hour and a half of delightful conversation, the lights were observed to wink, the only trouble being that they didn't stay off long enough. To the unitiated be it explained that this signal means departure.

Therefore, a sad farewell was taken, and lingeringly, by twos and threes and small groups the Blue Stockings, Gamecocks and Seminoles, took their departure, all declaring that they had had the time of their lives.

Fair sisters of ours, do so again.

In the last few seasons, as far as clothes buying was concerned, lots of men preferred to wait—for various reasons.

Some waited for lower prices---others for newer ideas---still others for particular patterns or weaves.

Right now, there's really nothing left to wait for---all the things you have waited for are here---you'll see that when you look at our fall stocks.

Prices are likely to go up before they go down---a great many new ideas are developed in our Alco and Fashion Park Clothes---and you haven't ever viewed a finer assortment of patterns than we are now showing.

Lady Clara, Bare So Bare

(Due apologies to Alfred Lord Tennyson)

By Ivan Awfulkoff

Lady Clara, Bare, so Bare,
  Flapper far and wide renowned;
You thought that I would fall for you,
  That I was but a sleek tea-hound.
At me you becked, but unbedecked
  I saw you stand, and I withdrew,
I'll have you not, nor any yet
  Of your licentious, brazen crew.

Lady Clara, Bare so Bare
  Some covering I beseech you to take,
Some clothes would much improve your looks,
  I tell you this for your own sake.
Nor would I do, if I were you
  So much to make me what I ain't.
A simple maiden in her flower,
  Is worth a hundred coats of paint.

Lady Clara, Bare so Bare
  I'd think that you would be afraid
That when your tea-hounds hunt a wife
  That you'll be left, a poor old maid.
Oh! I will grant that you can chant
  A thousand vulgar, jazzy, hits,
That you can dance in drunken crowds
  With trombone players throwing fits.

Lady Clara, Bare so Bare
  I'll grant you are a reg'lar vamp
I'll grant that you can drink a pail
  Of contraband, and not feel damp.
I have no doubt that you can shout
  Profanity in sixteen tongues;
That with the smoke of Turkish pills
  You fill your poor and harmless lungs.

Lady Clara, Bare so Bare
  Your favorite pastime is to park
With some poor simp whom you entice
  To sit beside you in the dark.
Howe'er it be it seems to me
  That you could find a better sport
Than taking foolish kiddies in
  And forcing them to pay you court.

Lady Clara, Bare so Bare
  You wear the least the law allows
If you continue going thus
  You will pronounce no marriage vows.
For don't you know the more you show
  They lose respect for one so bold.
It's neither modest nor refined.
  And then besides you might catch cold.

Eukosmian Literary Society

On October 17, the Eukosmian Literary Society held its regular meeting.

The meeting of the society opened with chaplin services by Mr. G. R. O'Daniel.

Before the program for the night was read the following Freshmen were initiated: J. W. White, Blalock, Brunson and Campbell.

The program for the night was read. On account of there not being a sufficient number of the debaters present there was no debate.

The extemporizers of the evening were: R. L. Morrison, W. B. Warren, S. B. Hayes and P. H. Bomar.

An open meeting of the society was discussed, both as to the date and whether it would be of a serious or humorous nature. A committee was appointed by the president to fix the date and get up a program suitable for the occasion. The committee was as follows: Messrs. D. L. Williamson, chairman, J. G. Miller, T. D. Wallace and F. C. LaMotte.

The preliminary oratorical contest and also the different debates were discussed. As many men as possible are urged to take part in each contest.

Repairs for the hall was discussed. The conductor was ordered by the president to fix the seats and also to buy electric lights.

After the report of the first and second monitors, the president exhorted the old men as well as freshmen, to treat the work of the society with more seriousness, and also that better order must be kept in the hall.

Therefore, it behooves every member of the society to cooperate with the officers and make our society the best one in the college.

With the single exception of the University of South Carolina, the Presbyterian College of South Carolina is as good as any school in the state—and perhaps a wee bit better. It's little but loud, and has an all-round coach, a school spirit and a get-up-and-get that are unexcelled anywhere. Here's the best of luck to our P. C. friends for the rest of the year—as being a fine bunch of men from a school that turns out good sports.

Every College Has One Or More Like Him

Glenn Keith, Disappointed In Park, Returns to His Parents

This article is taken verbatum from the "Cass County Democrat."

"James P. Keith motored to Parkvile last week, and brought his son Glenn to his home here from Park College. Glenn had entered the college expecting to take the four years work there, but one week was all he could stand. He states that conditions at the college are very disagreeable, and that the students are leaving, now after one week of it, on every train. The students who board in the college are not given enough to eat, and the freshmen are at the complete mercy of the sophomores. When a sophomore order was posted that all freshies were either to have their hair short clipped each week, or else let it grow long and 'bob' it like a girl's. Glenn balked, and his return home was the result. Mrs. Keith and Glenn went to Warrensburg last Tuesday morning to make arrangements for Glenn to enter the State Teachers' College for the coming year."

From records in the Dean's office, this is the only case of a student voluntarily leaving Park College during the first month of school; students who leave do so by request. He states that students boarding in the college are not given enough to eat. Would you starve on this—roast-beef, gravy, potatoes, peas, asparagus on toast, cabbage, salad, and apricot ice? This is one meal chosen at random from the Park College menu. Perhaps we do not cook like "mama does" but some cases are on record of students having gained as much as twenty-five pounds in three months. In order to keep the freshies from being late to morning prayers the upper-classmen deemed it wise and profitable not to allow the freshies' hair to exceed three inches. Why? They would spend too much time adorning themselves. If "dear little Glenn" was on the campus Monday night, September eighteenth, he got his hair bobbed, but we'll venture to say, that it was not "a la girls." We rejoice to know that Glenn is once more tied to his "mama's apron strings," and that he is safe and happy in that safe retreat.

Tales of Abou Ben Blowhard

The Sad Narrative Related By Mahoound el Minna.

Now it came to pass that in the year the good Tomwatson died, that the youth Hassan the Hideous arose and departed from the house of his father, taking with him all the spare shekkles which his sire possessed.

Now Hassan was young and had had naught of experience so he desired to learn whatsoever he could of the ways of the world and he sought information of all men whom he met, even of beggars and of great men. He asked advice of street sweepers, and of scribes, of publicans and of dervishes, yea, even of all alike did he seek knowledge.

And it came to pass that on a certain day that he did journey along the road that he saw by the wayside a beggar who beought him for alms. "Tell me thy story," said Hassan, and I shall give thee a gold dinar." "Gladly will I tell thee all, most beneficent one," said the beggar. So Hassan seated himself upon a log and this is the tale which the beggar told him, here faithfully transcribed.

"Know thou, Oh! youth, that I was not always a beggar. My name is Mahound el Minna, and my father's house is honored in the city of my birth. I inherited much riches of my father and a goodly share of land and goods. Then I sold a portion of mine inheritance and took the money and journeyed forth in search of learning. And lo! I came unto a college and there abode for the space of six weeks, and made me many friends. But alas! one day I was forgetful, and did a kindness to an aged instructor of the college. And when evening was come the students siezed me and spake thus unto me: 'Thou hast been seen O! Mahound, in thy devlish devices. Thou hast been caught in the act of plucking the berries from the dingle-tree. Knewest thou not that the dingle-tree is sacred, and that it's berries are not to be touched?' Then was my raiment torn in pieces by the angry rabble, and I was cast out from their midst and ordered never to return.

"Then sad of heart I betook me to another school where I soon established myself in comfort and was beginning to believe I was settled when lo! I made another fatal mistake. Know thou O! Hassan that in those days the kingdom provided each student with a uniform and certain farthings each day for military training. Well, one day in a thoughtless mood I donned mine uniform and wore it to the house of worship. And indeed it looked better than my other raiment, and it was a cold day, and the uniform was of a richer material, and I but wore it to keep me warm. But that was no excuse. 'Thou shouldest have worn raiment of tweeds, O! Mahound,' said the students, 'and thou shouldest have allowed thy trousers to have broken thrice over thy sandals, and pinned up thy turban in front, but lo! thou hast worn thine uniform to the house of worship. For this thou shalt surely die.' Then they set me astride a rail and took me to the gates of the city and stoned me with stones and left me for dead.

"But behold! I recovered, and when my wounds were healed I went again to yet another college. And there I prospered in mine lessons, and great was my success, and lo! I thought that all would be well with me until one day my evil fate again took hold upon me."

"And what, O! unfortunate man, didst thou do to provoke the wrath of thy fellow students this time?" asked young Hassan.

"Lo! I went to a barber and in a thrice accursed moment I instructed him to cut the hair from off my temples," replied Mahound el Minna, the beggar.

"Then I was siezed and sorely beaten and was cast into outer darkness, and never more did I seek learning, but squandered all mine inheritance in riotous living. And now thou beholdest the place to which it has brought me."

Then Hassan arose from the log, and gave Mahound the dinar he had promised him, and he girded up his loins and departed, and when last seen his face was turned in the direction of Zululand.

Moral: The pen is mightier than the sword, but public opinion has got 'em both skinned a mile.

EXCHANGE DOPE

A number of exchanges have come in since the last issue of The Blue Stocking, among them several new ones. The Gamecock, one of the best college papers in the state, is up to its usual standard. The Technique is a live paper which keeps closely in touch with campus life. The Georgetonian would be better if it had more news and less advertisements. The Park Stylus is an excellent paper that is right on the job. Other exchanges which have been received are: The Industrial Collegian, The Spokesman, The Old Gold and Black, The Furman Hornet, The Brackety-Ack, The Critograph, The Maroon and Gold, The Darlingtonian, The Carlisle Bugle, and St. John's Bulletin. Several others are due but have not arrived.

realized that Carolina needed him. Yet, there was the fact that by yielding to the two former inpulses they would be pitted against their Alma Mater, their beloved Coach, and their old team-mates. Opposed to this was the possibility of their losing even a chance at a Carolina letter.

Every P. C. man knows what these former Blue Stocking athletes did. They forgot everything save their love for the Garnet and Blue, for their Alma Mater, and they refused to don a uniform when Presbyterian College clashed with the University of South Carolina. Such is college spirit to the highest degree.

Had these three Blue Stocking-Gamecocks done otherwise and played against their Alma Mater, P. C. students would have still had that high regard for the men, for they know that even as opponents to the Garnet and Blue, any ex-Blue Stockings would still have played with the same vim and spirit that characterized them in the past. However, P. C. loves the men who sacrificed so much for her.

Boys, hats off to Hewitt Fulton, Marshal Woodson and "Hap" Neville, typical P. C. men!

Philomathean Literary Society

The regular meeting of the Philomathean Literary Society was held Tuesday evening. The feature of the meeting was the keen interest taken in the work, both by the individuals on the program and all the members. The debate was a most excellent one indeed, and the remainder of the program was very good.

On the affirmative side were V. K. Bland, and C. J. Milling, while on the negative were Messrs. Leon Norton and H. E. Montgomery. The subject of discussion was: "Resolved, That the Unite dStates Should Subsidize the Merchant Marine." Both sides had excellent arguments and it proved to be a real battle of wits. The judges had the usual deliberation and after a thorough discussion, finally decided in favor of the affirmative.

The two declamations were very good and were delivered in such a manner as to reflect credit upon the declaimers and the society too.

The extemporaneous speeches were two in number, both of which were very good. Current events were very amusing and humorous indeed. However, they were very good.

After the constructive criticism of the critic, some new business and the reports of the various officers, the society was dismissed.

Blue Stockings Fight Tiger To Standstill

less, these lads, with spirit undaunted and showing the results of the master hand of a splendid coach, kept the Tiger at bay until heart-rending defeat nullified the splendid work of previous minutes.

Clemson kicked off to P. C. The ball see-sawed back and forth in a punting duel between Hindman and Turnipseed. On the first play in the second quarter, Pearce, the speedy Blue Stocking star, clipped off 15 yards on a left-end run, for the first first-down for either team. With the ball changing hands several times, the Blue Stockings negotiated three more first-downs before the end of the half. The Tiger was able to make only one during the half, that being the result of an intercepted pass.

To begin the third quarter, Clemson kicked off again. After an exchange of punts Hindman and Pearce negotiated first-down No. 5. Moore bucked 3 yards and Pearce completed first-down No. 6 by a beautiful 20-yard run around left end. Thereupon the rush was halted, and the Tiger retaliated with two successive first-downs, including a 25-yard run around end. The punting duel was resumed until Hindman completed first-down No. 7 by three successive line smashes netting 12 yards. Another exchange of punts. Clemson completed a 25-yard run as the result of a miraculously executed fake. Immediately after an attempted field goal, Hindman punted to mid-field. The ball worked back and forth. Then with about two minutes to play, the Tiger got desperate. He opened up a savage over-head attack. A pass netted 20 yards, another 9, and another nine. Then came a fifth long pass, beautiful but lucky, which netted the prayed-for touchdown. Turnipseed and Harmon negotiated the damage.

Clemson kicked off to P. C., a line play netted a few yards, a pass failed, then--oh! horrors!--the Goddess of Illfortune deliberately placed a Clemson end in a most advantageous position to intercept a pass, thence to add a lucky touchdown to the previously earned one.

The game ended after the ensuing kick-off.

It was a hard game to lose. But, as before, the Presbyterians covered themselves with glory even in defeat. They fought a strong foe as only Blue Stockings can fight. With that fact must they console themselves.

When it comes to picking the stars of the affray, the writer's pen balks. Doubtless there were outstanding men but from the Presbyterian stand-point, to name one, eleven must be named. It was a 11-man unit that fought the Tiger. However, Captain Clowney proved himself a capable leader of a noble eleven.

Pi Kappa Phi Entertains At Social

On the evening of Wednesday, October 11th, the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity gave its first social of the year in the form of a stag party. A number of Freshmen and several old boys were guests of the evening.

When the guests had arrived, all joined in telling of their experiences of the summer. Soon all thoughts of work had given way to laughter of the young people. The hall was made even merrier by the music of the faithful victrola.

After a pleasant period of conversation, fruits and smokes were passed around, after which all gathered at the card tables and played for quite a time.

Soon all left in a body for the theatre, where an interesting picture was enjoyed by every one.

The time for parting came too early but all left saying that they had had a very pleasant and enjobale evening.

The guests of the evening were: R. Adams, M. C. Berry, H. Clinton, A. W. Edwards, J. E. Ferguson, B. Fewell, G. M. Foxworth, S. N. Hughs, N. Hunter, B. F. Knowles, L. O. Lawton, T. M. Robinson, W. M. Sims, T. F. Wallace, J. W. White and C. Woodside.

hibit his so doing. It was a beautiful bit of running, and placed the Blue Stockings in a position to score. Moore bucked the line for substantial gains. It was P. C. first down on Carolina 14-yard line. Three line plays failed to produce the needed 10 yards, so Hindman shot a pass to Pearce, the said pass eluding Pearce by inches. It was a golden opportunity, and, had it been successful a touchdown would have happened. Carolina straightway breathed a deep breath of relief, and kicked out of danger. The remainder of the half was a see-saw affair. It was Carolina's ball in midfield as the half ended.

Early in the third period, the Gamecocks began their irrestible march to touchdown. P. C. put the ball in play on her 30-yard line. Three line bucks netted 9 yards. But the fourth effort was not conducive of the much desired linear measurement of distance commonly called the yard, so it was Carolina's ball on P. C.'s 39-yard line. Snipes, Sizemore, Holland, and Parler were seemingly inspired by evil intentions for they scored a touchdown after an uninterrupted super-human drive of 38 yards. The try-for-goal succeeded.

With one touchdown lead, the Gamecock breathed easier, though he had learned his lesson. He knew that the Blue Stockings fought till the last whistle, that the midget machine opposing him so stubbornly always carried a threat that inspired fear. Hence the Gamecock was uneasy till the time-keeper tooted that all danger was up. Then Carolina broke loose in a pandemonium of triumph. And well might they do so. For had not the Gamecock vanquished a valiant foe in a noteworthy struggle? For their part, the Blue Stockings took what comfort that they might from the fact that even in defeat they had won the highest praise by their pluck and gameness, and the fact that they never knew when they were whipped.

It is hard to select individual bright stars from a bright, magnificent constellation. The Blue Stocking constellation contained no sirius, no vega, no canopus. They were all stars of the greatest magnitude. However, the names of Mason, at end, Pearce and Wilson, halfbacks, Bomar and Williamson, are deserving of especial mention, if such a distinction can be made, for the teamwork was excellent. The line performed nobly on defense, and when a hole was desired they opened up the way for the feather-weight backfield.

Taken all in all, the Blue Stockings distinguished themselves for pluck and for being such a well-drilled machine, the credit for which, of course, belongs to our own Walter Johnson, coach incomparable, aided by Hugh Eichelberger, all-state tackle '19 and '20. Line-up:

VOLUME 4 PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, NOVEMBER 4, 1922 NUMBER 4

P. C. Triumphs Over Erskine Seceders

New Field General Proves Fully Capable.

The most brilliant game of the season yet played was staged at the Piedmont Fair grounds in Greenwood last week when the Blue Stocking aggregation defeated the Seceders of Erskine by a score of 19 to the goose egg.

About a week before the game our quarterback was taken sick and went home with a pain in his side, which later proved to be appendicitis, and there it was—the Erskine game hovering over us. What would we do? Our punter, our quarterback, and one of our pass throwers, all in one, were out. The night seemed dark, the sky was blue, the team was doubtful, when into the limelight walked a warrior so bold; he reached for the steering wheel, turned to the right, and drove the team over for three touchdowns. Hurrah for "Bone", a second "Bo" McMillan we have in him.

This was one of the most exciting as well as thrilling games ever played between P. C. and Erskine. Anyone not knowing Walter Johnson's two lightening midgets, would think they had gone wild, if they had seen them in this game. The larger of the two would flash thru the line and on the next play, the smaller would be seen darting around the end. One man expressed it thus: "I expected to see two little half-backs, but those are too little to be seen." The Erskine team tackled at them and they were not.

The terrific line plunging of Moore was astonishing and it

Thornwell Defeats Clinton High School

Light Clinton Team Puts Up Good Fight.

In a very interesting game of football played last Tuesday, the strong Orphanage eleven defeated the Clinton high school to the tune of 40 to 0. Altho, outweighed many pounds to the man, the plucky Clinton eleven put up a game fight and kept it up all through the game.

From the beginning to the end the ball was in possession of the Orphanage practically all the time. The small Clinton team was unable to hold in check the heavy backs of the Orphan-

Miss Lucy Bailey Gives Enjoyable Party

Hallowe'en Friloc Attended By Many P. C. Boys.

A most enjobale Hallowe'en frolic was given by Miss Lucy Bailey on last Friday evening at her home. Those of the college boys who were so fortunate as to attend all returned declaring that they could not have had a better time. The beautiful home was decorated with harvest designs and the ghostly reminders of the occasion. Goblins, black cats, and witches were everywhere. The fortune teller reigned supreme in her booth of cornstalks and predicted a bright future for all who came her way. The guests of the sterner sex gathered in the parlor and smoked and chatted until the ladies were announced, when the difficult task of selecting partners was commenced. Each fair guest was disguised as a fearful ghost, goblin, or bad spirit. After each lucky man had attached himself to one of the gruesome beings, all the guests gathered in the parlor where they listened enraptured to the blood-curdling yarns about evil spirits abroad in the land, clanking their chairs and frightening credulous folks out of their wits.

After this partners were changed, and new ones selected by the simple process of fishing for them. Then a delightful salad course was served, after which the guests promenaded about the spacious grounds, and enjoyed progressive conversation.

Hearty jest and ringing laughter attended the celebration of this ancient harvest festival, and all too soon the witching hour of midnight was past and goodbyes had to be said.

How delightful a relief from the burdensome duties of college lifs is a little feminine society. The P. C. men who were among those present owe the fair hostess thanks for a most enjoyable evening.

Results of Game

A detailed account of the P. C.—Wofford game, will be given in the next issue, as will also an account of the Freshman-Erskine game.

Owing to the fact that the "Blue Stocking" was already on the press only results can be here given:

"Cappy Ricks" Meets With Approval.

"Cappy Ricks," which was presented by a New York cast of the Redpath Bureau in the orphanage chapel on the evening of October 23rd, was attended by a large and appreciative audience. The parts were well played and each actor was suited for his part.

Laughter characterized the sentiment of the audience throughout the performance, and the play was met with the highest approval by all who were present. The knowledge of this fact was very gratifying to the Seniors, but not surprising, for you can bank on a good entertainment when it is sent out from this well known bureau.

The Seniors, through toil and worry, determination and optimism, have pulled through their would-be deficit in the expenses of the course. However they will receive no reward for their labor except the satisfaction of affording Clinton with a good Lyceum course.

Blue Sox Defeat Newberry Papooses

Little Indians Fight Hard But Are Outclassed.

In a most interesting and spectacular game of football played on the home field last Friday, the eleven stalwarth warriors of Coach McMillan completely and overwhelmingly defeated the youthful papooses from Newberry to the tune of 25-0.

The game began by Captain Robinson kicking to Newberry. The Papooses were soon convinced of the strength of the Blue Sox, but they were not able to halt the onrushing plunges of the P. C. backs. However, the score remained 0-0 at the end of the first quarter.

In the second quarter the Blue Sox manifested a different spirit, the result of which was three touchdowns. These were gained chiefly by end runs and tackle plays.

The third quarter was practically the same as the first. No remarkable plays being made and neither side scoring.

But in the fourth quarter another touchdown was scored, which was the result of Clinton's spectacular 85 yard run. When the whistle blew the ball

Davidson Again Defeated At Hands of P. C.

The Blue Stocking Freshmen won from the Davidson Freshmen 7-0 in a spectacular game at Rock Hill at the York County Fair grounds on October 19th. The game was witnessed by over a thousand people. It was an interesting game throughout.

P. C. kicked to Davidson, who received on the 30-yard line. They were held for three downs and then punted. Then the Blue Sox made two successive 20-yard gains and then held for two downs, they tried a pass. On the fourth down they kicked to Davidson's 10-yard line. Davidson punted and P. C. made a safety catch. Being held to only five yards, the pigskin went over to Davidson, who on the first down made a big gain, but afterwards being held they tried a pass which P. C. intercepted, and by a long end run gained considerable ground. End of first quarter.

In the second quarter P. C. punted after being held for three downs to Davidson's 20-yard line. On the first down Davidson was off-sides, and failing to gain through the Blue Sox line, they punted to the 30-yard line. P. C. punted on the third down. Davidson failing to gain and being penalized five yards for off-sides, punted. P. C. in return punted on second down. Davidson gaining seven yards in two downs and being penalized 15 yards for holding, punted to P. C's 50-yard line. Failing in a pass and an end run they punted to Davidson on 30-yard line. Davidson fumbled, made 2-yard gain and then kicked to 30-yard line. P. C. made a bad punt which they got on the five-yard line, but were held to no gains by the fighting Presbyterians of South Carolina. P. C. punted. Davidson tried two passes and then kicked to the 40-yard line.

Blue Stockings Withstand Bulldog Slashes

Citadel Cadets Are Defeated By Johnsonites.

Withstanding successfully the terrific efforts of the Citadel Bulldogs to unravel them, Walter Johnson's far-famed Blue Stockings demonstrated conclusively that Bulldogs themselves can be unraveled, for, by a process of unraveling or some similar process, the aforesaid Presbyterians extracted a 9-0 victory from the likewise aforesaid Bulldogs. In case anyone should wish to indict the valiant Presbyterians for so doing, be it said that the deed was committed in Charleston, S. C., October 28th, 1922, A. D. For the location of the committing of the deed obviously must be known for an indictment to ensue therefor. And the Blue Stockings did trounce the Bulldogs! You bet they did!

Walter Johnson's two flashes, Jack Wilson and Shorty Pearce, were too much for the Cadets. Nicknamed "Johnson's Rabbits" by one writer, these two lads lived up to their name for they led the Bulldogs a merry chase. They just could not be watched at the same time, the other would hop up from somewhere and reel off ten yards or so. Then that one would be watched and the other one would cause the Bulldog to gnash his teeth in vain.

Pearce and Wilson are two of the most wonderful half-backs in the South, there is no doubt about it. Everywhere they have gone they have performed brilliantly, consistently. They have proved that they can hold their own with big men, strong men, little men, and famous men.

The Reserve Officers Training Corp presents a source of financial assistance to students which is a great help in the Junior and Senior years. Students taking this work should remember however that only efficient men are promoted to the advance work.

The Unit at P. C. is as good as any in the South and better than any other in the Fourth Corp area, as was demonstrated at Camp McClellan this summer. But how long will it remain thus if the men in the basic department of the corp continue to imitate their primordial ancestors while their officers are attempting to teach them military movements?

Of course in any crowd of men, especially young men, there is bound to be a little fun, but there is no occasion to throw rocks when in the kindness of his heart the instructor gives the men a few minutes to rest. There is no occasion for men to indulge in boisterous and undue laughter whenever the slightest mistake is made, or to do everything possible to make an unsightly mob out of a well organized platoon.

The men who are counting on the financial assistance of the last two years are very likely to be disappointed if they do not think enough of the unit to behave themselves during the few minutes of physical culture, and the drill twice a week.

P. C.

The fifteen minutes spent every morning at physical training probably means more to the fortunate students who have the advantage of taking it than any other course in College. Few men realize until they are old and their health is gone how much they might have benefitted had they had the advantage of such a course.

The course is arranged so as to give a balanced physical training to the body, and to improve the coordination of the mind. The light calisthentic exercises give endurance and coordination. They harden up the muscles and put pep and vitality into the blood. The heavy slow exercises are the best known muscle-builders. A man's body is the best known apparatus for muscle-building, it is a set of weights, a lifting machine, and a powerful spring exerciser, all combined if used properly. With only the weight of his body to only the weight of his own body to work with, a man can develop almost superhuman muscles if only he has the grit, determination and stickability.

But on the other hand exercises which are gone thru sloppily, and without form are actually harmful. They destroy coordination, and create a listless and indifferent attitude which plays havoc with the muscles. For after all, the muscles are built largely by the brain. Tho of course "heaven helps those who help themselves," and you can't merely think yourself into being a powerful man.

But if every man realizes the value of the physical training period, and what he is throwing away when he does not take advantage of instruction along this line under Coach Johnson, there would be fewer weaklings and fewer boneheads in the Presbyterian College of South Carolina.

The ancient Jinx which rode the Garnet and Blue in every Citadel game for years past, is at last dead. At least he has received a cruel solar plexus blow.

For a while it seemed that no matter how good a team P. C. had they would go down before the onslaught of the Bulldogs, even after defeating much better teams. The thing was peculiar, it was incomprehensible, but it was nevertheless true—very true.

But finally the tide has turned, and we trust that if the above mentioned Jinx recovers he will sit for the next decade on the Bulldogs, for it is surely their turn now.

P. C.

The Blue Stocking staff wishes to thank all those who are not connected with the publication of this paper for their recent contributions. We always welcome with open arms any copy that chances to come to our desk. Would that more of it were available each fortnight. The College paper is as truly a College activity as football, glee club, debating work or any other line. And it is always open to contributions. True they are not always published, but of course the staff has to reserve the right to publish what it thinks best and sadly reject the rest. Then again, as unfortunately happened last issue, sometimes an item is accidentally lost or mislaid.

But don't be discouraged. Keep on trying; you may have something that will be greedily siezed upon by the students. Such things have happened. It is not very long now before the old staff will go out and a new one will be appointed. And right here let us drop a hint that the men usually appointed on a staff are men who have shown their stuff by handing in worthy contributions and otherwise helping the editors along.

You all know that old saying about a word to the wise, and so before next issue we hope to be overwhelmed with copy.

Tales of Abou Ben Blowhard

The Tale of Pashan the Pauper

In the days when the plague of weevils infested the land there dwelt in a certain poor house one Pashan the Pauper, who was known to be a mighty seer and spake many words of knowledge.

Now it came to pass that one day as Pashan sat upon the gate of the poor house, carving quaint figures from a corn stalk, and dangling his legs in the light of the sun, that he beheld from afar off a youth with a burden upon his back coming down the highway. And as he approached nearer Pashan beheld his face and lo he did look exceedingly tired, and the dust of his journey was heavy upon him. So Pashan took compassion upon him and besought him to rest awhile and he arose and fetched him a gourd of cold water from the well, and spake thus unto him: "O! youth, abide for but a little while, and tell me where thou goest; thou art exceeding tired and mayhap I can advise thee, and give thee words of wisdom that will help thee on thy journey."

"Right gladly will I rest my weary bones, and listen to thy wisdom, O! Sage," replied the youth, who was none other than Hassan the Hideous, of whose adventures with Mahound el Minna thou hast read aforetime. "My name is Hassan, and I am called the Hideous because of the frightful appearance of my mug, which beareth resemblance unto the fabled Missinglink. I journey forth in search of wisdom and am but lately come from Mahound el Minna the beggar, who told me of his adventures." "Ah!" exclaimed the aged Pashan as he bit a chew from his grimy plug, "Well knew I the good Mahound in the days of his youth. He was in the same place of learning with me, and where the Prophet defend me I later sent my son, which was mine undoing.

"Hearken thou, O! man of the uncouth countenance and I shall relate to thee a tale which will rival that of Mahound el Minna.

"My name is Pashan, and men call me Pashan the Pauper, but I was not always called the Pauper, nor have I dwelt all my life in this poor house. Know thou that in former years I was called Pashan the Prosperous. I possessed many goodly acres, and an untold number of swine, and many head of sheep, and fat kine grazed upon my green meadows. And my servants tilled the soil which yielded me rich reward. So great was my prosperity that my neighbors did envy me, and I was unjustly called Pashan the Proud.

"When a youth I had acquired learning at a college of learning, and wishing to do the right thing by my son I sent him when he was old enough to the same place. This, by the blade of Al Raschid, was the beginning of the end of my prosperity.

"No sooner had my son arrived at the college than he sent me an epistle demanding an hundred gold dinars the need for which he forgot to mention. I sent him the dinars, for my son was my one weak point, I could deny him naught. Then in the space of seven days the sages of the college wrote me beseeching that I send them a vast sum for books which my son needs must have to acquire learning. I sent the sum at once, for as yet my vast store was not affected. No sooner was the letter dispatched than there came another from my son saying that the raiment which I had given him was out of style and that he needed more. I sent him new raiment, but that he did leave in the hands of David the Pawnbroker, and with the money obtained did purchase a memory book and seven pennants of felt. When I learned of this I was exceeding wroth, and I smote my thigh and sware that he should go ragged for a season until that he should learn a lesson therefrom. But I soon relented and sent him another hundred dinars to purchase raiment. My son had not been away from home a month before I received an epistle saying that the Ethopian woman who washed his clothes had not been paid, and so I sent him fifty pieces of silver and told him to pay her, and to use the rest for what he needed it. Later I learned that he lost it throwing at cats at a carnival which was in the city. Then my son sent me a bill from the Simoleon Literary Society for the sum of ten sheckles, and lo! the same day there came a bill from the place of learning for the expenses of my son. Then I took my pen in hand and inscribed a letter to him asking him to cut down his expenses as the plague of weevils had already devoured the half of my substance. He answered me saying that in the third and fourth years of his stay at the college that his Uncle Samuel by name had promised to give him raiment and certain sheckles for service in the R. O. T. C., which being interpreted meaneth Run Over The Campus; and that then he would require less money. But in the same letter he beseeched me to send him five and twenty gazumahs, as he needed a tennis racket.

"This kept up until the third year when I put him in mind of the sheckles he was to receive from the R. O. T. C. 'Oh!', he replied to my inquiry, 'know thou that I have dropped that, my beloved sire, only the men of rough-necks take that after the second year.'

"Then did I rend my last garment, and heap ashes upon my hoary head, and I abode for three days in the shadow of the trash pile, for all my substance was gone." "And what of thy son, O! unhappy man," asked Hassan the Hideous. "He parcheth peanuts for a living," sadly replied Pashan the Pauper, as he gently laid his chew upon the top rail of the fence, and thoughtfully extracted a cigarette from the gold case of Hassan.

"At the end of the third day the elders of the city came and lifted up my face and brought me raiment and put me here in this poor house; and now I am called Pashan the Penniless."

So Hassan the Hideous arose much rested and thanked Pashan for his tale, and as he departed he gave the old man a talent of gold and a plug of Climax, the like of which the venerable man had not chewed since the days of his prosperity.

Moral: "There is only one man on record that succeeded in eating his cake and having it too, and he was seasick at the time."

Delightful Wienie Roast

Miss Anne E. Hatton was the charming hostess at a delightful wienie roast held at her home on Hallowe'en night. The picturesque grounds were decorated with jack o'lanterns, and weird owls lent their ghostly music to the occasion. A roaring fire of twigs was kindled, which soon crackled merrily, and added a ruddy glow to the countenances of the merrymakers. Around this fire gathered the guests, several of whom were P. C. men; each armed with a long stick to the end of which was attached one of those delectable morsels known as the hot dog. These were then roasted over the glowing coals and eaten, piping hot with a mustard spread roll. After the wienies came a marsh mallow course, the same fire being used in the preparation of the latter delicacy.

Then apples were passed around and even some of these were roasted, while others preferred theirs in the natural state. And let us not forget to mention the delicious bowl of punch to which the guests had frequent recourse.

After refreshments everybody sat around the cheerful blaze, and stories were told, and the music of merry laughter floated aloft with the showers of sparks which from time to time were induced by certain of the sterner guests to rise from the bed of coals.

All too soon came the hour of leavetaking, and reluctantly the party broke up, all declaring that they had had the time of their lives.

P. C.

Henry Brimm: "What's that noise back there in the library?"

Macfarlan: "Probably it's only the history repeating itself."

There's Really Nothing Left To Wait For

In the last few seasons, as far as clothes buying was concerned, lots of men preferred to wait—for various reasons.

Some waited for lower prices---others for newer ideas---still others for particular patterns or weaves.

Right now, there's really nothing left to wait for---all the things you have waited for are here---you'll see that when you look at our fall stocks.

Prices are likely to go up before they go down---a great many new ideas are developed in our Alco and Fashion Park Clothes---and you haven't ever viewed a finer assortment of patterns than we are now showing.

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
CLINTON, S. C.

College opened September 5th. The enrollment up to the present time is 189, the largest in the history of the College. It would reach 200 for the year if the students could be taken care of. All available space in the dormitories has been taken.

Capt. Ellison A. Smyth of Greenville, S. C., promised to give $25,000 toward the erection of a new dormitory if $50,000 more is raised. This dormitory, costing $75,000, will accomodate 100 additional students.

Everyone who loves the Presbyterian church and believes in Christian Education has a wonderful opportunity to do something for his church by making the erection of this dormitory possible. It can be filled with students as soon as it is built.

Students who are thinking of entering college next fall should write to the President early for catalog and literature and make all arrangements as soon as possible. The College will have more applications for next fall than it can take care of.

Success

Suppose success don't come at first,
What are you going to do?
Throw up the sponge and kick yourself
And growl and fret and stew?
You bet you ain't, you're goin' to fish—
And bait and bait again
Until success will bite your hook,
For grit is sure to win.
—Hornet.

Take Notice, Song Birds!

"I notice you are not singing in the choir any more."

"No, I quit when they found out what was the matter with it."—Technique.

Pep

Vigor, virility, vim and punch—that's pep;
The course to act on a sudden hunch—that's pep;
The nerve to tackle the hardest thing
With feet that climb and hands that cling,
And a head that never forgets to sing—
That's pep.

Sand and grit in a concrete base—that's pep;
A friendly smile on an honest face—that's pep;
The spirit that helps when another is down,
Knows how to scatter the blackest frown,
That loves its neighbors and boosts for its town—
That's pep.

To say "I will," for you know you can—that's pep;
To look for the best in every man—that's pep;
To meet each thundering knock-out blow
To come back with a laugh, because you know
That you'll get the best of the wide world's show—
That's pep.
—The Tiger

My Car

The Ford is my car,
I shall not want another.
It maketh me to lie down in wet places,
It soileth my clothes.
It leadeth me into deep waters.
It leadeth me into paths of ridicule for its name's sake.
It prepareth a breakdown for me in the presence of mine enemies.
Yea, though I run through the valleys,
I am towed up the hill.
I fear great evil when it is with me.
Its rods and its engine discomfort me.
It anointeth my face with oil,
Its tank runneth over.
Surely to goodness if this thing follows me all the days of my life I shall dwell in the house of the insane forever.
—Mercer Cluster.

He sits apart
The dance goes on
He looks with saddened gaze

EXCHANGE DOPE

Copies of the "Mercer Cluster," the "Brackety-Ack," the "Gamecock," the "Park Stylus," the Clemson "Tiger," the Furman "Hornet," the "Blue and Gray," the "Georgetonian," the "Technique," the "St. John's Bulletin," the "Maroon and Gold," the "Old Gold and Black," the "Darlingtonian," the "Rotunda," and the "Spokesman," have been received. But as yet the "Blue Stocking" has not received a single copy of the "Davidsonian," the "Richmond Collegian," the "Agonistic," or the "Emory Wheel." These papers are all members of the S. I. N. A. and are pledged to exchange with all other papers. Probably this is merely an oversight on the part of the staff. But as it is largely through the exchanges that we keep up with the news of the colleges, we request that this matter be attended to.

"The Maroon and Gold," a live paper, is up to its usual standard.

"The Park Stylus" is a splendidly balanced paper, combining with its news just the right amount of humor.

We have been reading with interest the poems of "Uncle Dudley" in the "Furman Hornet." Good work!

"The Technique" is an excellent paper in which the work done by the college is admirably set forth.

"The Gamecock" is a live paper from a live college. Of special interest are its editorials and its sport articles.

Eukosmian Literary Society

Eukosmian Literary Society held its regular meeting Tuesday night. The program consisted of Rats only, and it was one of the best meeting of the year, and it shows that there is good prospects of Society material in the Freshman Class. We think some of the upper classmen could learn lots from these freshman, as far as debating and declaiming go.

The debate was an excellant one considering that all the debaters were rats, and that it was their first time on the platform. The subject of the debate was: Resolved that the Parlimentary form of government would be better for the U. S. than the presidental form.

The Affirmative side of the question was upheld by Martin and Fountain, while their opponents Keller and Holland tried bravely to tear down all of their points. These men show promise of great debators, especially Martin, is going to make somebody work for the debating team.

The freshman class is also talented with good orators, as was shown when Sumerel gave us such an excellant oration at our last meeting. Last but no means least were the extemporizers, who also made some good talks, but they were too short, but we think the cause of this was stage fright, and we are sure this will be overcome by practice. The program as a whole was one of the best that has been held this year. Good work Rats. Keep it up.

The men are to be congratulated on their conduct of this meeting, while there is still lots of room for improvement, the con duct of this meeting was far superior to the preceeding meetings, and if is is improved as much accordingly, for the next two o rthree meetings we think it will be such that no one can complain of. Eukosmians, let us keep our society the best in the School, it can be done with every little effort on our part.

Pikers Entertain

On the night of Oct. 31, the Pi Kappa Alphas entertained a goodly number of Freshmen in their local fraternity hall. The crowd gathered at an early hour, but no time was lost in entering into the spirit of a "regular" time. While smoke rings curled gracefully upward, the guests laughed and joked as they played cards. Fruit, sandwiches, nuts, candy and punch were enjoyed by all.

The guests of the occasion were: Lawton, Simms, Edwards, Foxworth, Player, Brown, Moore, Ferguson, Campbell, Holland and Wolfe.

ALUMNI NOTES

C. K. Douglas, better known as "Doug", paid us a flying visit last Sunday.

M. A. Durant, or in other words, "Dury", was in Clinton on the same date, tho we must confess he spent very little time at the college.

P. W. Wilson, of the class of '20, was in Clinton recently and made a talk in chapel.

C. E. Piephoff was here for a few minutes the other day. He is looking well and is in fine spirits.

A. B. Godfrey paid a visit to Union recently to witness the Union-Thornwell game, and on his return to Honea Path stopped over in his home town.

We hear that G. W. Stuart is putting out a good football team in Lake View, S. C.

Herbert Crawford is hunting ducks in Strothers, S. C., and teaching school in his spare time.

THE DEBATING CLUB

It is always with a feeling of pride that the P. C. student views any activity of the college which is doing its part in holding up the standard of efficient work in the college. When he contemplates the work of the literary societies, he feels grieved at their errors and justly proud of their accomplishments. When he thinks over the part P. C. is playing in intercollegiate athletics, his heart leaps with a spirit of admiration for and gratitude to those "fighting" men who are bringing P. C. slowly but surely to the front in athletcs. He is justifiable in giving all the support he possibly can muster up to these worthy branches of college activities. They deserve every ounce of support he can give.

There are, however, other phases of training in the college in the way of college activities which are doing a good work toward putting P. C. in her proper location on the map of real colleges in the South. One of these phases of training is the Debating Club. A number of men are taking a great deal of interest in this work. Others are not apparently taking the work as seriously as they should, but as time goes on it is to be hoped that those few who may not realize the importance of thorough and conscientious work from week to week will get that same never-dying P. C. spirit that will force them to take their parts on the programs of the club in such a manner as to enable the club to meet the needs for which it was originally organized.

It is not to be inferred that the club is not now doing a wonderful work, in however quiet a manner it may be doing it. The last two meetings of the club have been really worth while not only to those who took part on the program, but also to those members of the club who were there to hear these debaters. It is true that some members of the club who were on the program missed a wonderful opportunity when they were absent from the meeting last Monday evening, but four members of the club were called from the house to fill the vacancies and the program was thus carried out very ably by the six men taking part in the debate.

The subject for discussion on Monday evening, October 30th, was, Resolved, That the states should receive financial aid from the federal government for their public school systems. The Affirmative, Messrs. Carson, Fountain and Clotfelter, gave very creditable discussions of the subject. The Negative, all three of whom were called from the house, Messrs. McLaurin, Perry, and Frost, demonstrated admirable ability as extemperaneous debaters. Every man on the debate is to be commended for the excellent showing he made. It is not the purpose of this article to give the impression that the members of the club are all finished debaters. It desires, however, to encourage, if possible, those who are taking the work seriously and to urge those few who perhaps may not be taking it as seriously as they should the importance of thorough preparation of every debate; for it is only through hard, conscientious work that anything can ever be accomplished in any branch of activity.

As has been mentioned in these columns before, authority has been vested in the Debating Club to handle the matter of inter-collegiate debates. The officers of the club are on the job. All arrangements for the annual Triangular Debate between Wofford, Newberry and P. C., have been completed and the debate will be held December 8th, the try-out to be held here next Monday evening, November 6. Several men have agreed to try for this debate and it is to be hoped that from this number of debaters four men will be selected who will win the debate for P. C. this year.

Other debates that have already been arranged for are: a debate to be held here on the P. C. campus some time next spring with Maryville College, Maryville, Tenn. In this debate P. C. is to have three men debate against three from Maryville. This will not, however, be a dual debate, as P. C. is not to send a team to Maryville. Then a dual debate has been arranged with Elon College, this debate also to be held some time next spring.

Preparations for a triangular debate which should be of unusual interest to men of P. C. are under way with Erskine and Davidson. It is to be hoped that all arrangements will be made in the near future for this debate. Men, these are "debating colleges" and P. C. will have to work in order to make a creditable showing with them, but SHE CAN DO IT!

At least one debate will be open to the Freshmen, that is the freshman triangular debate will very likely be arranged. So it is up to all the new men to take evrey opportunity afforded them in the societies to be preparing for these debates. For their information, there is an honorary fraternity in the college which anyone taking part in an intercollegiate debate or intercollegiate oritorical contest is entitled to join. This should be an incentive to every man to aspire to one of these places on P. C. debating teams.

P. C. Triumps Over Seceders

was with much regret that we saw him carried from the field.

The Seceders were clearly outclassed by the Blue Stockings' little team and the line could not be budged, and while Erskine is credited with four first downs, three of them resulted from penalties.

The first quarter opened in brilliant style by Miller kicking over the goal line. Six minutes after play began Moore scored the prayed-for touchdown by a drive over left tackle. The score from try after touchdown failed. P. C. made five first downs in this period.

The second period P. C. 6; Erskine 0.

By line plunging and short end runs the Seceders were driven back to their 13 yard line, where "Shorty" made a beautiful lateral pass to Joe Mason, which resulted in the second touchdown. The try after goal again failed. Thus ended the second period.

Neither side scored during the third period, but Erskine's eleven showed more team-work, taking the ball twice on downs. When the period ended the ball was in P. C.'s possession on the 13-yard line.

Early in the final period Pearce scored another touchdown for the Blue Stockings on a beautiful end run around left end, in which he did some fancy side-stepping. Wilson kicked goal, making the score 19 to 0. Both teams now opened up with forward passes, which resulted in gains for P. C., while Erskine's were grounded.

When it comes to picking the stars of this affray, the writer's pen balks. However, the shortest man in the Blue Stocking line up and the new field general deserve especial mention. The line proved itself as invincible as ever, and the line plunging of Moore and Wilson was remarkable. Captain Clowney proved himself a capable leader of a noble eleven. Line-up:

They can do more—they can hold their own against any-sized men, and then take some of the other fellow's. Against the Citadel these two midgets proved that a little man, possessed with speed, a quick-working brain, and endurance, can be more than a match for big men. They proved it against Davidson, Clemson, Carolina and Erskine, and they will prove it some more.

But nine other men helped these two stars to vanquish the Bulldogs. However, the team work was not so noticeable as in previous contests. Nevertheless, it was obviously there, and be it said that the Blue Stockings found eleven good men pitted against them. The Bulldogs fought with the traditional Citadel spirit. However, the better team won, the team that was the better coached and the team was the speedier.

P. C. kicked off to Citadel. The Bulldogs made a splendid return to the 40-yard line. He advanced 5 yards in two rushes, then fumbled, and it was P. C.'s ball in midfield. Jack Wilson misappropriated 10 yards over left tackle on the first play run by the Presbyterians. He fumbled on being tackled, but Captain Clowney recovered for a net 16-yard gain on one play. Two line bucks and a penalty netted another P. C. first down. Whereupon, Mr. Shorty Pearce counted off five chalk lines or 25 yards, more or less, carefully thru center. That planted the future Blue Stocking ball on the 4-yard line. Moore and Hindman negotiated for a touchdown in two line bucks. "Skinner's" trusty toe booted an extra point.

The remainder of the quarter the ball worked back and forth with the Blue Stockings having much the better of the argument. In the second period the Bulldogs attempted a pass in mid-field. Williamson intercepted same and returned by a devious route 20 yards before being downed. Two passes failed and the Bulldog line took the ball on downs on his 25-yard line. He was forced to punt. Pearce and Wilson soon recovered the ground gained on the punt. It was P. C.'s ball on Citadel's 8-yard line with goal to go. Three line plays failed to net 8 yards, so Hindman passed on the fourth down. Citadel knocked it down, but Williamson recovered it again and was downed six inches from goal. The ball went over and Citadel attempted to punt. Norton blocked his punt, but the Bulldog recovered behind his goal. Thus P. C. acquired a safety, making the score 9-0 for the Blue Stockings. That ended the scoring for the day.

The second half saw the ball change hands frequently. Pearce and Jack Wilson continued their irresistible gaining but the scoring punch was lacking. The Bulldog approached as close as the Blue Stocking 20-yard line, but that was all he could do. The game ended with Blue Stockings driving for a touchdown.

Laura Werno Ladies Quartet

Redpath Bureau to head her own company, the Laura Werno Ladies Quartet. Inspiration for the charming program of this company was found by Miss Werno in a number of interesting phases of American development.

The dress, manners, and songs of the Colonial period of the days of the War between the States, the early seventies, and of the Quakers are reproduced accurately and delightfully in a series of musical and dramatic episodes. As an introduction to each episode, Miss Werno presents an interpretative sketch that sets the stage, as it were, and creates the atmosphere here for the group of songs that follow. In this manner some of the choicest melodies from American song literature are featured in settings historically correct and musically artistic, the members of the company appearing in exquisite costumes that accurately mirror the times portrayed. Here is a masterpiece in program-building presented by a thoroughly picturesque and entertaining musical organization.

was on Newberry's 2-yard line.

It is practically impossible to star any particular individual, for eleven men performed in a creditable manner. However, the end runs of Copeland and Clinton and the broken field running of Robinson and the steady playing of Fountain and Rucker were the features.

For Newberry the two outstanding stars were the quarterback and right tackle. The Papooses were highly successful in their aerial attack, completing fifteen out of eighteen passes, substantial gains resulting from all of them.

Blue Sox Down Wild Kittens

End of first half.

P. C. received on 30-yard line. On the third down Copeland gained five yards, and then they kicked to the 40-yard line. Davidson gained through line on first down but were held for the second and third. Fourth down they made their ten. Then they made slight gains but were forced to punt. P. C. in return punted on third down and Davidson punted on their second. First down P. C. gained and then tried a pass which was intercepted by the Wild Kittens, who punted on first down to 50 yard line. On the second down Copeland gained again, but punted to 20-yard line. Davidson held for two downs punted to 25-yard line. The Blue Sox made no gains for three downs but on the fourth the glory of P. C. shone forth when a beautiful pass from Clinton to Copeland who crossed the goal that finally decided the victory. By a place kick Copeland made the score 7 to 0.

P. C. kicked to Davidson, who on their fourth down punted to P. C.'s 40-yard line. The Blue Sox made two successful gains. End of third quarter.

P. C. punted to Davidson, who failing in a pass and a line plunge punted to P. C. who returned a punt on the first down. Davidson made a 30 yard gain on first down. P. C. got ball. Copeland made gains. P. C. moved forward a great distance but tried a pass which Davidson intercepted. They tried two passes which failed and then punted to 30-yard line. P. C. gained once, lost twice and punted. It was Davidson's ball on the 30-yard line. They made a slight gain over the line and the whistle blew for the end of the game.

For Davidson, Baker, Black, and McDonald played excellent ball.

For P. C., Copeland anl Clinton displayed some brilliant work. The whole Blue Sox team is to be commended for their fine team-work.

age and they gained at will, both by end runs and line bucks. Then, too, the aerial attack of the Orphanage proved to be an excellent ground gainer.

The individual stars are hard to pick out. However, for Clinton, Witherspoon and Blakely played the best ball, while on the opposing side the whole team played as a unit, each man performing his respective part.

Thornwell has an excellent team and from all indications, the present dope points towards the fact that they will be in the race for State Championship, which they are very likely to win.

VOLUME 4 PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, NOVEMBER 18, 1922 NUMBER 5

Presbyterians Trim North Georgia Aggies

Dahlonega Smothered By Blue Stockings 67-0.

On Friday, November 10, the Blue Stockings went on a rampage into Georgia, met N. G. A. C. at Lavonia, Ga., and conquered N. G. A. C. at the same place.

Even though the Georgia Collegians lost the game to the Blue Stockings, the citizens of two Georgia communities won a brilliant victory. They won, completely, and for all time, the gratitude, affection, and appreciation of every member of the P. C. football squad who was fortunate enough to make the trip to Lavonia, Coach Johnson included and leading. Never were football players treated more cordially by strangers than were the Presbyterian College football men treated by the good citizens of Elberton, Ga., and Lavonia, Ga. This trip was the sixth time the Blue Stockings have played away from home this fall, and it proved to be the one most enjoyed by the squad as a whole.

The citizens of the above mentioned communities are natural entertainers. Stopping at Elberton merely as a railroad junction, the Blue Stockings soon found themselves showered with cheerful greetings and hospitality. The doors of Elberton were literally thrown wide to the P. C. boys, thanks to the efforts of Mr. Bates.

Then the Garnet and Blue gridironsters moved on to Lavonia as per schedule. But hospitality had preceded them, or else—which is more likely—was imbedded in this community,

Rejunevated Collegian To Make Its Debut

Editor-in-Chief Montgomery and Staf Report Radical Changes.

The 1922 Collegian, the magazine of the Presbyterian College, has been changed in shape, color, and form according to information that has leaked out of the Editorial and Managerial domain of Montgomery and Hindman, editor-in-chief and business manager respectively.

According to reports, the new Collegian has been changed from the old form to one twice as large. This size magazine is winning favor in all the literary circles of the colleges everywhere. To be sure it is a much more attractive publication than the old magazine which has said good-bye to the Presbyterian College forever so far as the present staff is concerned.

The cover of the new magazine embodies the true spirit of P. C. in the two color scheme of the Garnet and Blue. The Title "The Collegian" is printed in Garnet ink on a Blue back ground. The two colors used blend unusually well and the cover presents a thing possessing attractiveness.

As for the Literary productions that will appear from time to time in "The Collegian", the Editor-in-Chief is determined to select material that will be interesting reading for whoever might delve into its pages. Of course the Staff of the Literary Department is not supposed to do all the work by any manner of means and contributions are solicited and unless the Student Body takes it upon itself to make the Collegian a success by contributing, the Staff feels as if its efforts to make The New Collegian something to be proud of will be in vain.

Advertising Manager, J. J. Cornwell, advises that advertising is being secured more easily on account of the radical changes in the magazine. He is making it clear to every advertiser that the Student Body will help those who helps the Collegian. The Staff is anxious for all the men to stand behind the advertising manager to that extent. It is of interest to the advertisers to know that the circulation of the magazine is not limited to the student body alone. The Circulation department of the Magazine informs us that the circulation of each issue will be practically two hundred above the number that will be distributed among the stu-

Dr. Holt Lectures To College Students

Famous Lecturer Talks About "League of Nations."

On the evening of Wednesday, November 15, the people of Clinton had the pleasure of hearing one of the most interesting lecturers that has ever been heard on the "League of Nations." This lecture was delivered by the noted Dr. Hamilton Holt, formerly editor of the Outlook.

Dr. Holt is an ardent supporter of the League of Nations as advocated by Mr. Wilson, and a staunch advocate of the ideals and principles of Mr. Wilson, as are contained in this great document, which as defined by Dr. Holt is merely "a scheme by which soverign nations operate unanimously better than they otherwise could."

He discussed the time, place, and origin of this great document, together with those nations that are at present members of the league, and those that are not members.

The league looks after the common interest of the nations and is based upon the fundamental principles of justice. It fosters peace and progress, says Dr. Holt. Its principles from a humanitarian point of view were briefly discussed. Also as a settler of disputes that arise among nations and instances are given that emphatically prove this fact.

Dr. Holt is a most excellent and polished speaker, a man who is thoroughly familiar and acquainted with his subject and equally able in presenting it.

American Legion Gives Minstrel

Music By Presbyterian College Orchestra.

The Minstrel given on Monday evening at the graded school building by the local post of the American Legion was a great success from every standpoint. The curtain rose on a sight to blind any college boy's eyes, the girls of Clinton, more—no, as beautiful as usual and, as if their looks were not enough without any additional attractions, they started to sing. From then until the fall of the curtain after a grand finale by the whole company, it was on continual round of jokes and songs. Four of the shining lights of Clinton, although obscured by a coating

Blue Stockings Walk Over Terriers

Presbyterians Display Their Usual Straight Football.

At the Spartanburg County Fair grounds on November 2nd, P. C. defeated the Wofford Terriers 32 to 0. This was the largest score that the Blue Stockings have defeated the Terriers by since they have been on the P. C. schedule.

This game promised to be one of our hardest games and Coach Johnson accordingly primed his men to meet the affray. Wofford was very confident that they would at least make one touchdown to our none, but they had underestimated the firmness of the Blue Stocking line, and the speed of the backs. They had expected two fast men, according to forward dope, but were swept off their feet when they saw the speed displayd by "Shorty" Pearce and Jack Wilson, the "two rabbits" and running mates they are. They have already been mentioned for All-State and it is the desire of almost everyone that has seen these two men play that they should fill the position of All-State halves.

The Blue Stockings scored in each suarter, making two in the first quarter and one in each of the succeeding ones.

Pearce and Wilson made many pretty runs, both through the line and around ends, with an interference that Wofford was powerless to stop. Moore's line plunging was also a feature of the game. He took the pig skin through the line many times for substantial gains, while the line did their part in opening up holes. P. C.'s line on defense could not be penetrated and at no time in the game could Wofford make any gains through it. Although the Blue Stockings had the edge on the Terriers, the whole game they did not let up in their teamwork.

For Wofford, Davis and Collins, at ends, played scrappy defensive games for the Terriers.

For the Blue Stockings, Wade at tackle, Williamson at guard, and Clowney, played splendid games in the line, though the other members of the wall functioned perfectly, and the whole backfield is to be commended for their team-work, Hindman and Moore putting up especially good interference on end runs.

Freshmen Wallop Young Secederettes

Erskine Freshmen Fall Before Blue Sox In Defeat.

Imbued with the thought that on the morrow they are to become real, full-grown Blue Stockings, with the feat of their big brothers in thoroughly trouncing Wofford staring them in the face, "Lonnie Mac's" Blue Sox displayed such ferociousness as would shame any hurricane, such tenacity as would shame any bulldog's best effort, such team-work and precision as would make a Super-six comparable with a Ford, that they completely overcame the Freshmen from Erskine on November 3, and smothered the said Secederettes by a 47-0 score. It was a glorious victory, one that set a mark in brilliance and completeness for even Coach Johnson's celebrated Blue Stockings to strive to better. It proved that the P. C. Freshmen are a well-coached, well-trained aggregation, that the Varsity of 1923 will be blessed with an infusion of powerful material. The victory of the Blue Sox over the Erskine Secederettes gladdened the harts of all P. C. adherents for it augers well for the future.

Clinton has done much toward building up the powerful Blue Sox machine. "Si" Bailey and Blalock, ends, "Fatty" Ferguson, center, Sistar and Rucker, tackles, Jim Copeland, the brainy quarterback, Bennie Blakely, the hard-driving fullback, all claim the city of Clinton as the "old home town." Hence should the city of Clinton be proud of the Freshman aggregation Lonnie McMillan has produced. So

The man who possess the ability to make and hold friends during his college career is the man who is really successful. Personality is not a rare subtle characteristic possessed only by a chosen few. Often the man who takes best on first impression is found later to be a cad and an impostor. He who is always the same as near as is humanly possible under any conditions, who realizing his own faults does not condemn everybody else's, and is friendly and sincere; it is he who at the end of the road can look back and say, "It was good to be there." Many a man has left college with a sour taste in his mouth and a feeling in his heart that everybody was down on him. Yet in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it was nobody's fault but his own.

There are hundreds, yea, thousands of trite maxims about "the man who can smile, etc.," but even tho quoted until they become painful they are true. Many painful things are true, like the dentist's forceps and a crop of boils. So the best plan is to just be yourself and cease worrying about why the other guy can acquire friends by the hundreds and you can't. Probably the reason you can't is because you imagine you can't. What a wonderful bird the frog are!

P. C.

This month marks the advent of a new "Collegian." Last year this magazine did not have the support of the student body. Now, as everybody knows, no publication can be run by an editor alone. There was a time in the history of the college when contributions flowed in to the "Collegian" in so steady a stream that it was impossible to publish a fourth of them. Now, if with tears in his eyes, the editor beseeches the students for contributions he may be so fortunate as to get in one or two flea-bitten poems and a jumbled mass of dialogue dignified by the term "one act play." Perhaps if he is also very lucky he may also get a "short story", so short in fact, that it might be published on one page the size of the Shorter Catechism.

But now, fellows, the old "Collegian" has a new start. Let's give it a good start and not make the editor's task a nightmare.

Fifteen snappy ones for the new "Collegian." One long one for "Bone."

P. C.

The reading of the "Blue Stocking" exchanges, to be found in the library, will keep one posted as to the doings of other colleges. Many points of common interest may be found in their pages. Students are alike the country over. We read in one of our contemporaries where the English professor was greeted by a cow on Hallowe'en morn when he opened the door. That is strikingly like some of our old April Fool stunts, isn't it? Then often you will see news of our own college in the intercollegiate news departments of these publications. Just to-day we read an account of the action of Fulton, Neville and Woodson at the Carolina game, in the paper of a girl's school in Virginia. Read the exchanges and get a broader outlook on college life, learn what your fellow-students of other institutions are doing.

EXCHANGE DOPE

The Blue Stocking is glad to acknowledge two new exchanges this week, "The Rotunda," from the State Normal School of Virginia, and "The Sun Dial", the weekly organ of Randolph-Macon Woman's College. No exchange has yet been received from "The Emory Wheel," "The Richmond Collegian," "The Agonistic," or "The Flat Hat." These papers being members of the S. I. N. A. are pledged to exchange with us. W wish the editors would look into this matter and send us a copy of their paper at once.

"The Rotunda," in its last two issues, has set a high standard which it will take hard work on the part of the staff to live up to. These two papers were excellent.

"The Technique" is up to its usual standard, being chock-full of a variety of news.

"The Sun Dial" promises to be one of the best college papers in the South. We wish the staff all success in their management of the paper this year.

G. W. C. Observes Better Speech Week

During the week of November 7-11, the student body of Greenville Woman's College observed "Better Speech Week." It's object is as follows: "It is a concentrated effort toward rousing public sentiment to the need and the possibility of improving the speaking voice and raising the standard of speech usuage in daily life."—The Spokesman.

Social System To Be Adopted

Tentative plans are now in progress for a new social program at Georgetown College. The work is to be worked out by the various student organizations, with the help of several faculty members. Much enthusiasm is being shown by the entire student body for the adoption of the new plan.

Students have been aware for a number of years of the need of more social life. The religious and physical life have been developed exceedingly well, but the social life has been, to some extent, neglected. The new plans are to strengthen the social life in the College.—The Georgetonian.

Mercer Has Public Speaking Class

Dr. A. P. Montague's public speaking class, consisting of forty-two members and representing every school in the university, met Tuesday afternoon and elected a secretary to report all the activities of the class to the paper.

The class meets three times a week, two of these periods being devoted to the various phases and methods used in public speaking, while one period is given over to actual practice in speaking by the members of the class.—Mercer Cluster.

ROMANCE AND REALITY

(Her idea of how he would propose)

"When I look into your eyes, darling, a feeling of sublime ecstasy steals over me, benumbing my senses and consuming my very soul. Your glance is like a draught of delicious wine. The mellifluous words that flow from your lovely lips are to me as the gentle ripple of a mountain brook. Your every gesture enchants me with its graceful perfection. Will you be mine, darling? Will you allow me forever to bask in the effulgent sunshine of your presence?"

(How he proposed)

"Say, hon, you ain't so bad. I seen lots worse. How 'bout it, kid?"

(Her idea of what her reply would be)

"Sir, though not insensible to the growing warmth of your feeling toward me, I feel it would ill match the emotions of gratitude I feel toward my parents were I not to ask that you consult them and ascertain their wishes before venturing any confession as to my own heart. But I will be unmaidenly enough to admit that I am not entirely indifferent to your presence."

(What she said)

"Will I? Say, George, will a parrott eat sunflower seed?"

Ladies Quartette Heard By Good House

Work of Artists Appreciated By Audience

Men, we will have to hand it to the Senior Class that they did not pass us over a lemon when they sold us the season tickets to the Lyceum course; that is, of course, if we can judge the next four numbers partly by the two numbers which we have already seen.

It is certain that every man of you who saw "Cappy Ricks" went away feeling that he had been repaid for his money and effort. Each man got enough really wholesome laughs out of "Cappy Ricks" to repay him for going to see the play.

All who went to see the 2nd number of the course, the Laura Werno Quartet, on last Thursday evening, Nov. 9th, may not have laughed so much as they did at the first number, and probably did not; but they received something really cultured. These ladies are artists in their vocations, and they presented a program which was worth the attention of almost any lover of their kind of music and their other forms of entertainment.

To some this class of entertainment may not appeal, but to those to whom it does appeal it is certain that the Laura Werno Quartet was a welcome group of entertainers.

This article is not intended as a criticism of the Laura Werno Quartet, but simply to show that the entertainment was appreciated by some, and that every one is grateful to the Senior Class for their efforts in making it possible for the P. C. students as well as the people of Clinton to have at least a few really worth-while entertainments during the year.

As a matter of justice to the Seniors, this article was not written by a senior.

Hats Off To Davidson Seniors

"The niftiest and best looking bunch of Seniors that ever trod these sacred walks of learning. The Seniors are going to don derbies!"—The Davidsonian.

It's too bad these darling little boys can't wear these precious derbies every day. Regardless of how adorable we know they will be, still we must contents ourselves with seeing them only once in a while. Won't you please publish a picture of these little dears in their holiday hats. Sure, they ain't nothing else but holiday hats—wearing 'em on their weak ends.

P. C.

Clinton Flapper: "Why do you recommend this lip-stick so strongly? Do the girls prefer it?"

Dr. Sadler: "I don't know about that, but the boys tell me that it has a wonderful flavor."

Rat: "Why do you call that law student 'Necessity'?"

Soph: "Because he knows no law'."

P. C.

Dr. Douglas: "Were you entertaining a girl last night?"

Junior: "That's for her to say, but I was doing my best."

She lay content in his arms, and snuggled her head against his shoulder. A wave of emotion surged thru her and she stirred slightly. Gently he caressed her, and she closed her eyes in delight. At last he spoke.

"Poor kitty," he said tenderly, "did I step on your tail."

In the last few seasons, as far as clothes buying was concerned, lots of men preferred to wait—for various reasons.

Some waited for lower prices---others for newer ideas---still others for particular patterns or weaves.

Right now, there's really nothing left to wait for---all the things you have waited for are here---you'll see that when you look at our fall stocks.

Prices are likely to go up before they go down---a great many new ideas are developed in our Alco and Fashion Park Clothes---and you haven't ever viewed a finer assortment of patterns than we are now showing.

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
CLINTON, S. C.

College opened September 5th. The enrollment up to the present time is 189, the largest in the history of the College. It would reach 200 for the year if the students could be taken care of. All available space in the dormitories has been taken.

Capt. Ellison A. Smyth of Greenville, S. C., promised to give $25,000 toward the erection of a new dormitory if $50,000 more is raised. This dormitory, costing $75,000, will accomodate 100 additional students.

Everyone who loves the Presbyterian church and believes in Christian Education has a wonderful opportunity to do something for his church by making the erection of this dormitory possible. It can be filled with students as soon as it is built.

Students who are thinking of entering college next fall should write to the President early for catalog and literature and make all arrangements as soon as possible. The College will have more applications for next fall than it can take care of.

The College Boy Replies To Thomas A. Edison.

I am the college boy!
Each year I am sent to College at great expense (dad's),
Where I spend my time
And the Governor's sweat-stained shekels
Pursuing such interesting
And highly important studies
As football, baseball,
Pool, poker,
And blonde and brunette beers.
Chorus girls and co-eds.

I am the college boy!
My father (slang for the Governor)
Writes to me often and pathetically inquires,
"How are you getting along?"
And I answer him truthfully
That I am learning every day,
But I don't tell him what,
Or how much.
Why should he know, anyway?
He is merely paying the bills,
And if he does that regularly
That let's him out.

I am the college boy!
And my professors often take their long, pale noses
Out of the Binomial Theorem
And "Arma Virumque Cano"
Long enough to say:
"Young man, you should spend more time
Acquiring scholastic attainments
(Don't you love that!)
And less tossing the festive forward pass
And the peg to second,
And the bull.
But the professors are all wrong.
What do they know about the wild needs of youth?
Nothing!

I am the college boy!
And the Governor squawks his head off
Because I spend more time in tearooms
Than in classrooms;
But he means well,
And he foots the freight,
And that lets him out;
And the professors yelp because when studies
Interfere with athletics
I chuck the studies;
But they mean well—
And that lets them out!
Whoever heard of scholastic attainments
Taking one out into the open air?
Scholastic attainments!
What have I to do with scholastic attainments?
I am the college boy!

I am the college boy!
I can't find romance in the Romance Languages,
So far as I'm concerned the Lake Poets can jump into it,
There's nothing in zoology that can help me with the fox trot
And if I must get headaches
I would rather get them out of Budweiser than Euclid.

By the ancient science building
Lookin' southward o'er the grass
There's a dreadful jinx a settin'
And a watchin' as I pass
For the wind is in the gas machine
And the test tubes seem to say,
"Flunk ye not ye P. C. cropper,
Flunk ye not your test this day,
Flunk ye not your test this day,
Last night when you hit the hay
Knew ye not that of the subject
You possessed not one small ray."

Chorus:
"Flunk ye not this test today
Flunk not, flunk not, O! I pray
Lest like King Nebuchadnezzar
you go out and swallow hay."

Ship me somewhere east of Suez
Where the atom is not known
Where ther ain't no 'lectron theory
And where bone is just plain bone,
For the test tubes they are callin'
And to me they seem to say
"Git away, you P. C. cropper,
Git to Hell away, away!
Get away before you bust
Get away you shall and must Get away, and your lost reason
You'll recover, that I trust."

Chorus:

Flunk not, flunk not, O! I pray
Lest like King Nebuchadnezzar
you go out and swallow hay."

THE DEBATING CLUB

The debating club continues to have its weekly meetings. One incentive which the members of the club have to keep up their interest in the work is that last year the Faculty granted that each man who completed a year's work in this club would be given one point college credit. That is something in itself, for every man at P. C. knows that he must have the required number of college credits before he can receive his "sheep-skin". But there is something deeper rooted in the minds of the members of the club that is holding up the standard of the work they are doing. Every man in the club desires to reach the higher standard of mental attainment which he can reach only by hard conscientious work. He realizes that he must be somewhat of a debator, and he also knows that merely belonging to a debating club will not make a debator of him. Therefore most of the members of the club are doing excellent work in the club this year.

It is not always best to commend, especially when there is room for criticism. The only way for any man to accomplish anything really worth while in the way of learning to be a public speaker is for that man to do his very best in preparing his part of the program. Whether it be debate, declamation, oration, or what not—he must work if he would gain benefit from his efforts. While reading these comments, it might be well for the reader to ask himself just what attitude he is taking toward his work, either in the debating club or in either of the literary societies. No mere man has ever reached the standard of perfection, but many have reached a plain of very great efficiency in their fields. How did they do it? It was not by making a joke of everything they undertook, but by realizing that they were being watched by the world, and by knowing that the world was ready to reward them for anything that they might accomplish in the way of bettering the estate of mankind.

All of this is somewhat beside the subject, and perhaps may seem to have a pessimistic trend, but sometimes it pays to have sober thoughts. Thinking soberly will cause one to see his defects and will aid him in finding the steps necessary to correct his faults. A man may have the talent of a great speaker lying dormant within him, but unless he tries while in college to wake up that talent, he may pass his whole time here and leave without ever knowing what he is best fitted to do. It pays to try, and try hard, in the societies in order to develop all the talents one may have. One cannot have that self-confidence which is one of the most essential requisites of a good public speaker without first developing it, and there is no better place than the societies and debating club to gain self-confidence. If one makes a mistake there, it makes no difference, for no one expects perfection; but mistakes cannot be overlooked in after life. So why not think about the future while there is time to prepare for it.

The try-out for the triangular debate between Wofford, Newberry, and P. C. was held on Monday evening, Nov. 6th., and the following men were chosen as the debaters: Messrs E. B. Warren, Clark, Perry and Whilden. These are good debaters, and the student body is looking to them to win for P. C. on the 8th. of December.

Last Monday evening the debating club held its regular meeting and there was a very interesting program carried out. The debate of the evening was "Resolved, That South Carolina should have a divorce law." The affirmative was very ably held up by Messrs Clotfelter, Ratchford, and Hardwig; while the negative was discussed equally as well by Messrs Hodges, Macfarlan, and Pitts. These men displayed the spirit of debaters, and some of them showed that they had already advanced well on the way to success as debating men. These men are to be commended for the showing they made, and it can honestly be said that there have been far worse debates on the campus than the dbate of last Monday evening.

Keep it up men! Put more time on the preparation of the debates, and receive more benefit from thm. Let's pull together and make the debating club, at least, stand for what its name implies.

Cherry: "Have you ever been pinched for going too fast?"

Laws: "No, but I've often been slapped."

Dendy (at orchestra practice): "We will now play 'Kiss Mama'."

Rat Player: "Why that's what I just finished playing!"

— P. C. —

Judge: "Now ,professor, I'm very much surprised that you should be tried before me for being drunk. Will you tell the jury just how you came to be intoxicated?"

Professor: "I was just putting some—hic—hair tonic on my moustache and—hic—I missed it."

Tales of Abou Ben Blowhard

THE STORE OF MUSTAPHA THE MENDICANT

Now it came to pass when Hassan the Hiedous arose and departed from Pashan the Pauper that he journeyed for the space of seven hours along the highway and feeling faint wandered into a forset. Quenching his thirst at a spring which he found, he fared forth into the wood, and would fain have lain him down to sleep. At last he found a pile of leaves, and the straw of the pine, so removing his turban and his sandals he cast himself upon it to sleep. But no sooner had he cast himself down than he felt the straw move under him, and ere he could recover from his astonishment he beheld the most fearful looking brute he had ever cast his eyes upon.

He was clad in cast-off raiment many years old, and many sizes large. His sandals were falling in twain, and his great toes projected from them. His countenance was grimy and unshaven, and the hair upon his head was as if an hurrah had built her nest therein. "Who art thou that disturbest thus the rest of Mustapha the Mendicant?" roared the apparition. "Spare me! O! gracious Mustapha!" cried the startled Hassan. "Preserve me! by the ear of Ackbar, I am naught but poor Hassan the Hideous. I seek knowledge of the world, and harm no one." "Sit thee down O! Hassan," sternly commanded Mustapha the Mendicant, "if thou seekest knowledge of the world I will tell thee the tale of my wanderinlgs." "Right gladly will I hear they story," replied the youth, and forthwith picked his teeth with his pocketknife.

"In the days of my youth," mused the uncouth Mustapha, "I possessed ambition, money, and friends. Now I am known as Mustapha the Mendicant, and I live on hand-outs and sometimes saw wood for my dinner. In the places where I formerly reveled, now do I seek alms, and my once comfortable wealth is now all departed.

"When I was thine age I possessed an abundance of gold, and it was known that I was charitable, and of a soft heart, and better still, a soft head. Therefore did they whom I considered my friends impose upon me for many sheckles. 'O! Mustapha,' they would plead, 'I am in great need, hast thou no money. Lend me seven sheckles and fifteen dinars of silver. There is a great revelry on tonight and I must attend it.' Then would I, indulgent ass that I was, give them whatsoever I had in my purse. Then shortly would come another and accost me in my chamber and say, 'Good Mustapha, I beseech thee to lend me five gazumahs, for the woman who washeth my raiment hath not been paid, and she hath my only shirt and will not give it to me. I shall repay thee tomorrow, good Mustapha, for my father hath promised that a sum shall be sent unto me.' Or one would request me for a talent of gold saying that he had not seen a game of ball in seven moons, and that he must journey to a neighboring city to witness the Poodles play the Pole Cats.

"Also, O! Hassan, I possessed a vast pile of books and much apparatus; but lo! the pile of my books dwindled and waxed smaller day by day, until but one book remained, a book of mathematics. That they took not for no one desired it. And they wore my shirts until naught of them remained but the collar bands and buttons thereof. And they broke in pieces my pencils and upon my desk they did carve their names. Yea, they even did borrow my very pipe, and my toothbrush also, even it was not exempt from their ravages. All the articles of my possession they did appropriate to their own use and when they were thru with them they did neglect to return them.

"And they did also know that I was of a good nature, and they at all times sought to worry me. When I sat me down to write they gathered around and told jokes which would make the author of the "Shiek" blush with very shame. And they did annoy me by reading over my shoulder, and asking me a multitude of questions.

"Finally when all the money of my father was gone I went to them and begged that they return some of the money which I had loaned them. But for none of them was it convenient. And lo! all my books of learning were also departed, and I had naught to my name save only one pair of trousers, which looked as if it had undergone the effects of sandpaper. So I turned my face to the wall, and lamented for nine days. And at the end of the nine days my hunger became so acute that I arose and devoured the remains of my shoes and departed from the accursed place."

"Thy tale is indeed a sad one O! Mustapha," said Hassan the Hideous, as the tears coursed down his contorted countenance. "Yea, my son," quoth Mustapha as he gently extracted Hassan's watch form its wanted place. "And if thou hast had aught of good from my narrative, a little of thy kale seed would in no wise offend me." So Hassan the Hideous gave unto Mustapha a whole simoleon and girding up his loins resumed his burden and departed. Then Mustapha crawled under his straw again and slept.

Moral: "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," but if you've got to be one, be the borrower.

Pessimistic Proverbs

BY PEEVISH PETE

The health of the students is good, but lo! if thou seekest information of the absence committee they will tell thee otherwise.

My son, despise not the admonition of the senior, nither forsake the councils of the sophomore, for they have profitted by experience and verily do know their onions.

The foolish youth plucketh dingles, and the man who thinketh that he doth it and getteth away with it is void of understanding.

The wise man cheweth tobacco, but the fool in his folly spitteth the juice behind his raidator.

He who bummeth cigarettes by choice is storing up reproach unto himself, but he who being a bum doth insist upon Chesterfields, verily he should be destroyed.

Better it is for a man to possess one shirt, and that a good one than to have many shirts with short tails.

The sluggard sayeth in his heart, "I will arise betimes and study for my test." But when morning cometh even Big Benjamin, the alarm clock, cannot awaken him.

He who maketh a noise when his fellows are studying, verily he is an overgrown cropper, and when the exam cometh, lo! he will not pass.

It is better to hunger than to devour thy food with thy knife.

The wise man keepeth two packs of cigarettes—Chesterfields for himself and his friends, Strollers or One-Elevens for the bums.

The wise youth dependeth not on the freight train to convey him whither he listeth, for when the freight train runneth not then he is left standing upon the cross ties.

He who eateth like unto a swine, for him will the authorities provide a trough on the outside of the mess hall.

He who spendeth the substance of his father in riotous living, verily he will have no substance at all for his son to spend.

Lo! the scientists have at last found a perfcet vacuum, verily it is in the head of the man who considereth naught but his clothes.

Freshmen Wallop Young Secederettes

should Rock Hill, for did she not send forth Howard Clinton, the brilliant halfback, whose speed can be equalled by the incomparable "Shorty and Jack" duet alone? Savannah makes her presence known in the persons of Martin and Fountain, and it has been proved that such is a worthy presence. The proud city of Chester produced the man who leads the P. C. Freshmen to victory, Captain Robinson, who has proven a worthy leader of a powerful eleven. Nor can "Nick" Hunter be forgotten when Chester is mentioned. The hardest tackler on the field and a man who gives promise of being a wonderful end hails from Black Mountain, N. C. Would that we had many more like Carey Brown. Next is the ole reliable Edwards, who comes from the place made famous by the one and only "Chap," Darlington, S. C. Edwards delivers the goods at guard. The other guard is taken care of by a huge Texan, who eats 'em alive—that is, if they try any foolishness as trying to carry a football by him. This lad, Campbell, was the cause of the transfer of the Freshman-Wofford game from Laurens to Spartanburg. There was a circus in Laurens that day. "See the point?"

Why do we discuss these brilliant personalities at length? Because we wish the public to know just who it was that thrashed Erskine so soundly. Other Freshmen had a hand in the pie, too, but lack of space prevents detailed discussion. They will come to the front later. Every man mentioned, and those not mentioned by name, did his part in the 47-0 defeat handed Erskine. However, there were leaders in such an onslaught. Howard Clinton was the main offender from the Secederette standpoint. This lad caused much Seceder woe by his many and brilliant end runs. On the third kick-off the speedy one paced 80 yards to a touchdonw. Next to him comes Jim Copeland, who was the directing genius of the affray. Captain Robinson, Brown and others had much to do with the Erskine downfall.

The tale is not complete without mention of the pluck and gameness of the Erskine Freshmen. Though entirely outclassed, and with the game almost hopelessly lost, they fought stubbornly to the end, and at times delivered punches that nearly caused a violation of the sancitity of the Blue Sox goal line. Such it is that makes football the game that it is.

P. C.

She: "Have you ever played the game of love?"

McMurray: "Yes, but I hadn't shaved, and was disqualified on account of unnecessary roughness."

Presbyterians Trim North Georgia Aggies

for the Presbyterians found themselves being welcomed just as cordially as at Elberton. Never did football men partake of such a feast as did the good Mrs. Burton spread before them at the hotel after the game. It was with genuine regret that Coach Johnson and Company found it necessary to leave such surroundings.

Boys, hats off to Lavonia and Elberton! Always will the Blue Stocking victors remember their visit there as an outstanding feature of a successful season. May it be that future P. C. teams may make such trips.

Now, is it any wonder that, after such a display of cordiality, the Presbyterian line should buckle down to football and sweep the field clear of Aggies so that the incomparable quartet, Hindman, Moore, Wilson, and Pearce, could score touchdown after touchdown almost at will? Is it any wonder how Jack started the ball rolling with a 55 yard run through the Dahlonega line and how "Shorty" brought down the curtain with a 60 yard dash around end? Nor can "Big Boy" Williamson be blamed for getting "knocked out" in the third quarter. Where "hospitality" runs freely anything may happen.

Dahlonega fought hard, but they were not in it. They were outclassed by a better coached, swifter, and more experienced eleven. After P. C. had scored on the first two plays, the only question was to to how big a score the Blue Stockings could pile up. And the score piled up proved to the largest acquired yet this sason by any South Carolina eleven. Dazzling end runs by Wilson and Pearce, smashing line bucks by Moore, splendid generalship by Hindman, magnificent work by the P. C. line made the 67-0 victory possible. Perhapqs the absence of the "manager" had something to do with it, who knows?

With the exception of Joe Mason, whose knee is still in bad shape, every man on the Blue Stocking roster saw action against Dahlonega during the last period.

Press Association To Meet In Columbia

Greenville, S. C., and those who were so fortunate as to be delegates came back with glowing reports of the good time they had enjoyed. It is even rumored that one of the "Blue Stocking" staff (we call no names, but he's a short, stocky guy, and writes up the games) completely lost his heart to a little lady representing the Chicora Spizzerinktum.

At the coming convention the "Blue Stocking" will be represented by Messrs. S. H. Edmunds, Jr., and C. J. Milling. Mr. H. E. Montgomery will represent the "Collegian", together with another delegate who has not yet been elected.

Being entertained by both Chicora and Columbia College, the delegates from the P. C. publications are assured plenty of social entertainment.

Besides the regular business part of the convention many delightful social activities are planned, including a trip around Columbia, two receptions, and the annual banquet, which is always a grand affair.

Here's to the success of the South Carolina College Press Association.

of black, still managed to acquit themselves brilliantly, ably reflected by their male supports—for the night.

After a short intermission, there were several separate numbers. A quartette composed of those same male supports before mentioned, sang several numbers, and Mrs. William Jacobs gave a solo. The newly organized College Orchestra played three selections, and after the act of Mr. "Deep C." Green, under whose supervision the Minstrel was presented, and a number by Mr. William Jacobs, the evening was brought to a close by the chorus. After a most effective entrance by "Over There", the company brought down the curtain with the "Star Spangled Banner."

The evening was a great success and the Legion is to be congratulated on its splendid presentation of the Minstrel. There were no outstanding stars in the performance, it was a constellation.

Aesir Entertains Freshmen at Smoker

Devotees of Lady Nicotine Gather In Balhalla.

On Saturday evening, November 4th, the Aesir entertained in its hall a number of Freshmen. The entertainment was in the form of a smoker and soon there began to rise rings and blue clouds of the fragrant vapor. The conversation was lively and from the many laughs that were heard everybody seemed to be having a fine time. After a few minutes of conversation cards were enjoyed by everybody. Then fruit punch, crackers and fruit were served. After partaking of the refreshments the guests and members returned to their conversation and cards. The time for departing came all too early and the guests took reluctant leave, assuring the hosts that they had had a most enjjoyable evening. The guests who were present, were the following: Robinson, Fewell, Bailey, Ferguson, Blalock, Lawton, Powell, Adams, Edwards, Player, Macfarland, Foxworth, Hunter, Fuller, Currie, Knowles, Wade, Carson and Berry.

Philomathean Literary Society

On the evening of Tuesday, November 14th, the Philomatheans assembled in their hall for the regular meeting. This meeting was a very successful one, indeed. This is the first time that new men have been on th program and they are all to be congratulated for the manner in which each and every one performed their respective duties.

The debate as a whole was very good. The subject being, Resolved, That the Allies should intervene in the Turkish question. The affirmative was debated by Messrs. Wallace and Wolfe, while the negative side of this question was upheld by Messrs. Mundy and Cousar. The negative had the edge of the debate all thru. However, both sides had excellent arguments and debated them in fine style. The judges decided in favor of the negative.

Only one of the declaimers was present, however, he had an excellent declamation and delivered it well. The extemporizers chose timely subjects and briefly discussed them. They were very good. Current events were good.

As a whole the society is improving but there is still room for improvement and if every member always puts forth every effort on his part we will eventually have a most excellent society.

Indians Bow Before Onslaught of Blue Stockings

Delightful Time At Press Convention

Journalists Transact Business and Attend Social Functions.

The delegates who were elected to represent The Blue Stocking and Collegian staffs have all returned reporting that they enjoyed the time of their lives in Columbia.

The convention was held on the 22-23-24 of this month, in the Capital City, Chicora College, Columbia College, and Carolina being the hosts of the convention. The men and women of the college publications were treated with royal hospitality and the keys of the city were turned over to them.

Especial thanks are due to Mr. Coleman Karesh of the University of South Carolina, president of the Press Association, Miss Mary McNaul, corresponding secretary, and Miss Estelle Brady, treasurer. Thru their untiring efforts the convention was a most billiant success.

The men representing the P. C. publications were: Messrs. C. J. Milling, S. H. Edmunds and F. B. Mayes, of the "Blue Stocking"; and Messrs. W. W. Lewis, J. J. Cornwall and W. J. Cherry, of the "Collegian." These delegates arrived in Columbia on Wednesday morning and were received by Mr. Coleman Karesh and Mr. J. E. Millard of the University of South Carolina. Rooms were assigned them at the University and they were most cordially received by the men of that institution and entertained there during their stay.

On Wednesday afternoon there was a meeting of the executive committee at the reception rooms of Chicora College. And at six o'clock there was an informal reception and dinner at Columbia College. President Giles made an inspiring talk as did also Prof. Ararial of the English department. Then the association was entertained by the Columbia College orchestra with delightful music, and the students, led by Miss Annie Frierson, rendered inspiring vocal music, after which a reading was given by one of the young ladies. After supper the association adjourned to the reception rooms where an informal social was held that will ever be remembered.

Presbyterians Tie Trinity Eleven

Blue Stockings Battle North Carolinians To 6-6 Tie.

After having established a marvelous record in South Carolina football circles Coach Johnson carried his squad of lightweight marvels into North Carolina on November 17, where he pitted them against one of the best teams the North State can produce. Trinity College was doped to hand the Blue Stockings, and the fact that the Presbyterians emerged with a 6-6 in the scrope with the powerful Methodists is a noble tribute to the fighting bunch of South Carolinians.

Trinity displayed the most powerful and consistent drive that P. C. has yet encountered. Their backs hit the line hard and kept going. Yet, by superhuman effort it seemed, the light Blue Stocking line stemmed the tide when danger threatened. Furthermore, Trinity proved the possessor of a powerful defensive player in Capt. Neal. This versatile end shifted to defensive fullback when the swift P. C. quartet began punching the Trinity line for substantial gains. He did more than any other single Trinity man to keep the score to a tie for his mates. It was he who broke up the placement kick that would have brought a

Clemson Wins Cup As Permanent Trophy

P. C. Holds Third Honor In Cross Country Run.

On Thanksgiving Day the Cross Country Track teams of five colleges, Clemson, Carolina, P. C., Wofford, and Newberry, met in the annual track competition. At two o'clock the teams started on the five-mile course. The start was witnessed by a considerable crowd of rooters and the finish was viewed by a vast assembly.

Young, of Clemson, was the individual star as he was the first to cross the chalk line by several minutes. The Clemson team was the first to come in as a unit, thereby winning the cup as a permanent trophy.

Carolina won second place; P. C. third; Wofford foruth, and Newberry tailed the list.

P. C. AVENGES 1921 DEFEAT

There was jjoy in Clinton Thanksgiving night. P. C. expectations and hopes were far exceeded, for Walter Johnson's Blue Stockings completely outclassed the Newberry Indians, their traditional foes, in the annual Turkey Day encounter, which took place in Clinton this year.

Presbyterian superiority on the gridiron was proved, completely and conclusively. The 35-9 score does not give a true tale of the completeness of the Calvinist victory, as will be shown later.

The Johnsonites scored early. Newberry kicked off to the 30-yard line. Wilson gained 18 yards thru right tackle on the first play of the game. Pearce followed with 9 yards around end, and Jack paced 25 yards thru left tackle. But P. C. fumbled. However, Newberry punted forthwith, and the Presbyterian march was resumed. An 11-yard run by Pearce, a pass from Hindman to Mason for 20 yards, put the ball on the spot from where Moore bucked six yards to the first touchdown.

This march is indicative of the steady marches that led up to Blue Stocking touchdowns. The second touchdown came in the second quarter after linebucks by Hindman, Pearce, Wilson, and Moore, passes to Mason, put the ball where Wilson could buck it over. Soon thereafter, Newberry achieved her highest ambition and scored a touchdown on the Blue Stockings. Intercepting a pass on his 10-yard line, Borts raced 90 yards to the only Newberry touchdown, aided by magnificent interference from Dame Fortune. The Indians still possessed a small degree of scoring fever, for, just before the end of the first half, a bad P. C. pass from center put the ball across Presbyterian goal line in Blue Stocking hands. Newberry derived her last two points therefrom, via the safety route.

The second half was completely Calvanistic. Three touchdowns were scored by the smooth-running Johnson machine ere the conflict ended. Line bucks by Wilson, Pearce, and Moore, and passes by Hindman were instrumental in each crossing of the line. Wilson 18 yards,

Home of Peace Girls Entertain

Delightful Affair Enjoyed By All Present.

The Home of Peace girls entertained at a most enjoyable affair on Saturday night, November 26, at least, reports from all sources would indicate the above to be true and without reproach. If any one desires specific information regarding the above we can direct him very affectionately without mentioning any names, to a certain senior, who has auburn, otherwise, red hair, plays football and is president of the student body. We would describe him further, but don't want to give him away. That is getting off our subject, but we only wanted to show a specific illustration. Just to show how much the boys were expecting, the reception hall was filled with them before any of the young ladies made their appearance, and from the general remarks, none of them were in the least disappointed.

When the young ladies did finally disappear, each boy present selected one unto himself and there was a general round of conversation, and some in very low tones. We noticed particularly that the lowness of the mercury in the thermometer did not keep the swings from being used, and being in constant demand by those that

Blue Sox Trample Bailey Cadets

B. M. I. Fights Hard But Loses By 26-0 Score.

While their older brothers were battling the Trinity eleven in North Carolina, on November 17, Lonnie Mac's Freshmen entertained the B. M. I. Cadets on the home field. The Blue Stockings of tomorrow continued their sensational onslaughts of past games, and extracted a 26-0 victory from the Cadets.

It was a beautiful contest from all around. The Bailey lads showed the stuff that was in them by fighting the Freshman eleven to the last. They fought so stubbornly that it was not until the second half that the Blue Sox were able to score to any great extent. But when they started to score they kept going.

Blue Sox Lost To Newberry Pappooses

Lone Field Goal Defeats Young Presbyterians.

In a game that was very much equalized by the absence of Capt. Robinson, Brown and Fountain, the Newberry Pappooses defeated the P. C. Blue Sox 3 to 0. With these men out of the line-up our Freshman team was very much disabled and to this we lay the cause of our defeat.

In a game played between these two teams at an earlier date, the Blue Sox clearly outclassed the Pappooses, as was shown by the score, 25 to 0, and it was quite a disappointment to the Garnet and Blue supporters to hear of this defeat, however we are glad to say that the injuries of these men that were out of the game were not very serious and are almost well at this time. Though the lack of these men was keenly felt, the good work was continued by Clinton at half and Copeland at quarterback, and as the varsity close their successful season with the Thanksgiving game with Newberry, the men that will play their last game, hail these men to fill their places. We sincerely hope that these men will fill the places of their big brothers as well they did.

The Presbyterians played well the first half, and would have made a touchdown had not a penalty been inflicted on them while they were on the five-yard line with four downs to carry the ball over with. Newberry's score came in the last half when Copeland's punt was blocked, and a Newberry man recovered it. After running one play around the end to place the ball in the middle of the field they made the disastrous drop-kick.

One of the features of the game was the extensive penalizing, carried on by the ameteur official, until the last half. Copelend, for P. C., showed his skill at side-stepping, and the wiggly, squirming movements that he is capable of making, on more than one occasion gained more yards for P. C.

This is the Freshman's last game, and they close after a very successful season, and judging by comparative scores, they deserve second place in the state. Coach McMillan will turn Lincoln's Gettsyburg address is a great document; we've always been curious to know who wrote it for him.

P. C.

There is a certain firm in the city of Clinton who persistently refuses to advertise in any one of the three publications. Last year this firm had an ad in the Blue Stocking, but has withdrawn this ad and absolutely declines to insert one this year, not only in the Blue Stocking, but also in any other P. C. publication.

Let us examine the facts of the case. This firm has received work from the Athletic Association since September amounting to fifty dollars or more. And it had also received work from individual students more than doubling that amount we feel sure.

The proprietor of this firm advances the argument that he gives "value received" for the student's money. This may be true but there is another firm of the same sort in this city which is willing to advertise with the Blue Stocking, and which also gives value received.

Now, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it? Are you going to trade with the firm who gives "value received" and is not willing to share profits with us? Or do you intend to give your work to the firm who also gives value received, and is willing to back up our publication as soon as it sees that we will give it our trade?

Let's show the obstinate, mule-headed firm the error of its way.

P. C.

The editor was recently in his home town, and in a conversation with a friend, he received the following encouraging statement: "Well, even if she didn't win all her games, the college which has the best and cleanest 'rep' around here is little old P. C."

And that reputation, gentlemen, holds for our school all over the state, and wherever else men admire hard fighting and clean football. P. C. is little but she is game, and fair and square all the time. P. C. has a team which is admired throughout the South, even tho her students number less than two hundred men. Not a man on the squad is receiving one cent of money, directly or indirectly for his services. Not a man on the squad who stoops to trickery or shady ball. But eleven he-men, bantams tho they be, all fighting for Big Dick's Christian College with the spirit of the Greeks of Thermopalae, or the brave patriots of Judas Maccabeaus.

Yes, they may have lost a game or two, but their opponents will tell you that they went down fighting, driving, their pep never waning. Did you ever stop to think why we love P. C. so? That's why.

P. C.

Thanksgiving is with us, season of dead turkeys, pumpkin pies, and Pilgrim Fathers. Pilgrim Fathers, yes, but whose fathers? Too often we Southernors, in the generosity of our spirit, worship the Puritan and forget the Cavalier. We venture to say that half the men in our country don't know that Virginia was settled in 1607, 13 years before the Plymouth Rock episode in 1620, or if we did know it we have forgotten it. Why not celebrate a day in honor of those valiant men who settled in our own Southland. Even if they were so unfortunate as to be aristocrats, and not fifteenth century "Holy Rollers" they are our ancestors rather than the conscientious but witch burning Pilgrims. Maybe those old gentlemen of Virginia did hunt deer on Sunday, but then the Pilgrims hunted Indians on Sunday. There's a famous picture of them doing so, you have all seen it. Maybe the Puritans did suffer privations and hardships, but so did the followers of Captain John Smith. Remember the famines, the epidemics of fever, and the Indian massacres suffered by the Virginia settlers. It is true that the Pilgrims came here to obtain religious freedom for themselves. But alas, they neglected to give it to any one else.

O! we're human, and so glad to get the holiday all right. But boys, when you eat your turkey think of the good and gallant Cavaliers.

Student Council Adopted At Tech.

The movement to establish a Student Council at Georgia Tech has been one of the foremost toipcs of student interest recently. This campaign has been pushed rather steadily by those who initiated the movement last spring.

Boxes and ballots were recently placed in the Y. M. C. A. and the Administration Building. The ballots gave an opportunity for voting for or against the Council and also a list of the men who have been nominated by the Anak Society for members of the Student Council. Each student was asked to vote, and a large number responded. Al Staton reports that 1154 votes were cast on the matter of the adoption of the proposed Council. Of this number 1134 expressed themselves as favorable to the proposition, only 20 casting negative votes. Since only 900 votes were necessary to make the Student Council a reality at Georgia Tech the school is now under the government of the new organization.—Technique.

Further Plans To Beautify Campus.

Plans and suggestions for beautifying the campus have at last been put in working order. Suggestions were made last week by a landscape gardner, who came from Lexington, but at present nothing has been done except to cut down the dead trees on the campus, and get it in shape for the real part of the work.—Georgetonian.

At present there is a coach touring the western colleges, one in New York, two in Boston, and three in Philadelphia. We are very happy that Miss Warner was assigned the two month tour of the southern colleges, which has brought her to Hood.

Philomathean Literary Society

On the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 28th., the Philomathean assembled in their hall and a most excellent meeting followed. The entire program was carried out by new men and the creditable work done by them was the feature of the eveing.

Those who participated in the debate were the following. On the affirmative were Messrs McPherson and Player who was called from the house. While on the negative were Messrs Clotfelter and Lawton. The subject of the debate was, Resolved, That capital punishment should be abolished. Both sides had splendid points and discussed them in fine style. The judges, after deliberating as usual, decided in favor of the affirmative.

The declamations by Messrs Brown and Belcher were very good indeed. Both men had good subjects and delivered them well.

The extemporaneous speech by Mr. Edmunds was a most excellent one indeed. He chose a very timely subject and thoroughly expounded its contents, which is of keen interest to all college boys.

Current events were very good. However, they were too short.

P. C.'s "Y" Association

Are you doing your part for the "Y"?

Every true P. C. man should join the Y. M. C. A. if he has not already done so!

Any P. C. man who is not supporting the Y. M. C. A. work in all its phases has failed to take part in an activity, the good of which cannot be measured in dollars and cents!

There are more evidence of progress and grounds of encouragement to be noted in our Y. M. C. A. this year than ever before. One reason for this is the marked development of the democratic spirit which the boys are showing toward this work, and the interest they are taking in its different activities. The students are realizing more than before just what the Y. M. C. A. is, and the benefit derived from it. Therefore, we believe that 1922-'23 is going to be a 'red letter' year for our "Y" association. This can undoubtedly be done if every member will co-operate in the matter.

While there has been a marked growth of interest in our "Y" work, we should not be satisfied, but should strive to keep the good work going, and try to make as many improvements along this line as possible.

Some of the work being carried on through the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. is: The weekly Y. M. C. A. meetings; Prayer meetings every evening after supper; Christian Endeavor work; Local Mission work throughout the community, etc. Also Mission Study classes and regular Sunday Schools will begin in the near future.

Our Y. M. C. A. budget for 1922-'23 is as follows:

Socials	$ 60.00
Local Missions	25.00
Literature	90.00
Conventions	50.00
Blue Ridge	100.00
Programs	100.00
State Work	100.00
Incidentals	10.00
Total	$535.00

Fellows lets show the real P. C. spirit and back up our local association, and make it one that we will be proud of.

There's Really Nothing Left To Wait For

In the last few seasons, as far as clothes buying was concerned, lots of men preferred to wait—for various reasons.

Some waited for lower prices---others for newer ideas---still others for particular patterns or weaves.

Right now, there's really nothing left to wait for---all the things you have waited for are here---you'll see that when you look at our fall stocks.

Prices are likely to go up before they go down---a great many new ideas are developed in our Alco and Fashion Park Clothes---and you haven't ever viewed a finer assortment of patterns than we are now showing.

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
CLINTON, S. C.

College opened September 5th. The enrollment up to the present time is 189, the largest in the history of the College. It would reach 200 for the year if the students could be taken care of. All available space in the dormitories has been taken.

Capt. Ellison A. Smyth of Greenville, S. C., promised to give $25,000 toward the erection of a new dormitory if $50,000 more is raised. This dormitory, costing $75,000, will accomodate 100 additional students.

Everyone who loves the Presbyterian church and believes in Christian Education has a wonderful opportunity to do something for his church by making the erection of this dormitory possible. It can be filled with students as soon as it is built.

Students who are thinking of entering college next fall should write to the President early for catalog and literature and make all arrangements as soon as possible. The College will have more applications for next fall than it can take care of.

D. M. DOUGLAS, President

Delightful Time At Press Convention

On Thursday morning the association met in the Y. M. C. A. building at Carolina and addresses of welcome were made by Dr. Melton, president of the University of South Carolina, and Mr. Coleman Karesh. Two addresses were then enjoyed, one on "Athletics in the College Newspaper" by Mr. Brian Bell; the other, "Journalism and Literature" by Mr. Stanhope Sams, both gentlemen representatives of the "State" staff.

Thursday afternoon there was an auto drive to points of interest in the city and tea at the Ridgewood Club at five o'clock.

Thursday night the association was entertained at Chicora, addresses being made by Dr. Byrd, Dr. Yates Snowden, Dr. Morse and Mr. G. A. Buchanan. These addresses were splendid and hearty applause was rendered by the delegates present. After the speeches the meeting was adjourned, and the delegates entertained in the reception halls of the college, where a delightful course of ice cream and fancy crackers was served, and music rendered by the splendid orchestra of that college.

On Friday morning the College Press Association assembled at Columbia College for its last business meeting, where a round table discussion was held, and the following brief addresses were made: "The Editorial Policy of the College Newspaper," S. T. Sparkman, University of South Carolina; "The College Magazine as a Paying Proposition," Mr. Bourne of Wofford; Possibilities of the Exchange Department," Mr. C. J. Milling of Presbyterian College of South Carolina; "Selecting Magazine Material," Miss Mary Bosse, of Converse College; "Gathering News for the College Paper," Mr. H. A. Woodle, Clemson College; "Problems I Have Met in Editing a College Paper," Miss Charlotte Stevenson, Columbia College. Inspiring talks were also made by Miss Mary McNaul of Chicora College, and Miss Margaret Ball of Winthrop College. Delightful music and readings were given between these addresses by the Columbia College girls.

Friday afternoon the Carolina Athletic Association entertained the College Press Association at a football game between the Carolina Freshmen and the Wofford Freshmen.

And on Friday evening came the crowning event of the whole convention, the annual banuet of the association. It was held at the Jefferson Hotel and never was a more enjoyable affair attended. A sumptous banquet was served after which several of the delegates responded to toasts and good cheer held sway.

Ere the convention broke up every delegate declared it his intention to go to the association next year as an alumni member. Again we pause to thank Chicora, Columbia, and Carolina for the time of our lives.

May equal success crown the efforts of future Press Association conventions.

ALUMNI NOTES

On November 30, which was Home-Coming Day, many of the graduates of this institution were here to see Newberry, P. C.'s greatest rival, go down in defeat.

Among the old football players were: T. O. McKeown, '18, all-state tackle; D. M. and W. D. Fulton, '18, known as "Dob" and "Bickle", who looked so much alike that few teams in the state could tell which one was carrying the ball; "Zizwheel" Estes; "Chick" Galloway. "Durry" DuRant, "Hap" Neville, J. H. Dulin, H. Dick—all of whom helped to put P. C.'s team on the map in the South.

There were many other P. C. men here who did not take part in the game of football, but who helped in many other ways to put P. C. where she is today.

Among these we have the names of P. W. Wilson, '20, C. K. Douglas, 22, "Big Boy" Williamson, '21, "Christie" Mateson, '21, L. C. LaMotte, '22, M. S. Dickson, '22, C. E. Piephoff, '22, J. A. Flanagan, '16, "Fatty" Adams, W. W. Brimm, '22, A. T. Taylor, '20, "Mouse" Woods, '22, Jim Frazer, '06, Rev. Mr. Babb, '93, J. M. Smith, '20, B. E. Mickle, Rev. Mr. Estes, '18, "Dutchie" Wilds, '17, Paul Mann, '16, W. G. Stewart, '22, Monroe McIntyre, '22, and "Dutch" Flanagan, '20.

Other Alumni visitors were: R. H. Boyd, Frank Hay, C. H. Bennett, J. A. Gossett, George Kennedy, Alex Kennedy, "Pat" Johnson, Dr. W. B. Wallace, C. M. Fuller and B. R. Fuller.

Due to the lack of time a number of names are left off, but we will have them in our next issue.

Alumni, we are always glad to have you. We want you to feel that you are still very closely connected with the institution. If you have any information of your class-mates. Write it to the Blue Stocking. If you find that some of your old classor college-mates have made a million dollars, let "Lonnie" Mcmillan and Hugh Eichelberger know it. Dr. Douglas will find it out for himself. If you are to give your young friends a present of some up-to-date paper, send them The Blue Stocking.

Dr. Woodworth: "Mr. Beckman, you will please criticize Mr. Shelton"s outline."

Beck: "Not much good, Dr."

Dr.: "Very good criticism, Mr. Beckman."

State Student Council Met At Furman

On November the 4th. the State Student Council of the Student Young Men's Christian Association of South Carolina held its annual meeting at Furman University. Mr. J. E. Johnson, Student Secretary for South Carolina was there and much interest was shown by the delegates from the different colleges of South Carolina in the work of the Association.

Mr. Charlie Cureton, Jr. was the representative from the local branch of the Y. M. C. A. here at P. C., and he brings back an interesting account of the work carried out at the meeting of the State Student Council. Mr. Cureton was also given the honor of being Secretary of the State Council for the coming year.

There were representatives present from eight colleges in South Carolina, and much serious discussion was engaged in as to how more interest could be created in the work of the Association throughout the different colleges. These men realized that a great work is already being done throughout the state by the Association, but they felt that there is still room for improvement. They therefore decided as one important phase of the work accomplished at the meeting to try to have a standard to work toward. It was the concensus of opinion that a goal to look forward to and to work toward would simplify the program and also stimulate more interest in the work of the Association. A committee, consisting of Messrs R. G. Bell, and O. D. Johnson, of Carolina, was appointed to work out such a method.

P. C.

And still the answer was "no." Was there naught to convince her of his sincerity? After hours of plaintive pleading he had failed to touch her hard heart. He recalled the downfall that he would suffer if he failed in this last proposal. Our young hero braced up himself for the final apppeal. Choking down the sobs which made speech almost impossible, he spoke.

"Martha," he pleaded, "I'll give you fifty cents now, and pay you all as soon as I get that check. But, I swear, I just gotta have a clean shirt."

P. C.

"Cooney": "Well, Joe, this is Thanksgiving. Let's celebrate it in some unusual way."

Joe Mason: "Unusual? Then let's go over to the services at the orphanage."

CAMEL CIGARETTES—you know, the kind "you'll walk a mile for." Only you don't have to walk so far in this case. They are to be had at any first-class drug store and many other places.

Thanksgiving Supper Enjoyed After the Newberry Game

Mrs. Hunter Gives Students Great Feed On Turkey Day.

Judd Hall was the scene of a sumptuous feast on the night of November 30th., after the successful game with Newberry. In order that the football team and the track men could enjoy the savoy bird Mrs. Hunter decided to have the big feast at supper instead of dinner.

The menu consisted of the following: Grape fruit, Carolina turkey, giblet gravey, steamed rice, cranberry sauce, Macaroni, fancy pickles, dixie dressing, fruit, candy, nuts, mocha, ice cream, and cake.

After the first course the historic dining hall was filled with the ringing applause of the students and alumni for the heroes of the Newberry game, the visitors, and the track men.

Many of P. C's. old sons were again present to enjoy one of Mrs. Hunter's famous suppers. And this feast served to add another occasion for the love the students bear Mrs. Hunter.

EXCHANGE DOPE

The exchange list of The Blue Stocking is growing. Since the last issue three new papers have come in: The "Technician" from the N. C. State College; The "Forensic," the official organ of the Pi Kappa Delta, and "Pep", from the Greer high school.

The "Rotunda" for November 11 was almost entirely an advertising agency with practically no news. The later issues show a little improvement but still there are too many ads for the size of the paper.

The exchange list now includes the following: "The Gamecock," U. of S. C.; "The Petrel," Oglethorpe; "The Hornet," Furman; "The Blue and Gray," Hood; "The Critograph" Lynchburg; "The Rotunda," State Normal School; "The Sun Dial," Randolph-Macon; "The Mercer Cluster," Mercer; "The Brackety-Ack," Roanoak; "The Georgetonian," Georgetown; "The Technique," Ga. Tech; "The Spokesman," G. W. C.; "The Industrial Collegian," S. D. State; "The Technician," N. C. State; "The Park Stylus," Park; "The Old Gold and Black," Wofford; "The Tiger," Clemson; "Maroon and Gold," Elon; "The Carlisle Bugle," Carlisle; "St. John's Bulletin," Darlington Hi; "The Forensic," Pi Kappa Delta; "Pep," Greer High.

Tales of Abou Ben Blowhard

THE TALE OF THE SHIRT

It came to pass in the days when the art of Coles Phillips attracted more attention than that of Leonardo de Vinci, that certain youths excelled in contests of strength. Now these youths sware that on the day when their last contest should be successful that they would expose their nether garments and would march through the main street of the city, and would hold a mighty parade.

Now it came to pass that certain of the elders of the city gat themselves together saying, "By the toe-nail of El Kamid, we shall not allow this to occur." And they went unto the captain of the guard and spake unto him saying, "Thou shalt not let these foolish young men commit this offense, for that it is offensive to the women of the city." Now when the youths heard of these words they waxed exceeding wroth and sware that they would have their mirth, and march through the streets in flowing robes and sounding much brass and cymbals. Then came a contest of great import, and lo! when it was over the youths marched up the streets of the city, an hundred and fifty of them. And they marched every man with a flowing robe of white and made much noise.

Then the captain of the guard waxed exceeding wroth and sware that this should be the last time, and moreover he did declare that if they did it again he would sieze them all and lock them behind the bars of the jail and that they should pay to the coffers of the city ten gold gazumas each. So the young men said naught but did determine that he should have opportunity to put his threat into execution, if they won their next contest. And lo! it came to pass that they won their contest, and great was the rejoicing thereof. And when even was come they did eat and announcement was made that they should all parade the streets with their nether garments flapping in the breeze. And lo! they all sware by the drumstick of the turkey which they did eat that they would parade in the street of the city, and loud were their cries.

So the leaders of the band gat themselves together and did assemble themselves in the place agreed upon. But behold certain of the youths grew feathers upon their legs and an yellow streak did appear upon their backs and they counciled among themselves saying, "Let us get out of this while yet we have an whole skin. Let us find a reason whereby we can excuse ourselves." Then one did frame up one excuse and one another. And they did reckon among themselves and tell all manner of falsehoods to assuage their feelings. Some did suddenly recollect that they had pressing business in a remote part of the city, and others did of a sudden feel ill, or remember an engagement.

And in the meantime the leaders of the parade had girded up their loins and were ready to start. And they wore all manner of garments on their persons. Many strange garments, and they resembled a crowd of Ku Klux Klansmen, or a mob of street sweepers. And when they had waited for a long time they realized that the feathers had grown upon the legs of their companions, so they shouted for them to come, but they appeared not. Then they arose and joined in the formation for the parade, and lo! there were scarcely five and twenty of them there. Then were they exceeding angry, for that they had won a great victory, but yet had so small a crowd appeared. Then they exclaimed saying, "Where are all the men who were so eager to come no longer ago than the evening meal? Lo! is it possible that they have become afraid? They were the chiefest to shout that they would parade and now they do not appear."

Then they marched every man in the line thru the streets of the city and did shout and sing even in their pitiful numbers. And when they were come to the main part of the city they were in no wise disturbed. Then the feather-legged companions beheld them from afar off, and when they beheld that they received no harm then they raised a brave shout and did join them to the number of five and forty men or more. Yea, when they beheld that the young men were in no wise harmed, they of a sudden waxed exceeding brave. Then, also, they did shout that they would remove the jail, and slay any one who disturbed them. But lo! their companions had already beheld their streak of saffron.

Then marched they seven times around the streets of the city and they were received with a mighty shout by all within the gates of the city. And none rested that night within the jail, neither was the captain of the guard slain, nor was an hair of his head disturbed.

Moral: "It doesn't take X-ray eyes to discover the feathers on men's legs."

THE DEBATING CLUB

On Monday evening, Nov. 20, the Debating Club held its regular meeting. This meeting proved to be an exceptionally good one in that those who took part on the debate seemed to be very much interested in the subject for discussion. Three of the men were called from the house to fill vacancies, but one could not have known it by the excellent debates these men gave. They were Mr. Johnston, Mr. Perry, and Mr. Hardwig.

The subject for discussion was: "Resolved, That South Carolina should adopt the system of the Short Ballot for state officers." Messrs. Frost, Johnston and Perry rendered exceptionally good debates for the affirmative, while Messrs. Hudson, McMahan and Hardwig did their best for the negative. It is not always the best debate that counts the most, but it is usually the interest and "pep" that the men display which influences the judges. The judges of the evening gave the decision to the negative. The affirmative, however, felt sure that they won. So in the end both sides should be satisfied with the success each made in the debate.

While criticizing the debate and the debaters, Dr. Brimm causually remarked that he felt that that debate was the best all-round debate that he had heard in the hall since the club was organized over a year ago. Whether Dr. Brimm was trying to make the men on the debate feel proud of their efforts, or was trying to create envy on the part of the other members of the club so as to stimulate more interest and more thorough preparation is not known; but, as Dr. Brimm has the reputation of being a man who thinks before he speaks, what he said was an encouragement, at least, to those six men who took part in the debate. It seems that Dr. Brimm believes in giving what flowers he has to give while one is still able to appreciate them.

On account of the lengthy "pep meeting" on last Monday evening, Nov. 27th, the meeting of the club had to be called off.

Indians Bow Before Onslaught of Blue Stockings

Moore 10 yards, Pearce 10 yards, Moore 4 yards, Wilson 3 yards, pass to Mason for 15 yards, Wilson 2 yards, Moore 2 yards, Wilson 3 yards, Moore 4 yards, every play going over right tackle, accounted for touchdown number 3. Pearce 2 yards, Moore 2 yards, Wilson 12 yards, Wilson 4 yards, pass to Mason 6 yards, Pearce 4 yards, Hindman 2 yards, Wilson 18 yards, Wilson 5 yards, Moore 10 yards, Moore 2 yards, these plays alternating between right and left tackle, gave Presbyterian touchdown number 4. Wilson returned punt 15 yds, Moore 7 yards, Pearce 5 yards, intercepted pass by Moore, Wilson 5 yards, Pearce 3 yards, Wilson 2 yards, Moore 3 yards, Mason 15-yard pass, Pearce 10 yards, all over right and left tackle and guard, give the story of the winning of touchdown number 5.

Jack Wilson, playing probably his lasf game for P. C., was the brilliant star of the day. Jack covered himself with glory, playing as no other half-back has ever played before on the P. C. gridiron. He bucked the line literally at will, and his return of punts was sensational. Moore, Pearce, and Hindman, were also demons at gaining ground. Mason distinguished himself by his phenomenal catching of forward passes heaved by Hindman. The whole line played splendid offensive ball, having a wagon-road ready on all occasions. On defensive, the line was invincible, Newberry making a total of seven yards thru the line or around end during the entire game, while losing 19 yards via the same attempt. Wade, Clowney, Williamson, Mason, Brown, Bomar, Miller, and Moore, were the principle stars in the defensive line. Pearce contributed some hard tackling when occasion presented.

At forward passing Newberry was more fortunate. They completed 8 out of 25 passes, for a gain of 73 yards, making a total of four first downs during the contest. P. C. gained 495 yards from scrimmage, made 28 first donws, completed 8 passes out of 10, and punted twice during the contest. Such is the tale of Thanksgiving Day. Besides his other work Jack Wilson kicked goal after every touchdown.

Shealey, Borts, Wollet, and Eleazer were the principle Indians to distinguish themselves by defensive work, they having no chance at offensive brilliancy. Line-up:

P. C.	Newberry
Mason, l. e.	Rutland, l. e.
Williamson, l. g.	Rast, l. g.
Miller, c.	Stoudemire, c.

were not so fortunate. Those that did not desire exclusion so muchly to have their say, could find rook cards with which to play, and some held "good hands." Then for the more talented there was the piano to be played and songs to be sung to its accompaniment. There were several shining lights, and who knows but what some of them may some day be as great as Caruso or Wagener, or Paderewski? Who knows?

There are two things which this life requires; these are love and nourishment. We have given an account of the former, which held sway for the most part. Now it would not be complete without telling of the delicious refreshments that were served. The Home of Peace girls must know that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. The refreshments for the evening were hot chocolate, crackers, and marshmallows. Alas, as all good stories end but this is true, the time of parting came all too soon. We could hear the sighs of regret as the parting came. Don't forget us, girls, for we are coming back as often as we may.

Copeland and Clinton played their usual good, sensational game. Time after time this pair reeled off good gains that counted heavily against the visitors. Capt. Robinson was forced to retire from the affary because of an injured shoulder. Walker and Montgomery proved equal to the task of carrying the task left by the injured captain.

In the line, Edwards, Campbell, and "Fatty" Ferguson were bulwarks on defense and offense. But the entire machine functioned splendidly.

This game was the last official one on the "Rats'" schedule. So their official season closed in a successful manner. The Freshmen scored 111 points to 6 scored by their opponents. They barely bowed in submission before the Carolina Freshmen 6-0.

Presbyterians Tie Trinity Eleven

7-6 victory to the South Carolinians.

The first half was, in the first part, a punting duel between Hindman and Simpson, with the honors about even. About the second quarter the Trinity drive got under way. After a march down the field, featured by consistent drive on the part of the offensive and stubborn resistance on the part of the defensive, the ball reached the P. C. 10-yard line. Here the drive stopped. Bomar, Williamson, Clowney, and the two secondary men, Miller and Moore, led the defensive counter attack that halted the Methodists. Everything in the line played stellar ball, yet the work of these men was the more outstanding. But the Trinity onslaught was checked, and the Blue Stockings were on the verge of launching a mighty counter offensive, when the half ended.

In the second half, however, the P. C. offensive prowess was demonstrated. The two brilliant speed demons, Pearce and Wilson, Moore the pile-driving fullback, and Hindman, the directing genius of a mighty machine, all united behind the wonderful work of the line, and advanced the ball deep in Trinity territory. The ball was lost momentarily on Trinity's 30-yard line. Yet "momentarily" was sufficient time for Lagerstadt to pace off 70 yards in one play for a Trinity touchdown. It was a beautiful run, yet no one knows how he got away. A 70-yard run to touchdown thru Walter Johnson's outfit is something to be proud of. It happens only once in a life-time. So pat yourself on the back, Mr. Lagerstadt.

The goal kick was easily blocked by the P. C. line. Trinity kicked off to P. C. The Blue Stockings never gave up the ball this time until they gave it to the referee behind Trinity's goal line. Scintillating end runs by Wilson and Pearce in turn, powerful line-bucking by Moore, a beautiful forward pass from Hindman to Mason, and a prettily executed play at the goal line, enabled Jack Wilson to score the tieing touchdown early in the fourth quarter. Captain Neal broke up the try for goal.

Earlier in the game both teams made tries for field goal, yet they missed. The Blue Stocking forward defense never let the Trinity attempts get under way, while Hindman missed a beautiful drop-kick from the 45-yard line by inches. The game ended just as P. C. blocked a Trinity punt on Trinity's 20-yard line.

It was a draw game in every sense of the word. The lighter team from S. C. fought the heavy team from N. C. to a standstill. The honors were even save for that one fact.

VOLUME 4 | PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, DECEMBER 9, 1922 | NUMBER 7

BLUE STOCKINGS' ALL-STATE MEN

One All-State Man and Six Honorable Mention Men.

Coach Johnson seems to have a knack for turning out all-state men. But it seems that during the past season he has overdone even himself in his little one hundred and thirty eight pound product, Jack Wilson, P. C.'s all-state half, who is the speediest backfield man in the state. He has the speed of lightning and the elusiveness of an eel, as his opponents can testify. If there is any doubt of his ability at sidestepping please consult one Mr. Dode Phillips, who in the year of 1921 had the pleasure of biting the dust in a futile attempt to stop Jack in his one hundred and three yard run for touchdown.

"Shorty" Pearce, the running mate of Jack Wilson, was mentioned for all-state honors, and it is the opinion of many that he should have shared all-state honors with Jack. He did splendid work for P. C. during the past season and the man who hopes for all-state honors next year will have to do some "hustling" to outstrip "Shorty."

Miller, our brilliant center and the man who will lead our eleven to victory next year, is another sample of Johnson's excellent coaching. He is noted for his brilliant defensive work. He was mentioned for all-state honors. Men, three cheers for our coming captain!

Hindman, our cool-headed little quarter, who piloted our team to victory, was also mentioned for the all-state team. He is the pluckiest little general in the state, and it will be many a day before we forget his good generalship and his good toe that turned the tide against Davidson.

"Coon Clowney, the pluckiest man that ever donned a uniform, was also mentioned for the all-state line up. He did splendid work at end for P. C. We will never forget our captain and we regret that he has played his last game for our Alma Mater.

Brown and Williamson, our two guards, were also honorably mentioned for the all-state selection. During the battle they stood out as twin Rocks of Gribraltar, over which noth-

P. C. Wins and Loses In Debate

Negative Wins At Wofford, P. C. and Newberry.

The annual triangular debate between Presbyterian College, Newberry College and Wofford College held sway on the night of December 8th at the above named institutions. The query for debate was, "Resolved, That all International War Debts Incurred During the World War Should be Cancelled." Each of the colleges had representative debating teams at the other two institutions. The affirmative of Wofford and the Negative of giate acticity. A great future Newberry vied with each other at the Orphanage chapel.

Mr. Frank Clarke and Mr. R. H. Whilden upheld P. C.'s side of the negative dispute at Wofford, while Mr. Ed Warren and Mr. L. L. Perry presented the affirmative views at Newberry.

According to reports received from Newberry, Mr. Warren and Mr. Perry acquitted themselves in a manner that would make P. C.'s literary fame a permanent feature in the minds of all who heard them.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Whilden won at Wofford. That fact speaks well for them since they were debating against much more experienced debaters than they themselves are. With men like these two out on the road upholding P. C.'s colors we can challenge all comers.

The debate here was excellent and the representatives from Newberry and Wofford certainly upheld the honor of their respective colleges. P. C. always welcomes such speakers to her platform.

The Wofford debaters were Mr. L. M. Meadors and Mr. N. W. Bennett. The speakers from Newberry were Mr. R. W. Bost and Mr. J. G. Park.

The judges were Messrs. C. M. Bailey, R. W. Wade and J. H. Witherspoon. Mr. C. J. Milling presided over the meeting.

MILLER ELECTED NEXT YEAR CAPTAIN

All-Star Center Given Signal Honor.

Graham Miller, mentioned frequently as all-state center this season, was unanimously elected captain of the 1923 Blue Stocking machine. Miller is an ideal man for captain. He is a star player, a hard fighter, and popular with the squad and student body. This season marks his second as a valuable member of the Johnson "Light-Weight Marvels." We expect much of you, old man, both as leader and as a player.

Literary Society Elects Officers

At the regular meeting of the Eukosmian Literary Society, election of officers took place.

The following men were elected: A. E. Barnado, president; J. G. Miller, vice-president; W. J. Cherry, critic; J. H. Pearce, secretary; J. Finney Mason, first censor; J. J. Cornwall, second censor; R. F. Banks, corresponding secretary; C. B. Summerel, sergeant at arms; E. D. McMahan, conductor.

Mr. W. W. Lewis, incumbent treasurer, will remain in office for another term.

Freshmen Win Second Place

Prospects Are Good For Next Year.

The Freshman football team is a feature of our college life that will probobly interest our high school friends more than any other. And right here, let it be added, that the Freshmen also have basketball and baseball teams. A very interesting schedule is being arranged and one that will give the Freshmen in all branches of athletics something to look forward too.

Our Blue Sox, alias our Freshman team, won second place in State football honors. They reached this position by the usual line of travel. Furman defeated Clemson, and Carolina defeated Furman by a larger score than they did us. Therefore, Carolina gets first place and P. C. second. The Blue Sox opened their season by losing to Carolina, the only game of the season that they lost. After this game they seemed to become imbued with that old fight!, fight!!, fight!!!, for P. C. spirit which led them to victory in all the rest of their games.

But we cannot go on talking about the fineness of our Freshman team without going a little deeper into the subject to find its cause. Let us start first with a man that played end on the Johnson machine. Here we find a man drilled in the maintenance of football and acting in the brilliancy of it; a man who for three successive years made all-state end. All Hail to Lonnie McMillan! He is not only a star in football, but he is also a star in basket ball and baseball. In him we have the best Freshman Coach in the state. He coaches football, basketball and baseball. Men, once under him, regret to leave him. High School Friends, we highly recommend him to you and we hope that you will have the pleasure of being under him next year.

BOXING AT PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE

Bouts To Be Arranged Monday, December 18th.

If present plans come through P. C. boxing fans will be treated to an excellent menu of the manly art on the night of Dec. 18th. If present plans materialize the following bouts will be ex-bantam-weight amateur of P. C. vs Putnam of Laurens, ex bantam-weight ameteur champion of South Carolina; Fountain of P. C. vs Thompson of Carolina; Galloway of P. C. vs Quisenbury of Furman. Last Saturday night Thompson easily defeated Quisenbury in Laurens in a 5 round bout. The preliminary between Scott and Galloway, both flying the Garnet and Blue, went to a 3 round no-decision, due to the great disparity in weight.

The first P. C. boxing team was put out in the Spring of 1922. W. S. Scott and W. W. Brimm, bantam-weight and welter-weight respectively, represented P. C. at the intercollegiate meet staged in Columbia last year. At present Scott holds both the bantam and feather-weight inter-collegiate championship of South Carolina. The team this year will comprise about five men.

Coach Johnson is an excellent boxing coach. His great ability as a gridiron mentor does not excell his prowess as a squared-circle mentor. During the war Walter Johnson was an instructor in boxing with the A. E. F. in France. While over there Johnson went the entire length of a 10 round bout with Mike O'Doud, at that time middleweight champion of the world. In addition, Johnson is a personal friend of, and has worked extensively with, both Pinky and Ritchie Mitchell, the famous welter-weight and light-weight. As a result Walter Johnson is well qualified as a boxing instructor, which is attested to by the fact that Scott, a member of his first team, now holds two inter-collegiate championships.

Boxing is a recent addition to South Carolina sport. A. O. Van Meter, athletic director at Carolina, and "Red" Thompson, also of Carolina, deserve much credit for developing the manly art to the prominence of an inter-collegiate acticity. A great future lies before this branch of sport.

We trust that this number of the "Blue Stocking" accurately portrays enough of the life of P. C. to give you a fair idea of the old college and what we do. This paper does not tell you about rates, rooms, and about the studies taken up in the different departments, etc. You will in due time receive a catalogue with that information. However, we do believe that the news contained in this issue of P. C.'s student publication will serve to give you some ideas of student life, athletics, and college activities. This is sent you in the hope that you will pass it on to some friend when thru with it if you do enjoy it.

P. C.

Well, Christmas is almost here, and for a little while we'll forget square roots, electron theory, predestination, osmosis, the fourth dimension, the Crimean War, the Federal Reserve System, Wilhelm Tell, Shakespeare, the James-Lange Theory, and the P—Q formula.

Here's hoping that during that blissful period everybody will enjoy the merriest sort of a Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

To Our Parents: May the boll weevils all puncture themselves and die of blood-poisoning, never to return, and may the year 1923 usher into existence the greatest era of prosperity South Carolina has ever known.

To the Faculty: May you dream during the holidays of students upon whose wings the pin-feathers have already begun to sprout. Of literary societies from which the U. S. Senate takes example, the treasurers of which have to request all the members not to pay their dues at once as he has too much work on his hands.

To the City of Clinton: May Santa Claus bring you a new water supply, and a few witches to burn.

To Our Advertisers: May your ads in the Blue Stocking return you thirty, sixty, and an hundred fold, and may you always get the patronage of P. C. students.

To Those Who Don't Advertise: May Santa Claus bring you a pair of strong lenses with which to see the error of your way.

To Our Fellow Students: A glorious time during the holidays, good hunting while at home, all kinds, and a pass mark in every examination upon your return.

To Everybody: A Merry Christmas.

P. C.

When the holidays are over, gentlemen, let's be prepared to do some real "putting out." Remember those disagreeable but certain horrors known as examinations will be upon us soon. It's a very disagreeable thing to flunk on an examination; next to being shipped there's nothing else we find to be quite so disagreeable. But unfortunately there's only one honest way to pass an exam, and that's to study for it.

So when you are home have a good time, forget college work, that's what you are given a holiday for, to take a rest. But when you do return "put out." "Putting out" means burning of the midnight oil, means real concentration, and can only be effected by cooperation of the whole suite, of the whole dormitory. Be courteous to a fellow-student who is trying to "put out." Don't tell him all your troubles, he has enough of his own. Don't leave the door open with a blizzard blowing thru it. Don't sit around and rubber over his shoulders to see what he is doing, or ask a thousand and one questions. Give the other fellow a chance. Ten to one if you observe these injunctions you yourself will have time to do a little studying and may possibly get by on your own.

P. C.

Berry: "My dad wrote me the other day and told me to be more careful with my money. He says there's nothing worse than being old and broke. I told him there was one thing worse."

Moore: "What is that?"

Berry: "To be young and broke."

Coach Walter A. Johnson

"THE MIRACLE MAN"

In a recent issue of the Greenville News we find our coach written up as "The Miracle Man" and indeed we sanction the name for he surely deserves it. He is the youngest college coach in South Carolina, who has made a record during the seven years he has been here that borders on the sensational.

Johnson is a native of Milwaukee, and has been coaching in Clinton for the past seven years and is now only 29 years old. He is a graduate of one of the Milwaukee high schools, making a splendid record in athletics, and from there he went to the Normal College of a Physical Education in Battle Creek, Mich. Sport writers of the Milwaukee papers declared Johnson to be one of the best athletes ever developed in the high school lots of Milwaukee. He played base ball, foot-ball and engaged in track, but was considered particularly efficient in the last named two branches. While baseball and basketball and track are vital parts to the athletic program of any forward-looking college of today, the chief sport is football. All others pale into insignificance as compared to the pigskin game.

In 1915 Coach Johnson came to us, while the student body was still small, and that year he molded his first model of the "later" famous Johnson machine. That year with sixteen men out for the team he won four out of the six games. The season of 1916 Johnson's second year here, brought an even break of the games. In 1917 with the clouds of war hovering over our nation we lost some of our most valuable men who went in the service of our country, but even then the team made a record that it can always point to with pride, winning eight out of the nine games. That year P. C. won from Citadel, Furman, Wofford, Guilford College, University of S. C., B. M. I., and from Erskine. The only game lost that season was to Clemson.

In 1918 Coach was away doing his bit for the nation. Upon his return from the army in 1919 he was confronted with the heaviest schedule the college had played up until that time. Nine games were played resulting in four wins, from Carolina, B. M. I., Erskine and Wofford. Three were lost to Furman, Clemson and Citadel, while two were tied, Davidson and Newberry.

The season of 1920 was with one exception, the most successful Johnson's eleven had enjoyed up until that time. Five out of the seven games were won, and one was tied, leaving only one defeat which was at the hands of Carolina. The games won were from North Georgia Agricultural College, Wofford, Erskine, Davidson and Newberry. The game with Clemson resulted in a seven to seven tie. The following season, weakened by the loss of as good material as ever went out in a single year from any South Carolina college, we suffered our most disastrous season, winning only one game, this being from Wofford by the score of 27 to 0.

The record of the season of 1922 is still fresh in the minds of South Carolinians. Until the last five minutes the heavier Clemson, and Carolina teams were held scoreless, the advantage of fresh recruits finally making the decision negatively. The score with Carolina was 7 to 0, with Clemson it was 13 to 0, while Davidson, Erskine, Wofford and North Georgia Aggies were defeated. The game with Trinity was a 6 to 6 tie, and was played in foreign territory.

Reviews of the games played during Johnson's stay here shows the following record: With Wofford, won 7, lost none; with Erskine, won 6, lost 1; with Furman, won 2, lost 2; with Citadel, won 2, lost 4; with Clemson, won 0, lost 5, tied 1; with Carolina, won 2, lost 3; with Newberry, won 3, lost 2, tied 2.

Many men have received their training under Johnson, and hereare a few: Fulton, Galloway, McMillan, Eichelberger, Wilson and Pearce, and other names that will not soon be forfotten among the fans of the Palmetto State. All of them, as well as many others, owe their success in a large measure to Johnson, the boy coach from Milwaukee.

We are glad to say that Coach will be back with us again next year, and we are looking forward to the most successful year yet witnessed.

Delightful Party At Miss Nan Copeland's

The Thanksgiving holidays are a signal for much merriment in Clinton. One of the crowning events, and one that everybody enjoyed was the party given by Miss Nan Copeland in honor of Miss Frances Holleman, Miss Bernice Brown, Miss Agnes Blake, Miss Emmie Osteen and Miss Emmie Lou Washington.

The guests arrived about 8:30 and from the start to the finish every one had a most enjoyable evening. Conversation was engaged in. The changing committee performed its duty so well that every one got to talk to everyone else.

From the smiling faces and the hum of conversation anyone could see that the holiday spirit had taken possession and all were having the time of their lives.

There was a continual stream of couples passing to and from the punch bowl which was presided over by some of the younger of Clinton's society. The punch was delicious and relished to its fullest capacity.

Towards the middle of the evening, ice cream and cake was served and needless to say, it was enjoyed. After the refreshments conversation was resumed. The hour for parting came all too soon and the guests took reluctant leave of their friends and fair hostess. Thanks, Miss Copeland, for one of the most enjoyable evenings in a lifetime.

"Snake Brains"

Editor's Note: The following poem was anonymously contributed to us in a sealed envelope. It is only of local interest, but on account of its cleverness and applicability we publish it untouched. It is just as we received it, and if you happen to get a little balled up on the meter, please excuse that minor point and think only of the sentiment.

We will now sing the touching little Ballard entitled "We'd Hate to Tell What William Tell Was Told When He Got Home.

There was a girl with the brains of a snake,
But there were boys who had less than she.
And because of her they made fools of themselves
As anyone can see.

They followed her from morn till dark
Wherever she chose to roam.
Financially, they would have been much better off,
If they had remained at home.

I can't see why they fall for such things
For it is obvious enough,
They are only making suits of themselves,
And think they are strutting their stuff.

In the last few seasons, as far as clothes buying was concerned, lots of men preferred to wait—for various reasons.

Some waited for lower prices---others for newer ideas---still others for particular patterns or weaves.

Right now, there's really nothing left to wait for---all the things you have waited for are here---you'll see that when you look at our fall stocks.

Prices are likely to go up before they go down---a great many new ideas are developed in our Alco and Fashion Park Clothes---and you haven't ever viewed a finer assortment of patterns than we are now showing.

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
CLINTON, S. C.

College opened September 5th. The enrollment up to the present time is 189, the largest in the history of the College. It would reach 200 for the year if the students could be taken care of. All available space in the dormitories has been taken.

Capt. Ellison A. Smyth of Greenville, S. C., promised to give $25,000 toward the erection of a new dormitory if $50,000 more is raised. This dormitory, costing $75,000, will accomodate 100 additional students.

Everyone who loves the Presbyterian church and believes in Christian Education has a wonderful opportunity to do something for his church by making the erection of this dormitory possible. It can be filled with students as soon as it is built.

Students who are thinking of entering college next fall should write to the President early for catalog and literature and make all arrangements as soon as possible. The College will have more applications for next fall than it can take care of.

Hood College on List of Accredited Colleges

At the annual meeting of the Association of Colleges of the Middle States and Maryland, held at Wilmington, Del., on December 1, the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education reported that as a result of continued investigation and conference, they had added sixteen to the list of accredited colleges. The chairman read the list, including Hood, and stated that all of the institutions had made marked progress during the year. The Commission then circulated its printed report listing the seventy-five institutions now fully accredited. This formally announces the action of the Commission which, so far as Hood was concerned, was taken last May.

Tech Completes Successful Season

With seven victories out of a nine-game schedule, and no defeat by a Southern team, Tech has indeed had a successful season. Winning over Auburn yesterday gave Tech the Southern Championship, and an enviable record of performance for 1922. Had Tech suffered humiliation at the hands of the Auburn Tigers, then it could not justly be claimed that Tech had produced a championship eleven for 1922. Glancing back over the scalps hanging from the Tech belt, all Tech men have great cause for rejoicing. The season has been characterized by hard, earnest playing, by sublime co-operation and no internal friction.

The newly organized Dramatic Club of Roanoke College has already started work for the session of 1922-23. The first meeting was held after chapel on Tuesday morning with Dr. Wagener presiding. Thirty-five men were present.

"The Ghost" will be the first play which the club will present. It will be given immediately before the Christmas holidays.

Entertains In Honor of Visitors

On Wednesday evening Miss B. Copeland entertained at her home in honor of Miss Emmie Osteen of Sumter, Miss Emmie Lau Washington, of Laurens and Miss Rebecca Adams, of Laurens, Miss Osteen and Miss Washington being the guests of Miss Copeland for the Thanksgiving holidays.

The guests for the evening arrived about nine o'clock and soon the spacious house was ringing with the laughter of the happy young people. Every one was introduced to the others and conversation engaged in. It was a real treat for every one and especially the college boys who enjoyed every minute of the society of the fair sex. Mr. Dendy and Miss Amaker rendered several selections on the piano which were heartily enjoyed by the listeners.

Chicken salad, sandwiches and cake followed by Demi tasse were served. After the eating of which conversation was resumed.

The time for departing came all too early and the guests had to take leave. The fair hostess cannot be thanked enough for mere words cannot express the appreciation due to her for the delightful evening's entertainment.

Pi Kappa Alphas Give Social

On Thanksgiving night a delightful party was given in the local halls of Pi. K. A. Following as it did the splendid victory over Newberry, the social was a further means of celebrating. Several alumni of this chapter were welcomed visitors and entered with high spirits into the pleasures of the occasion. The girls present were of the fairest, and added their loveliness with charming grace. Conversation and games were the chief forms of amusement, while music and laughter pleasantly sounded throughout the evening. Delicious salad refreshments were served. The chaperones for the party were Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Boyd and Dr. and Mrs. Lynn.

Among the alumni present were L. C. LaMotte, C. E. Piephoff and Henderson. The merriment lasted long, but finally the couples reluctantly departed with the tune of "Dream Girl of Pi. K. A." ringing in their ears.

Owls Give Delightful Entertainment

The Owls entertained in their club rooms, which were decorated for the occasion with flowers, on Thanksgiving night. The rooms were crowded with the fair ladies of Clinton and their visitors.

Conversation was carried on throughout the evening, which was unusually interesting, for "Absence makes the heart grow fonder." Cards were also participated in by many, while delicious punch commanded the attention of all. Later on, fruits of many varieties and sweet cakes were served.

P. C. Glee Club Organizes for 1923

At a recent meeting the P. C. Glee Club organized for the year 1923. Only four of the old men are left this season, but the club sees promising material, and hopes to have the most successful year since its reorganization in 1920. Mr. M. C. Dendy, Mr. C. J. Milling, Mr. S. H. Edmunds and Mr. W. H. Dendy are the only remaining members of last year's club, the songsters having lost a number of their best men. However, Mr. M. C. Dendy, who was elected director by a unanimous vote of all present, hopes to build upon this nucleus an excellent club. Mr. S. H. Edmunds was elected to fill the position of manager, which position he also holds on the orchestra. Manager Edmunds is a capable business man and expects to secure engagements at a number of places for the 1923 trip. Director Dendy is a most excellent man for the position, having been pianist of the club for three years past and consequently having had much experience along this line.

The club expects to work in cooperation with the orchestra this year, both making the trip together. The Glee Club also expects to compete for the trophy cup at Greenville this year, and toward that end has joined the South Carolina Glee Club association. A meet will be held at Greenville and a handsome loving cup presented to the glee club which makes the best show there.

P. C. stands well in anything she undertakes, conseuently great things are expected of the 1923 comsos.

THE STORY OF THE YOUNG MEN WHO WERE UNWILLING TO SPEAK

In the days when Warren the Worthless ruled the land, the sages of a certain place of learning each year commanded the young men in their charge that they should arise before the multitude and make speech.

Now the young men were nearly all slow of speech, and few could arise and deliver themselves of weighty words. Yet were they required to do it before they might leave the place of learning.

And on the day of the contest there came a great multitude to hear the youths deliver themselves, and in due time the one in charge did announce the speakers. First there arose Abdullah the Ignorant and spake unto them of the mighty city of Babylon. He wept as he spake saying that Babylon did fall on account of her wickedness, and that Rome did also tumble because of her wickedness, and that his Uncle Samuel had better watch out lest he too fall.

Then arose Meshad the Mirthful and spake of the Bootleggers and he spake many words which did cause his hearers to clap their hands in glee.

And when Meshad had sat himself down there arose Baba the Bonehead and he spake of the Bolsheviki and of many other things of which he knew naught, and did greatly bore his hearers. Nevertheless the multitude being courteous did applaud him generously.

Then after Baba the Bonehead spake Sinbad the Slothful and did occupy fifteen minutes in saying naught. And when he was finished the multitude had heard nothing for that he had said nothing.

Then Timri the Teahound gat himself up and after combing his hair and examining thrice the crease of his trousers he did deliver an account of the life of some remote sage which he had found in the Atlantic Monthly of October, 1899. And the sages were wondrous pleased with it and did compliment Timri upon his ability.

And after all these had spoken there were yet many more who arose in their turn. And they did speak on many subjects. Some did spend fifteen minutes telling of the Panama Canal, and others did proclaim the freedom of the great land in which they dwelt. Some did tell of Columbus, and some of the boll weevil, but all did begin with the saying, "Lo! we dwell in a great age," or "We are face to face with facts that are appalling."

And when the young men had all spoken they departed from the stage, and the multitude did wonder what it was all about.

Finally there came a year when the young men gat themselves together and reasoned thus among themselves, "Why should we make asses out of ourselves by speaking of that which we know not. Lo every year the speeches wax poorer and poorer." And one among their number spake and said, "Let him who desires experience in speech speak if he chooses. As for me I expect to till the soil and have no need of public speaking." Then quoth another, "Thou hast expressed my sentiments; I shall make my living vending pills and patent medicines and sundry other remedies; why should I learn to deliver myself of weighty words." "By the sacred eye tooth of the good Caliph Haroun al Raschid," spake a third, "Thou art right. I hope to entice my simoleons out of the people by selling them flour and oil and sardines and bacon. I am to run the grocery of my father when I leave here. What need have I to bone upon Babylon, of Socrates or the boll weevil?"

And they did continue to reason thus with themselves and to importune the sages to do away with the speeches which came every year. Now the sages knew that which was good for the young men but on account of their many importunities they did give in and did away with the speeches and the speeches were no more.

But when the young men were gone out from the place of learning lo! the one who expected to till the soil became an interpreter of the law and a scribe. And because he knew not how to speak he was out of luck and he lost many clients, and did wail and wring his hands for that he had not seized the opportunity when he had it.

And also the man who hoped to sell groceries fell into evil fortune, for he decided to become a preacher and lo! he knew not the art of speech, and bitterly did he weep and did cover his head with a crocus bag and place his feet in a basin of H Cl and make loud lamentations.

Also was the man who had expected to vend pills and patent remedies in dire misfortune for that he could not speak, for he at the eleventh hour decided to run for alderman of Sardine Center. And lo! he was defeated by an overwhelming majority.

On the other hand, however, those of the youths who had advocated the speeches found that they had gone to all their trouble for naught. Those of them who expected to be lawyers at the last minute did decide to raise chickens. And lo! the ones who would preach all went into the business of raising peanuts for the parching industry. While they who had desired to enter the legislature without exception did herd swine for their fathers.

Moral: "You can't sometimes always tell whether a young biddie is going to lay eggs or crow when he groweth up."

Blue Stockings Given Rousing Send-Off Into Game

Never did a team receive a better send-off into a football game than did the Presbyterian College eleven when they prepared to go on the field to tackle the Newberry Indians, their traditional foes, on Thanksgiving Day. Walter Johnson always sent his men on the field after a heart-to-heart talk in which Coach and players came to a complete understanding of the task before them and what was required. As a consequence the Blue Stockings always went on the football in a do-or-die frame of mind. Perhaps that pre-game talk had much to do with the almost uncanny success of the Johnsonites. Who knows?

But the occasion on this Thanksgiving Day was different from similar occasions. A spirit that was undefiable reigned, yet this undefiable spirit was felt many times by Newberry ere the day was over. At twenty minutes to 3 o'clock the entire P. C. squad assembled in the Philomathian literary society hall for 15 minutes of serious talk before taking the field for what was destined to be the last game for 8 men in that room. Rev. B. F. McLendon, the noted evangelist "Cyclone Mac," a close personal friend of Coach Johnson, was present. In a talk of perhaps 6 minutes "Cyclone Mac" told the assembled Blue Stockings in his famous, vigorous, stirring style just what he expected of them, the story of David's beating Goliath just because he was confident but not over-confident, of the way he had boosted P. C. throughout the south, of the fact that hundreds of thousands of eyes were directed toward Clinton to see what that marvelous light team was going to do this day. In short, Mr. McLendon roused in his audience that fighting, unconquerable spirit for which he himself was noted.

Then Lonnie McMillan, a son of whom P. C. shall always be proud, spoke a few words filled with emotion which was transmitted to every man present.

Finally, 8 minutes before time to go on the field, Coach Johnson himself took the floor. He told his men what the winning of this game meant to him, to them, to the college, that he knew they would win if they put out the fight that was in them. Never did a man put his whole soul more effectually in an address. With tears streaming from his eyes, Walter Johnson spoke to his charges as they had never been to before. He exhorted, he urged, he commanded them to fight that day, first for their loved ones who were watching them in that battle, next for their college, the alumni, and the student body, then for all who were back of P. C., then for those men who were about to play their last game, and lastly to fight for him, he who had given them all he had throughout the season and who expected all they had in return. Coach Johnson emphasized the fact that never had a man laid down on him, and that he never expected to see a P. C. man lay down. That fact he drove home in the manner in which only Walter Johnson can drive a fact home.

When Coach Johnson finished this stirring, heart-felt appeal the Blue Stockings in that room to a man pledged in sobbing voices "We'll give Newberry H—, Coach." Hardened football veterans of several years experience could not speak a word when called upon to do so. It was a wonderful moment. It was a moment in which the innermost souls of men could be felt and almost seen.

At 3 o'clock the Blue Stockings went on the field, grim determination written on every face. That day the Newberry Indian received the most decisive beating he has ever received at the hands of a P. C. team. Did the 15 minutes of heart-to-heart talk between coach and players have any direct effect upon this brilliant victory? Who can say it did not?

Dr. W. S. Currell Gives Lecture

fully instructive lectures to the students of P. C. The first lecture was delivered in chapel on Thursday morning to the student body, the subject being "Literature and Life." He expounded the truth that if we are not growing in intellect, soul and spirit, we are dying within. Literature of knowledge, obtained from books, and literature of power, that which stimulates, expands and suggests to us. We cultivate our intellect when we endeavor to grasp the meaning of writers such as Dante, Browning, etc. We not only cultivate aesthetic side, but also cultivate intellect in study of poetry. He then dwelt on the great literary value in the Bible, a matchless connection of literary morals.

Dr. Currell's second lecture was delivered to the class in Aesthetics. His lecture was on poetry. He defined poetry as the artistic emdradiment in material, emotional, imaginative in language, in thoughts, deeds, and feelings of life. However, no satisfactory definition of poetry can be given; but the above will serve as a working base.

The poet deals with truth, the scientist with facts. The poet begins with inspiration that scientists end with. The scientist works by intellectual operations, the poet by instinct and intuition. Poetry has its antithesis in science. He then discussed words according to their sound, meaning and feeling. Then the discrimination of prose and poetry. Prose is expression for communication's sake, while poetry is communication for expression's sake. Over emphasized sense equals non-verse; over emphasized verse equals non-sense.

He continues by discussing the fine arts, Painting, Music, Sculpture, Architecture, etc. He closed by emphasizing these fundamentals of the fine arts: Unity, Variety, Form, Harmonious Fusion, ideal and real, Sincerity, and Truth, and Suggestiveness.

The students are greatly indebted to Dr. Currell for his two very excellent lectures, and hope that he will return to them in the near future.

Freshman Class Elects Officers

At a recent meeting of the class of '26, the election of officers took place. Mr. Hughes was elected president; Mr. Martin, vice-president; Mr. Holland, secretary; Mr. Wolfe, historian, and Mr. Chidsey, poet.

This is a very capable group of men and we wish them success in the performance of their respective duties.

Blue Stockings Complete Brilliant Season

South Carolina in 1922. Winning six, losing two, and tieing one, Walter Johnson's team ranked first in South Carolina in percentage, with a percentage of .750. Furman came second with '723, Clemson and Carolina next with .555 apiece. The Presbyterians were the second highest scorers in the state with 176 points won. Furman came first in scoring. On the other hand the Blue Stockings regardless of their tremendous handicap in lack of weight, were the most powerful defensive team in South Carolina, but 42 points being counted against them in 9 games. Furman ranked second in defensive strength with 76 points lost. This record on the part of the P. C. gridironsters is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the 1922 Blue Stocking squad was the lightest college machine probably in the entire United States. They averaged a bare 151 3-4 per man. The lightest team encountered by P. C. outweighed them by nearly 10 pounds per man, while 25 or 30 pounds per man was no uncommon weight for the spirited Presbyterians to give away. Yet they won 6 games, lost but two, and tied one, against Trinity, one of the heaviest and most powerful elevens in North Carolina. But one team was able to cross the Presbyterian goal line as much as twice. Clemson was that lucky team. In this game the Blue Stockings outplayed the Tigers clearly and decisively until the last two minutes when the Tiger scored two touchdowns in rapid succession by a clever use of the forward pass.

But the marvelous defensive record of the Johnsonites this year is no exception to the general rule. The Johnson teams have always furnished tough opposition to any and all opponents, as their total record in another section of this paper will prove.

The record for 1922 is as follows:

P. C. 8—Davidson 7.
P. C. 0—Carolina 7.
P. C. 0—Clemson 13.
P. C. 19—Erskine 0.
P. C. 9—Citadel 0.
P. C. 32—Wofford 0.
P. C. 67—North Ga. Aggies 0.
P. C. 6—Trinity 6.
P. C. 35—Newberry 9.
P. C. total score 176; opponents' total score 42.

VOLUME 4 PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, JANUARY 13, 1923 NUMBER 8

Johnson Declines Flattering Offer

To Remain At Presbyterian College.

Even though we live in the 20th century, it is doubtful if this century of whirling rapidity, ever-changing customs, football players, flappers, divorces, suffragettes, snake-brains, and would-be-martyrs, is radically different fundamentally from the 4th century. Doubtless good King Arthur kept the country covered with his secret service agents, always on the lookout for "round table material." At any rate a man of that time possessing the proper mark, requisites, manners, etc., usually eventuated into the circle of the celebrated Round Table. In other words it was true then as now, "You can't keep a good man down."

And it is true today. If a man has the stuff in him and does not keep it covered up, he will eventually come into his own.

In 1915 a certain young man who had just become an American citizen of full voting age and power, was on the lookout for a job. A certain college president was searching the country for a suitable athletic director. The young man and the job met each other. The job has belonged to the young man ever since—and will be his as long as he desires. The young coach pitched into the new-found task with characteristic vim and vigor. And indeed the situation was one that Demanded (capital D) vim, vigor, interest, zeal, patience, care, genius, money, men, in fact, everything, and then more, that an energetic young man had to offer. If you are interested ask Walter Johnson of the athletic condition at P. C. when he first came in 1915. He will tell you—maybe.

By 1916 the surrounding colleges began to wake up. A new star was beginning to shine in the athletic firmament of South Carolina. In 1917 the surrounding colleges were wide awake. The new star was shining in earnest. That fall the Johnson football team won 8 games and lost 1—what a record for the third season of an inexperienced coach! His baseball and basketball teams seemed to mysteriously acquire that uncanny winning habit, too. 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921 followed each other by in rapid and exact chronological order. Neighboring athletic organizations remained wide-

P. C. Fights To Prevent Spread of Flu

Situation At Present Is Well In Hand.

Although there are at present several cases of flu in the dormitories of P. C., the situation is pretty well in hand. Both faculty and students are using every precaution to prevent the spread of the disease.

Though causing a disagreeable and painful period of sickness, the flu which is affecting the country this year does not seem to be a particularly dangerous form of disease, very few deaths, comparatively, occuring in South Carolina this winter.

So far none of the cases here have developed pneumonia, which is the only thing to really become alarmed at.

It is to be hoped that the situation will remain in hand, thanks to the vigilance and tireless service of Dr. Davis and Dr. Peake. The students are using every precaution and it is not likely that the session of college will have to be interrupted.

A few simple rules for the prevention of the spread of flu which apply particularly to college students, may be here given:

1. Don't drink from public water glasses, cups, or use public towels.

2. Keep hands washed.

3. Press clothes often, don't let soiled clothes accumulate in a pile for any long period of time.

4. Do as little railroad traveling as possible.

5. Take plenty of exercise, eat nourishing food, get plenty of fresh air.

6. Sleep eight hours at least with windows open.

7. Don't congregate in stuffy room and breathe for hours stagnation.

Dendy Talks On 1923 PaC-SaC

Editor-in-Chief Gives Outline of P. C. Annual.

After having been tracked over the campus for days midst wintry winds and after having been finally trapped in his room with all chance of escape gone, the reserve Dendy, M. C., editor-in-chief of the 1923 PaC-SaC, agreed to give to the expectant Student Body a verbal feast about his '23 P. C. Annual.

"The Annual this year is going to be 25 pages larger than the '22 PaC-SaC, making approximately 190 pages from cover to cover," began Dendy.

"The Annual will be divided into seven books; namely: first, The College; second, The Classes; third, Beauty; fourth, Literature; fifth, Athletics; sixth, Organizations; seventh, Feature.

"The first book, 'The College,' will contain scenes of the campus, and a Hall of Fame. The latter includes bust pictures of each member of the faculty attached to a minature body. This figure is seen walking down the Hall of Fame. This is one of the many new ideas, which go to make the '23 PaC-SaC, the annual among annuals.

"The second book, 'The Classes,' includes individual pictures of the Seniors (full page), Juniors (four to a page) and the Sophomores (eight to a page.) Lack of time does not permit a description of the Senior pages but it was selected with care and will do credit to the best of annuals.

"The third book, 'Beauty.' This section has always been the cream of sections in all P. C. annuals and this year will without a doubt, eclipse anything presented in years. Those who have seen the sponsors of the '23 PaC-SaC declare them to lack nothing in the way of Beauty for which this book was named.

"The fourth 'Literary.' Literary Societies, Debating Club, Debaters, and Publications compose this divisioning.

"Fifth book, 'Athletics.' All athletic teams turned out by P. C., including individual pictures, arranged artistically of the famous and much talked about 'Blue Stocking Machine' of '22.

"Sixth book, 'Organizations,' includes pictures of fraternities, clubs, etc.

"Seventh book, 'Features,' is last but not least, is going to

'23 Varsity Football Schedule Announced

Furman On List for First Time In Several Years.

The 1923 varsity football schedule has been arranged and many fans will be glad to note that P. C. will play Furman next season. The old breach of relations between Presbyterian College and Furman has been settled. Last year there was a widespread desire expressed by South Carolina football fans to see Coach Johnson's Midgets in action against the so-called Purple Hurricane, and these fans will be delighted to see the game they wished for in Greenville on October 13th.

The season which has just passed was accompanied by a very heavy schedule for the Stockings, but it closed after a series of glorious victories for the Presbyterians, and it is hoped that next season will close even more victoriously.

In the schedule for the coming season, it will be noted that P. C. will not play Trinity at Chester as has been stated. Due to a conflict in the schedule of P. C. and Trinity, this game had to be omitted. North Georgia Agricultural College has also been omitted, and in the places of these two college, games with Wake Forest and Furman have been arranged.

The following is the schedule in detail:

Sept. 28—Davidson at Rock Hill.
Oct. 6—Carolina at Columbia.
Oct. 13—Furman at Greenville.
Oct. 18—Erskine at Greenwood.
Oct. 27—Citadel at Clinton.
Nov. 3—Wake Forest at Clinton.
Nov. 10—Wofford at Clinton.
Nov. 17—Clemson at Clemson.
Thanksgiving — Newberry at Newberry.

P. C. Loses To Pacific Mills

Intensely Interesting Game Lost In Last Three Minutes.

In a game that was full of thrills from start to finish, P. C. lost to Pacific Mills of Columbia, by the score of 40 to 31. The locals put up a game fight, but were unable to win over the visitors, who were in mid-season condition. The home team started practice on the third, and played this team, which is considered one of the strongest if not the strongest in the state, on the sixth.

In the beginning Pacific Mills took the lead with P. C. trailing one to two goals behind. This was kept up until the end of the first half. The second half began in fine style, the locals taking the lead on the jump and holding it until the last three minutes, when Pacific Mills shot ahead, thus making the final score 31 to 40.

Pacific Mills has played several games in the state this season, of which some are the strongest teams. Sumter Y. M. C. A. was defeated by them 32 to 34. Newberry boasting the strongest team in the state, was defeated 22 to 18. The Pacific Mills were expecting quite a walk-away and were somewhat surprised to find that they had to fight and fight hard for what they got. P. C. was barely defeated by Pacific Mills, and Newberry was also defeated by Pacific Mills, and Newberry won the championship last year and have the same men back again, so this puts P. C. on an equal footing with Newberry for the state title this year. P. C. has a good team this year composed of men who are fighters.

The feature of the game was the fight of the Presbyterians. It may be mentioned that Wilson shot the majority of the goals for P. C., while Edmunds, Scott, Walker and Mason were not idle while they were in the game. Miller was the only man who played the entire game, and it was to his good guardianship that the visitors were crippled. Coach Johnson tried out a number of men in this game and hereafter there will be some strong competition for the several positions.

But the 1923 Annual is going to set a new high mark.

P. C.

Now, who says we aren't going to have a basket ball team?

P. C.

Let's make 1923 P. C.'s banner year!

P. C.

Banner means a Pennant or so!!!!

P. C.

No, Geraldine, when a student takes three years of Fresh Math it's not a sign of specialization.

P. C.

The dingle-berry tree is visited more frequently as exams draw nigh.

P. C.

Dingle, dingle, little berry, etc.

P. C.

And its a case of first come, first served, and the demand is great.

P. C.

Ten minutes after one class opened, there was nothing left in the tree but thorns.

P. C.

The Christmas Collegian is the best put out in years. Congratulations, staff!

P. C.

The Junior-Senior Banquet is the next bright spot in the Seniors' life.

P. C.

But alas, poor Junior—'tis his pocket-book that he has to think of.

P. C.

P. C. is like the old woman who lived in a shoe—she had had so many children, she didn't know what to do.

P. C.

And with more children in view—what's P. C. gonna' do?

P. C.

Some people have changed "live and let live" to "live and let the others live the best they can."

P. C.

The "Blue Stocking" Staff trusts that Santa Claus has been very generous this year to all P. C. students, to all Alumni subscribers, to all advertisers, and to others interested in the "Blue Stocking."

Christmas is the most delightful season of the year, the one season in which every body gets the spirit. We wish it came oftener, but as it doesn't the best plan is to wait for next Christmas and work as hard as possible in order to properly enjoy it when it does come.

During the next five months there will be plenty, and more, work to do at P. C., regular scholastic work, as well as college activities.

The average college student usually studies just enough to "get by" up until Christmas, there is Football, the chief interest in college life, and so many other things to keep him busy. Then from Christmas until about April the fifteenth if he is a conscientious student he "puts out" in earnest. From April the fifteenth until commencement spring fever lays hold upon him, and he is incopacitated.

But during the months of January, February, March and a half of April he has the opportunity to put in some real study. There are some, distractions, of course, but not so great as Football. The weather is cold, and all conditions just right.

Therefore it is hoped that all the P. C. men will take advantage of these winter months and do what is expected of them, and more.

Not that we advocate an abstenance from study during the fall and late spring—far from it; but we know that only the unusual student suffers from headaches caused by thinking during those periods. Therefore, working upon recognied facts, we deem it our duty to advise concentration during the months in which most students fortuately do make the acquaintance of their text books.

P. C.

Examinations are upon us, those dreaded bogies which are secretly feared by the wisest of bookworms. But fortunately they do not last long. However it is not our purpose to preach here about them, so read on. Here's hoping that everybody comes through with flying colors. But its like the case of the negro preacher at the funeral. This particular dusky shepherd was consigning to his last resting place a member of his congregation who had been in life devoid of all goodness and consecration. As the grave was being filled the preacher raised his hands and said "Now bredren, le's pray he's gone where we know he ain't."

P. C.

Here's looking to one of the best quintets P. C. has ever possessed, certainly since the days of "Juke" Belk, the all-state center. The squad seems enthusiastic about prospects for the season, and a goodly number of men are not after a letter.

Luck to you, team of '23, and may your record be worthy of the gridiron heroes who went before you.

Pessimistic Proverbs

By Peevish Pete

He who cheateth on examinations despoileth three, himself, his fellow student, and he who employeth him in after life.

o

Look not upon the pocket edition when it is read, lest thy conscience bite thee like a serpent, and the faculty sting thee like an adder.

o

"I have flunked, I have flunked," wailed the Freshman, and proceedeth to curse the faculty.

o

The examination is an abomination to the student, but his reward is the knowledge that others also fail.

o

For once, O! my son, put thy mind upon thy books, lest thou be forced to return unto the vineyard of thy father.

o

For in a flu epidemic may a man chew tobacco and get away with it in the eyes of his father.

o

The plug of Climax is the flu germ's worst enemy.

And for a pipe of Velvet are the dread microbes forced to flee.

o

Exercise is the glory of the student,

But because of a certain continual absence of water on the third floor, is a man brought to profanity.

o

He who refuseth to acknowledge his cuts, him will the absence committee fail to acknowledge.

And upon the choo-choo shall he depart from the faces of his fellow students.

Worthwhile

Do you ever make resolutions at the beginning of the new year?

It seems to be the custom of a large majority of people to take new oaths and vows to turn over a new leaf with the first day of a year that is in its beginning. Often these resolutions to do better during the year that is just commencing than one has done during the year that has only a few hours been history, are taken in the form of jest and insincerity, and are never meant to be ones really to be lived up to.

To take upon one's self new responsibilities and goals to strive towards is well and good, if a person thinks this necessary to their attainment, but to be promiscuously vowing to do things that one never intends to earnestly endeavor to accomplish is merely a lowering of one's own standard of honesty and a waste of time.

Resolve to do something worthwhile and do it. The phrase "hitch your wagon to a star" is trite and forever quoted, but the world lacks a lot of being overcrowded with people who are aiming high.

Dr. Jones To Deliver Address On "Moral Courage."

Sunday afternoon, January 14th, fellow students, we have a treat coming to us, when Dr. Jones will speak to us on "Moral Courage." Dr. Jones is a man with a large outlook on life that we would all do well to take as our own and the Y. M. C. A. considers itself, indeed fortunate, in securing him to give us this lecture. This is for your benefit, men, and whether you are particularly interested in the "Y" or not, we urge you to be present in the auditorium immediately after dinner Sunday. There will be special music to add to the attraction.

The State Y. M. C. A. Convention will be held in Columbia, January 25th, with Dr. Mott as the principal speaker. On Saturday following a meeting of the State Council will be held with the student officers for next year present. P. C. will be represented at this convention if possible.

The attendance at our evening Prayer Circle has not been as good as formerly. Great good can be derived from these few minutes of prayer and song immediately after supper every evening if we come in the right attitude. Have you been present? If not, why not? Let's start the year right and meet together every evening and thank God for the blessings of the day. To those who were formerly in the habit of meeting with us we urge you to come back and to those who have never met with us we most cordially invite you to do so.

The old students remember with pleasure the visit of the Columbia Seminary quartette last year. We are glad to be able to announce that we are to have a visit from them again sometime this Spring. The date has not yet been arranged.

Christian Endeavor

January is the month set aside by the Program Committee of Christian Endeavor for the study of Missions. The state chairman of Missions has decided to promote this study this year through a reading contest. The local society has been divided up into three teams and each team is to see how much they can read during the month. A list of the teams or groups can be found upon the bulletin board at the church and in the lobby of the Administration building. Find what team you have been placed upon and let's get better informed about Missions. If your name has been left off it was through mistake and if you will see the captain of either teams your name will be placed on the list. The books to be used can be found in the library.

A Celtic Alma Mater

(Tune "Mother Machree")

BY C. J. MILLING

(Note: Although P. C. already possess a beautiful Alma Mater Song, few of her students are acquainted with it, and the composition is rather difficult for general use. Also, every school has one or several such songs which are sung to old familiar tunes, and which are known by every student. These facts suggested to the author the writing of a song which is here presented. It is written in the dialect of the Celt, the only tongue which is in harmony with the tune of "Mother Machree." Yet this is not inappropriate as probably more than half of P. C.'s students are descended from those sturdy races, the Irish, and Scotch Irish.)

There's a spot in me heart
Filled with love for P. C.
An' of all the dear places
Thou'rt dearest to me
Sure I'll always remember
My own college days
An' my own Alma Mater
I'll sing to thy praise.

Chorus:

Sure I love thy dear campus
Thy buildings so tall
An' thy clean fightin' laddies
Who carry the ball
An' thy reverence o' God
An' thy spirit so free
Oh! God bless you an' keep you
Gallant P. C.

Sure the lads that are thine
Be they Saxon or Celt
Or whatever the land
Where their forefathers dwealt
They are loyal an' true
To their collens, an' thee
Their own Alma Mater
Beloved P. C.

P. C. Makes Favorable Impression.

Col. M. N. Fall, R. O. T. C. officer for the fourth corps area, inspected the R. O. T. C. unit of the Presbyterian College of South Carolina on December 19, 1922. Every student in the unit was very enthusiastic over the inspection and did his best. As a result the inspection made a very favorable impression, Col. Falls announcing that the inspection was very satisfactory. He later wrote Col. Glascow a complimentary letter relative to the unit, and his success in developing such a unit at P. C.

EXCHANGE DOPE

Only a few exchanges have come in since the Christmas holidays. However, among them is the "Technique," which is one of the best college papers in the South. It is a live paper and always full of news. The "Mercer Cluster" is up to its usual standard. The "Gamecock," the "Park Stylus," and "Georgetonion" and others are excellent papers. Other exchanges which have been received are: "The Industrial Collegian," the "Old Gold and Black," the "Spokesman," the "Carlisle Bugle," and the "Maroon and Gold."

Advice for the Winter

What if it does go down to zero—that's nothing.

Missionary Reading Contest By Christian Endeavor

To Be Conducted During Month of January.

Something which will probably be of interest to all members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian Church is the Misionary Reading contest to be conducted by the Misionary Department of the society during the month of January. The members of the society have been divided into three groups, a list of which has been posted on the bulletin boards of both the Church and the College. Each member will be able to see from these lists to which group he belongs.

Material to be read will be found in the library of the College and in the Church library. In the College library the reading matter will be placed upon one of the tables and will be accessible to the students at any time the library is open. The sooner each one starts this reading, of course, the more he will be able to read. The contests lasts through the first Sunday in February. There is no reward offered to the group that wins except the mere consolation of being the winner. There is however a reward offered to every one who takes part in the reading and that is the benefit to be derived from each reading. It goes without saying that the benefit to oneself derived from reading in this contest will far outweigh anything of a material nature that could be offered.

It is hoped that a great number, if not all, of the members of the society (others are not excluded) will avail themselves of this opportunity to learn of the mission work as it is being carried on by our Church and by Christian Endeavor all over the world. Not only will one be able during this course of reading to learn of the work that is already being carried on, but one will also be able to learn some of the needs of the different fields. The work, or, we should say, pleasure, for it is a pleasure to most people to read good books, will be well worth the best efforts of any and all who take advantage of it.

SHE WAS A BEAR

One evening a farmer met his man with a lantern and asked him where he was going.

"Courtin'," was the reply.

"Courtin'," said the farmer, "with a lantern? I never took a lantern with me when I went courtin'."

"Yes," replied the man, "an' look what you got."

When the average man turns over a new leaf he is not satisfied until he has it blotted worse than the old.

Tales of Abou ben Blowhard

THE PARABLE OF THE FOOLISH YOUNG MAN AND HIS DIRE MISFORTUNE.

It came to pass in the days when Henry the Ford persecuted the Children of Israel, and Willie J. persecuted the followers of Darwin, and Harding persecuted everybody, that the sages of the place of learning, of which thou hast read, did place before the young men in their charge certain examinations. Now these examinations were exceeding difficult, and they were grevious to the young men, and many of the young men did flunk, and there was wailing and gnashing of teeth.

Now because of the examinations being so difficult certain of the youths waxed dishonest and did openly cheat upon them. And when the time for the examinations was come, lo! the same could be seen each night preparing them a system of helps. And they did write upon old films, and upon the cuffs of their garments, and upon the backs of their tablets did they write. Yea, they did also take in the folds of their garments many sheets of notes, and much typewritten matter, for that they wished to pass.

And also they did cut the pages from out their books and fold the same into their pockets. And many systems did they use to covertly deceive the sages.

Now also in the place of learning were there many honest men, men of good report, and these studied hard the lessons assigned unto them and diligently applied themselves. These youths could be seen of nights in their rooms and instead of cutting the sheets from their books, they digested the contents thereof.

And when the examinations were come lo! certain of the dishonest young men made better marks than many of those who faithfully absorbed their work. And many of the honest youths became discouraged and certain of them departed from the midst of their fellows, and others of them did curse their luck and join the ranks of the crooked. But the most of them remained true to principle and cheated not.

But follow we the career of one of the crooked youths and also that of one of the righteous ones.

Raschad the Righteous was one of the men men who cheated not upon the examinations set by the sages. While at the place of learning Raschad did find it a struggle to pass, but he always passed with a clear conscience. Many of the wicked students made better marks than did Raschad, but lo! the marks of Raschad were honest marks and bare investigation. And when the time was come for Raschad to leave the place of learning, he girded up his loins and departed for the vineyard of his father. And when the fall of the year was come he did accept a position to teach the youths of a certain school. And Raschad did find it very hard at first, but bye and bye it came unto him, and he made a good teacher of youths. And tho he had made few brilliant marks yet did he know well that which he knew, and lo! he succeeding passing well. And when the time came for Raschad the Righteous to examine the youths and damsels under him he could look them in the eye and command them to be honest in a clear voice. And Raschad gained the respect of his students, and of the other teachers and of all in authority. And Raschad waxed better and better as the years went by and he received a good position the next year and a better one the next, until in the space of five years he also taught at a college of higher learning. And he became the president thereof and was accounted a great educator.

But the way of Hezekiah the Parasite was not so. Hezekiah the Parasite was one of the ones who depended upon the edition of his pocket, or upon the paper of his neighbor for help. For this was he called Hezekiah the Parasite. And he was wont to boast of how he studied not at all and yet made better marks than all they who studied. And he did cheat upon exams even when he needed not to do so, but just because he believed it to be clever.

And Hezekiah the Parasite also did accept a place as teacher of youths and damsels. But lo! he found that much of the knowledge he desired to impart he knew not himself. He had passed it by false work, and was ignorant of the subject. And lo! the inspector came into the room one day and Hezekiah the Parasite asked one of his students a question, which the youth in his excitement did forget. Then did the inspector suggest to Hezekiah, "The boy is merely frightened, or mayhap self-conscious, do thou tell him the answer thyself." Then was Hezekiah greatly confused and he did stutter and grow red in the face and cough and cry, "Er-er-er, ah-am," which is being interpreted, "I would that I were in Terra del Fuego." So the inspector departed and the class laughed at the miserable Hezekiah, even unto his face. Then was he wroth with them and did call them many evil names and their fathers came and did beat Hezekiah with stout cudgels stoned him him with stones, so that he fled, leaving all his goods behind him and he was thankful to get away with his life.

Then he abode on the farm of his father till the next year, when taking heart he applied for another school, and for that it was too late in the season to get anyone else they did accept Hezekiah. And he took advantage of his first year of experience and did do better at first. But lo! when the examinations came he found that his pupils did cheat greviously upon them, and he could not advise them not to, nor could he have heart to turn them up for that he had done so habitually himself. And it came to pass that the superintendent did discover the fact that all the pupils were cheating, and he did fire Hezekiah the Parasite in disgrace, and he did flee from before his face and take himself unto the home of his father, and did trail for the rest of his life behind the plow and pluck weevils from off his rather's cotton and the worms thereof from the old man's tobacco.

Moral: "If thou hast not intelligence to find one thyself, then were it useless for me to shew it to thee."

Johnson Declines Flattering Offer

awake. The Presbyterian College teams and their brilliant young coach were watched anxiously. More remote outsiders began watching. The more some of them watched the more interested they became — in the young coach. Then came the wonderful Johnson foot b a ll team of 1922. Its achievements are still fresh upon the minds of football fans exerywhere.

But "you can't keep a good man hidden." Walter Johnson recently received a flattering offer from the Auburn authorities to consider the position of coach at that institution. Auburn, by the way, is one of the South's most powerful gridiron machines. During the past season they defeated Center, Penn State, and played the Army to an almost standstill at West Point. It is a tribute to any man to be considered as head coach in such an institution. Walter Johnson's friends—who are legion—are gratified that his ability is now almost nationally known. That he could hold down the job, there is absolutely no doubt whatsoever. Ability is ability no matter where it is or how old it is or how it is spelled. And J-o-h-n-s-o-n spells coaching a-b-i-l-i-t-y in Clinton, S. C. English.

The fact that Coach Johnson is wanted by Auburn is of much interest, but Presbyterian boosters are more interested to learn that Walter Johnson will continue to pilot his beloved Blue Stockings for the present. P. C. loves Johnson, is glad that the "miracle man" of South Carolina football will remain at the helm for another year at least.

Auburn is not the only institution hunting a good coach. Walter Johnson has turned down attractive offers of recent date from Clemson, Davidson, and Sewanee.

Coach Johnson is being heartily commended by South Carolina sport writers and others interested in the welfare of state athletics for his decision to remain in connection with South Carolina ameteur sports. As Carter Latimer said in the Greenville Piedmont recently: "A man who stands for the biggest and best in inter-collegiate sport, and who by his success and personality is carrying forward the torch of ameteur sport in South Carolina, is Walter Johnson, head coach of Presbyterian College. Johnson is a coach who has kept athletics on the plateau of purity, and whose teams have earned respect at home and abroad. He is alert, wide-awake, resourceful, original, up-to-date, inventive and continually adding to his knowledge and power. He has a cheerful countenance at all times and a smile for every living creature he meets. In athletics Johnson thinks only of the best, works only for the best, and expects only the best. We have seen his team in action many times this season, and we saw in it the master-hand of an excellent coach—a coach who has the knowledge of football, personality, and the winning spirit."

No, we do not blame Auburn, Davidson, Clemson, and Sewanee one whit. If they had Walter Johnson, we would try to get him, too.

Students Plan Attack On Examinations will also see a goodly supply of the midnight oil burned.

Today the first attack took place, and it is reported the enemy's forces sustained a large number of casualties, tho several of the students went down before the dreadly battery of questions.

A general armistice has been declared for tomorrow, the fourteenth, both forces agreeing not to make an attack. However it is probable that some of the time will be spent by both sides in preparation for the Monday drive.

Promptly at eight-thirty, the zero hour, it is reported that an energetic drive is to be made by the students which will doubtless last until Saturday. Terrific fighting is expected, and the students admit that they are fearful of a number of casualties throughout the week.

It is hoped that sufficient preparation has been made for a victorious attack.

However it will be a case of "the survival of the fittest," and the few casualties among the students, which must invariably occur, deplorable though they be, will probably be a stimulating warning to the survivors for preparedness in the future.

live up to everything the name implies. This section has been put in capable hands and is going to prove a source of amusement and enjoyment to those who are fortunate enough to have access to a '23 Annual.

"The Cartoons are to be drawn by Mr. Milling, author of the Abou ben Blowhard stories, and his assistant is Mr. Galloway. The cartoons this year are expected to be better than anything presented heretofore.

"The cover of the annual is to be of Morrocco in three colors similar to that of last year, but with a different scene of the campus. The cover was selected from the choicest of covers and is a thing of beauty.

"There are to be 25 pages of ads in the PaC-Sac. Every ad will be given the same attention as the books of the Annual and the advertisers will certainly reap a large benefit therefrom.

"Mr. Wade, business manager, and the rest of the staff should be commended for their hearty co-operation in making the annual a success.

The bell caught us here but as a hasty comment on the foregoing, we will say that the Annual of 1923 is going to be "SOME Book!!"

THE FARMER'S TALE

(Tune "Dying Hobo")

In a far off country district
On a sultry July day
In the shade of a big persimmon tree
A country bumpkin lay.

His mule stood there beside him
And nearby lay the plow
And on the inside of the fence
There grazed an ancient cow.

As I stood there beside him
He bit him off a chew
And told to me the story
Which I now tell to you.

"I started out with promise
And went to school," he said;
"And got as far as Chemistry
Then all my prospects fled.

"I tried to learn of atoms
And of electrons small
I made a flask of H Cl
And one of alcohol.

"I made a stick of dynamite,
A block of T. N. T.
I made a jar of H two S
And flasks of chlorine three.

"I made a pot of glycerine,
A cake of Ivory soap,
A pint of lemon extract
Fit for his Grace, the Pope.

"I put them all together,
Added H two SO four;
For seconds two it sputtered
Then came an awful roar.

"The room was filled with beakers
And splintered flying glass,
And what had been my deskmate
Was now a mangled mass.

"I straightway fled the country
Leaving while I yet was free.
I tell you, friend, my daddy's farm
Is good enough for me."

"TO THE REAR—MARCH!"

Doubtless all of the students have heard the story of the good one Barnado pulled on Captain DeRhoan, but some of our alumni readers and other friends have not heard it.

It was 'way back in the fall of '19, when Major DeRhoan (afterwards captain) became convinced that Pvt. Barnado needed the instruction provided in the "awkard squad." Turning toward Barnado he shouted in his high falsetto, "Barnado! Barnado! have you ever had any military training before you came here?"

"E-e-e, No, Sir," replied Barnado, "an' I ain't had none since."

Lyceum of '23-'24 Being Considered

Rising Seniors To Decide Monday.

The Lyceum course of 1923-1924 under the auspices of the rising Senior class is to be acted upon Monday by the class of 1924.

The representative of the Redpath Lyceum bureau was on the campus Tuesday. However, due to the fact that many of the Juniors were sick or just recovering from influenza and were confined to the dormitories on account of bad weather, a class meeting was not called that day. It was possible however, for several of the class officers to look over the advertising matter on all the numbers of the 1923-1924 courses to be offered and the men have spoken very favorably of the new attractions.

According to information that has been gathered, the representative of the Redpath bureau will be on the campus again Monday and a meeting of the Junior class will be called at that time to discuss the different numbers and to act upon next season's Lyceum course.

Dr. Brimm of the faculty also had the opportunity to look over the illustrated sheets carried by the representative and he spoke very complimentary of Redpath's offerings for '23-'24 and expressed his hope and desire that the class of '24 would bring the course of Lyceum attractions to Clinton. He consented to express his opinions in regard to the new course.

Dr. Brimm has always been a strong advocate of the Lyceum courses and has been active in bringing these series of highly cultured attractions to Clinton's stage more than once.

The Lyceum course now being given under the auspices of the '23 class is one of the best that Clinton has ever had and is proving successful in every way. And if the new course is better (as it seems to be) it's going to be a gala season for P. C. students and Clinton folks.

She Didn't Smoke

With a supercilious look she glared at him and replied: "Thank you, I don't smoke."

Will Probably Hear Girls' Glee Club

Junior Class To Sponsor Attraction

The Junior Class has been endeavoring to book a Girls Glee Club for the music loving students and people of Clinton. Just at present, the class of '24 is not ready to announce officially just what college club will appear here. However, the secretary has been in communication with several colleges who usually send out glee clubs above the average and will probably be ready in the near future to make public what attraction he has booked.

The students may rest assured that only the best Glee Club will be brought to the campus and the Junior Class is going to expect one hundred per cent support from the Student Body. However we feel as if the last statement is needless because P. C. spirit is a spirit that demands support and backing of every worthy undertaking by a group of P. C. students.

A Glee Club of College Girls is a rare thing on P. C.'s campus and the attraction should be excellent entertainment for tired, book-worm minds of the college boys.

The date and the Glee Club will be announced at an early date.

Owls Stage Traditional "Box Feed"

Thirteen Freshmen Guests of Honor

In their rooms, in the Administration building of the college, the Owls graciously entertained thirteen freshman, by "puttin on" one of their historic and traditional "'Box Feeds", on the evening of January 20th., Saturday.

The enjoyable evening was begun with several tables of fascinating Bridge. Those who had not yet reached that highest attainment in society of a resourceful knowledge of Bridge, resorted to that milder form of social classification, Rook. And still there were those who cared not for the flippant past time of cards, but entertined themselves by relating to each other their attainments and fortunes, their love affairs and misfortunes, which were made colorful by the faithful old Brunswick which sent forth its pleasing melodies and entertaining harmonies.

But of a sudden, we find the Bridge and Rook tables deserted,

P. C. Wins First Victory of Season

Wofford Terriers Trounced Under Blue Stocking Feet

The most interesting game played this season was won last night from Wofford by a score of 28 to 25. Both teams were in splendid condition and presented a hard fight, ending with the age old tale, of the weaker yielding to the stronger.

The game begun in fine shape, P. C. taking the lead from the beginning. She forged ahead 8 points before the opponents were able to present opposition in scores. Ricker started by ringing the first basket, then Scottie found refuge by adding two more. Ricker now presented four more baskets, and at this point the game seemed lull a bit, and Wofford took the offensive bringing the score up to 12 to 14. This was the nearest that Wofford came to the Blue Stocking score. The score was brought up to 13 to 18 still in P. C.'s favor when the first half ended. The last half was mostly a repitition of the first half, and the game ended with the score 28 to 25 in P. C.'s favor.

This was one of the most exciting games ever played on the local floor, for every one remembered the game played last year between the same two teams, neither team losing any of their players.

For the Blue Stockings every man starred, but there is one who has only lately realized his ability and to him is due special credit for his meritorious playing. This is the first game that Ricker has played as much as a half in but he showed his mettle in this one and we hail him as one of P. C.'s stars. Keep it up old boy we are watching you. Scott and Wilson played their usual good game, with Miller and Mason scarcely letting the enemy get in sight of the goal. Goals: 6 for Ricker, 4 for Scott, 1 for Miller.

Flu Situation Becoming More Serious

One Case of Pneumonia is Reported

The flu situation in the Presbyterian College has assumed a rather serious aspect. About thirty-five or forty cases have been reported, some twenty or more being down at the present writing, the largest number yet sick at one time in the history of this year's epidemic.

One case of pneumonia has developed in Spencer, Mr. Clinton, popular and prominent freshman, being the victim. The hope is expressed by every one both faculty and student body, that Mr. Clinton will have a speedy recovery.

Dr. Davis, the college physician, and Dr. Peake, who rendered such valuable service to the athletic association during the Football season, are both busily engaged in combating the disease on the campus.

The students are observing every possible caution with but few exceptions, and it is hoped that the situation can be successfully kept in hand. The chief difficulty is the fact that the college possesses no infirmary and there is no possible means of segregating the patients, who remain in their rooms until their recovery, their roommates running the danger of contracting the disease.

Newberry Game Is Postponed

Will Be Played February 16 Instead of January 23.

The basketball game scheduled for January 23 between Newberry and P. C. on the Indian's court, has been postponed until February 16. Other changes occurring on the Presbyterians' basketball date card are the changing of the return date with Furman at Greenville from February 20 to February 19, and the addition of a game in Clinton with Sumter Y on a date to be announced later. This gives the Johnson quintet a total of 16 games to be played from January 22 to February 22.

P. C.

Wouldn't Go Far

During R. W. Montgomery's recent illness Donnie Kirven rushed to the phone and cried, "Oh! Dr. Davis, Specs is wandering in his mind!"

Dr. Davis replied: "Never mind, he won't go far."

Furman Noses Out Blue Stockings

Wins in Last Moments of Rough Game.

In a rather rough game of basketball the far-famed Purple Hurricane of Furman University nosed out the equally far-famed Blue Stocking quintet of Presbyterian College by the close score of 23-21, time: January 22, 1923. It was the first athletic contest of any kind between the institutions since 1919. Hence the battle was all the more interesting from that standpoint. It marked the opening of an era of what promises to be hot, honest-to-goodness, wholesome rivalry between two of Carolina's most popular institutions on the gridiron, court and diamond.

The encounter exhibited early earmarks of being a hot, fast, gruelling exhibition of basketball. The Presbyterians jumped to a 6 point lead, thanks mainly to the keen eye and excellent work of Captain Mason. Throughout the game Mason kept up his steady, consistent, clean work. He was all over the floor leading in attack and setting a fiery example on defense. Mason played a clean game as well as a hard game, for never once did the genial captain have a foul called on him. Such cannot be said of any other man on the flooor.

But Furman, led by Waters and Brock, came back strong and tied the count at 6 all. Whereupon the lead alternated to a 14-14 tie at the close of the first half. The second half was a replica of the first, with the exception that Furman counted 9 points to 7 for the local basketeers. But the lead alternated many times by one point margins.

There are several reasons for the extreme closeness of the score. Among them is the brilliant work of the Presbyterian guards, Wilson and Miller. Miller was the dependable rock that blocked the way to the P. C. basket, while Wilson was the roving demon that time and again ripped Furman offensives to pieces and performed the same operation on the Baptist defense. Added to the noble work of this pair is the splendid performance of Captain Mason. However, a second reason was the good work of certain component parts of the Hurricane, both individually and collectively. Quisenbury and Simpson were exceed-

Oh Henry! Bacon Burns!

P. C.

Welcome back to our campus, Furman.

P. C.

P. C. 21, Furman 23. Another case where figures lie. There wasn't two points difference in the two teams.

P. C.

However, Furman should justly feel proud of her victory—she beat a good team.

P. C.

Oh! Luck! Where is thy sting!!

P. C.

Anyway, our basketeers had the Hurricane blowing 'till it was Purple.

P. C.

Oh! well, it was the first time in four years that Furman has beaten P. C.

P. C.

We might refer Capt. Mason to Prof. Martin's rabbit foot.

P. C.

A history of that rabbit foot would make ole Man Wells' efforts seem like a dime novel.

P. C.

Ice, Ice, everywhere—and not a drop of water on the third floor.

P. C.

Consider the oyster—it getteth stewed and all is well.

P. C.

But consider a man—when he getteth stewed he is sure to go to———jail.

P. C.

Makers of history usually make more trouble than anything else.

P. C.

If ignorance is bliss—examinations must reveal to the professors what heaven is.

P. C.

No, Bertha, Peevish Pete, author of "Pessimistic Proverbs" is not married.

The song of the oppressed: "If professors were my students there would be sweet revenge."

P. C.

Don't fail us, Juniors. Give us the Lyceum or give us death!

P. C.

Well, exams are over at last. For a while, at least, we can afford to sleep till the sun rises. No more boning till three o'clock and rising at four. No more funneling of scalding coffee twice a day by the gallon to keep us awake. We can turn attentive ears to the voice of "Nature's Sweet Restorer" now. We can go to bed if we wish to at eight o'clock and remain there till another eight o'clock.

The trash man has just succeeded in gathering together and burning the debris of last week. Page after page of fine figures, small letters, formulae, conjugations, declensions, rules, generalizations, principles, lists of methods, outlines, abstracts, dates, lists of muscles, blood vessels, strong verbs, and Julean kings.

Surely examinations are an abomination, a weariness to the flesh.

P. C.

The PaC-SaC is coming along nicely, so says the Blue Stocking reporter, who interviewed Editor Dendy for last issue. We wish to urge everyone to give the heartiest cooperation to Mr. Dendy on this great undertaking. Few realize the magnitude of the task of editing a PaC-SaC, consequently students are often a little thoughtless in the cooperation given to the editor.

Not the least item under this head is the payment of Literary Society Dues. We have possibly harped upon this a good deal, but as long as it is needed our trusty old instrument will continue to vibrate. This applies not only to the PaC-SaC. but to the other two publications as well. College publications unfortunately require money to be run efficiently. We heard a man remark only the other day, Well, I used to pay my literary society dues up promptly, but nobody else pays them up, and nothing is done, so why should I pay mine." Suppose every man in the student body used such a fallacious argument. It does not take a Philadelphia lawyer to figure the result. The city of Clinton is simply worked to death for ads. The majority of the merchants advertise in one of the three publications, many advertise in two of them, some few in all three. Clinton, therefore, is simply milked dry of ads. The students, consequently, have got to pay a part of the expense of their college publications. And at present they are not doing it. If this condition is not remedied one of the publications will simply have to be discontinued. Which would you be willing to lay aside? Ask yourself the question. Could P. C. afford to drop one of her three publications? The "PaC-SaC" is on its feet; "The Blue Stocking" is still a bi-weekly, but she is fighting like a galliwampus defending her nest against a male whippenpoof; the 'Collegian" has one knee still on the mat but both her eyes are open and she's snorting fire.

Has P. C. ever laid down on a job yet? Will she lay down and see one or all of her publications lose the gallant fight they are putting up just because everybody is waiting for the other fellow to pay up first?

Gentlemen, let this thought soak into the old ivory if nothing else. Here's the whole thing in a pinder hull. One of P. C.'s publications is going to the dogs (delicacy prevents us using stronger language) if those dues are not paid up.) And paid up P. D. Q.

P. C.

Serious as is the flu situation up to the time of writing, no definite action has been taken towards preventing the spread of the disease.

There are twenty or more cases of flu in the student body, some four hundred in the city of Clinton, and around a hundred at Thornwell.

We believe that it is highly conducive to the spread of the disease to allow patients to remain in the same dormitories with the other students. Almost every suite has one or more cases and the disease is rapidly spreading at the present time. It is true that it seems to be a mild form of the disease, but one case of pneumonia has resulted and others may follow. Recovery seems in the majority of cases to be rapid, but that is no reason to be careless in the segregation of cases.

Another item of importance is the nourishment. If there is any time when food needs to be carefully prepared and served hot it is in a case of influenza. This is in no way the fault of Mrs. Hunter—we wish to definitely clear that point before proceeding. The food is prepared in the best possible manner in the mess hall, but by the time it reaches the dormitory it is cold, and often half the coffee or milk has spilled over. How unappetizing to a sick patient must be a tray of cold nourishment, and half a cup of luke-warm coffee, the rest generously shaken over the hominy and toast. Without a regular infirmary the college can do no better, but some measures should be taken even if the college has to be closed.

Many high schools and some colleges have already shut up shop, and if she cannot do anything else we believe it would be advisable for P. C. to take this step.

P. C.

"Those Chicago detectives must be awfully cruel."

"Why so?"

"I see here where they cut off a burglar's retreat."

Roanoke Hears Lecturer

"There is no Communism left in Russia. In the near future something new is going to happen. Neither the old regime, nor Bolshevism will return," stated Sir Paul Dukes who delievered the third Hoover lecture of the season in the gymnasium last Friday evening. His subject, as had been announced, was "Secret Service in Red Russia."

Giving his lecture entirely without the aid of notes or manuscript the speaker held the close attention of his audience for nearly two hours. He gave an historical resume of events in Russia during the past six or seven years and he also vividly described some of his adventures while in Russia as a member of the British intelligence service. Although a native Englishman, Sir Paul is well versed in American slang. The clever way in which he used slang terms, combined with dry witticisms, served to heighten the interest of his remarks.

Administration Building Burned

The greatest catastrophe in the history of Elon College occurred last Thursday morning, when flames razed the Administration Building of the college to the ground. The origin of the fire is unknown. It began in the early morning, and had gained a headway sufficient to make any attempt to save the building futile. The Alumni Building was also slightly damaged.

The Administration Building was the first structure of the college to be erected on the campus. It was constructed in 1890. About it has centered for 33 years the life of Elon. Within its walls the 440 alumni have received their instruction, and in the chapel, which was in this building, they were graduated.

The burned building housed the library of the college the three literary society halls, the class-rooms, and the administrative officers. The loss is estimated at $150,000, of which $27,000 is covered by insurance. The loss is by far the heaviest that the college has ever sustained.

Kreisler The Great Coming To Lynchburg

Fritz Kreisler, who will appear in this city Saturday, February 3rd., under the management of Emma Adams, is the greatest violinist of our time and generation. In the affections of the musical public he occupies among violinists a place similar to that held by Paderewski among pianists. He is, moreover, a living refutation of the old tradition that one who is a prodigy as achild will not realize the promise of his youth when he reaches maturity, for Kreisler was distinctly a prodigy and a very wonderful one.—Sun Dial.

It was evening, and several callers were chatting in the parlor, when a patter of little feet was heard at the head of the stairs. Mrs. Hybrow raised her hand for silence. "Hush! the children are going to deliver their goodnight message," she said softly. "It always gives me a feeling of reverence to hear them. They are so much nearer to the Creator that we are, and they speak the love that is in their hearts never so fully as when night has come. Listen."

There was a moment of tense silence, then, "Mamma," came the message in a shrill whisper "Willie found a bed-bug."—The Oracle.

PaC-SaC To Have Art Contest

Several talented young cartoonists have entered the art contest announced recently by the Art Staff of the PaC-SaC. This contest is at present an experiment, but it is believed that it will be of great service in the future in helping solve the problem of PaC-SaC drawings. The contest offers no prizes, except the honor of getting a cartoon or several cartoons printed in the Annual. In this way the art staff hopes to find out the best talent to be used for next years annual, and prevent the appointment of the art staff being a hap-hazard affair, as it has been heretofore.

Candidates who enter drawings for the contest have the advantage of other cartoonists whose work has never been seen.

The following men are at the present time contesting for a place in the PaC-SaC for their work: Walker, Hannah, Player, and McCaskill.

It is hoped that other students who can draw will see fit to enter.

OF SOUTH CAROLINA
CLINTON, S. C.

College opened September 5th. The enrollment up to the present time is 189, the largest in the history of the College. It would reach 200 for the year if the students could be taken care of. All available space in the dormitories has been taken.

Capt. Ellison A. Smyth of Greenville, S. C., promised to give $25,000 toward the erection of a new dormitory if $50,000 more is raised. This dormitory, costing $75,000, will accomodate 100 additional students.

Everyone who loves the Presbyterian church and believes in Christian Education has a wonderful opportunity to do something for his church by making the erection of this dormitory possible. It can be filled with students as soon as it is built.

Students who are thinking of entering college next fall should write to the President early for catalog and literature and make all arrangements as soon as possible. The College will have more applications for next fall than it can take care of.

THE THINGS THAT HAVEN'T BEEN DONE BEFORE

The things that havn't been done before,
Those are the things to try;
Columbus dreamed of an unknown shore,
At the rim of the far-flung sky,
And his heart was bold and his faith was strong
As he ventured in dangers new,
And he paid no heed to the jeering throng
Or the fears of the doubting crew.

The many will follow the beaten track
With guide posts on the way,
They lived and have lived for ages back
With a guide post for every day.
Someone has told them its safe to go
On the road he has traveled o'er,
And all that they ever strive to know
Are the things that were know before
A few strike out, without map or chart
Where never a man has been.
From the beaten paths they draw apart
To see what no man has seen.
There are deeds they hunger alone to do;
Though battered and bruised and sore,
They blaze the path for the many, who
Do nothing not done before.

The things that havn't been done before
Are the tasks worth while to-day;
Are you one of the flock that follows, or
Are you one that shall lead the way?
Are you one of the timid souls that quail
At the jeers of a doubting crew,
Or dare you, whether you win or fail,
Strikes out for a gola that's new?

EDGAR A. GUEST.

SMILE every time you get the chance; it is the chance smile that wins.

SMILE if you are thin, laugh if you are fat, and if you are neither, just grin.

SMILE at hard luck; the fates may think you like it and quit.

SMILE and never let the sun set on your troubles; set on them yourself.

SMILE at the past and you can grin at the future.

SMILE while you are awake and you will laugh in your sleep.

SMILE when you fail, and you will die laughing at your success.

SMILE when you are mad, and try to frown when you are happy.

VIERRA'S HAWAIIANS.

Haunting, plaintive Hawaiian songs and instrumental music are presented by Vierra's Hawaiians.

Albert Vierra, the director of this company, first appeared in this country at the San Francisco Exposition. There he and his company were accorded an enthusiastic reception, and he has been measurably responsible for the subsequent popularity of Hawaiian music in the United States.

Mr. Vierra is a splendid baritone and ballad singer. His associates are equally popular as singers, and also as players of Hawaiian instruments.

The entire Vierra organization are splendid representatives of their race and land, and bring to Lyceum audiences the real spirit of Hawaii and its enchanting music.

Tales of Abou ben Blowhard

THE STORY OF ALI BEN BOODLA AND DESHIR THE DIFFIDENT

The epistle of Emir Abdulla to his son Sinbad the Student in the year that the latter abode at the place of learning, here faithfully set down by Abou ben Blowhard, the scribe.

Emir Abdullah, Shiek of Simpson's Cross Roads, and sole proprietor of the general store and post office of said province, to Sinbad the Student, his son, Greetings and the peace of Allah, and the benediction of thy father.

Be diligent in the pursuit of thy studies, O! Sinbad, my son, and forsake not the admonition of thy father. Be thou warned, O! first begotten, of thy devoted sire, who ceaselessly toils that thou mayest obtain an education.

Heed thou the admonition which I gave unto thee in my last epistle, and when thou writest thy father again forget not to enclose thy marks for the last term. Thou saidst in thy last epistle that thou didst desire an hundred silver sheckles, behold I have sent thee fifty which I command thee to make last until my caravan returns from the city whence I sent my servant with sundry bales of cotton.

Hearken! O! my son, to the tale I shall relate to thee of the days when thy father abode in the place of learning, which was two score and seven years ago. And be also admonished O! Sinbad, by the story, for it is a true story, and hath a great lesson in it.

When I left the tents of my father and journeyed to the place of learning lo! the authorities placed me in a room with two other students, who were also new men, the one was named Ali ben Boodla, the other Deshir the Diffident.

Now this Ali ben Boodla was of great self confidence, and he verily acknowledged the acquaintance of his onion. Furthermore, he was of the opinion that he knew all that there was to know of the women. And he did run around the dormitory and brag in a loud voice of his exploits with the damsels, and surely no one had a better opinion of Ali ben Boodla than did Ali ben Boodla himself. Yea, he did constantly run with Ali ben Boodla, and he did even pat him upon the shoulder, so that his shoulder waxed heavy with much patting, and he did hold for naught the opinion of the sages, and of his fellow students. And he did spend the substance of his father in an attempt to make himself popular with certain of the students.

Now with Deshir the Diffident it was not so. He was a hard student, and often labored at his books till midnight, tho he loved also fun in its place, and often enjoyed the society of the maidens, tho he was ever respectful of them, and spake not as did Ali ben Boodla. And Deshir cared not for his own company, but preferred rather the company of his friends. And he spent a reasonable amount of the substance of his father, but so do all students of the place of learning, tho verily he did not spend too much.

And these young men continued in their several ways for a space, and it came to pass that when examinations was come that Deshir the Diffident made many good marks, but Ali ben Boodla flunked sadly.

Then Ali ben Boodla was exceeding wroth and he rent in twain his garments, and gnashed his teeth and sware, and he did roundly curse the sages. Then said Deshir the Diffident unto him, "Blame not the sages, O! Ali, for whose fault is it that thou hast flunked if it be not thine own fault." So when the next term was come Ali ben Boodla did pluck the dingles from the trees of the sages so that the trees were bare of fruit. And he did continue to brag of his social prestige and of his wonderful personality. Yea, he did claim that he was quite the fruit.

And Deshir the Diffident did increase in the eyes of his fellows, and made many friends. For is it not so that true friends esteem a man for his real worth, rather than for his ability to play the game of bridge?

And the sages wrote unto the father of Ali ben Boodla, and requested that he be removed, saying, "Thy son is fit for naught save to chat of the dances he hath attended, he can work a bridge problem, but lo! he cannot work a trig problem. His constant prattle is an annoyance unto the students, and verily he maketh a swine of himself with drink, tho he hath never been caught in the act. He runneth with himself all the time, or else he doth associate with worthless parasites, and doth at all times freely spend thy substance."

And the father of Ali ben Boodla when that he had read the epistle was sore vexed, and he wept for his son, and did beseech the sages to grant him yet one more chance. And the sages granted him the chance, and he did better for a space, abiding by the admonition of his father.

But it came to pass that he flunked on the majority of his subjects, and at the end of his second year he turned his face away from the place of learning and departed, and when last heard of lo! he was vending hot dogs in the city, and stoking a furnace for his bread.

And Deshir the Diffident grew in the opinion of his fellow students, and did graduate at the end of four years, honored by the students and the sages. And lo! all the students said of him, "Behold Deshir the Diffident, how he has came out!" And they called him no more Deshir the Diffident, but Deshir the Friendly.

This, O Sinbad, is the true story of the two young men whom I knew at the place of learning. Yea, I could add more unto it, but must draw this epistle unto a close. I trust that thou wilt see it in thy heart to draw a lesson from what thy father hast related unto thee.

Farewell, and take heart O! Sinbad, my son, for lo! my servant has just returned, bearing the price of my cotton, and I shall send the other fifty schecles in my next epistle.

Moral: He who doth continually pluck dingles verily he shall one day gather a thorn unto his hand.

SCIENCE HALL

Necessary Red Tape, Etc., To Tennyson

By IVAN AWFULKOFF

Dear Professor:
I have studied
Under you since first we met
And I drop your highest course, sir.
With the keenest of regret.
For I've dipped into the science
Far as human eye could see
Studied frogs, and cats and crawfish
And the humble bumble bee.
Skinned an earthworm, laid his kidney
Underneath the miscroscope
Found within his pickled carcass
More than I had dared to hope.
Made a slide of lizard muscle
Cut a slice of human bone
Stained a smear with red eosin,
Smear of human blood, my own.
Set some eggs and cut them open
Took the little chickens out.
Drew a June bug's painted eyelash
And a San Jose scale's snout
Drew a cell of Tradescantia
Taken from the rootlet's tip.
Took my net upon my shoulder
Caught a horse-fly with the pip.
Drew the agile paramecium
Also modeled him in wax,
Made a cartoon of the volvox
And the Ameba limax,
Took the brains of senseless dog-fish
And the stomach of a snake.
Made a paste of Pasteur's fluid
And a section of yeast cake.
But I've never yet attempted
Living microbes for to draw
And I simply cannot help it
I just hold all germs in awe.
I can see them playing marbles
In the sterilizing can,
Wouldn't they play bloody havoc
With the insides of a man?
See that big bacillus yonder
Sitting on the autoclave
Once inside your lung he'll send you
Straight to an untimely grave
There's a chain of fearful monsters
That to touch were suicide;
See they're eating healthy slices
From the cake of bichloride
Watch that cluster of small cocci
Lurking on the doornob's rim
Give them but a half a chance, and They'll attack your eyes with vim.
No sir, I can stand dissection,
Think that skinning cats is fine
Even like to draw the froggie
But at germs I draw the line.

ingly jealous of the basket it was their duty to guard. Then Brock had a marked tendency to flip difficult baskets at inopportune moments—from the local standpoint. Then again, the Presbyterians had a marked edge on the Baptists in looping foul shots. Out of 14 opportunities Scott and Mason made good 9 points—a direct capitalization of Furman fouls. On the other hand Andrews was able to capitalize on only 5 of 17 tries due to Presbyterian over-zealousness.

The game was thrilling to the last moment. Both teams packed a potential threat at all times. Hence none could foretell the outcome—until the timer's pistol indicated the time of reckoning. But there was a detracting element of roughness. Three Presbyterians — Ricker, Scott and Wilson, and one Furman guard were forced to retire due to an excess of personal fouls. Line-up:

who has or is rendering a valuable service to P. C. No one could be selected who is due this honor more than Prof. Sturgeon.

Prof. Sturgeon has been connected with P. C. some four or five years in the capacity of head of the Department of Chemistry. In this position he has raised P. C.'s standard in this department beyond estimation and now P. C. enjoys the reputation of having one of the most thorough equipped and efficient Chemistry departments in the state.

Prof. Sturgeon is one of the most popular members of the faculty and the students have voiced their verdict in this direction by electing him to the position of President of the association and in the office he has handled the athletic offices in a manner beyond reproach and his policy has been endorsed by the students and faculty alike.

PHILOMATHEAN LITERARY SOCIETY

The regular meeting of the Philomathean Literary Society was held in the Philomathean hall on the evening of Tuesday, January 22.

The new president, Chapman J. Milling, and vice-president, J. B. Clowney, were installed immediately after roll call. Immediately after taking the oath President Milling called the meeting to order and took charge.

Owing to the fact that the program had been posted late, due to the illness of Secretary McDonald, it was moved that the society turn to new business.

The president, however, requested that before adjournment, a new chaplain be elected, that office being vacant due to the resignation of Chaplain Dendy. Mr. Dendy had held before a higher office than that of chaplain, and made use of the privilege of resignation.

The motion for adjournment was waived, and nominations were considered for the office of chaplain. Mr. Wolfe was elected, and duly installed by the new president. The new chaplain is a competent young man, and tho a new member is popular with the members of the society and has already produced excellent work. It is believed that Mr. Wolfe will be a credit to the dignity of the office he holds.

After the installation of Chaplain Wolfe, the motion for adjournment was brought again before the house and carried unanimously.

Due to the flu epidemic not a very large number was present at the meeting, but it is hoped that this will improve before next meeting.

It is also hoped that the members will get down to work for the rest of the year and will raise the present standard of the society.

Contentment characterized the "Rats", and gratifications, the Owls that they had offered these "Rats" an enjoyable evening: Adams, Hughes, Robinson, Carson, Wallace, Martin, Ferguson, Cousar, Edwards, Player, Montgomery, Keller, and Clotfelter.

McMAHAN TO HEAD THE BLUE STOCKING

Editor-Elect Announces Staff For Coming Year.

At a meeting of the student body on the evening of Monday, February 5, Mr. E. D. McMahan was elected to the position of Editor-in-chief of "The Blue Stocking," one of the five positions of highest honor in the gift of the student body. Mr. T. D. Wallace received the position of managing editor, and Mr. J. F. Mason that of business manager.

The election of these men resulted from the recommendation of the retiring staff. Editor Milling addressed the meeting and presented the names of the three men whom the staff had decided to recommend, making the decision public for the first time.

Mr. Dendy, Editor-in-chief of the "PaC-SaC," arose and addressing Vice President Young, moved that the recommendations be accepted. This was promptly seconded and carried.

Pacific Mills Win A Second Time

Blue Stockings Unable To Win From Columbia Quintet.

Duplicating the feat accomplished in the first game of the season on the Presbyterian court, the textile champion Pacific Mills quintet vanquished the Presbyterian College five on the Pacific Mills court Tuesday night, 31-12. Most of the scoring was done in the first half, it ending 17-9 for the Textile clan.

This game wound up the Blue Stocking's longest road trip of the season, the Presbyterians winning one and losing three. Revenge will be sought for two of the defeats at later dates on the home court, while the victory will be duplicated—if determination counts for anything. Line-up:

P. C. (12)		Pacific Mills (31)
Scott (6)	Forward	Ransome (2)
Mason	Forward	Wallace (13)
Edmunds	Center	Ingram (6)
Wilson (6)	Guard	Bedenbaugh
Miller	Guard	Martin

Substitutes: P. C.: Ricker; Pacific: Knox (6), Walters (2), Hilliard (2).

Georgetown Noses Out Presbyterians

Kentuckians Win By Two-Point Margin.

Georgetown College, of Kentucky, defeated the Blue Stocking quintet on the home court Wednesday night, January 31, by a score of 28-26. The score indicates the tenseness of the struggle. The Baptists led at the close of the first half by the same two-point margin that later won the game, the count being 17-15.

The Kentuckians owe their victory, to a great extent, to their excellent pass-work which enabled Daniel and Forwood to loop the oval thru the basket entirely too many times—from the Calvinistic point of view. These two lads were good—there is no doubt about it, especially Daniel. In fact, the entire Kentucky Baptist quintet was a smooth working aggregation, and they seemed in good shape on this night, their first appearance in South Carolina. This is the outfit, by the way, that ranked third in Southern inter-collegiate basketball circles in 1922.

The struggle was a hectic one from the start, the lead alternating at frequent intervals. Neither team, however, was able to gain as much as a four-point lead on the other. Scott started the ball rolling for the Blue Stockings by caging a beautiful basket just after the opening whistle, thus drawing first blood. The Baptists awoke soon after and tied the count. From then on things hummed viciously. Extreme aggressiveness by Scott and Wilson, added to the floor work of Mason, Miller, Ricker and Edmunds, put the Blue Stockings ahead of the visitors at frequent intervals. However, a whirlwind finish gave the Georgetown lads a 17-15 lead at the close of the initial period.

The second half was an era of close guarding. Neither quint was able to get away from the other. It was in this half that Jack Wilson won the right to be the individual star of the battle. He was aggressiveness personified. Time and time again he ripped the visitors defense to shreds—as he was wont to do on the gridiron.

The wind-up of the struggle was a thriller such as is seldom

Song Birds For Glee Club Picked

Sixteen Fowls to Compose Musical Organization.

After many arduous weeks of work on the part of the men trying out for the P. C. Glee Club, Director Dendy has succeeded in eliminating until the club has reached a status of sixteen members. The process of elimination was exceedingly difficult due to the fact that all the men trying out were just about on par. However, there is always a survival of the fittest and so it is in the life of a song bird.

As it will be noticed, a large number of Freshmen have been picked and this insures a good club for future years.

Director Dendy has been connected with the songsters of P. C. for four years, and besides this experience, he led evangelistic singing through Alabama last summer. With his experience behind him, he should be able to mould his men into a superb club.

A list of the men on the "poultry" list is as follows:

Director and Pianist: M. C. Dendy.

Manager: S. H. Edmunds.

First Tenors: W. H. Dendy, Y. A. Montgomery, S. H. Edmunds.

Second Tenors: E. G. Beckman, C. J. Milling, E. L. Wilds, R. Adams.

First Basses: W. S. Porter, J. M. Stokes, W. O. Player, L. O. Lawton.

Second Basses: G. M. Foxworth, A. W. Edwards, R. W. Montgomery.

The club will give an initial performance here before going on the road some time in April. The Orchestra will accompany them on their tour.

By the process of infiltration, the banqueteers finally arrived at their destination. After all

BLUE STOCKINGS DOWN MAROON FIVE 35 TO 23

Charleston Cagers Defeated P. C.

Citadel Strong On Defense and Defeat Blue Stockings.

In a recent goal shooting contest between the Bulldogs of the Citadel and the Blue Stockings of P. C., the Bulldogs were able to penetrate the basket the greater number of times, finally succeeding in piling up 37 points to the visitors' 18 points. There was a noted change in the playing put up by the Presbyterians, which is attributed entirely to the relatively high humidity compared to that of the upper state. Although the Presbyterians put up their usual snappy fight and fought to the last whistle, the spectator could see that he was hampered by the difference in climate.

Throughout the game the Bulldogs put up a strong defense, which forced the Blue Stockings to shoot many times from the middle of the floor. Wilson for P. C. caged two beauties via the long route.

The game started off with the Citadel cagers in the lead, Monteith making the first nine points for the Citadel, while Wilson made four for the visitors. Covington and Monteith now began taking long shots and soon ran the score up to 19 points while Scott added another field goal for the Blue Stockings. The half ended with the score 21 to 9.

In the second half the Presbyterians got three more field goals at the hands of Kirven, Ricker and Walker. The Bulldogs continued their scoring but the players of both sides seemed tired. The game ended with the score 37 to 18.

Look out, Citadel, in return game! "Vengeance is mine."

Line-up and number of points made by each man:

P. C. (18)		Citadel (37)
Mason	Forward	Monteith (19)
Scott (8)	Forward	Covington (12)
Ricker (2)	Center	Bohlen (4)
Wilson (4)	Guard	Wagner
Miller	Guard	McDowell (2)

Basketball Five Breaks Even On Charleston Trip.

After losing to Citadel in Charleston on Saturday night, the Presbyterian quintet came back strong Monday night, and led by Scott and Wilson, they won handily from the College of Charleston by a 35-23 score. The Collegians never threatened the visiting Johnson clan at any time during the struggle.

Starting off with a rush the Presbyterians took the lead and wound up the first half at the long end of 22-16 score. They came back stronger in the second half and clearly demonstrated the Blue Stocking dominance. The contest roughened up a bit in the second period, 14 of the 20 fouls incurred by both teams coming in this latter frame.

Scott led the field in scoring, with 14 tallies. Jack Wilson, with 13, was a close second. Barbott led the Maroons with 9 points when it came to scoring.

Blue Stockings Lose To Sumter Y

Presbyterians Are Defeated By Good Margin.

The Sumter Y. M. C. A. basketball team defeated the Presbyterian College quintet on the Sumter court Tuesday night, February 2, 41-26. The height of the Y aggregation put the visitors under a big handicap. The results of such a Gamecock asset can be seen in the ratio of the count throughout the game, the first half ending 20-11 for the Y men.

Jack Wilson, the Presbyterian star, led the visitor's attack with six field goals. Wright for Sumter, led the entire floor in scoring with 9 field baskets.

The game was reasonably free from roughness, for but 8 fouls were called during the contest, 5 on the Gamecocks and 3 on the Collegians. Line-up:

P. C. (26)		Sumter Y (41)
Scott (8)	Forward	Pitts (9)
Mason (4)	Forward	McKnight (12)
Ricker	Center	Burns
Wilson (12)	Guard	Wright (18)

P. C.

When one year ago "The Blue Stocking" was given to our charge we wrote an editorial telling you how glad we were to serve you, and how we hoped to do our best toward giving you a good paper.

Now the time has come to tell you how glad we have been to have served you, and how it grieves us to lay down the pen. It has been indeed a pleasure, this task of ours. We have enjoyed working with you and for you. There have been some things we should like to have done with the paper, but for various reasons were prevented. We wanted to make it a weekly this year, but could not do so for lack of funds.

However, we did find our way clear to increase its size. And we have served you as best we could.

Next issue a new staff takes charge. They bring with them enthusiasm, courage, and energy. Also, they have our mistakes to profit by. We predict that the new administration will work wonderful improvements with "The Blue Stocking."

And as a parting request there is something we ask of you. Support your new staff to the last ditch. They are human, even as we are human, and will no doubt make an occasional mistake. Also they will print something each time in which you individually will not be in the least interested. But remember the other fellow is interested in it. And perhaps the thing that most delights you will bore him. The moral of this is that you simply can't publish a paper which will please everybody on the campus at all times.

Then there is also the matter of contributions. Unfortunately every student cannot have a position on the staff. If you think you can write and do not find yourself on the staff don't consider it a personal affront. Possibly the editor didn't know of your ability. Continue to bring in contributions just as if you were a member of the staff. Then maybe some day the villain will be forced to realize your worth and give you a position.

In short, the sum of the whole matter is this: Don't bellyache about your paper if you are not helping to make it good. Support the new staff and you'll get a real "Blue Stocking" every other Saturday.

P. C.

The work in the literary societies is no more. Meetings that were once forums of spirited discussion have degenerated into sarcastic wrangles and vulgar horseplay. Where once the intellect and wit of the student body met, and where the talent was discovered, now only rowdyism and uproar hold sway. Gone is the forensic spirit which once was thine, O! Philamathean. Gone is the inspired oratory which once rang in thy halls, O! Eukosmian. Gone, gone, gone, are the literary societies. To the dogs, to the bow-wows, to the dickens.

The literary value of compulsory society membership is no more. But what of its chief other virtue? There must be some convenient method of collecting subscriptions from every student for the three college publications. A school of this size cannot put out three publications without the financial help of every student. Sad experience has taught us this. But, behold, they pay not even the treasurer of the society. So if even this function of the societies is gone, we make bold to propose the following plan:

1. That compulsory society membership be abolished, and that the Eukosmian and Philomathean Literary Societies, deceased, be given Christian burial and allowed to rest in peace.

2. That the faculty foster and advise the formation of one or more voluntary literary societies to be composed solely of men who expect to derive real benefit from the work.

3. That a fee covering the subscription price to "The Blue Stocking," "PaC-SaC" and "Collegian" be collected by the college from each student, said fee being placed upon his college bill, and one half being collected for the first semester, and one half for the second semester.

4. That the college defer one half the cost of all issues of the Blue Stocking prepared especially for high school students.

We Hail Thee Chicora, Our Sister So True

A Song To Our Sister College

(Tune: "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms")

BY CHAP, '23

We hail thee Chicora, our sister so true
We adore thee and swear by thy name,
For the Blue and the White, and the Garnet and Blue
A kindred relationship claim.
And we sing thee a song
Our sister so fair,
From our staunch loyal hearts at P. C.
For our warmest affections, Chicora, we swear
Are all centered, our sister, in thee.

And, O lovely Columbia we honor thy name
Carolina's great city of state,
The home of Wade Hampton, bold hero of fame,
And beloved by the gallant and great.
But we love thee the more
Because thou dost hold
Dear Chicora the Blue Stockings queen
And wert thou a city of jasper and gold
We'd love thee no dearer, I ween.

There's a place in our hearts, fairest Winthrop, for thee.
Sweet Columbia we sing to thy praise.
At Anderson, Limestone, and G. W. C.
And at Coker we look with rapt gaze.
And fair Converse think not
That forgotton thou art,
And blush not gentle Lander divine
We forget not your charms, and ye all have a part
But Chicora our first love is thine.

For 'tis there that the girls are most lovely and sweet
The truest and finest we know.
And every fair lass from Chicora we meet
Is an angel from Heaven, below.
So uncovered we sing
Thy praises so sweet,
As to thee our tribute we pay
And garlands of roses we lay at thy feet
Blest Chicora, our sister, to-day.

Pessimistic Proverbs

By Peevish Pete

How long, ye simple ones will ye hate knowledge.
And continue to ignore the wisdom gained in college.

o

Devise not evil against thy fellow student.
For he who does so is very imprudent.

o

He who continually bellyacheth without reason.
Verily he shall be cast into the pile of plates in front of Mcfarland's room.

o

He who drinketh out of a bottle, verily he hath no use for cups.
Therefore he throweth them up and down the hall.

o

He who tireth of meeting his classes hath recourse to lyin his bed and wailing that he hath the flu.
But verily, if he doeth it often, he shall have even that which he claimeth.

o

To the dogs hath gone the work of the Literary Societies.
And the members are reverted to barking beasts and quacking ducks.

"It is rotten, it is rotten," saith the student, when he speaketh of the conduct.
Yet did he not assist in the uproar?

o

But a multitude of absences covereth a good report with D's.

o

How long must we wait for the summer?
Lo! the groundhog hath prophesied and dire is the prophecy thereof.

o

The coffers of the literary society wax heavy with fines.
And on account thereof are the members unable to pay their dues.

Lo! he goeth into the mess hall for a cold bite, a left-over morsel.
Then he returneth and complaineth of what greedy tablemates he hath.

OF SOUTH CAROLINA
CLINTON, S. C.

College opened September 5th. The enrollment up to the present time is 189, the largest in the history of the College. It would reach 200 for the year if the students could be taken care of. All available space in the dormitories has been taken.

Capt. Ellison A. Smyth of Greenville, S. C., promised to give $25,000 toward the erection of a new dormitory if $50,000 more is raised. This dormitory, costing $75,000, will accomodate 100 additional students.

Everyone who loves the Presbyterian church and believes in Christian Education has a wonderful opportunity to do something for his church by making the erection of this dormitory possible. It can be filled with students as soon as it is built.

Students who are thinking of entering college next fall should write to the President early for catalog and literature and make all arrangements as soon as possible. The College will have more applications for next fall than it can take care of.

D. M. DOUGLAS, President

CLIPPINGS FROM THE FILE

Coast Artillery Band Will Be Organized in College

The five hundred and thirty-fifth regiment Coast Artillery band is to be organied in Georgetown, with Professor H. P. Newton as commanding officer and Howard E. Hall as band-master.

Professor Newton is planning to organize the band as soon as he gets consent of the War Department. The Government has offered to furnish twenty-eight instruments and uniforms, so all arrangements will be completed as soon as the War Department gives its consent.

The band will be made up of both from the town and from the College men. The men have to enlist in the Reserve as musicians for three years.

Though this is a military band and will not be connected with the College, the larger part of it will be made up of men from the College. It is likely that the band will play for football games and all college events. It can hardly have time to be in shape to furnish music for any college events this year, for a lot of the musicians have not learned to play an instrument as yet.

Quarantine Lifted

At last the cadets are free! At last the quarantine has been lifted! Cadets may now visit and in return receive visitors. We feel sure that the population of the neighboring towns will be swelled to the limit at the advent of the first week-end privileges.

The Board of Health met on last Monday night and decided that the situation justified the lifting of the quarantine. They were glad to be able to lift the quarantine, but they were no happier than were the restricted cadets when they heard the news. So we, the cadets, unite in relegating the quarantine to the past and in expressing the wish that another one will not be necessary soon.—Tiger.

A conference of the Student Volunteers of Arkansas will be held at Henderson-Brown College, February 9-11. Besides Student Volunteers, all those who are planning to do special life service work and those who are vitally interested in missions, are invited.

The purpose of this conference is to deepen the Spiritual life of each Volunteer and to create a missionary atmosphere throughout the state. If missionary work is to be carried on the people at home must be interested.—The Oracle.

Being a Bum

Are you a bum? Perhaps you are unknowingly.

There are many different ways to bum and many different kinds of bums, but the kind of bum about which we are concerned just now is the college bum.

In college the lesson bum is a very common type. He devotes his time to things other than study On tests and examinations he picks his seat next to a student whose paper he can copy. He, by this method, bums the professor out of a passing grade. Another type of bum found in college is the borrowing bum, the stamp bum, the stationery bum, and the money bum coming under this general classification. These bums are ever ready to let their fellow students do the buying while they do the using.

The practice of bumming is degenerative.

Bums are detestible beings and should be stopped at Furman. The only way to stop it is for everyone to ask himself the question, "Am I a bum?"

"Take all the training you can get. And be thorough," was the advice given by Dr. T. P. Maynard of Atlanta, in an address made to the Oglethorpe students at their assembly Tuesday morning.

Dr. Maynard, Ph. D. of John Hopkins, spoke on the "Industrial Features of Geology," linking with it a more general discussion of the educational needs and privileges of the South. The Fact that geology is changing from a haphazard finding of minerals to a scientific analysis of natural resources and their application to household, business, and general economic betterment was brought out in the course of his short discussion. The linking of chemistry and geology was shown by practical examples when he told of the making of bricks from Georgia clay and the development of a new stove polish, both of which contain the virtues and are without the faults of the former unscientific products.—The Petrel.

Large Audience Hears Vierra's Hawaiians

South Sea Islanders Delight Clintonians

A large and appreciative audience attended the performance given Wednesday night in the Orphanage Chapel by Vierra's Hawaiians.

This troupe of musicians needed no introduction to the music lovers of Clinton and P. C., as they rendered an equally enjoyable program during last years Chautauqua.

Not only was the "wierd haunting music of the South Sea Isles" rendered both vocally and instrumentally by the company, but several popular songs and selections were given in our mother tongue. The features which seemed to be most enjoyable was the solo performance on the Hawaiian steel guitar and the reading by the lady of the troupe.

It may be in keeping to state here that the last program of the Lyceum course will be presented February 26th. in the form of Alton Packard, cartoonist and humorist extraordinary, who we feel will put the finishing touches to this year's excellent course of entertainment.

Club Organizes

Revival of Ancient Order of Flea Hunters

At a meeting last night, it was decided to revive the ancient order of Flea Hunters. This is a secret organization which originated in the Borneo Islands, about two centuries B. C. Due to an epidemic among the fleas about 1350 A. D., the activities of the organization were suspended. Since that time there has been no one with initiative enough to start the ball to rolling again until very recently. It is theretore with great pleasure that we announce the reorganiing of the club with the following members:

Messrs. Koke O. Knutte, Cheer E. Py, C. U. Later, I. B. Dawg, U. R. A. Rnule, I. N. Apt, N. O. Mee, I. Skreem Kohn, Al I. Bye, Chill E. Sauce, Aver DuPois, Raze N. Kake, Ap L. Tart, and Ivan Awfulkoff.

The following officers were elected:

Mr. U. R. A. Phule, president; Mr. I. B. Dawg, vice president; Mr. I Skreem Kohn, Secretary; Mr. N. O. Mee, Treasurer.

It was decided that the club should have a sponsor. After due deliberation, Miss Lotta Chinn was chosen.

It is expected that the club will grow rapidly, since a start has been taken. Due to lack of time, meeting was adjourned until next time.

"Week of Prayer" Being Conducted at P. C.

Dr. Melton Clarke of Columbia Seminary Holding Revival

Dr. Melton Clarke, a professor at Columbia Theological Seminary, has been since Wednesday conducting a series of sermons for the students and faculty at P. C.

Dr. Clarke was formerly pastor of the old Second Presbyterian Church of Charleston, S. C. He also was at one time pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Florence, S. C. At present he is located at Columbia Theological Seminary, when he is a popular and active member of the faculty.

The first of Dr. Clarke's talks was given Wednesday evening at 7:15 o'clock, the Senior Class kindly consenting to postpone the lyceum performance.

Since the first of his sermons he has attracted the students by his quiet persuasive eloquence.

For some years past the custom of holding a week of prayer has been carried out by Dr. Douglas, who constantly has in mind the spiritual welfare of his students.

Tales of Abou ben Blowhard

THE LETTER OF ABOU BEN BLOWHARD, THE SCRIBE, TO THOSE OF HIS FRIENDS WHO GAT PLEASURE FROM THE READING OF HIS PARABLES.

Abou ben Blowhard, the Scribe, humble dweller at the fabled Place of Learning, and writer of sundry tales and parables, to those of his friends who in the past gat pleasure of reading his tales.

Greeting, and the Peace of Allah. The pen of thy friend Abou ben Blowhard ceaseth to inscribe the thoughts of its humble master. Abou speaks no more thru his tales. His pen hath passed on unto other hands and his voice it is silent. Soon will the scribe gird up his loins and gathering his mantle about him will set out on that pilgrimage from the place of learning upon which all the faithful must embark. Abou, the Scribe, hath loved the place of learning with a great love, and if he wax sloppy in his sentimental words excuse the dotage of an aged scribe, lamenting the departure from his friends. He hath loved the men of the place of learning (the most of them) and lo! it grieveth him to cease of his tales. But it must be so. Abou must cease his tales, for they would wax tiresome, and sorrowing he must depart from the midst of his friends. He and his fellow pilgrims, four and twenty goodly men, must depart. Allah hath willed it.

But ere he depart, from the beginning of his journey shall Abou leave unto his friends yet one more tale. A tale without moral — for verily hath the scribe ceased to preach—a simple parable of love, and foolishness. And he shall call it the "Tale of Fabian the Faithful, and Lydia the Lint Head."

In the days when men healed them of their afflictions by the magis words "daybiday" there dwealt in a certain city one Kantor the Careful, a merchant of great wealth and a lovely daughter. So fair was the maid that many youths sought her in marriage, but of these she preferred the Charming Fabian, who was called the faithful.

He was a good youth and ardent in his love for the beautiful daughter of Kantor, whose name was Amanda. But if Fabian possessed one fault it was this very devotion, which was so strong that it vexed Kantor so that he became exceeding tired.

For every night, as sure as the sun departed below the horizon, lo! there came young Fabian to gaze upon his Amanda, and he did sit until the wee small hours of the morning, so that poor Kantor could get no sleep. And he would sometimes bring his lute and make night hideous with the sound thereof, and lo! sometimes he would bring a vexing mouth organ and saw upon it till Kantor tare his scanty hair and wept with vexation. And Kantor waxed wroth and spat a great chew of Brown's Mule and sware evil words. And at last Kantor hit upon a plan to relieve him of the grevious Fabian. He called unto him one Sugra the Sly and did bargain with him. And lo! he did promise Sugra an hundred and fifty gold dinars if he could cut out Fabian the Faithful and make him cease his grevious visits.

Then came Sugra the Sly for the space of seven nights and did sit out Fabian the Faithful. And upon the porch did the sound of the courting cease, for after the seventh day Fabian came not again. But behold Sugra the Sly, after he had pocketed safely the reward, came in his place and verily was Kantor annoyed more than ever. And Kanton rent his garment and did kick the unoffending cat on the hearth, and sware fearful words. And thus did Kantor reasoned with himself, "Lo! this abominable Sugra hath become a greater nuisance than was Fabian. Verily, I have no peace, tho my hundred and fifty gold dinars are departed. That Sugra—accursed be the bones of his detestable ancestors—maketh life miserable for me." And he tore a mighty chew from his plug, and swallowed the juice thereof. "Alas, Fabian was a good youth after all, and I have forced him to depart. Then Kantor remembered the days of his own youth and how he also had annoyed the father of his love. And he wept upon his clean shirt and did spit upon the mantle and cast his pipe into the fire. "Lo! I shall send for Fabian, that my daughter's eyes may be dried," he said.

And the next day he sent a messenger for Fabian the Faithful, saying that he was restored unto his favor and begging him to come. But lo! the messenger found not Fabian. All night long he did toss on his couch, and in the morning he sought the chamber of his daughter to ask her if she knew where Fabian was. But when he was come into the chamber his daughter was gone and on the table he found an epistle which read: "Sugra and I have eloped. We feared O! my father, that thou wouldst not give thy consent. Please feed my pet Pomeranian whiff-sniff."

Then was Kantor grieved exceeding much and he did curse his faithful Ethiopian servant, and he did throw a brick at the cat, and his garments he did rend for Kantor loved his daughter with a great love.

And ere his breakfast was ready a messenger with a telegram came unto him and he tare it open and read: "Thou hast caused me to depart from thy daughter, thou accursed old man, lo! I have married Lydia the Lint Head, may thy bones be gnawed by vermin and thy gold decrease. Thy servant, Fabian."

When evening of the fifth day was come there arrived at the palace of Kantor the Careful a sedan drawn by a Ford engine. And from it there alighted two youths and a damsel. And when they were come into the presence of the sorrowing Kantor behold his daughter, and none other than Fabian the Faithful and Sugra the Sly! And Kantor fell upon the neck of his daughter and wept, and ordered Sambo the Ethopian to slay seven swine and a dozen turkeys, and to prepare a fitting feast for his daughter. "But where, O! Fabian," said the astonished Kantor, "is thy Lydia of whom thou spake in such glowing terms, calling her the Lint Head?" "Here, O! Kantor," said Fabian, and laid his hand upon the cheek of Amanda, who blushed sweetly. Then sware Kantor by the oath men of that time were wont to sware, "Whatinell!"

Then spake Sugra the Sly, "Know thou, O! Kantor, that Fabian and I abode in the same room in the place of learning, and he is my friend and foster brother. When thou didst bargain with me to cut out Fabian I told him all, and we two hatched up this scheme to get him Amanda, and to punish thee for thy cussedness.

"I eloped with Amanda only to carry her to Fabian, and lo! they were married five days ago, and are but just now come home to implore thy forgiveness and blessing."

And behold the words were no sooner out of his mouth than there appeared a messenger bearing a telegram which was addressed to Fabian. "Lo!" read the missive, "thy rich uncle Ephriam hath croaked and hath left thee a million and a half simoleons of gold, an hundred shares of oil stock, and five thousand acres of land."

"Allah, be praised!" shouted Kantor, as he blessed the happy pair. "Now can I leave my fortune to thee O! Sugra the Sly, thou slick young devil!" "Thanksawfully," spake the happy Sugra, "and can I also have thy stenographer?"

McMahan To Head The Blue Stocking

Prior, however, to the vote on these men, Business Manager Mayes, who had been recommended to serve as business manager under the new editor, requested that his name be withdrawn. He stated as his reason that his duties as football manager would conflict with his duties on the staff, therefore he requested to be relieved. His resignation was accepted, and Mr. J. F. Mason was elected to the position.

Editor McMahan is peculiarly suited for the new honor he has received at the hands of his fellow students, having served on the staff of the Blue Stocking under J. T. McDonald, and having rendered valuable service. Mr. McMahan has also been active in forensic work, in Y. M. C. A. and Christian Endeavor. He is a man of ability, enthusiasm, and excellent grasp of his work, and has endeared himself to many of his fellow students by his sincere, frank manner, quiet humor, and willingness at all times to work. Mr. McMahan has presented The Collegian from time to time with literary contributions of no mean ability, and has rendered splendid voluntary service to the present "Blue Stocking" staff.

Mr. T. D. Wallace, elected to the position of managing editor, has served on the present staff in the capacity of proof-reader, which important service he performed with ability. He is a popular student, and is receiving the congratulations of his many friends upon his new honor.

Mr. J. F. Mason held down the arduous position of circulation manager on the present staff, discharging his many duties without complaint. With his winning personality and his wealth of humor he will have no difficulty in securing advertisements.

Editor McMahan has selected a staff consisting of carefully chosen men, representing all phases of student life. The new staff follows below:

Editor-in-chief—E. D. McMahan.

Managing Editor—T. D. Wallace.

Business Mgr.—J. F. Mason.

Asso. Editor—H. J. Hindman.

had been duly accounted for, with the exception of two who were absent due to sickness, and promptly thereafter the dining hall was the scene of major operations. Immediately after Mr. Raffield said grace and a few remarks of welcome by Mr. Anderson, an excellent four-course dinner was enjoyed by all who participated in the said feast.

Finally, the feast ended and it was while the guests and members were inhaling the fragrant fumes of "Perfecto's" and "Chesterfields" that a few of Mr. Milling's ancient jokes and some of his rare wit was enjoyed. After this Mr. Scott made in conclusion a few remarks and the party journeyed to the halls of the club and participated in the popular game of bridge for the remainder of the evening.

During this time "old friend Victrola" entertained with numerous selections of mellow harmonies. Then, too, the party was served with excellent punch and cakes all thru the evening at the will of each individual.

However, the moment soon arrived that the end must come and everyone journeyed to his respective domicile saying that he had spent a most enjoyable evening.

Among the guests present were the following: Messrs. Robinson, Player, Knowles, Bailey and Ferguson. Mr. Berry was absent due to sickness, as well as Mr. Kirven.

Pi Kaps of Beta Chapter Entertain

Delightful Social Held In Club Rooms.

As the shades of the night of the 29th of January cast their darkening shadows upon the scenes of activity about the campus and elsewhere, lights in the shrine of Pi Kappa Phi were lit and cast their rays upon the opening scenes of a new activity. There assembled in the realm of Pi Kap, men of Beta Chapter and their guests.

Upon this assemblage the goddess of joy and good fellowship smiled as her will and her being were being exemplified in the feelings of the "bunch."

After a menu that consisted chiefly of fruit and various other edibles, and bridge, the scene of activity again changed, and now the crowd found themselves enjoying a feast for the eyes in the form of one of the best motion pictures of the year, "Smiling Through."

Pi Kaps of Beta took the greatest pleasure in entertaining the following men: L. O. Lawton, A. W. Edwards, K. Adams, G. M. Foxworth, W. M. Simms, T. M. Robinson, J. E. Ferguson, Geo. Blalock, H. K. Holland, S. N. Hughes, J. V. Martin, H. S. Keller and P. S. Bailey. On account of sickness Mr. Berry, who was also invited, was unable to attend.

DEBATE MEN ARE CHOSEN

Try Outs Held Tuesday. Heavy Schedule In Prospect for P. C. Representatives.

Official try-outs for the debate teams that are to represent Presbyterian college this spring, were held at a joint meeting of the two literary societies, last Tuesday evening at seven o'clock. The meeting was held in Professor Gignilliat's class room, and R. T. Gillespie, vice-president of the local chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, national honorary forensic fraternity, was the presiding officer.

There appears to be more interest in debating than ever before in the history of the college. Those in charge of the debating program report that the quality of the try-out speeches was unusually good, and there have been expressions of confidence that Presbyterian college will be ably represented in forensic activities this year.

In all, fourteen men spoke in the competition Tuesday evening. The question was: Resolved: That some substitute for the jury system should be found.

The affirmative side of the question was upheld by seven men who showed excellent preparation and able delivery. They were, B. H. Dickson, E. D. Brunson, T. J. Cole, T. E. Davis, Stanley, Eubanks, T. M. Johnston, and L. R. Williamson.

Those on the negative side were no less well prepared, and the competition was exceedingly close. Negative spakers were: M. R. Snipes, W. E. Johnson, J. I. Copeland, G. W. Palmer, J. T. N. Keels, T. G. Ellis and W. M. Blakely.

From these two groups, irrespective of which side they represented, twelve men have been chosen to debate for

Fant Returns To His Home

The student body of Presbyterian college and the many other friends of Mr. A. T. Fant, professor of physics at the college, will be glad to learn that his condition is somewhat improved, making possible the removal from the hospital to his home.

Professor Fant was taken to the hospital during the Christmas holidays when a combination of illnesses put him in a serious condition. Since then, however, his improvement has been steady and encouraging and all reports from his bedside are of a more hopeful nature.

CLEMSON NOSES OUT BLUE SOX

First Year Tigers Take Opening Court Battle, 26-22. Locals Couldn't Find Basket.

The Baby Blue Hosemen were defeated here Wednesday afternoon by the Clemson Tiger Cubs, 26 to 22 in a very fast game. The frosh have had only a little over a week in which to practice. They showed up wonderfully well for that length of time. If they continue to improve under the critical gaze of Coach Lonnie Mac as much as they have in the last ten days a great deal will be heard from them.

The Soldiers started off with a bang, scoring 14 points in the first quarter to the Hosemen's 9. The wearers of blue were unable to tally in the second stanza while the Tigers dropped two in the basket, from the floor, to raise their total to 18. However, the Presbyterian frosh came back strong in the third, and led by McNaull, took the lead, 22 to 20. They were unable to hold it longer than three or four minutes for Smith, a Clemson sub, ruined things in the last of the third and first of the fourth by sinking two and in the meantime running his point total for the day up to 7. Fleming also framed one with the hoop to make up the rest of the 26.

The Hosemen greatly outclassed the Cubs in floorwork but they were unable to locate the basket, missing shot after shot when they were wide open. Then, too, they were taking some mighty long tries.

McNaull, Presbyterian guard, was by far the outstanding player of the afternoon, being able to break up the

Former Professor Now In Wyoming

Those who are familiar with the earlier history of the college will be interested to learn that Dr. A. R. McLaughlin, who was professor of biology at Presbyterian college from 1915 to 1918, is resigning from the faculty of Michigan State college to accept a position with the University of Wyoming. "Science" for January 11th, 1929, has the following paragraph which we quote entirely:

"Dr. Alvah R. McLaughlin has severed his relations with the department of physiology and pharmacology of Michigan State college in order to accept the position of physiologist and pharmacologist at the experiment station at the University of Wyoming. He will assist in the investigation of plants poisonous to livestock.

STOCKINGS WIN BY SAFE MARGIN

Captain Adair and "Pete" Dunlap Are Stars. Patton, Fleming Shine for Millers.

The Blue Stocking quintet showed a remarkable development of form to decisively defeat the fast Laurens mill aggregation in the Leroy Springs gym Thursday night, by the score of 36-18. The Hosemen presented a beautiful passing combination, interspersed by the brilliant shooting of "Pete" Dunlap. They took the lead after the first few moments of play, and held it easily throughout the remainder of the contest.

"Pete" Dunlap led the parade with nineteen points, sixteen of them being accounted for by field goals, the remainder being garnered by the free toss route. Bill Adair played his usual brilliant game at guard.

Three teams were used by Coach Johnson during the contest, each of them showing a decided superiority to the Millers. It was easy to see that since the Carolina game, the men have been put through a thorough drilling and are rapidly approaching mid-season form.

Presbyterian got off to a flying start when Orell Dunlap took the ball on a neat pass from Caldwell and heaved it through the hole for the opening score. Laurens immediately retaliated when Robbins drew a bead from the middle of the floor, and evened things up. At this point the Johnsonians limbered up and assumed complete control of the evening's activities. Pete Dunlap fired from the hip —two points. Ditto for Caldwell. Bagwell of Laurens, converted a free throw, and was followed by Cox with a basket to close the Millers' threat for the first quarter. Time was called with the score standing eight to five.

A fresh five took the floor as the Freshmen Are Stage Struck

At a meeting of the freshman class which was held Monday night, the rats decided to stage a play in order to challenge the dramatic club. Mrs. Marshall Brown has kindly consented to act as director. The boys are showing some real enthusiasm and seem willing to do their best to make the play a success. The freshman class is fortunate in having several boys of unusual dramatic ability: Bill Simpson, "Caesar" Myers, and Gus Adams have been appointed to work with Mrs. Brown in getting up the play. If the members of the dramatic club do not display some real activity, they will probably find that the freshmen have proved their betters.

This is the first time in the memory of present students, that a freshman class has undertaken to stage a play. It is hoped that the action the class has taken will serve to start a custom, and that it will be followed by each succeeding group of "rats."

It is not known at present whether a three-act or a one-act play will be chosen; but the committee has given out the information that one or two orders have been sent, and a decision should therefore be reached within the next week or two.

Work on the production will start as soon as possible after exams. There will be competitive try-outs for places in the cast, the date of which will be announced in an early issue of The Blue Stocking. Present plans are that the play will be staged as soon as possible after March 1st.

GRIDSTERS CHOOSE BECKMAN HOSE LEADER NEXT SEASON

Well known Blue Stocking Guard Gets Highest Athletic Honor. That Presbyetrian College Can Give. Friday Is Lucky Day for McClellanville Boy.

Head Man For 1929

D. D. BECKMAN, CAPTAIN-ELECT

At a meeting of the football letter men of the past season, held Friday, January 18th, D. D. Beckman of McClellanville, S. C., was unanimously elected captain for the 1929 season. "Beck" is familiar not only to students at Presbyterian college, but to people throughout the state who have witnessed his dynamic play at guard during the past two seasons.

Beckman first came to P. C. in the fall of 1925, at which time he was entered as a member of the freshman class. During that year he played guard on the freshman football team and distinguished himself by the stellar quality of his work. He did not return the next fall, but stayed out of school altogether for a year.

When he returned to Presbyterian in 1927 he donned the uniform of the Garnet and Blue and reported for his favorite sport. That year he saw considerable action, but did not appear in the regular line-up.

At the opening of the season just past he made a bid for one of the guard positions that was not to be denied. His work in every game was more than creditable, and in many cases brilliant. By his hard work and faithfulness, as well as by his football ability, "Beck" has won the honor that his teammates have conferred on him. P. C. is relying on Beckman to carry her banner in the attack next year.

R. O. T. C. GETS NEW ROOMS

Military Department Classroom Activities Transferred To Science Building.

Officials of the military unit are pleased to announce that the department is henceforth to have a classroom of its own. During the semester just ending classes in military have been obloged to accept the hospitality and generosity of Dr. M. G. Woodworth of the English department, who has kindly shared his room with the army. This has no doubt caused considerable trouble to Dr. Woodworth and the military department takes this opportunity to acknowledge his courtesy.

After considerable labor, a room in the basement of the science building has been put into shape. The walls have been whitewashed, tables have been set up, and everything is in readiness for the permanent occupancy of the R. O. T. C. unit. Lieutenant A. N. Taylor, U. S. A., is pleased at the prospect of having a room in which to work freely with his "playthings" as he calls them, without the worry of causing possible inconvenience to anyone else. According to his plans there will be set up a sand table, and space will be set aside for exhibition of the various arms used by the infantry and machine gun units of the United States army.

The room, it is learned, will be arranged to accommodate the demonstration problems with which the military classes must of necessity deal. There will also be charts and maps hung on the wall, so that the aspect will be in keeping with the purpose of the new quarters. An adjoining room will be used for the storage of supplies.

'Good Will Flights' Claim McSween

Absence of President McSween from the campus during the past week has been due to the fact that he is on another of the "good-will" flights that have kept him almost constantly on the move since his acceptance of the presidency of the college. His several itineraries have carried him to the far corners of the state as well as into Georgia and, in one case, as far as Fort Worth, Texas, where he attended a meeting of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the South.

In every town and church he has visited he has won friends for P. C.

Two New Meets For Rifle Team

Presbyterian's rifle team is each week acquiring new matches. Since the Christmas holidays, challenges have been received from two colleges, both of which have been accepted; and the corresponding additions to the schedule made. This time they are Washington college, St. Louis, Missouri, and LaFayette college, located at Easton, Pennsylvania. The present schedulue as it stands completed looks like a test in geography.

The match with Washington college has been set for February 6th, at which time Texas A. & M. will also be shot, the scores of the ten men being duplicated and sent to both colleges for comparison with the best they have done.

Lafayette college will be encountered simultaneously with the Fourth Corps area match. The team is practicing every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday mornings, and should be in good shape for the coming competition.

If an examination looks like hardship, picture what you would be doing if you weren't in college. Work. Of course it is not everyone that considers examination week a necessary evil that we muust take like a dose of medicine. Y. M. C. A. HOLDS ANNUAL MEET

Columbia Is Scene of Gathering. College Division Session Comes In March.

The tenth annual convention of the Y. M. C. A. of South Carolina met in Columbia last Tuesday. Delegates from every city in the state that has a Y. M. C. A. were present, as well as representatives from all the men's colleges in the state.

The chief object of the meeting was to make plans, prepare a budget, and discuss other matters necessary for the carrying on of the "Y" work for the coming year. Reports from the delegates that represented South Carolina at the national convention were made, new committees appointed, and the new state committee named for term ending 1932.

Devotional services were held by Rev. Dr. Lapsley, of the First Presbyterian church of Columbia at the beginning of the meeting and an inspiring address by F. S. Brockman, former head of the Y. M. C. A. in China was the outstanding part of the day's program. The budget for last year was reported on and it was found that there was a balance of eight dollars to the credit of the "Y" after all 1928 bills had been settled. The budget for the coming year is planned to be $12,000, which is larger than any previous year.

All the colleges represented were called on for reports of their work for the past year. It was found that the chief trouble in all the colleges was keeping the interest of the students at the meetings, and a resolution was passed that the state or national committee make out suggestive programs for the period of a year and give them to the schools.

It was decided to put the meeting for the colleges of the state in the first week in March, at which time the new officers are urged to be present, as the main object will be to instruct them in their work on the campus. At this time the officers for the state will be elected.

The convention closed with a banquet at the Rose Mary tea room. Ex-Governor Manning was the toastmaster and with several short snappy addresses the convention adjourned until next year.

Dr. Jones To Give S. C. History Course

Dr. F. D. Jones, professor of psychology and philosophy at Presbyterian college, is offering a course in South Carolina history the second semester in which the students are taking quite an interest. Dr. Jones himself is generally admitted as being an authority on the history and development of this state. Very recently he has edited a history of the Presbyterian churches of South Carolina in which is traced the founding and development of each church and denominational institution in the state. He is also a thorough student of the political history of South Carolina and of the botany of this section, having done much work in the latter field especially.

The course as announced will include from the colonial period through Reconstruction. It is open for all who are not now carrying the limit of eighteen hours. It has been decided that the class will meet on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at the nine o'clock period.

Aside from the value of the course itself, it offers a timely opportunity for men who are behind in their hours to make three extra ones in a course which will be of value to them, regardless of their work when they finish college.

P. C. Students Hurt In Wreck

Disaster overtook a group of P. C. boys when the car they were driving crashed into a stone wall in Laurens, S. C., last Tuesday night. It was at a late hour, and the defective lighting of the old Ford in which they were riding is one of the factors to which the accident is attributed. Those injured were H. D. Montgomery of Hartsville, S. C., who was in the front seat, and W. H. Weldon, St. Charles, S. C., who was driving.

As the car crashed into the wall, Montgomery and Weldon were thrown forward against the windshield, which shattered and caused severe cuts to both boys. They were rushed to a hospital in Laurens where physicians were busy with Montgomery for nearly two hours. Weldon sustained a cut in his lower lip, while Montgomery was severely lacerated about the neck and head. There was some difficulty in stanching the flow of blood from Montgomery's wounds, and several times the accumulated flow burst out stitches which had been put in by the doctors.

Both boys were brought back to the campus the following day and are pronounced in no danger except from possible infection. It is hoped that the cuts will heal without any disfiguring scars but this cannot be predicted as yet.

It is said that "Monty" Montgomery might have been thrown from the car to sustain additional injuuries had it not been for the other occupants of the car who pulled him back when the accident occurred. Those in the back seat were R. W. Johnston, of Winnsboro, also a senior, "Granny" Thornton, of Chester, and Bostick Wyman, of Charleston. Except for minor bruises they are none the worse for the experience and are attending classes as usual.

second period opened, and immediately resumed hostilites. Snipes, Roberts, and Green made contributions to the rising tide. Before the half ended a third team was injected into the game, but there was no further scoring and the half ended after Robbins again made good a difficult shot. The score at halftime was 17-8.

Patton, tricky forward, entered the Laurens line-up in the second half, and organized the Millers' attack. They presented a very real threat during the entire third section. After he had scored by a basket and two free throws, Captain "Wild Bill" Adair undertook to supervise his actions and that was finis for Mr. Patton.

The fourth quarter was a joy-ride for the Calvinists with Pete's hand on the throttle. In the opening moments he bewildered the opponents' defense and rang the bell repeatedly. After a short dose of this the lead grew to such dimensions as to warrant the insertion of the second five. The final gun stopped the slaughter at 36-18.

the college. On the team proper there are eight men. Those selected were: Brunson, Cole, T. E. Davis, T. M. Johnston, Chapin, J. I. Copeland, Palmer, and J. T. N. Keels. Four men were named as alternates, to be called on if members of the team are incapacitated at any time. They were: Dickson, W. E. Johnson, Ellis, and Blakely.

The schedule as it is planned will be a hard one and one that will call for a lot of exhaustive study on the part of those who make the team.

So far, no dates have been definitely decided, but it is reasonably certain that two or three debates will be held. Two others are in question, and it is expected that specific announcements regarding these two may be made at an early date.

As usual, P. C. will be represented by two teams in the annual triangular debate between Wofford, Newberry, and Presbyterian. Two men will journey to Spartanburg where they will meet the Newberry team, while Wofford college will be met in like manner at Newberry. P. C. in turn will be host to the teams from Newberry and Wofford who will compete in Clinton, according to the arrangement. Last year the debate was won by Wofford college. The winner this year will have the right to debate for South Carolina in the regional conference of Pi Kappa Delta, the place and time of which have not yet been set.

Other debates which are pending are with Mercer and Furman. The first, with Mercer university, Macon, Ga., has pretty well been settled, and further announcements are expected soon. The proposed debate with Furman university is uncertain as yet. Professor Gignilliat expresses the hope that one more contest can be arranged, possibly with Erskine college.

The schedule is a hard one but the interest that has been manifested and the material that has come to light this week gives ample reason for the belief that P. C. will come out with flying colors.

and has impressed all with whom he has come in contact with his sincerity, energy, and undeniable consecration to his work. His inspiring faith in the future of Presbyterian college is shared not only by the P. C. student body but by all those who have heard him speak throughout the state.

His present trip took him from Clinton last Saturday morning, January 12th. On Sunday he preached at Lake City, S. C. Monday found him in Charleston. On Wednesday his attention was turned to Sumter, and on Thursday he was in Columbia where he attended a meeting of synod's committee on education. Friday, Mr. McSween spoke at Florence where he remained for a day or two. He expects to be in Winnsboro on Monday where he will complete the duties of the trip. According to present plans he is expected to be back on the campus next Tuesday morning, January 22nd.

N. C. Professor Is Visitor Here

Dr. W. G. George, Dr. Hoy's brother-in-law, and professor of histology and embryology at the medical school of the University of North Carolina, was a visitor on the campus during the past week. Dr. George, it is understood, has long had in mind a visit to Presbyterian college, and was much interested in the things he saw while here. His greatest interest, of course, was in the biology department where he found much to be commended in the way of equipment and facilities.

While Dr. Hoy was on leave of absence from P. C. last spring he spent a great deal of his time as co-worker with Dr. George, at Chapel Hill, N. C.

The research problem on which they worked was "A Study of the Somatic Chromosomes of the Opossum." The paper has since been completed and will appear in the March, 1929, issue of The Journal of Morphology and Physiology.

On his present trip, Dr. George combined with his desire to visit Presbyterian, the need for consultation with Dr. Hoy on another problem with which they have been working. In this case their research is directed to "The Development of Amphibian Blood."

"Y" To Sponsor Dramatic Effort

The Y. M. C. A. is to sponsor and have charge of a play given by the dramatic club, which will probably be put on about the middle of February. This will be the first attempt for the dramatic club this year and with the aid of the College Dames the boys will have a play well worth their time spent. The proceeds for this will go to the PaC-SaC staff, to be used on this year's annual.

Early in the fall the ladies of the faculty organized and offered to help the college organizations in any way they could. Last year they were largely responsible for the success of the parties given by the "Y" and undoubtedly with their aid in this attempt of the dramatic club the play will be a success.

So far this year the Y. M. C. A. has not sponsored any campus activities other than the annual rat reception. Besides this play they are making plans to have inter-class basketball as was carried on last year.

COLLEGE GETS YOUNG HOME

John H. Young Gives Valuable Property On South Broadway To Presbyterian College As Memorial To His Late Brother.

The Geo. W. Young home on South Broadway has been given to the Presbyterian college by its owner, John H. Young. The deeds of transfer were made Saturday and the keys turned over to the college authorities. The gift on the part of Mr. Young, comes as a memorial to his brother, Geo. W. Young, who recently passed away.

The property lies at the entrance of the college campus and is ideally situated for the purpose for which it has been donated. It will be known as the president's home and is soon to be occupied by Rev. John McSween and his family. The residence is one of the handsomest and most imposing in the city with large attractive grounds and all modern conveniences. The property is valued at $30,000 and comes unsolicited on the part of Mr. Young as an evidence of his interest and love for the institution of which he has been a life-long friend.

In speaking yesterday of the wonderful gift, President McSween expressed his deep appreciation to Mr. Young for this gracious act on his part. It will be a great inspiration to us, said Mr. McSween, in the debt liquidation campaign we are now waging. It comes as a mark of confidence on the part of a Clinton gentleman and will have a fine influence with other interested friends in the state. Mr. McSween stated that the property will be a valuable addition to the institution's permanent equipment and he spoke in the highest terms of Mr Young and the motives that prompted him in making the magnificent gift to the college.

COLLEGE HAS SUM PLEDGED

P. C. To Get $148,000 When Debt Is Wiped Out. President McSween Is Busy.

As the latest "dope" on the situation of the college debt is given, the prospects look brighter than ever before, according to President McSween. Ever since school opened the president has been away from the campus doing work toward the liquidation of the debt. Everywhere he goes he is received cordially and has gotten the good will of the people throughout the state as well as a good portion of Georgia.

Mr. McSween has set Jan. 1, 1931, as the goal for removing the debt and hopes to even do better than that. The General Board of Education has made an offer of $48,000 with the provision that the college raise the debt by the end of two years. A similar offer has been made by J. T. Woodside of Greenville, for $50,000, and Col. Leroy Springs has promised the college $50,000 with the same conditions. These offers, with the gift of the Young home that was recently made, brings the total to nearly $200,000.

If this debt handicap can be removed, and, from the efforts being made, it looks as if it will, the success of P. C. will be assured. President McSween is pushing the campaign forward with untiring efforts and as the days pass and brighter reports come in the whole plan seems to be more of a reality every day.

Harry F. McQuiston --- In Memoriam

The Presbyterian college, faculty and student body had been anxious for a few days concerning the serious condition of Harry F. McQuiston, a member of the senior class. An attack of the flu was followed by pleurisy and that by pneumonia. Harry was always frail, having been subject to severe attacks of asthma so that the pneumonia was hard to combat. After a week's illness he quietly passed away at the McCormick home at Thornwell Orphanage on last Sunday night, January 20, at eleven o'clock.

The funeral services were conducted at the Thornwell Memorial church on Monday afternoon at four o'clock. Dr. L. Ross Lynn and Rev. Samuel P. Bowles were in charge of the services. Rev. R. W. Carson of the Wordruff A. R. P. church, a former pastor of the McQuiston family, assisted in the service. In the absence of Rev. John McSween, president of the college, Rev. M. G. Woodworth also assisted. Interment took place at the Clinton cemetery near the First Presbyterian church.

Mr. McQuiston was born at Rosemark, near Memphis, Tenn., in 1904. In 1920 his mother accepted a position with Thornwell Orphanage.

Harry received his high school training in the orphanage schools. While there, especially because of his physical weakness, he was given the course in shorthand offered by the school. Then for one year he was secretary to the president of the orphanage, working half the day and going to school the other half. He entered the Presbyterian college in the fall of 1925. His health continued uncertain. He suffered often and severely. Notwithstanding this handicap he carried with great credit his college course. The record he made put him well up toward the head of his class. He was due to graduate at the coming commencement. In addition to his regular class work he did a great deal of stenographic and typewriting work for Dr. Dudley Jones, especially in connection with the preparation of the History of the Presbyterian Church In South Carolina. At different times he did clerical work in the office of the college.

Young McQuiston was a model in gentlemanly bearing, an example worthy of emulation in that what he did he did carefully and thoroughly. He was characterized by the Christian graces of courage, patience, gentleness and faith. He held the respect and esteem of the entire faculty and studnt body. He was active in his church relations. He was at the time of his death the president of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in the Thornwell Memorial church. For three years he had been a member of the board of deacons of the same church.

His immediate family left to mourn his loss consists of his mother, Mrs. Cora McQuiston; three sisters, Miss Ruth, teacher of music in the York, S. C. schools, Miss LaVerne of the college office, Miss Margaret, with her mother at the orphanage; and two brothers, Harlan, of the senior class at Presbyterian college, and Lynn, with the aviation department of the Government.

Speaking for the college, The Blue Stocking would extend its sincere sympathy to these and other relatives in their loss and sorrow.

PREPARES FOR THE COLLEGIAN

Editor Martin Busy On Winter Issue of Magazine. To Appear In February.

J. R. B. Martin, editor of The Collegian, Presbyterian college magazine, reports that progress on the Winter issue is far advanced. The Fall number, which made its appearance on the campus in November, received much favorable comment from other magazines throughout the state, and afforded considerable encouragement to the staff.

Mike Ledford, who has been drawing an illustration for each number during the past year, is at work on a frontispiece that should greatly enhance the finish and beauty of the publication. The staff wishes that financial conditions would allow the insertion of other drawings, but present circumstances do not permit it.

Martin has been putting in work on his product, and feels that it will be well up to the standard set by the earlier issue and by the efforts of Editor Jack Roberts of last year. Several interesting features have been planned which should increase the appeal of the magazine. In addition, he says that some very creditable stories, poems and essays have been handed in.

It is impossible to say just when the Winter number will appear. If all goes well, the publication should be in the hands of the students about the middle of February.

A GENTLE REMINDER

The Blue Stocking deems it both fitting and advisable to jog the memories of its readers on one point. That is, that absences will begin to enter roll books precisely five minutes after nine o'clock on Monday morning. Any changes in the course of study of any student must be made with the registrar before then.

Through the columns of The Blue Stocking we wish to express to the faculty and student body of Presbyterian college, and other friends, our sincere and heartfelt appreciation for their expressions of interest and sympathy during the illness and at the going away of our son and brother, Harry F. McQuiston. The floral offerings were beautiful and for these we genuinely thank our friends.

Mrs. Cora McQuiston and Family.

Wofford Affair Is Tough Contest

Spartanburg, Jan. 21.—The line up read like a football game, and a football game it became as Wofford and Presbyterian college roughed and tumbled it here on the court tonight. Wofford won, 27 to 20.

Capt. Perrin Dargan of Terrier gridiron fame led the attack and the scarlet clad men of Wofford proved to be mightier than the Blue Stockings in the art of chasing the ball and pounding. The ball was close on the floor nearly all the last half, with both teams chasing the vagrant so closely that they ran Referee Rod Dobson of Furman football fame right in he was panting.

The game stood 21 to 20 in favor of Wofford with three minutes to play, but the Terriers, led by Dargan and Johnson, sank several long shots and rolled in a couple to run the score up to 27 to 20, where it ended.

The line up:

Presbyterian (20)	Wofford (27)
F—Dunlap	King (8)
F—Adair, M. (6)	Harper (2)
C—Caldwell (2)	Johnson (11)
G—Dunlap, O. (4)	Dargan (4)
G—Adair, W. (1)	Jefferies (1)

Substitutes: Wofford, Adams, McLeod (1). Presbyterian, Green (1), Snipes (2), Roberts (2), Mason (2). Referee, Dobson (Furman).

ROUND TABLE FOR "Y" MEETS

Dr. D. J. Brimm To Lead Discussions for February Sessions. Is New Departure.

Latest news is of the decision of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet to institute a series of round table discussions for the regular weekly meetings during the month of February. Interest in the Wednesday evening gatherings has not been all that is to be desired this fall, but by changing the program and bringing up the discussion of problems of real interest to the students, he attendance should be greatly increased.

The figure of the idea is the selection of Dr. D. J. Brimm, professor of Bible and religion at Presbyterian college, to lead the discussion and take charge of the groups. Dr. Brimm is well-known by The Blue Stocking readers and his name is familiar to many thinkers and readers over the state who have noticed his articles from time to time in The State and other papers.

The problems for discussion in the four February meetings have not yet been decided, but the committee is expected to make them known at an early date. They will certainly be problems that all P. C. students are interested in. With Dr. Brimm in charge of the meeting, to guide and direct the discussion and to contribute ideas, the round-table groups will perform a very vital function in the life of the campus.

DR. FULTON AT FIRST CHURCH

Presbyterian Alumnus In Series of Meetings During Foreign Mission Week.

Dr. Darby Fulton, of the Presbyterian Committee of Foreign Missions, conducted a series of mission studies in the First Presbyterian church last week in connection with the annual drive for foreign missions.

Dr. Fulton was born in Japan, the son of a missionary, and took his high school training in Thornwell orphanage. Graduating from P. C. about 1911, he remained with the college as instructor for another session. Then he entered Columbia Theological seminary and took the regular three-year course in that institution. After a year of post-graduate work at Princeton seminary, he took charge for one year of a church in New Jersey, at the end of which time he was called by the Foreign Mission committee to go as a missionary to Japan.

After a successful ministry in Japan, Dr. Fulton was called back to this country in 1926 to help the Foreign Mission committee stir up interest in foreign missions among the churches at home.

Dr. Fulton preached at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning, and Sunday afternoon, and conducted two services a day through the week. In these services, he called for questions and helpful discussions followed

Clemson Next Ring Opponent

Coach Walter Johnson will face an impressive foe when he takes his varsity boxing team to Clemson next Wednesday. It is understood that the Tigers have some real sluggers, and a well-rounded squad.

Presbyterian's line-up will be much the same as the one that met the University of South Carolina on January 11. However, during the past week some alarming developments have taken place, with the result that the team will be greatly weakened. Dick Greene, the well-known fullback, who was entered as a heavyweight against Carolina will be absent from the list.

Equally as serious is the threatened ineligibility of Nat Truesdell, the only man who won a decision in Columbia. It is possible that a small growth on his finger is a bone felon. If such is the case the result may be that Truesdell will be out of the fight game for quite a while. It is not known who will be substituted for the aggressive little bantam-weight in the event that he is unable to enter the ring Wednesday evening.

A slight illness and the resulting weakness has worried Lorenzo Wood for the past few days, and may impair his stamina for the coming battle. Indeed, at the time of going to press, it is not certain as to whether he will feel fit enough to fight. Wood is a veteran of two years' ring experience and was given little regard for punishment, coupled with the ability to deal it out from either paw. He is perhaps the most finished boxer of the team, and his absence, if his illness goes so far as to disable him, will be a serious blow to Presbyterian's hopes of victory.

In spite of these difficulties Coach Johnson has expressed his expectations for a keen, hard program with Clemson. There are a number of reserves who are both ready and qualified to represent P. C. in the squared circle. It is possible that they may be called on for Wednesday's bout.

THE ANGEL PASSES OVER

Life and Death are strange things. We live with our friends and we love them—yet some day they are taken from us and we are left to grope wistfully for the reason behind it all. In spite of our strongest faith in God there is always an unconscious and involuntary "Why?" deep down in our hearts. And it is because we are seeking an answer to that question, that we find peace when we turn back to God. For though, perhaps, we never quite understand, we nevertheless find our way through the darkness and into the comforting light of a great love that reassures us of the wisdom of the Supreme Being.

We may think of Death for some people as being a terrible thing, but for others it seems only as a journey to a better place. For some, it is just "goin' home," and, as one beautiful song has put it, "quiet like—some still day . . . work all done, care laid by, I'm just goin' home." For these, death is something of a reward, a relief from pain and care—something for which we should be happy rather than sad.

Fear of death is instinctive in the best of us, but there are those who come face to face with it and find that the fear has all gone. In its place there is an reverence, for perhaps they have had a glimpse of an infinite, greater task to which they are called—an infinitely greater happiness than is to be theirs. Death is the key to a larger calling. It is not a departure, but the beginning of a new and beautiful and blessed Life.

"The wind passes over and is gone," but the Angel passes over and takes only one Mortal. The Immortal must not go, for we always live in our hearts. And then, indeed, has the better been obtained.

They say of you
"He is dead."
But they are wrong.
For to my heart
You brought love.
Thus though you are dead
Memory are living.
And you will live
Always. —C. G.

TREASURE ISLAND

Who has not felt a tug at his heart with the thought of buried treasure? Can you remember the days when you were in knee "britches," secreting little treasures of your own in the corner of the garden—or out in the pasture? Or have the passing years taken from you that priceless legacy of early childhood?

But surely the lure of it has not passed the lure of buried treasure. Surely you cannot deny that even today you love to dig down into the earth and find things; find them and keep them as little treasures indisputably your own.

As you stand at the beginning of the second semester, there are uncharted seas before you, and beyond, just over there, are Treasure Islands as real as any that Stevenson ever drew for you. More, there are buried there treasures enough for everyone to dig and find, and dig and find, and still leave some unfound.

Every course is a sea, uncharted and unknown to you. Every book is "pay dirt," where gold is to be found if you will take the trouble to wash away the sand and keep the nuggets. Every class hour is a gleaming vein, if you will dig away the topsoil and lay it bare. Every spring evening is a treasure chest, but there is a lock, and the key is under your desk lamp.

Of course there are other treasures as well. To judge by the week-ends, they are buried in Greenville, and Columbia, and Spartanburg, and Anderson. Yes, and they are treasures equally as real, and many times more attractive. The thing about them is that they are as "the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven."

It is not to be desired that one should forget the treasures that are far afield, just because there are plenty at home. To urge such a course would be useless anyway. But rather let us try to spend a little of our time on the home field. If for no other reason, let us stay a few days each week on the college campus to keep ourselves alive in the memory of our professors, for they become melancholy when there are too many silences at roll call.

The world is full of Treasure Islands. The trouble is that folks always want to sail the seven seas in search of them when there is a whole archipelago in the front yard. It might be nice if you would at least step on them as you pass by. It is true that the West Wind is often calling at your window, and that your hand sometimes gets itchy for the wheel, but just reflect that the bravest ships must cast anchor once in awhile.

AN EXPERIMENT THIS WEEK

In order that the front page of The Blue Stocking may not be too cluttered up with sports news, a new system is being inaugurated this week. Some of the games played in the early part of the week are being transferred to page three, where they appear under some sort of appropriate heading. If this were not done, a casual observer, from a glance at the paper, might be led to think that Presbyterian is a basketball school. The plan also carries with it the principle that "the older the game, the shorter the write-up."

There does not seem to be much use in printing lengthy accounts of games nearly a week old. If the game was played on the home floor, it is all the more so. However, exciting games played away from Clinton will be featured as before.

In the absence of appropriate space for a regular sports section of the paper, and in a move to decrease pressure, it would be entirely possible to make up a front page containing nothing but basketball news. But there are other phases of college life that are as important to other groups as the broke game is to the boosters.

Whether the plan as outlined above will be put into use each week has not yet been decided. If it is favorably received by the readers of The Blue Stocking, the policy will be followed whenever the front page threatens to overflow. If the idea does not seem popular, some other plan will be worked as a solution to the problem.

COURTESY TO VISITING TEAMS

Now that the time has come when basketball holds the stage, we are brought closer to the question of how to treat the many teams that the season always brings to Presbyterian. At one or two of the games played at Clinton thus far, there has been some tendency on the part of the spectators to make a good many bright remarks about the visitors. Within certain limits, this is permissible, and if the remarks continue to be strictly good natured the visiting team accepts them as something of an evidence of good-will.

The danger-line, however, is reached when the boots from the gallery take on an acid nature. Sometimes it may seem irresistible to make capital of some misplay of the opposing team, but such an action gives satisfaction to very few and only serves to give a black eye to the college.

There is, too, a strained one-sidedness in the attitude of the onlookers at some games. There is a volley of wild cheering and clapping when the home team makes a neat play, but a melancholy silence descends when the opponents retaliate. Of course, no one expects a home crowd to go wild when a visiting team scores, but the good sport claps for good basketball, whether it is shown by one team or the other. Let your enthusiasm be on one side, if you will, but be fair-minded enough to give credit to the other when it is due. And what is the use of getting delirious when a member of the opposing team "pulls a boner"?

When one takes time to reflect that P. C. teams must also go abroad, there is no need to be reminded of these simple rules of sportsmanship. If Presbyterian proves a poor host, her teams have little right to expect courteous treatment when they are away from home.

So far, Presbyterian college is not dark around the optics, but unless basketball crowds are careful, the result may be a black eye.

THEM THAR COLLITCH BOYS

We are constantly being reminded of things that college graduates achieve when they get out into the world. Whenever we see evidences of real achievement we have a warm feeling that we are liable to amount to something after all. Too often, these testimonies are like the ones we see in the patent medicine advertisements. You know what we mean, the kind where Mrs. Kullikuchet, of Spoon Junction, Ark., says, "I have used your marvelous cure for ten years. There is nothing like it. Heartily recommend it for anyone troubled with so-and-so."

Just to give you that warm feeling, if you are susceptible to things like that, we are quoting a recent release from the Chronicle News Syndicate, of Chicago. The note follows:

"Otto Schnering, a graduate of the University of Chicago and president of the Curtiss Baby Ruth Candy Company, has been chosen for the collegiate hall of fame in the current issue of College Humor magazine.

"Mr. Schnering, who is a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity, completed his course at the university in less than three years, receiving a Ph.B. degree. He started in business as a manufacturing confectioner in a "hole in the wall" shop in 1917, and is now the world's largest manufacturer of chocolate-covered bars. His company employs more than 5,000 workers, operates four immense factories, and produces a billion "Baby Ruth" and other candy bars yearly. Mr. Schnering also manufactures chewing gum. He is only thirty-six years old."

MID-WEEK SPORTS

FURMAN WINS IN GREENVILLE

Greenville, Jan. 23.—Furman had little difficulty in downing the Presbyterian Blue Stockings in the Furman gym last night, the final score being 67 to 22. It was a game of beautiful teamwork, with the Furman machine working like a fine watch to pile up goal after goal. Excellent guarding prevented many P. C. goals, but this guarding was often carried too far, numerous fouls being called. Almost half of Presbyterian's total was gained by this route.

The game started slowly and several minutes elapsed before a goal was rung. Watson, of Furman, broke the ice with an easy basket and soon followed it up with a successful free throw as a result of W. Adair's foul. Adair came back a moment later to pitch a snowbird for P. C.'s first points.

Almost ten minutes elapsed before P. C. scored again, during which time the Hurricane rang up 16 more points. Then Jimmie Green, who is about as slick as a bucket of lard on a basketball court, rang up a beautiful goal to give the Blue Stockings another couple of tallies.

Roberts, a substitute, scored two goals before the half ended, which with a couple of shots by his team mates, gave the visitors a total of 11 points when the half ended. Furman was thus on the long end of the 37 to 11 score.

The second half can be told in almost the same words. P. C.'s offense was nipped in the bud by the sterling tactics of Wakefelid and Easley, while Henry Huff came to life long enough to shoot 16 points. L. Dunlap featured the last half for Presbyterian, scoring 8 of the 11 points.

The feature of the game was the shooting of Huff, Watson, and Burts, who exhibited fine coordination in every particular, especially in passing. Easley also made a good showing, as did Wakefield. For the visitors L. Dunlap starred.

The lineup:

Furman (67)	P. C. (22)
F—Burts (15)	Adair, M. (1)
F—Huff (19)	Dunlap, L. (10)
C—Watson (19)	Snipes
G—Easley (8)	Dunlap, O.

REPEATS IN CLINTON

P. C. varsity basketeers went down to defeat here last Tuesday by the score of 52-22, when they encountered a fast, powerful and smooth-working machine from Furman university. The Hosemen put up a game fight but were literally blown aside by the Purple Huurrciane. The visitors staged one of the most brilliant brands of basketball ever seen on the local floor and with Watson as the keystone of their attack, they were practically unbeatable.

"Doc" Snipes, substituted for Caldwell, for Presbyterian, played a beautiful game, locating the basket for twelve points. Bill Adair played his usual steady game at guard, but as a whole the Calvinists had an unusually bad night. Watson and Burts of Furman, were a constant thorn in the side to P. C., time and time again snaking through the Presbyterian defense to send the ball hurtling through the hoops.

The Hurricane started off scoring almost at will, the score at one time standing 15-0. At this stage of the game the Blue Stockings began to come to life and the score remained approximately at this margin throughout the remainder of the half. The second half was a repetition of the first with the Furmanites gradually increasing their lead.

The lineup and summary:

P. C. (22)	Furman (58)
F—L. Dunlap (4)	Burts (20)
F—M. Adair (1)	Huff (11)
C—Caldwell	Watson (15)
G—O. Dunlap (6)	Easley (10)
G—W. Adair	Powell

Substitutions, P. C.: J. Green (2), Snipes (12), Grafton, Keels, Roberts, Mason, Walker, Gosnell. Furman: Wakefield, Major, Shirley (2), Ranich and Clarkson.

Frosh Hoopsters Lose To Furman

Before the largest crowd of the season, the first year Blue Hosemen, like their older brothers-in-arms who followed them, bowed in defeat to the Freshman Purple Winds from Furman university here Saturday night by a score of 10 to 22. The frosh had seemingly lost all their floor ability displayed against the Clemson rats and were unable to handle the ball or pass through the Furman defense. Although they scored exactly the same number of points that they scored against the soldiers, their shooting was still further off. They missed shot after shot in the open and when the Furman defense tightened up, they missed still worse from long range.

At the beginning of the game, the Hurricanites appeared stiff and unable to handle themselves but it didn't take them long to get limbered up, for in the first half, while the Hosemen were still wondering what it was all about and were trying to locate the basket and backboard, they ran up a total of 26 points. The home team was able to put only 7 on the blackboard. In the second half Furman lost their shooting eye and that coupled with a little tighter defense on the part of the P. C. men, kept their point total down to 11 while the Hosemen were enough to get 15 and make their tally, four for the night register 22. The Furmanites' team work and passing was beautiful.

Wells of Furman, was the outstanding man of the fracas, covering the [illegible] he were twins, playing a [illegible] offensive game, and covering [illegible] and in addition was responsible for [illegible] amassing a total [illegible] was personally responsible for a majority of the points scored by his team during the second half. His runner-up was Southern, flashy Furman center, who got 12. Souter of Presbyterian, pushed Southern for second honors with 10. McNaull of Presbyterian, played a nice floor game but was unable to hit his stride in tossing, sinking only one during the night.

The next game at home will be with the Newberry beginners, Feb. 2.

The lineup:

Chi Beta Phi Meets Wednesday

South Carolina Beta chapter of Chi Bet Phi, the local branch of the national scientific fraternity, will hold its regular bi-weekly meeting on next Wednesday evening, January 30. The gathering had previously been called for the week before exams but at a short conclave that Wednesday it was decided to postpone the date until the 30th.

The five men who were recently initiated, L. R. Williamson, J. R. Blue, G. B. Telford, J. S. Dendy and W. K. Thompson, have been instructed to prepare papers on pseudo-scientific subjects, the treatment to be of a humorous nature. The other members will bring current events of scientific interest.

DR. FULTON AT FIRST CHURCH

on the policies of our various missionaries.

Wednesday night, he surveyed rapidly the whole field of the Southern church, and emphasized the value of educational work abroad. He dealt briefly with the peculiar problems of each mission. He characterized Brazil as the land which worshipped the Christless cross. In regard to his native land, Japan, he said that in a civilization marked by material prosperity and general cultural expansion, there was nevertheless a restlessness and confusion which were inevitable concomitants of unsuccessful attempts to find God and solve religious problems through the outworn creeds and philosophies of the Orient. He mentioned some of the particular needs. And he closed with the statement that in spite of the years of labor, our foreign missions had hardly made a dent upon the heathenism that is enveloping millions in foreign lands.

Recognized as one of the most distinguished alumni of the college, Dr. Fulton was invited to address the student body Monday morning in a short speech. He told of the changes on the campus and faculty since his college days, and expressed his confidence in the future growth and contributions of Presbyterian college.

Five-Year College Course

A novel five-year plan will be inaugurated next fall at Northwestern college, when the college student body will be divided into five classes: Freshmen, sophomores, middlers, junior and senior.—Amherst Student.

U. of Ga. To Enlarge Band

Plans are now underway to enlarge the University of Georgia band of 1929, to one hundred members, an increase of fifty members over its present size. College Man and Politics

Linfield Review: "Politics never used to be considered a gentleman's game," says Leo. A. Borah, in the December issue of College Humor. "College folk looked down on the whole business with disdain. They wouldn't give it a minute's consideration. But the attitude of the college student is changing today; he recognizes politics as a real force in the country. If the [illegible] college body feel an active interest in government will consider politics as a career and enroll in the courses offered to prepare them for it, the United States will be able to miss its world politics without fear. It will no longer be the tenderfoot sitting on the sidelines following the game." The spectators.

Co-ed Rifle Team Active

The University of Georgia co-ed rifle team will complete its first match of the season against North Western University Saturday morning. The co-ed rifle team will be scored one against another and results compared after completion of the complete [illegible] match.

The next match is with the women's team of the University of California, to be fired the week-ending February 9. The Co-ed Co-Red and Black.

Science for Everyday Use

Dr. Dorsey says that in his forthcoming book, "Hows and Ways of Human Behavior," he has translated the findings of Science, as expounded in "Why We Behave Like Human Beings" for everyday use. This is illustrated by Dr. Dorsey's chapter headings, such as: "Why Do We Fall for One Another? Why Do We Fall Out With One Another? How Does Your Job Fit You? Why Are We Born Gamblers? Possibly Dr. Dorsey gathered some of the data for the last chapter from the three day poker game of which he is one of the famous members.—The Technique.

Big Crowds See Tech Play

Tech's famous Golden Tornado eleven proved to be the biggest drawing card in Southern football during the last season, when they drew over 200,000 for the nine Southern conflicts they participated in. The largest attendance prior to the California battle was the Tech-Georgia game played here in Atlanta. The attendance for this game was estimated at 36,000. The smallest crowd that witnessed the Golden Tornado in action was the 20,000 crowd that saw Tech defeat Tulane in New Orleans.

Atlanta produced the biggest crowds of any Southern city, at least 25,000 saw each of the four largest games. These were the Tech-Notre Dame game, the Tech-Vandy game, the Tech-Alabama game, and the Tech-Georgia game.—The Technique.

SPRING HOLIDAYS TO BE OMITTED AT PRESBYTERIAN

Student Body In Meetings On Wednesday Votes Preference. Not To Interfere With Pan-Hellenic Banquet or Date Set for Annual Commencement.

At a meeting of the student body held on Wednesday after dinner in the chapel, it was voted to dispense with spring holidays. Owing to the time that was lost before and after Christmas, the faculty deemed it necessary to either banish the regular cut-allowance or abolish the holiday period. The matter was brought up before the assembled students by Frank Pearce, president of the Student Council, and the action was taken by unanimous vote.

It had been previously supposed that commencement would be delayed but as arrangements had already been a week to make up for the time lost, definitely made for commencement, and the speakers dated, this was impossible. As a result, the students were given choice of "no cuts or no holiday."

Since the cut-allowance provides for virtually one week of holiday, and the vacation period amounts to only three or four days, the former was chosen. It was pointed out by President McSween that those students who had already made plans to go home at that period could save their cuts and check them off against their absence at that time.

There will be no change, however, in plans for the annual Pan-Hellenic banquet and dance. They will proceed as usual, and at the date previously decided on—that is, the night when the holidays were due to start. It was even hinted by authorities that the students would be conceded the Saturday after the dance, a chance that won over any men who had decided to vote for the abolishment of the cuts rather than the vacation.

As many men would be expected to remain on the campus to train for track and baseball, the removal of the spring holidays will not be as great a disappointment as might be expected. Then, too, there are few who like the iden of abolishing the necessary luxury of cuts. On the whole, the students are more than satisfied.

PADGETT GETS JACOBS TROPHY

Dinner Held In Clinton Friday. Clemson Star Is Best Interference Man In State.

On Friday at noon, February 1st, at dinner held at the Mary Musgrove tea room in Clinton, W. P. Jacobs presented to O. D. Padgett, well-known Clemson college football star, the handsome Jacobs trophy for the most valuable player and best interference runner in South Carolina for the past season.

Mr. Padgett gracefully accepted the award and added to his thanks a tribute to his coaches, Josh Cody and Joe Guyon, to whom, he said, he owed whatever distinction he might have attained as a football man. At this, the famous "Josh" Cody arose, straightened his vest, and gave a short talk in which he outlined the development of "interference." He spoke of its origin in the fertile brain of an assistant coach at Vanderbilt university, in 1915. This coach later went to Georgia Tech. Here, after the eligibility rules had been satisfied, Joe Guyon, of Carlisle Indian fame, also reported for action. Between the two, the very exact science of interference running was perfected as never before. It is reported that on one notable play, Guyon "took out" three men, unaided.

Among the few remarks of Mr. Guyon was the suggestion that perhaps it was unfitting to call the advance guard, interference. He suggested, rather, that the man before the ball carrier he called his helper, or assistant, since those terms come nearer to describing his function.

The last speaker was Jack Black, a former Davilson college back of no mean repute. Mr. Black is now familiar to South Carolina football fans in the role of official, either as referee, umpire, or head linesman. Mr. Black spoke of the fact that few people realize how necessary the interference runner is until they have to run with the ball.

COMPLETE FOOTBALL SCHEDULE FOR 1929

Comparatively recent changes in the grid program for 1929 make it necessary to publish the corrected schedule. This time, it is guaranteed to be correct, gentle readers, for it emanates from none other than Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, president of Presbyterian's Athletic council. Take it and frame it and stow it away where "moths and rust will not corrupt" nor thieves break through and gnaw the corners off. The revised schedule follows:

Sept. 28th—Oglethorpe in Atlanta.
Oct. 4th—Mercer in Clinton.
Oct. 12th—Furman at Greenville.
Oct. 18th—Carolina at Columbia.
Oct. 26th—Wofford at Spartanburg.
Nov. 8th—Erskine at Due West.
Nov. 19th—Wake Forest at Wake Forest.
Nov. 28th—Newberry in Clinton.

Parker Hi Wins From Hose Rats

Greenville, Jan. 30.—Parker high school's purple storm showered a rain of leather onto the hapless Presbyterian college freshman team here last night on the Parker court, the district warriors having an easy time subduing their Clinton opponents 64 to 10.

Ansel Kay and Jimmie Jones were the outstanding factors of the purple victory, Jones sinking the leather into the net for 18 points, and Kay gathering in 12 for his night's contribution to the good cause. The teamwork of the district was working to perfection, and the guarding of Davis and Kelly was exceptionally good. Souter, flashy forward, looked best for the invaders.

MEMORIAL TO A. T.. FANT

Faculty Colleagues Speak At Service Held In Honor of Late Teacher.

At the chapel period on Friday morning, February 1st, the faculty of Presbyterian college conducted memorial exercises for Professor A. T. Fant. The program was brief and impressive, and the tributes given by members of the faculty were beautiful in their sincerity.

President McSween read a passage of scripture, and this was followed by the hymn "He Leadeth Me." As the old familiar lines swelled from the throats of the three hundred people gathered in the chapel, it seemed as if He were indeed there in very presence as the unseen leader of the memorial services. Dr. Spencer then read the resolutions adopted by the faculty.

As silence fell at the end of the reading, Professor A. V. Martin mounted the platform—one who came to offer his tribute to a departed friend and neighbor. In quiet simplicity he told of his years of association with Mr. Fant. He spoke of Mr. Fant's fidelity to his friends, his neighbors, his family, his obligations as a citizen of Clinton, and, above all, to his church.

Professor Martin was followed by Dr. W. E. Hoy who spoke from the Brimm To Lead "Y" Discussions

Dr. Brimm has consented to lead the Y. M. C. A. in a four weeks' series of open forum meetings, in which the following subjects will be discussed in their order each Wednesday night:

1. How may we strengthen our faith in the Bible?
2. What should be a boy's relation to his girl friends?
3. What part does emotion play in religion?
4. What are the facts about the present younger generation?

These are subjects which should be of interest to every thoughtful student, and all are cordially invited to attend.

In Memoriam

PROF. A. T. FANT

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE PRESIDENT AND FACULTY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, JAN. 31, 1929.

RESOLVED:

1. That in the death of our brother-professor, Mr. A. T. Fant, we bow in humble submission before Him who doeth all things well in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth.

2. That we give thanks to God for the successful prosecution of his labors, and petition our Father to raise up for us a successor like unto him.

3. That we express ourselves as grateful for the warmth of his friendship and the stimulation of his personality, and we know that his life was not in vain.

4. That an expression of sympathy be conveyed to the relatives left behind.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be read before the student body and permanently incorporated in the minutes of the Faculty.

Respectfully submitted,
A. E. SPENCER,
H. E. STURGEON,
T. H. GRAYSON,
Committee.

To the honorable President, the Faculty and the Student Body of Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C.:

We wish to take this opportunity to express to you all our deepest gratitude and lasting appreciation for your thoughtful attentions to our loved one during his last illness; and for the sympathy so eloquently extended to us in our great bereavement. Sincere thanks also for the beautiful floral contributions, and the very appropriate singing by the double quartet. The many kind words and deeds of the past several weeks will long be cherished in our memories.

May God reward and bless you all, and abundantly bless and prosper the Presbyterian College of South Carolina.

Signed:
Mrs. A. T. Fant, Jr., and daughters.

DEATH CLAIMS PROF. FANT

Distinguished Member of Presbyterian College Faculty Passes. Funeral Here Tuesday.

The great heart of A. T. Fant, which had sustained him through long hours when a eager Death seemed grasping at a new victim, gave way Sunday afternoon at five fifty-two, and the cessation of its feeble pulsations told that a leaf in his story must be turned.

Funeral services were held at St. John's Lutheran church, of which Mr. Fant was a devoted member, at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon with his pastor, the Rev. M. R. Wingard, conducting the services. Rev. John McSween, president of the college, read several Scripture selections, and he was followed by Dr. D. M. Douglas of Columbia, who paid a beautiful tribute to the deceased and told of his friendship and appreciation of his work while president of the college until he went to the university. Dr. A. J. Bowers, a former pastor, offered prayer, and beautiful songs were sung by a choir from the college. The church was packed to capacity with many friends who gathered to pay homage and respect to the memory of one loved so well. The floral offerings were beautiful and varied, many pieces being sent by friends, relatives and various organizations. Interment followed in Rosemont cemetery.

The active pallbearers were: Dr. W. E. Hoy, Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, Prof. T. H. Grafton, Prof. M. W. Brown, Prof. R. L. Coe and W. A. Johnson. Honorary pallbearers were: President John McSween of Presbyteian college, President D. M. Douglas of the University of South Carolina, Dr. S. C.

Wofford Defeats Little Blue Hose

The P. C. freshmen [illegible] lost a very [illegible] game to the Wofford freshmen [illegible] night by the score of 39 to 19. The game was played in the Terriers' own back yard and looked, at first, like it would be a walk-away for the Blue Hose who rung up ten points before the Pups could locate the backboard. However, as the game progressed, the Wofforddites located themselves and started sinking shot after shot. They were surprisingly accurate at long range. The absence of Copeland at center, was keenly felt toward the latter part of the contest when the Hosemen were unable to get the tip-off.

Shotts of Wofford, was the outstanding man of the game, sinking 11 points and playing a stellar game at guard. McCord and McNaull [illegible] for the Hosemen, each [illegible] points and both playing a good defensive game.

dragged throughout the remainder of the half which ended 16-11.

In the final period, the Hosemen, staging a sensational comeback, threatened several times to take the lead from the Tigers. Adair and Green scintilated in this attack while the able Mason kept down the Clemson rushes with almost impregnable defensive work. With the aid of Hewitt, Crane and O'Dell, however, the Tigers managed to keep the lead until the final whistle.

will be notified early next week and practice started as soon as the several teams can be organized and whipped into shape. Last year each class chose for its coach a member of either the varsity or the freshman squad. The system worked out very well, and will probably be employed again this spring.

The inter-class basketball tourney is the interesting feature of campus life and provides a break in the monotony of mid-term existence. In addition, it gives encouragement and opportunity to many men who otherwise would never have a chance to play the game. The spirit of the spectators and the fun of enjoyment they derive from the games, alone would make worth while the efforts of the "Y."

An interesting fact concerning last year's schedule was the closeness of the games. There were sometimes large scores in the scores, but the interest usually continued until the final whistle was sounded. If, as the plan now stands, is to be offered for year's competition, the enthusiasm will be increased this year.

Instead of trying to drag out the schedule during a lengthy period, the officers of the Y. M. C. A. hope to rush the games through with interest is hot. It is expressed that the whole list of basketball matches may be gotten off in three evenings when no teams are using the floor, and that within a period of not more than two weeks.

Order Placed For Football Material

Coach Walter Johnson reports that the order for football equipment for use next fall has been placed. However, he has not yet decided on the combination of colors that Presbyterian's eleven will wear.

An item that should be of real interest to students is the fact that P. C.'s team may, possibly, appear in knitted football pants next season. Coach Johnson has been given a demonstration of the new breeches, and is very favorably impressed. The fabric is machine-knit, of much the same material as are the jerseys now in use. Every effort has been made in their structure to provide for durability and wear.

The advantage of the knitted pants is in their ability to stretch and give with the movements of the body. There is no interference with the free leg motion of the kicker, nor is there any strain in the position of the lineman. The only question is concerning the wearing quality of the material. It would be embarrassing if a man emerged with a handfull of material lifted out of his pants, as is sometimes the case with the jerseys.

It is understood that Harvard, Ohio State, and other large universities have employed knitted breeches for their teams during the past season or two. This would seem to indicate that they are able to stand the 'gaff.' Coach Johnson expects to reach a decision in a few days.

regular and easy just before the close of the struggle, and his passing was quiet and peaceful.

For several days he had been unable to speak coherently. While conscious, he remained cheerful and patient, glad to greet and speak to the friends that came to see him.

Adolph Theodore Fant, the eldest child of Rev. and Mrs. A. T. Fant, was born June 20, 1894, at Warren, Pa. He received his high school training at Iron Mountain, Michigan. Graduating from Augustana college, Rock Island, Ill., as salutatorian in 1918, he went to Iowa for two years work in physics, and received his M. S. degree from that institution. In 1920, he came to Presbyterian college, and had been head of the department of physics since that date. He has also taught a course in astronomy, and conducted a course in mechanical drawing.

He was married on June 16, 1921, to Miss Esther Larson, a college-time sweetheart, of Smethport, Pa. From this union, two children, Ruth Esther, and Barbara, survive. He is survived by both his parents, Rev. and Mrs. A. T. Fant of Rock Island, Ill., three sisters, Misses Emma, Ruth, and Eva, of Rock Island, and two brothers, Alfred A. Fant of Rock Island, and the Rev. Carl I. Fant of DuBois, Pa.

Professor Fant was a member of the American Physical society, Sigma Xi honorary scientific fraternity, the American Association of Variable Star Observers and the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and a fellow of the South Carolina Academy of Science. He was the author of "The Intrinsic Intensity of Light Transmitted Through a Slit."

Mr. Fant was also prominent in church affairs, being both elder and deacon in the local Lutheran church. He taught a Sunday school class, and recently was elected chairman of the church council.

Professor Fant was very popular among his associates on the Presbyterian college faculty ,and was a favorite with students. He was liked for his kindly disposition, his brilliant scholarship, his personal interest in all who sat under him in his classes, and his lucid exposition of difficult problems. He was generally recognized by the rank and file of students as a teaching genius of the highest quality.

Following are some expressions from those who were associated with Professor Fant, and knew him best:

Dr. W. E. Hoy (department of biology, Presbyterian college): "Mr. Fant was a man of very evident culture and scholarship, but I think I was always most impressed by his sincere and straightforward honesty. Our science department has suffered a grievous blow."

T. H. Grafton (instructor at Presbyterian college): "Mr. Fant was one of those extremely rare persons that are known as great teachers. I appreciated most of all his kind and gentle disposition, his clear judgment, and his godly character. He reminds me of Browning's words, 'Through such souls alone, God, stooping, shows sufficient of his light for us in the dark to rise by.' " viewpoint of a fellow-professor and co-worker. Dr. Hoy emphasized the precision, neatness, sympathy, and love for his students that were unfailing characteristics of his absent friend.

His work will be continued through the spring session by Prof. T. H. Grafton, one of his former students.

The third speaker was Professor Woodworth who described Mr. Fant as one whose keynote in life was the word "fidelity"—fidelity as shown above all in his untiring efforts for his church; in a word, fidelity to the Lord Jesus Christ.

As President McSween stepped to the front of the rostrum to pronounce the benediction, a brief silence fell. For a few moments the assembly stood with bowed heads in mute tribute to the memory of one whom all had known and none had failed to love. As a fitting close to the ceremonies came the beautiful words from Hebrews, "Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen."

Chi Beta Phi Has Interesting Meeting

Chi Beta Phi, honorary scientific fraternity, held its regular meeting Wednesday night. Messrs. W. K. Thompson, G. B. Telford, H. M. Kolb, and J. S. Dendy were on the program. They had prepared papers on "Isotopry," "The Scope of Science," "Theories of Evolution," and "Photosynthesis," all of which were interesting and valuable.

The next meeting will be in charge of Williamson and Woodward.

YEAR'S LEAVE FOR GIGNILLIAT

Research Work To Occupy Time of P. C. Professor During the Coming Months.

Professor G. W. Gignilliat, of the English department, will be away from the college on leave of absence during the session 1929-30. The leave has been granted him in order that he may continue the research work that has been his interest for the past two or three years. He will continue as a member of the Presbyterian college faculty.

Before coming to P. C., Professor Gignilliat worked for two years at Columbia university on a biography of Thomas Day, a writer of the eighteenth century. Day is of interest to South Carolinians in that he was a close friend of Henry Laurens, of our own state. His work included poetry, political pamphlets, and children's books.

During the past summer Prof. Gignilliat, while in England, delved into the manuscripts of the British museum for facts and sidelights relating to his subject. He also spent some time visiting the place where Thomas Day had made his residence.

While on leave, Professor Gignilliat expects to complete his manuscript and give it the necessary careful revision. He indicates that it may possibly appear in book form, but as yet is unable to give out any definite facts.

P. C. Year Book Is Taking Shape

Editor Jack O'Neal of the PaC-SaC or 1929, is beginning to breathe easy as work on the Presbyterian College annual rounds into shape. O'Neal is very well pleased with the way matters have turned out thus far, and expresses confidence that the book will be in the hands of the students, without any C. O. D. fares or other encumbrances, before commencement.

That progress is far advanced is shown by the fact that the PaC-SaC photographer is expected on the campus to take final pictures, during the coming week. On this trip, O'Neal hopes that the photographer will be able to make a clean sweep of it, so that he can put the picture side of the annual on the shelf and turn his attention to the balance of the book.

While the picture-man is on the campus, he will be rushed. Not only must he reproduce the visages of any who missed him on the first trip, but he must also snap all the athletic teams. With the exception of the football squad, individual and group pictures must be made of every aggregation.

It is supposed that either the coaches will be asked to choose the men they think will win distinction worthy of individual snaps, or all men will be taken solus and the pictures filed for selection at a later date. In either case, the man from Brubacker's studio, Atlanta, will have his hands full.

BOXING TEAM IS PREPARING

Presbyterian's Fighters To Meet Citadel Next Saturday In Charleston.

Presbyterian's varsity boxing team will meet its second opponent in Charleston, next Saturday, February 16th. Six men, ranging from the bantamweight class on up to the light-heavyweight division, will meet the ring-men of Citadel. The heavyweight bout will be forfeited by Presbyterian for lack of any fighter who is heavy enough to stand an even chance with men of greater avoirdupois. It has been considered unwise to advance a man above the limits of his own weight, that is, to match a lightheavyweight with an opponent who is of the heavier division.

P. C. Students To Go To Greenville

At the request of the First Presbyterian church of Greenville, S. C., relayed through President John McSween of Presbyterian college, four P. C. students will journey to the "big city" on Sunday, February 17th. The purpose of the trip is that members of the congregation of the First church may be brought into contact with Presbyterian college students through a series of four-minute talks on the subject, "What does Presbyterian college mean to me?" The four men are R. A. Hogrefe, W. M. McInnis, R. T. Gillespie, Jr., and C. W. Grafton.

The projected plan is in preparation for "P. C. Day," which is to be observed by this church on the following Sunday, February 17th. On that day the congregation will launch its drive for the funds pledged to the expense-budget of P. C. for next year.

The tentative arrangement is for three of the men to make their talks before small groups of the congregation, while R. T. Gillespie will appear before the entire body at the regular morning service. It is thought now that Hogrefe will address the young people, McInnis the men's Bible

"Y" PROGRAM IS INTERESTING

First Feature Discussion Proves Drawing Card. Dr. Brimm Is Leader of Group.

Between sixty and seventy students attended the weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. held last Wednesday evening, immediately after supper in the chapel. As had been announced previously in the columns of The Blue Stocking the gathering was in the nature of a round-table discussion group, with Dr. D. J. Brimm acting as the leader of the session. Dr. Brimm, although troubled by a bad cold, refused to allow the postponement of the meeting, but made his appearance as had been planned.

After the rather lean attendance that characterized the meeting previous, the "Y" cabinet may well feel encouraged. The arrangement for the discussion type of gathering, as it has been discussed for several weeks, seems to be one that is heartily approved by the student body.

The discussion for the evening was on the question, "How may we increase our faith in the Bible?" Dr. Brimm opened the meeting with a summary of the subject, offering, at the same time, a number of very fitting remarks about its solution. During the course of his talk he presented to the group two questions which, if they are considered thoughtfully, offer at once a good answer to the question as it is stated above. First, Dr. Brimm asked, "How can you have faith in anything that you are not thoroughly familiar with?" He pointed out the fact that we ourselves, in our dealings with our friends, have faith in

Former Student To Annapolis

Bernie Dunlap, of Rock Hill, S. C., a former student at Presbyterian college, has received an appointment to the United States Naval academy. The appointment, it is learned, was made by Congressman W. F. Stevenson, of the sixth district.

Bernie Dunlap was enrolled as a freshman with the present sophomore class, of which he was president. He was halfback on the freshman football team that year and saw action in every game. He was also shortstop on the frosh baseball team last spring.

It is understood that Bernie will take his physical examination at an early date, and the mental tests some time in May. If every thing goes off right, he will report to the academy at Annapolis on July first.

SWEDENBERG JOINS FACULTY OF PRESBYTERIAN NEXT YEAR

Is Studying At Columbia University Toward M. A. Degree. Will Teach Freshman and Sophomore English and One Advanced Course, It Is Thought.

As soon to be announced in the next Presbyterian college catalogue, H. T. Swedenberg, Jr., an honor student of the class of 1928, will be added to the faculty with the school year beginning next fall. Swedenberg will be at P. C. in the capacity of assistant professor of English. His work will probably include the teaching of two sections each of freshman and sophomore English, with the addition of one advanced course.

H. T. Swedenberg of Greenville, S. C., is well-known to all the students of the three upper classes. While on the campus, he was outstanding, not only in his class work, but in nearly every phase of college cativity. For three years he represented Presbyterian as a member of the varsity debating team; and was elected to Pi Kappa Delta, national honorary forensic fraternity, holding office as the president of the local chapter during his senior year. For three years, likewise, he was a member of the glee club, his musical talent leading to his election to Lambda Phi Gamma, local honorary musical fraternity. His interest in English and in things literary is shown by the fact that he was, for four years, a member of The Blue Stocking staff; and in addition, serving on the staffs of both The Collegian and the PaC-SaC during his last year.

But Swedenberg is probably best known to the students through his prominence as major of the R. O. T. C. battalion. Such a position does not tend toward obscurity.

Since his graduation from Presbyterian college, Swedenberg has been continuing his literary studies at Columbia university, New York city. While there, his attention has been turned especially to English literature of the 17th and 18th centuries. It is understood that the work taken in the advanced course that he is to offer; will be in line with this study. He has been working toward an M. A. degree.

Professor Brown In Capital Next Week

Members of the classes of Dean M. W. Brown will be sorry to hear that he plans to be absent for three days next week. Dr. D. M. Douglas, of the University, recently extended to the Dean an invitation to attend the meetings of the University of South Carolina Seminar for faculty members, to be held on February 11th, 12th, and 13th.

At this time Dr. F. F. Bradshaw, Dean of Men at the University of North Carolina, will give the seminar on student councilling and personnel work among students. It is understood that many members of college faculties over the state will be present.

In order that there will be no unfortunate absences due to misinformation, Dean Brown wishes to announce through the columns of The Blue Stocking that he has made arrangements for the continuation of his class work during his absence, except as may have been already announced to certain groups.

The results of the matches will be announced sometime during the following week.

Papooses Down Little Hosemen

The P. C. freshmen [illegible] fought game to the Newberry [illegible] year Indians Monday night by a score of 34 to 32. The game was played at Newberry. The Hosemen started with a rush and it looked as if they had the game sewed up at the end of the first half when the score stood 21 to 10 in their favor, but they were overwhelmed by a last minute rally.

In the first half, the wearers of blue came to the Papooses by their fast floor work and passing, it being an easy matter to work in under the basket and shoot. Then, too, the P. C. defense were working at a high rate of efficiency and it was very seldom that the Newberry men could shoot except at range too long to be effective. Seaton stood out in field setting the first half, sinking 8 points.

The ease with which they bowled over the Indians in the first half seemed to go to the heads of the Frosh in the second and they were swept completely off their feet by the Redskins' powerful rally. Epting and Ranger became effective during this time and between them accounted for

AN UNCONSCIOUS TRIBUTE

The student body paid an unconscious tribute to Dr. D. J. Brimm and to the efforts of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet, last Wednesday night. The trebling of the attendance at the weekly meeting of the organization, cannot be attributed solely to curiosity or simply to the interest aroused in the question that was announced for discussion. There must be something more than this. Good earth of the student body knows! that they thought something worthy of, and of vital interest, would be said, if Dr. Brimm was the one who was to do the saying.

Dr. Brimm, although indisposed by a cold that had been handicapping him in his class work for the days previous, refused to postpone his appearance as leader of the round-table discussion. This manifestation of his interest and concern in the affairs of the "Y" should be, and is, very deeply appreciated by all who attended the meeting.

And this is not all. It is only a start. Next week the same type of meeting will be held and Dr. Brimm will again be present. The subject for discussion is one that should arouse the curiosity, if nothing else, of nearly everyone on the campus. Is there any boy who at one time or another has not asked himself, with all seriousness, the question, "What should be a boy's relation to his girl friends?"

At the gathering next Wednesday evening, Dr. Brimm will endeavor merely to direct the discussion so that each may decide for himself, in the light of opinions expressed by those present, what is a fair and conscientious answer to that question. He will not expect, upon the meeting with a few remarks in which he will express his views, can be expressed as his desire to promote and invite student opinion so that he himself may get some idea of how boys today are answering it for themselves.

The round-table discussion groups will continue throughout the month of February. Those who attended the first meeting will know that Wednesday evenings are to the left open for the rest of the year. We feel sure that anyone who attends one of the gatherings will certainly want to be present thereafter. As a suggestion, we propose that every student appear next Wednesday evening. After that, "Let your judgment be your guide."

BEING A GOOD SPORT

The freshman basketball game with Parker H. last Wednesday night may be used as an illustration of one reason for competition between schools. If ever there was a better demonstration of good sportsmanship, P. C. has not seen it. Both teams seemed to find it possible to play a fine, fast game without letting the outcome influence their tempers. Of course, as is natural, there were words said occasionally when a foul was called, but they were only skin deep and were followed with a smile in the next minute. Words of this kind, however irritably spoken, do not mean anything—for a player often reacts unthinkingly when he feels that a foul has been called unjustly. Neither is the referee to be blamed, for he must, of necessity, call them as they appear to him.

Although Presbyterian college lost the game by a close score, the feeling among the spectators was not one of displeasure. Everyone showed by their remarks afterward that, after all, the major interest is "not whether you've won or lost, but how you've played the game." It is a greater inspiration to watch two evenly matched teams play a clean, hard game, than it is to see the home team win in a walk.

There has been a lot of talk about what we speak of fondly as "P. C. spirit." That there really is such a thing, was shown in Wednesday night's contest. And another thing was brought out, too. It was the fact that "spirit" at P. C. does not mean simply fighting till the last minute with a never-say-die attitude. It means, on top of that, all that we usually think of when we say "sportsmanship."

Presbyterian has always stood squarely for clean athletics. That she is not talking "through her hat" has been shown repeatedly during the past months. It is nice to win all the time if you can. It is gratifying to win once in a while, to keep your head up and a fight in your eyes. But defeat, and repeated defeats, are never to be feared until you reach the point when you can't lose like a gentleman.

BULL ABOUT BULL

In a recent issue of The Davidsonian there was published a very interesting and singular letter to the editor. A blunt young man, signing himself, as usual, "A Student," expressed himself in a very refreshing way. His remarks about the college paper may be applied to so many college publications, that we take opportunity here to comment on them.

Mr. Student said that The Davidsonian was too full of "bull." It appears that in his opinion not only are the feature articles cluttered up with bull, but also the write-ups that are intended to be conveyors of news. He tells us that the news articles are so verbose that the facts are concealed in a way that defies detection except upon exhaustive study.

The editor of a large paper or a relatively small college undoubtedly has a serious problem on his hands. The paper may be large or small, or there is just so much news on the campus—so much and no more. If there does not fill the space, the editor must resort to "filler," or "patent inside." Sometimes, if the space is voluminous in its extent, the "patent insides" usurp the larger proportion of the edition.

Even conceding that the editor is forced to resort to clippings and items of doubtful interest, the fact remains that college papers very often become little more than columns upon columns of sheer bull. Whether or not it is necessary is beside the point. The question is, "Does it do anyone any good?" Does anyone ever read the stuff?

This makes us wonder whether a college paper is supposed to be a news organ, or a general chance for any Tom, Dick, and Harry to gratify his desire to "be in print." If the former, then some of this verbosity, if not all of it, should be eliminated. If the latter, then let us, by all means, add even more pages, in order that it may be really free-for-all.

The writer of the letter referred to, suggested that either the paper be filled with ads in place of the "bull," or else the size of the paper be cut. If he represents current student opinion, it would appear that all this fuller stuff is not only unnecessary but undesirable. We are speaking now in general terms, and not of any paper in particular.

At Presbyterian we need not fear any such problem. The Blue Stocking is already carrying about as many ads as can be legitimately used in a four-page paper. Then, too, there is no way in which the size of the paper can be cut. The problem here is whether or not The Blue Stocking, as it is, contains too much bull each week.

The present policy of The Blue Stocking is to cut all news articles so that extended length is only reached when there is something really important, or when there is a genuine "scoop." Although this principle may be, at times, set aside, the paper is trying to adhere to the rule. We see little to be derived in stretching one column of material into two columns of space. Let other college newspapers follow whatever policies they will, The Blue Stocking, while under the present staff, will stick by its guns.

If there is any change in the Presbyterian weekly that is desired by the students, the staff will be only too glad to hear of it. Address your suggestions to the editor, and sign your name, together with whatever pseudonym you wish it to appear with. Any expression of student opinion will be taken impersonally, and will be considered from the standpoint of practicability and desirability.

LITERARY

The Eukosmian and Pikadelt literary societies met Tuesday night for the first time since the Christmas holidays. The first few meetings were postponed on account of exams and last week's meeting was suspended due to Professor Faust's death.

In the Eukosmian society there was an open forum. Resolved: "That the Bible should be taught in state institutions." Jackson and Adams on the affirmative were opposed by Whiteside and Tipton. E. V. Anderson, Bob Gillespie and C. W. Anderson made talks and Jimmie Myers delivered a humorous monologue.

The Pikadelt society held a patriotic or "home" boosters meeting. R. M. Fraser spoke on Florence, E. D. Brimm on Sumter, J. T. N. Keels on Columbian, J. I. Copeland on Laurens county, and T. E. Davis on Georgia. There was very heated rivalry among the boosters of the different towns. Florence and Sumter being especially well represented. After this an open forum was held: "Should public utilities be publicly or privately owned?" It was opened by the chairman, T. E. Davis, and many joined in the discussion.

Both societies are anxious to increase their memberships and are on the look out for new members. Election of officers for the second semester will be held in both societies at the next meetings, therefore a full attendance is desired.

The Price of Fame

Reigels, the California player who ran his touchdown in the wrong direction, became almost as famous as Will Rogers. He received letters from all parts of the country, each with a different message. Two rather shy coeds from a town in Georgia wrote him that, although it was against the rules of their college to write to strange men, they wished to extend their sympathy. On the other extreme he found a letter from a fair young miss in the East who offered him her hand in marriage. One irate lover even prevented him a bill for the full amount lost on his bet.

VARSITY ON FIVE-DAY TRIP

Arriving in Clinton last Monday night after a six days absence, the Blue Hosed basketball warriors completed one of the most successful basketeering crusades understaken in several seasons by a P. C. team. Not that the trip bolstered the winning percentage to any towering degree, for it did not. It did show, however, that the team has advanced with rapid strides from the state of greenness so prevalent at the start of the season to a team that ranks with the fore-runners of the state.

Encountering four of the strongest teams in this section of the country, P. C. went down in defeat before three of them, losing to the Parris Island Marines, the Citadel and Pacific Mills. The College of Charleston after putting up a game fight throughout the contest, dropped behind at the close to give the Calvinists their single victory. The defeats can be taken with a happy smile by all P. C. supporters, for from all reports the Blue Stockings were as great in defeat as they would have been in victory. Coach Johnson's charges demonstrated their ability to cope with the best of them, by flashing a brand of basketball, which in three instances just fell short of victory, and in the fourth was rewarded by a glorious triumph.

Journeying to Paris Island for the opening game of the trip, Presbyterian college fell before the onslaught of a team which has not met defeat in its last thirteen starts. Before a crowd of several thousand marines the Hosemen threw, time and time again, many a damper on the spirits of the watchers. With the score tied near the close of the game, the "Leathernecks" with a desperate spurt managed to draw ahead to a well earned victory.

The usual cordial hospitality of the Marine camp was extended, which made the stay very enjoyable. Parris Island has always been noted for kindly treatment of visiting teams, and win or lose, they have shown that they know and practise the creed of sportsmanship.

On Friday night the Presbyterians clashed with the College of Charleston five in a spirited and exciting battle. The Blue Stockings got off to a good lead, but the Maroons were able to overcome this with a pretty rally just as the half ended with the score locked at 11-all. With the substitute of Leitch in the final period, the Charlestonians took the lead and were eight points ahead of the toiling P. C.-ites five minutes before the close of the game. With a last minute spurt, P. C. was able to tie the count at 28-all, and a few seconds later, with a pretty basket contributed by "Mac" Adair, were able to claim the victory by the score of 30-28.

Citadel, perhaps the outstanding college team in the state was their adversary for the following night, and the Blue Hosede warriors set out in astounding fashion to completely sweep the Bulldogs aside for the first minutes of play. With the score 12-6 against the Cadets, Coach Benny Blatt inserted George Weeks, star forward, who later proved to be the 'man of the hour" by efficiently stemming the blue tide. The P. C. men were never over-shadowed, however, and the outcome was in doubt until the closing moments of play, when it became apparent that Citadel's lead was too great to be overcome. The score was 41-30.

On the return trip the Blue Stockings met Pacific Mills in Columbia on the following Monday night. The Millers took an early lead which apparently put the game on ice in the first half. However, to the delight of the spectators, the Hosemen rallied to tie the score at 20-20 before the second half was many minutes old. Pacific called time out and held a consultation. The result was a determined spurt and a strengthening of the defense, which made it impossible for Presbyterian to continue their threat. The rest of the game was as hotly contested as the first part, but the stellar shooting of the Pacifics swung the tide of victory to their side.

It is a notable fact that Presbyterian was able to repeatedly break through the defense for which the Pacific Mill team has always been famous. This is undeniable evidence of the fact that the P. C. basketeers are finding their pace. It must be remembered, also, that Coach Johnson's men have been on the floor less than five weeks to date.

Intense interest is centering about the varsity schedule for the coming week. Pacific Mills, College of Charleston, Wofford, and Citadel, will appear on the local floor. The outcome and excitement of the games last week will serve to bring a large representation to these return games. Students will have a chance to see for themselves the vast improvement that has taken place in P. C.'s offensive play.

Here And There With College Students

16 Year Old's In College?

The dean in charge of admission at Dartmouth college, is definitely against admitting boys in college under 18 years old, except in unusual cases. It is, to my mind, an exceptional case when a boy enters college much under 18. This, however, is directly contrary to the views of the president of Harvard university. He insists that boys can and should be ready for college at 16. Now that is entirely too young. How can a boy only sixteen years of age, bum rides, get drunk, court as heartily, ride a freight and be as experienced and as faultless in these arts as we of the older generation? "Naff said." The (Auburn) Plainsman.

Girl Engineers

Columbus, Ohio. The realms usually reserved for men received another invasion this year when three girls enrolled in the freshman engineering class at Ohio State university. They are Elouse Spramole, Canton; Bernice Howard, Dayton; and Esther Miller, Columbus. The class has 410 pupils. C. N. A.

These Modern Tramps

The college boy has long since passed the hobo in the art of bumming. His guardian angel is his slicker, and his chief asset is a boundless faith in getting there. Armed with these, he sets out, confident that the "college bus" will get him there in time to see his sweetie, or view the game, or what not. The "college bus," of course is anybody's car in which he has the luck to ride. A professor was recently that if a holiday were announced unexpectedly some day, the very next day the boys would be scattered over at least three states. They start anywhere, arrive everywhere, and see everything.

Do Girls Have Any Preferences?

Everybody knows that gentlemen prefer blondes, so the girls at Oglethorpe were questioned to find out what type of gentlemen they preferred. Preferences were so varied that it was impossible to get a consensus of opinion. Here are just a few of the best preferences:

"I prefer brunettes every time; there is a sophistication, a nonchalance, that the blonde seems to lack and, too, they seem to have developed the art of loving to a finer point." Aw! Hush!

"I prefer blondes," said another. "They seem to embody more of the ideal than the brunette. They seem to be more honest, straightforward and lovable." You may sit down.

"I'm not particular," said another.

"All heroes of fiction were blonde," ventured one. "That's fiction too," disputed another. "Why, all the great lovers in history were brunette." Cleopatra was one of the great lovers she mentioned).

After all, most girls dream about blondes and go with brunettes. Or can we strew it all down to this; most girls take whatever they can get? The (Auburn) Plainsman.

Freshmen Lose To Parker High

In one of the hardest fought games ever seen on the local hardwood, the P. C. freshmen went down in defeat to the Parker high five by a score of 36 to 35. But it was only after an extra 5 minutes of play that they could come through successful, for at the end of the regular game the score was knotted at 29 to 29, and it was then decided to continue for an extra five minutes. The game was very cleanly played throughout and kept the spectators on edge the entire time.

The Parker boys showed their superiority at hitting the basket during the first half, for when that period ended they were in the lead 22 to 12. A large percentage of the Hosemen's scores came by the free throw route. Fry, Gaut, Davis, and Jones, flashy center both of Parker, seemed to have the ball jynxed, for when they were able to work through Presbyterian's defense they couldn't miss. This part of the game was rather dull and uninteresting, but things picked up when fouls were resumed at the start of the second half.

As the second half opened, Parker connected two straight fouls and the Hosemen made them both good. They then started registering consistently, taking a few long shots, but as a rule they were able to work to within striking distance of the goal. Cheatham and McNaull, of P. C., were at their best and their guarding was unsurpassable, for, time after time, they broke up the Parker offense and dribbled back down the floor to register. The entire starting five played throughout the game and their teamwork was wonderful. P. C. missed two foul shots near the end of the game, either of which would have given them the decision.

Just after the extra five-minute period opened, Hamilton dribbled under the basket and tallied. However, Kelly quickly rang up two for Parker that made it even again. This seemed to hurt the P. C. boys for, before they could be balanced, Parker had scored twice to make the total 35. Senter of P. C. shot just at the end of the game and the ball was in the air as the shrill cry of the whistle cut short the contest. His shot was good.

Hamilton at forward, and McNaull and Cheatham at guards, were outstanding for Presbyterian, while Davis and Jones took the cake for the boys from Greenville. The latter was high point man of the contest with 13 to his credit, Cheatham took second honors with 9 points.

"Y" PROGRAM GOOD

none but those in the knowledge of what to do have found reason for trust. Logically enough, then, we may apply the same argument in regard to the Bible. How can we have faith in the Bible unless we know what we are basing our faith on?"

Dr. Brimm's second question was, "How can we distinguish something if we have never seen it?" Is there any reason to doubt the teachings of the scriptures unless we have placed them to test? The question as to offered is one that needs belief or disbelief not by what others say, but on facts taken from one's own experience after a test.

The meetings will continue throughout the month of February, with Dr. Brimm leading on Wednesday evenings. Next week the question will be, "What should be a boy's relation to his girl friend?" Surely this will be a discussion that should make every student desire to be present. The attendance next Wednesday evening is expected to be double that of the last meeting. The estimate is made after hearing the favorable comment that is wide-spread among the men who were present last time.

Sigma Upsilon Resumes Schedule

On Thursday evening, February 7th, the Iris chapter, local organ of Sigma Upsilon, national literary honorary fraternity, held its bi-weekly meeting. The session that fell due during examination week was cancelled, and the papers scheduled for that date were transferred to this meeting, along with those already planned.

R. T. Gillespie presented a paper entitled "The Reading Public." The ideas expressed were very striking and unusual, and the diction especially fortunate. As the title indicates, the paper was a discussion of the present day reader, and of the types of writing that are most popular in our own time.

The second number was an essay by B. R. Young on Amy Lowell. The work showed an exhaustive and appreciative study of the works of Miss Lowell and a very keen insight into her character as it is reflected in her poems. Young not only gave an interesting and condensed sketch of her life and works, but illustrated the salient characteristics of her style with some well-chosen selections.

C. W. Grafton read two papers, one a familiar essay entitled "To Old Women of My Acquaintance"; the other a short story under the name "Those Maloney Boys."

Due to sickness, T. J. Cole was unable to appear with his paper, and it was decided to include him in the next program. After some brief discussion relating to the papers read, the meeting adjourned. The next gathering will be held on Thursday evening, Feb. 21st.

BOXING TEAM IS PREPARING

nate circumstances, the bout with Clemson, that had been scheduled for the last week in January, had to be cancelled. Since that time, however, the boxers have been hard at work, and the team is once more in tip-top shape for the opposition next week.

Neil Truesdell, who had trouble with his hand during exam week, has recovered and is once more taking his fast work-outs in the gym every afternoon. Those who have seen him work know that he is aggressive, and able to use the mean punch that is hidden in each glove. It will be remembered that Truesdell was the only man to win his match in the Carolina meet. Truesdell is in the bantamweight division.

Earl Perry and J. T. N. Keels are fighting it out for the chance to fight in the featherweight class. Perry was chosen for the Carolina contest, but Keels has been developing rapidly. Both show considerable improvement, and either will give a good account of himself in the squared-circle.

J. S. Denny, lightweight, D. L. Wood, welterweight, and Ed Martin, lightheavyweight, seem sure of their former positions on the team. Each have all been working hard, and have earned a lot since the start in December.

Among the middleweights, Arthur McQueen, and J. E. Empson are contenders. It will be interesting to see which is chosen for the Citadel bout.

course has already been outlined for the catalogue. For the first semester the subject will be English prose of the 18th century. The second semester course will be a study of the history and development of the Romantic Movement. Doubtless many rising juniors and seniors will be glad to get this advance dope, in order that they may make any changes in their courses for next year that the facts may suggest.

class, and Grafton the women's Bible class.

There is to be no effort to make any appeal for the college, either directly or by inference. The men will simply make a short talk in which they will say, in whatever way they choose, how much or how little P. C. means to them, personally. There will be no attempt at oratory or high-sounding phrases, nor will the talks be long and tedious. The whole idea is to give some Greenville Presbyterians a chance to hear whatever testimony these P. C. students wish to give about their college.

RIFLE TEAM SHOOTS

348, considerably higher than the best that Florida could do. Other scores in that meet ranged down to 295 which was the lowest score to be included in the ten to be counted.

As before, ten shots will be fired per man in each of four positions prone, kneeling, sitting, and standing. The kneeling and standing positions are very difficult, and it is here that most riflemen encounter the greatest trouble.

Lieutenant Taylor and Sergeant Parham, the coaches, are not very well satisfied with the way the members of the team have been turning out to practice. During the last week, however, attendance at the practice periods has been picking up, and the outlook is hopeful.

Copeland was able to enter the contest for a few minutes, but for a very few, and his absence was keenly felt. Although Abercrombie put up a wonderful game at the pivot position he was not quite tall enough to handle his Newberry opponent with much consistency.

Senter of P. C. and Epting of Newberry, tied for high point honors with 11 each. McKinsey, a late substitute, accounted for the two point lead when, just before the final whistle and with the score tied 32 to 32, he rung one from almost the center of the court to carry home the bacon.

HOGREFE SELECTED BY MATES AS LEADER FOR 1929 SEASON

Popular Star Gets Unanimous Vote To Captain Track Outfit. Has Had Colorful Career In Two Sports.

Roy Hogrefe, of Augusta, Ga., was unanimously elected captain of the 1929 track team of Presbyterian college, at a meeting held on Thursday, February 14th. Hogrefe has been P. C.'s outstanding performer in varsity track meets for the past two years, and the honor he has received is a fitting reward for the effort he has made.

Roy Hogrefe came to Presbyterian as a freshman in the fall of 1925. During his rat year he served on the freshman football and track teams, winning distinction on both the gridiron and the cinder path. In the freshman track meet with South Carolina, the spring of 1926, he ran his hundred yards in ten seconds flat, not only astonishing the natives, but covering the distance in time as fast as has ever been recorded within the Palmetto state.

During his sophomore and senior years, Roy served in brilliant fashion as half-back on the varsity football team. Certain of his dashes will not soon pass from the memories of students of Presbyterian college. On the gridiron, as on the oval, Hogrefe is as fast a man as you may wish to see.

Entering his third year with the varsity track squad, Hogrefe has behind him a point total that is unequalled in the history of the college. Without a doubt he is the greatest track man that Presbyterian has fitted with a uniform. In the hundred yard dash, the furlong, and the broad jump, he is a consistent point gainer—the kind that coaches dream about in spare moments.

Pacific Mills Falls Before Blue Hose

The Blue Hosemen, inspired by the phenomenal shooting of "Phil" Roberts, crack forward, passed, shot and fought their way to a thrilling 44-40 victory over the Pacific Mill quintet in the Leroy Springs gymnasium last Monday night. The "Millers," who had previously been undefeated by any college outfit in the state, fought gamely, but their defense was not capable of withstanding the powerful attack launched by the Presbyterians.

Roberts opened the game with a pretty side shot which netted two points and was followed a few seconds later by "Mac" Adair, who sank a free throw, to bring P. C.'s total to three counters. Jennings, Pacific center, with a free throw and a ringer from just behind the foul line knotted the count, but not for long. With a flurry of baskets, Roberts, Adair and Keels, time and time again, broke through their opponents' defense, to

Rifle Team Completes Score

Presbyterian's rifle team has completed the shooting for the matches that were set for this week. The results will be mailed to Mississippi A. and M., Creighton university, and Washington university, some time today, as will their results be mailed to P. C. Next week's issue of The Blue Stocking will feature an announcement of the outcome of each of these contests.

The team got off to a good start early in the week when the scores for the prone, sitting, and kneeling positions were exceptionally good. On the final or standing position, however, the team met with universal failure, due largely to laxity in practice during the weeks just previous to the match. In spite of this the score represents a slight increase over the count attained in the meet with Florida, held in December..

The team standing and the individual scores appear below in the following order: Prone, sitting, kneeling, standing, total:

Plans Go Forward For Junior-Senior

Members of the senior class who have been professing to an uneasiness about the Junior-Senior banquet and dances, will be glad to hear that the date has been set, and preparations are under way. President I. M. Keels of the juniors, announced to the class last Thursday that a committee had decided on April 26th for the affair.

As is the custom, the banquet will be held in Judd Hall. The arrangement of the tables and the plans for decorative effects are in the hands of a committee. Another delegation will attend to the dances, a third to the orchestra facilities, and others to the programs, invitations, and the hundred-and-one matters that always come up with an affair of this sort.

Keels reports that everything points to a banquet that will be the equal to any Junior-Senior of previous years. The Blue Stocking will keep the students apprised from time to time of the way things are developing.

"Y" SESSIONS DRAW CROWD

Many Students Hear Dr. Brimm In Second Discussion At Weekly Meeting.

The student body of Presbyterian college again paid a silent tribute to the well-beloved professor of Bible and religion in the college, Dr. D. J. Brimm, by the unparalleled attendance of the students at the weekly Y meeting held in the college chapel Wednesday night.

The topic for the discussion of the group was the "Relations of the Youth To His Girl Friends." The president, Roy Hogrefe, turned the meeting over to Dr. Brimm who gave an extremely interesting as well as a very unique exposition of his views on the subject.

Dr. Brimm's address was, generally speaking, his attitude concerning the conduct of the masculine toward the feminine sex. In dealing with this question, he stressed the fine distinction between the things which are conventional and those things which rightly belong to the ethical and moral

Boxers Journey To Charleston

Coach Johnson left for Charleston with his boxing team this morning at nine o'clock. The match with Citadel is to be fought tonight in the Citadel gym. The Cadets are reported to have a very strong ring team, and the bouts should be interesting from start to finish.

Those making the trip were: Truesdell and "Dynamite" Keels, for the bantamweight division; Perry among the featherweights; J. S. Dendy among the lightweights; Wood, welterweight; Arthur McQueen, middleweight, and Ed Martin, lightheavyweight. As has been stated before, the heavyweight match will have to be forfeited to Citadel.

Manager L. C. Jackson, who accompanied the team to Charleston this morning, tells us that Truesdell is bothered with a slight illness that may necessitate the substitution of Keels in the bantamweight section.

Literary Societies Name Leaders

Regular meeting of the literary societies were held Tuesday night. In the Eukosmian society, E. R. Rhodes, T. G. Ellis, F. Briggman, and Bob Gillespie were on the program, and in the Pikadelt society, T. E. Davis, P. A. Roberts, J. T. N. Keels, T. J. Cole, G. Palmer, and E. D. Brunson gave talks. Both meetings were cut rather short due to a conflict with a basketball game.

The societies elected their officers for this term. The Eukosmians made J. R. Kennedy their president, with R. S. Crawford and Bob Gillespie as vice-president and secretary respectively. The Pikadelts selected T. J. Cole to lead them, with E. D. Brunson as vice-president and J. I. Copeland as secretary.

Plans are being worked out now in both societies to awaken interest in debating and especially to increase the number of those who are present at the varsity debates. However, nothing definite has been work out yet. On Tuesday night the societies will hold a joint meeting at which time the try-outs for the freshman debating team will be held.

DR. WILLIAM E. HOY GOES TO UNIVERSITY NEXT SESSION

Head of Presbyterian Biology Department Resigns Position. Came Here Decade Ago. Successor Has Not Been Named.

It has recently been announced that Dr. William E. Hoy, Jr., professor of biology at Presbyterian college, is resigning his position at the end of the current school year in order to accept the headship of the department of biology at the University of South Carolina. His friends, colleagues, and students see in Dr. Hoy's departure a sad blow to the science department at P. C.

Dr. Hoy received his A. B. degree from Franklin and Marshall college, and his Ph.D. from Princeton university. Before coming to Presbyterian, in 1919, he was instructor in biology at the University of Rochester, located at Rochester, N. Y. He is a fellow in the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and holds membership in the American Association of Anatomists, and the American Association of Mammologists. He is one of the outstanding members of the South Carolina Academy of Science, and is president of that body at the present time.

Dr. Hoy was the choice of Dr. Moore, department head of biology at the State university, who died suddenly last autumn. Efforts had been made prior to that time to secure the services of the Presbyterian college professor at the university. .

Completing a decade of faithful service at the local institution, Dr. Hoy was considered by associates and students as one of the very best instructors, brilliant and inspiring. In his research work, which he carried on under manifest difficulties, he was an adornment of very evident worth, advertising the college to the outside world of thought.

Dr. Douglas, head of the State school, expressed his opinion several years ago that Dr. Hoy was one of the great biology professors in the country, and the opinion has been confirmed by his career, which is pointing to even higher accomplishments in future. .

DEADLOCK IN CLASS GAMES

Seniors and Sophs Are Tied In Annual Basketball Tournament. Interest Aroused.

The first three afternoons of the week saw the six-game inter-class basketball series end in a deadlock between the Seniors and Sophomores. Both teams had two victories and a defeat against them when play was ended on Wednesday afternoon.

In the first game, on Monday afternoon, the Juniors gave the Sophs a taste of defeat when they amassed 19 points to the Sophs' 15. Means, of the Juniors, and Ketchum of the Sophs, were the leading shots, the former racking up 9 points and the latter 7. Following this game the Seniors won from the Freshmen by the close score of 22-21. The game was a very exciting one. Cook registered 9 for the rats, and Hogrefe contributed 7 to the upper-classmen's total.

Tuesday afternoon witnessed the first Sophomore victory, taken from the hands of the Seniors by the decisive count of 33-6. Lynn, Templeton and Johnson scored at will for the Sophs, while the scoring by their opponents, as indicated by the count, was negligible.

On the same afternoon, the rats handed the Juniors the low end of an 18-15 caption. Six minutes to play, and the rats led at 16-15. Then it was that

Track Plans Take Shape

The track schedule for 1929 is taking shape at last. Prof Sturgeon gives us to understand that seven meets are in the offing. Five of these, and their respective dates, are settled, and the other two, with Georgia and Emory, are pending.

The schedule is the hardest and longest that any Presbyterian college track team has ever faced. It should also be one of the most successful seasons that a Presbyterian college track team has ever weathered. There is an abundance of material, and with hard work, there is promise of a well-rounded team.

Coach Lonnie McMillian has issued his call for practice, and many men have already drawn their uniforms. With pleasant weather that is due to come around soon, in the course of human events, the oval will be populated by a large number of track aspirants. The schedule follows:

March 28—University of Georgia, here (pending).

April 6t—University of South Carolina, here.

April 13—P. C. at Tech Relays.

April 20—Furman in Greenville.

May 4—State Meet, here.

May 11—S. I. A. A., here.

May 13—Emory in Atlanta, (pending).

Calvinists Win From Wofford

The Presbyterian quintet overwhelmingly defeated the fast Wofford team in the Leroy Springs gymnasium last Wednesday night by the score of 47-27. This victory was the third in a row for the Blue Stockings, having previously defeated the College of Charleston and Pacific Mills, and shows conclusively that the Hosemen have undergone a complete change of form. Phil Roberts, who held the high scoring honors for the two previous games, was beaten out in the night's scoring by Bobby Caldwell when the lithe Stocking center accounted for 11 of P. C.'s points. The game was very rough at times, both sides feeding freely from the freethrow diet.

The Calvinists drew rapidly away from the Terriers at the outset, crashing through their defense at will to score, time and time again, from almost inconceivable positions. Realizing this, Coach Johnson inserted the second team, which, led by Knox Wyatt, very easily maintained the advantage.

Jeffries and Dargan were the leading lights for Wofford, while the entire P. C. team scintillated both on defense and offense.

Overnight, as it were, Presbyterian has inherited a real passing, shooting, fighting basketball team. Gone are the days when teams may come to Clinton to practice for their other games. The great era of landslides has turned from one in which Presbyterian is the land lifter to one in which she is the land lider. The P. C. basket in each game is being harassed and browbeaten in a fashion that is indeed inspirational.

It is to be regretted that certain games in the far past are gone past recall. No names are mentioned, but there are certain teams in this state that would do well to give thanks to their lucky stars that Presbyterian is on their schedules no more for this season. It would take more than a few constellations to stem the advancing tide—a tide that is fated to worry a good many more colleges before the close of the hoop season.

We are all familiar with the old saying, "He laughs best who laughs last." Perhaps it is a little early yet for the last laugh, but Presbyterian, in the middle of her schedule, can at least afford to limber up the old diaphragm and venture a few chuckles. Whether these rudimentary laughs are to be squelched in their early infancy, or nurtured into full manhood will be shown by the following weeks of play. Maybe we will never reach the horse-laugh stage, which represents the last word in humor, but it is a safe venture that there may yet be a few grins.

Two games with Newberry and Erskine, and one each with Clemson and Wake Forest are the remaining college games on the schedule. Whether there will be any more games is uncertain. At any rate the P. C. student body and the Clinton fans will be treated to three more home games.

With the remarkable development that 5c team has shown, it is certain that attendance at the home games will begin to pick up. Students who have been lax about attending Blue Hose contests should make it a point to be present, for a good crowd often adds to the speed and interest of the game. Make it a point to come to every game, not because a victorious team is any more deserving of your support than a losing one, but because, if for no other reason, you can be assured of seeing a real good contest every time. Whether or not you care to shout for Presbyterian, a good basketball game ought to be able to lure you to the gym.

Y. M. C. A. ATTENDANCE

The doubled attendance predicted in last week's Blue Stocking for the Wednesday evening meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was made good, and with something to spare. Estimates are that something over half of the student body assembled in the chapel for the meeting. This all goes to show that students are always ready and eager to attend an intelligent and frank discussion of moral and religious questions. There is every reason to believe that boys will continue to come to Y. M. C. A. meetings, and in the same numbers, as long as the cabinet picks vital topics for discussions, and good men to lead them.

In the type of meeting that is now being held, the students are getting just what they want. They are looking for perfectly open talks about things that concern them in their every day life. Students are not interested in anything from a biased or unfair point of view. And when matters are presented to them in a reasonable way, they are received with not only welcome but even cordiality.

Too much cannot be said in praise of Dr. Brimm's leadership of these open forum discussions. He always stands out quite frankly and clearly for the viewpoint of Christianity and the Bible, and he combines with it an appeal to intelligence and common sense that makes his hearers at least see his point, whether or not they may be inclined to agree with him. Thoroughly human himself, he does not lead his audience to the very common habit of gagging over little things with a total disregard for matters that are really big and important. In answer to all questions, Dr. Brimm leads the way to the Bible for solution—a very commendable practice that seems to have lost favor in these days of "progressiveness" and "independence."

Any man who wishes to feel that an hour has been well-spent, should plan to attend the Y. M. C. A. meetings hereafter. We can hardly say, "Ask the man who owns one," but it is applicable to say "Ask the man who has attended the last two meetings." Go ahead and ask him. We are content to let your attendance depend on his answer, for no one who has been there can deny that, aside from the intrinsic worth of the lessons brought out, the meetings are worth while.

FALSE CONCEPTIONS OF COLLEGE

G. T. Van Derhoeef, presumably a freshman at Chicago, has written a very interesting little article for the Daily Maroon, newspaper of that university. It is quoted intact in the January number of a little magazine entitled, 'What The Colleges Are Doing,' published by Ginn and Company. We take the liberty of printing here the opening paragraph of his theme, in order that it may be used as the basis of a little speech about colleges..

He says: "And so this is college! Another fostered illusion gone, smashed, sunk, disintegrated. Alas, to me, and I dare say, to a goodly number of the present freshman class, the awakening was rude; the shock sudden and cruel. For where, oh where, is the college that most of us visualized, the college of 'College Humor,' of Temple Bailey, of William Randolph Hearst? Where is flaming youth on its mad tear and the roadhouses and the blind-pigs?"

In current "movies" we are treated to numerous views of so-called "college" life. Men invariably room in palatial apartments that remind one of the bridal-suite of an expensive hotel. Through half-open doors we are allowed to glimpse groups of boys who loll on beds and thump ukuleles to the time of the latest jazz creation. Classrooms are merely convenient scenes for humorous "shots" of absent-minded professors. Presidents and deans, the old favorites, are always endowed with visages like the Great Stone Face.

If this is college, there are a great many men in America who must be attending grammar schools. Perhaps there are institutions that these pictures actually picture, but we feel safe in saying that they certainly do not appear in this section of the country. It would be novel, and yet quite pleasing if some movie studio would release a picture that, at least in some small measure, reflected life as it is lived by every-day students in an every-day college.

But the movie studios have "their public" to consider. We are constantly reminded that fans would never countenance any violation of the customary film conception of college life. Perhaps this is so, but it does not appear that such a picture has ever been tried as an experiment. Even college students themselves like to be soft-soaped with high-class ideas about something that is as rare as a July snow in Florida. It's human nature, but it's also about ninety per cent bunk. Folks ought to get tired of it some day—but they won't.

WINGS

And while we are on the subject of moving pictures, it might be well to mention one that was in Clinotn the early part of the week—"Wings." Here is one picture that is indeed commendable, not because of its acting, which was good, or because of its plot, which was all right, but because of its realistic touches of war. Whether or not it is a true picture of the World war, it is certainly excellent as a gentle reminder of the fact that war is not simply a holiday in which romantic and handsome dough-boys woo delectable French maidens.

They tell us that there will always be war. One reason, we are told, for this view is that physical and national conflict is always glorified in the minds of our youth—and will crop out as soon as the last war has passed, as a living, terrible thing, from the memories of a new generation. This may be so, children, but if pictures like "Wings" continue in popularity, they will certainly act as something of a deterrent to ambitious and heroic minds. It is one thing to be decorated with a nice medal and all that, but it is quite a serious thing to get a steel-jacketed bullet where your belt buckle normally belongs.

We come away from most war pictures with an exalted conception of what it means to defend your country's honor. All very well. Defend it by all means, but scenes such as have been shown on the Casino screen this week will serve to keep inflammatory youths from advocating war on any little pretext.

War means destruction and famine and death—and war-debts. If it becomes necessary, and there is no other alternative way to uphold a right principle, then bring it on and let's make the best of it. But thoughtful people will think again before they let some trifling reason throw regiments of our youth int othe maws of the engines of war. A machine gun is a very cold blooded animal, and when she sows, she reaps. And the harvest is plentiful.

Bums' Names, Like Their Faces, Are Often Seen in Public Places

That "hoboing" is popular among Furman men as well as students of practically all other universities is a well-established fact. Also, the fact that some time is taken out in the lazy art of waiting for rides is also shown by other things than statistics.

At the point where the Newberry road is joined by the Columbia cut-off, about two miles this side of Newberry, there is a sign-post with several signs on it. Perusing this board a few days ago, a pair of Furman men discovered that the same trail had been used by others, and those others had to wait a little there also. On the backs of the signs, there are names of numerous students from Clemson, Furman, Carolina, Citadel and other colleges. Some of them put the date of their passage there, and still others left brief notes for some who were presumably following close behind them.—The (Furman) Hornet.

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL

Clemson Frosh Win

The freshmen's road trip of this week was not so successful as far as boosting their win column was concerned, but it showed an improvement in play. The games with Calhoun Falls and B. M. I. were called off, so only two games were played. In the first, the frosh went down in defeat to Clemson frosh Monday night at Clemson by a score of 43 to 20.

The Hosemen seemed unable to keep their hands on the ball for they lost it time after time when they had taken it away from the Cadet dribblers and had started back down the floor. Senter of P. C., put up the best game for that team, shooting 6 points, while Clark and Calhoun were the bright spots for the Tigers, the former shooting 18 points to be high point man, while Calhoun trailed closely with 15.

Little Seceders Take One

The first-year Blue Hose lost one of the most hotly contested games of the season to the Erskine frosh on the Seceders' own court Tuesday night by a score of 27 to 26. The game was hard fought during the first half, which ended with the tally sheet reading 18 to 11 ni favor of the Due West boys. However, this was merely child's play compared to the game put up by both fives during the second half. It was nip and tuck the entire second period with neither team staying consistently in the lead. The P. C. hoopmen might have held a slight margin, however. The return to form of Copeland, who rung up 11 points, was exceedingly encouraging to the followers of the freshmen.

Toward the last of the contest it looked as if the Clinton boys would carry off the honors when they doggedly held to their 3 point lead until the last two minutes of play. At that time the Hosemen were leading 24 to 21. Then with some fast shooting the Erskineites rung up a pair of deuces to swing the scales in their direction. Senter sunk another, however, and made the score 26 to 25. Then with only a few more seconds to play, Williams of Erskine, framed the leather with the loop to keep the honors at home.

Williams was high point man of the contest with 14 to his credit and was the outstanding star for both teams. He was closely pushed, however, by Copeland of P. C. Of the others, Carson was best for Erskine and Senter for P. C.

Blue Hose Yearlings Down Bailey

The frosh downed the fast Bailey Military institute quintet here Saturday night by a score of 42 to 31. The game, although slow and dragging at times seemed to pick up at others, and for a while it became a fast basketball game. The Bailey boys, though outclassed, put up a hard and clean fight, and would most likely have had a much higher score had it not been for the close and fast guarding of Cheatham and McNaull for P. C.

The first half was rather slow and both teams found difficulty in keeping their hands on the ball. It ended with the Hosemen in the lead, 21 to 16. As the final period began, the Soldiers started a rally that almost overcame the Calvinists' lead but as they slowed up the boys in blue again forged to the front and stayed there the rest of the evening.

Smith of P. C., seemed to have the ball jynxed, for every time it left his hands it found the basket. Smith registered 15 for the encounter, with Barret of B. M. I. trailing with 13. Besides these, Davidson of B. M. I., who registered 11 points, and Senter and Cheatham, for P. C., looked best.

Here And There With College Students

Clothes and the Man

That good looking clothes do create an impression was recently demonstrated in one of Georgia Tech's classrooms when the professor asserted that he always gave better marks to those dressed in white shirts and good looking ties.

The same instructor recently sent a student to his room to change his sweater for a coat. The student returned dressed in full tuxedo attire—The (Auburn) Plainsman.

Know Your College

It is nothing short of amazing how little some students know about the colleges they attend. Many make their homes on the campus for the whole four years, without learning of the college's past history. How, when and why was your college founded? Who are some of its illustrious graduates? What persons of not have had a hand in the building up of the college you will some day call your alma mater? Such facts are well worth learning.

Tables Turn

Easton, Pa.—The coin slot in the public pay telephone at Lafayette college recently was left open when the phone was installed, and as a result all money used in making calls was returned. Not a few students took advantage of this as soon as it became generally known, and the telephone did a thriving business in long distance calls. The boys called home and the girl friends, all over the country, for nothing.

When they returned from Thanksgiving vacation, however, they were somewhat chagrinned to learn that the telephone company had traced their calls, and had taken advantage of the vacation to distribute bills for payment. Not a few students were broke.

Can This Be True?

Margaret Lloyd, a student at the Bessie Tift college, has recently been honored by receiving an appointment to West Point Military academy. This is quite a distinction, as she is the first woman ever to receive such an honor. That's fine. Probably by the time we have another war, one need not leave his sweetheart behind, but have her by his side on the firing line. Or still worse, she may be there giving orders as she never did before. The (Auburn) Plainsman.

Hosemen Down Charleston Five

The Presbyterian basketeers continued their victory march in the P. C. gym Tuesday night when, with an avalanche of baskets shot from every corner of the floor, they buried the College of Charleston under the small end of a 45-16 score. The entire Blue Stocking squad saw action at some time or other during the contest and on all occasions were able to show a decided superiority to the visitors.

Roberts was again the high scorer for the night with 15 points but was given a close run for the honor by "Bobo" Caldwell who annexed 11 of the Presbyterian counters. Walsh and McInery were outstanding for the Charlestan boys.

DEADLOCK IN CLASS GAMES

Blakely. Gus and no other, pulled his coup d'etat by nonchalantly tossing a basket from the center of the floor to cinch matters.

Interest was intense on Wednesday at 4 o'clock. All teams stood even with a victory and a defeat all around. The Seniors won from the Juniors by a two-point margin, the score being 21-19. Neighbors with 9 points, and Latimer with 8 were the outstanding men for the Seniors, while Babb and Means were the major shots for the Juniors.

The record of the Soph-Frosh game is a little indistinct, but it appears that the Sophs won by 31-15 or some such score.

PACIFIC MILLS FALLS BEFORE BLUE HOSE

close the half with a comfortable margin.

The final period was a repetition of the first with action becoming faster every moment. The Columbia boys managed to draw ahead of the Calvinists, but Orell Dunlap put the boys back into the running with a donation of four points. From this point on the Hosemen took command of things until the final whistle had "tolled the knell" of defeat for Pacific Mills.

"Y" SESSIONS DRAW CROWD

code of a nation or individual. He gave a brief resume of the history of convention from a chronological viewpoint and cited various examples of the changing standards of morals and normal conventions due to an influx of new ideas and to the changing internal conditions of a nation. He stated that in his opinion, the consummation of a criterion in moral conditions would come when every man looked up to his own mother as the mode of exemplary refinement and purity.

Finally, Dr. Brimm gave as his personal opinion that the present younger generation equalled if it did not completely surpass, the preceding one in maintaining the proper conventions and in uplifting the national and individual standards of culture and refinement.

HOGREFE TRACK CAPTAIN

formance of the captain-elect was his specific leap of twenty-three feet eleven and three-fourths inches in the meet with Carolina, in the spring of 1927. The same season saw him wrest second place in the broad jump at the Loch Raigys, the track championship of the South. It is notable that at this time he was defeated by none but the redoubtable Hamm, of Georgia Tech, who is now Olympic champion and holds the world's record in the event.

Hogrefe was a member of the P. C. team that won the State and S. I. A. A. championships in 1927. In the latter meet he garnered three firsts on his own account, besides running on the relay. At Birmingham, competing with the best athletes of the S. I. A. A., he won firsts in the 220 and broad-jump, and tied with Lott, of the home team, in the century.

Citadel Wins From Blue Hose

Citadel, presenting a very fast and smooth-working machine of goal heavers, defeated the Blue Stockings in the Leroy Springs gymnasium last night by the lopsided score of 50-31. At no time were the Cadets in danger, for the Hosemen were seemingly dazzled by the brilliant style of play put up by the visitors. It was indeed a championship team that faced the men in blue; dribbling, passing and shooting almost mechanically, breaking up rally after rally staged by the home boys. The Citadel well deserves the name of state champions. Bobby Caldwell and Dunlap were probably the shining lights for P. C., both playing a very steady game.

Citadel started off with a flurry of goals which soon developed into a very substantial lead, constantly increasing during the battle. Although never threatening the more seasoned Cadets, the Presbyterians at times flashed a little of the old speed and aggressiveness displayed so promiscously in their last few games, but this fast pace could not be maintained. Jimmie Green, substitute forward, played good ball while in the fray.

P. C. RING MEN LOSE TO CADETS

McQueen and Perry Win. Wood Fights To Draw. Bouts Are Good.

Coach Johnson's mitten slingers were defeated by the boxers of The Citadel, 4 to 2, last Saturday night in the first intercollegiate bout ever held in the "City by the Sea." From all that can be heard, the 900 people who witnessed the match were well satisfied with their sample of college boxing and are wailing for more.

The team journeyed down Saturday morning, most of the way over routes that were built by the famous French contractor, Detour, who seemingly holds the contract for building most of the roads in South Carolina, certainly all the bad ones. After weighing in at 3:30 and eating dinner, the squad rested until time for the hostilities to begin and then opened fire. The return trip was made early Sunday morning. Enough can not be said about the fine hospitality shown the team by the coaches and student body of "The Fort," so we'll just leave it at that.

If Truesdell, fiery little P. C. bantamweight had not been ill and unable to enter the ring, the boys in blue would have most likely tied the meet even though they had to forfeit the heavyweight. However, Truesdell was not able to enter, necessitating the substitution of Keels. This Columbia

Newberry Ends With Victory

Newberry, Feb. 22.—The Newberry Indians closed their 1929 basketball season here tonight by defeating Presbyterian college by a score of 30 to 22. The Indians won on a dramatic comeback in the second half. The Presbyterians took the jump in scoring and were leading 16 to 10 at the end of the first half. The Indians hit their stride in the second period and were able to pile up 15 points to take the lead, 25 to 16, before P. C. could score. From then on the Lutherans easily outdistanced their foes.

The work of Whitaker, Kinard and Rushe, playing their last game for Newberry, was outstanding. M. and W. Adair were the Presbyterian stars.

Line-up:

Friday night—Wofford debates Newberry here. Freshmen present "The Junior," a three-act comedy, at the Florida Street school.

DEBATE MENU OPENS TONIGHT

Carson-Newman Debaters Will Be Met At 7 O'clock. Next Debate March 1st.

Presbyterian's varsity debating team will make its debut for the 1929 schedule tonight in the chapel, when it faces the debaters from Carson-Newman college, Jefferson City ,Tennessee. The Carson-Newman men have been touring this section of the country, it is understood, but no results of any of their other debates have been received as yet.

The question will be: Resolved: That some substitute should be found for the jury system. It is the same subject as is being used throughout the country for a great many college debates this year, and is a subject that should arouse general interest among students.

P. C. will be represented by J. I. Copeland and G. W. Palmer. Copeland served on the rat debate team last year and did well. Palmer was a member of the frosh team two years ago. Both have done considerable research work and outside study in preparation for the match, and may be counted on to uphold Presbyterian's side to good

The Collegian Appears Again

The winter number of The Collegian made its appearance on the campus during the latter part of the week. From remarks picked up here and there, it seems to have been a very satisfactory issue. The cover is attractive, and the contents appear to be more in the line that students like to read.

The Blue Stocking has been unable to review the magazine for this week's paper, but there will be a criticism next week. Watch for it and see if you agree with what the reviewer says.

Sigma Upsilon Holds Session

The Isis chapter of Sigma Upsilon, honorary literary fraternity, met Thursday night in Prof. Gignilliat's classroom in its usual bi-weekly session. Present day literature was discussed, each member giving a list of the three books he considered worthy of recommendation. "John Brown's Body," "Elizabeth and Essex" and "Strange Interlude" were found to be the popular choice of the chapter. It was moved and passed that these books with the addition of two modern novels be presented to the library within the next month.

Three papers were read, the first being a study of Irish literature, written by T. J. Cole. J. R. B. Martin read an interesting novelette dealing with the study of an aristocratic family of the South, tracing them through four generations. A short story written by Paul Milus portrayed, in a whimsical manner, college life in America.

The program was assigned for the next session and the meeting was declared adjourned.

GRADES AGAIN

It is well to remember that grades for the month of February will be closed next week. Students who want to make whoopee after March 1st, had better be burning the Midnight Mazda for the next few days.

DR. S. C. HAYS TO FILL VACANCY LEFT BY HOY AS BIOLOGY HEAD NEXT YEAR

Clinton Physician To Again Take Charge of Department. Is P. C. Graduate.

TAUGHT HERE LAST YEAR

President John McSween has authorized the statement that Dr. S. C. Hays of Clinton, S. C., will head the biology department of Presbyterian college during the session 192-30. Dr. Hays is a P. C. graduate, and is one of the outstanding men on the alumni list. His interest and love for his Alma Mater have been demonstrated in many instances. The biology department is not only receiving an able man, but one who will continue to love and serve the college in every possible way.

Dr. Hays received his diploma from Presbyterian college in 1906. He was valedictorian of his class and had been outstanding in several fields of student activity while attending the institution. The year after his graduation he remained at P. C. and taught a section of freshman math. In 1908 Dr. Hays went to Shady Grove, S. C., where he taught school for a year. The next year he transferred to Dillon, S. C., where he was a member of the faculty of Dillon High.

In the year 1910 St. Clair Hays entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columba university, New York. While there he attained the distinction of membership in Alpha Omega Alpha, honorary medical fraternity. When he graduated he was again honor man of his class.

Dr. Hays served one year with the New York Nursery and Child's hospital, two with the Belleview hospital, and six months with St. Bartholomew's. With his preparation complete, he returned to Clinton where he has been practicing medicine ever since. Today his reputation as a physician and surgeon is state-wide.

Next year will not be his first association directly with the college. In

STUDENTS TO C. M. T. CAMPS

R. O. T. C. Men Are Now Being Accepted In Summer Activities of War Department.

In the past there has been some hesitancy in accepting members of college cadet corps for the citizens training camps, but a definite ruling has been received that college cadets may be accepted. Application blanks of R. O. T. C. students will bear the written approval of the professor of military science and tactics who will also note the course for which recommended.

It has been found that the college R. O. T. C. man is a great help in these camps and the experience he gains while at camp is a great help to him when later as a reserve officer he is sent to the C. M. T. camps as an instructor.

The camps next summer will be held between June 13th and July 12th and most of the men from this section of South Carolina will be sent to Fort Moultrie, Charleston. Little need be said about camp near Charleston as the city and the wonderful facilities for water sports found there are well known.

A priority list is now open at Lieut. A. N. Taylor's office and students who desire to attend camp may leave their names and addresses on the list. College students who are not members of the R. O. T. C. are of course eligible for the camps. Application blanks will be available on March 1st and when completed after that date may be sent

"Y" Meetings To Be Resumed

The open forum discussion of the question, "What part does emotion play in religion?" which was scheduled for the Y. M. C. A. meeting last Wednesday evening, was postponed a week on account of the sudden change in the weather. Dr. Brimm was present and offered to continue the discussion as announced, but his advice was against it, considering the circumstances and the vote was for postponement.

It is hoped that this will not interfere with the record attendance that has been achieved by the "Y" for the past weeks. Students are guaranteed a warm room for the meeting next Wednesday evening, and since there are no conflicts with other student activities the attendance should equal that of the meeting two weeks ago. Those who have been to the previous round-table meetings, will be sure not to miss the next one. Dr. Brimm always presents many valuable thoughts and suggestions on the subject.

RATS TO STAGE PLAY ON FRIDAY

Will Present "The Junior," a Three-Act Comedy, At Florida St. School.

"The Junior," a comedy in three acts, will be presented by the freshman class at the Florida Street school on next Friday evening, March 1st. Preparations have been going on for about two weeks, and every indication is that the performonce will afford a delightful hour of entertainment to all who attend.

Mrs. Marshall Brown has kindly agreed to direct the play, and it is under her tutelage that the frosh dramaticists are working. The practices are daily, and the progress is encouraging. The first year men have challenged the dramatic club to produce a play in competition, and it is understood that that organization has answered the challenge by starting work on "Second Story Peggy." This play will be staged after the glee club returns from its trip, some time in March.

Several of the young ladies of Clinton High have very graciously agreed to take the parts requiring feminine charms. They are entering into the production of the play enthusiastically, and will share in the success it attains. Mrs. Brown has chosen the following cast:

Edward Moore, the junior "Caesar" Myers.

Corps Area Match Finished This Week

During the past week the P. C. Rifle team has been firing the Fourth Corps Area match, together with Lafayette college. The Fourth Corps Area match is perhaps the most important of the season, for in it the team is pitted against rifle teams representing all of the R. O. T. C. units in this section of the country. The administration is especially anxious that P. C. should stand well in this contest.

The ten high scorers, and their records for the past week are given below. The order is, prone, sitting, kneeling and standing.

McInnis, W. M.	92	96	81	66	335
Davis H. W.	87	86	88	69	330
Simpson, W. E.	94	87	79	68	328
Anderson, J. S.	92	96	85	53	326
Roberts, P. A.	90	80	83	71	324
Dunlap, L. L.	93	94	81	51	319
Grafton, C. W.	94	88	76	61	319
Anderson, J. L.	94	78	82	64	318
Martin, O. C.	91	90	77	59	317
Blalock, T. J.	91	87	74	52	304

Lieutenant Taylor, after consulting the results of the matches thus far, and of the Fourth Corps Area match, which is the basis for selecting the letter men, announces that the following men have won their rifle emblems for the 1929 schdule: J. S. Anderson, T. J. Blalock, T. J. Cole, H. W. Davis, L. L. Dunlap, C. W. Grafton, W. M. McInnis, O. C. Martin, P. A. Roberts, and W. E. Simpson. Of this number, five will be back next year, and with these as a nucleus, an excellent team should be developed.

Due to the shortage of ammunition, it has been necessary to cut the team to eleven men for the remainder of the schedule. The men to be retained are the letter men, and J. L. Anderson, alternate.

Frosh Debaters Chosen Tuesday

Try-outs for freshman debate were held last Tuesday evening at a joint meeting of the literary societies. The men who spoke were: Adams, G. C., Anderson, C. W., Anderson, F. V., Myers, J., White, D. S., Murphy, M. T., and Whiteside, J. B.

The speeches were very well worked out, and the delivery was excellent. After some discussion among the judges, the following men were picked for the team: C. W. Anderson, F. V. Anderson, M. T. Murphy and J. B. Whiteside. G. C. Adams was chosen as alternate.

Officials are not yet ready to announce the freshman debate schedule. There will be the usual triangular affair with Newberry and Wofford, but the date is not yet decided. The Blue Stocking will carry the announcements as soon as they are ready for publication.

Tonight!

Basketball—Frosh vs Erskine Leroy Springs gymnasium.

Debate—Varsity vs Carson Newman—Chapel, 7:00 P. M.

COLLEGE BOXING

Take sheer at college boxing. People who think they know all about it are prone to lave-rate the sport on one of two sides. Either it is brutal, in the opinion of those who haven't seen a college match, or it is sissy, in the opinion of some of those who make their living in the ring. It is not uncommon to hear remarks of one type or the other; but let us see whether either of these two criticisms find any ground in fact. Let us face the knockers and see whether we are to join them or not.

So it is brutal. Well, well! Two boys are put into the ring for three two-minute rounds. They are in excellent condition, and have been working out for weeks in preparation for just this sort of thing. They have been accustomed to giving and taking a certain amount of punishment, and it is not all child's play that they have been used to. Endurance has been developed, and coordination of eyes, hands, and feet, has been learned together with the ability to take a blow with eyes open and head clear.

Ten three-minute rounds is not a long time. It is long when you're waiting for a train, for a meal or table, or even when you're in a class or doing anything else that keeps your mind busy. It was said that Dempsey K. O.'d the giant Firpo in less time, but it seems to me the Dempsey was the greatest [illegible] and that the power [illegible] in the knock-out punch is to be laid. That are used in boxing matches.

I people are to criticism that [illegible] of having a six minutes of [illegible] what do they think of football? A football game is easy minutes using [illegible] means, only minutes of [illegible] sport, too. A football game is [illegible] minutes of running and bumping and tackling and kicking and [illegible] are in it for about [illegible] minutes. A boxer defends his head and [illegible] a football man never defends anything but his ears. Football men are constantly being called "beefs." And [illegible] same people who lift their eyebrows at boxing can sit through four quarters of hard football and go away feeling pepped. To look at it from a necessary "animal" club unless there are plays staged that bring to light something that is worthy of honor. And when such a club has staged a play, it automatically graduates into the class of active organizations.

And this reminds us that the "Sock and Becker" club, which has been considered to be in the last stages of [illegible], has suddenly taken a new lease on life. Those who ought to know are saying that there will be a play, and that it has been chosen. All [illegible] produces [illegible] champions, if any, and [illegible] are on a contest by [illegible] see which man can run the fastest and get hit the least. They look askance at the "pillows" that are worn, and wonder mildly how it can be called a fight when it is so manifestly impossible to hurt anyone.

But college boxing matches are not "just folling." There are plenty of men who will sock to heart's content —and not little playful pokes, either. If two fighters are evenly matched, the bout will be a good one. It matters little whether a championship of the world is at stake, or whether it is simply a case of me-and-my-college beating you-and-your-college. The reason few college fights end in clean knockouts is that the training of the men is not as highly perfected as of those in the professional class. It takes a pretty good man with a pretty good arm and a pretty good opening to put another man of his own weight to sleep.

Both factions croak, and will doubtless continue to croak. The cave-man laughs at it, and the Ladies Aid societies hold up their respective hands in horror. What then, is to be the common sense attitude toward college boxing?

It is easy to reach a sensible view when one bears this in mind—that it is possible to sack for all you're worth and yet not inflict any serious or lasting injury. Surely this will answer both parties.

Let the conservatives rest easy in the thought that there are no casualties in college boxing. Few emerge from a fight with anything worse than a black eye, and it is just as possible to get a black eye by running into an open door when you're prowling around locking up the house for the night. Black eyes may be forgotten in a few days. Let us not on their account banish the manly art, which is one of the few manly things left to us.

On the other hand, let the radicals likewise cease their foaming at the mouth. Just because there is no murder in college boxing, let us not think that it is like kindergarten work. Men enter the squared circle with the idea of showing that they are better than their opponents. If they go about it in a business-like way, and show no signs of being yellow, why croak about the fact that there is no long list of clean knockouts?

ENTER DRAMATICS

Whether or not a new student activity is to be a blessing or a curse to the campus depends on the activity. There are some of them that appear without any apparent reason, and serve no apparent function. They are merely excuses for more meetings, and more announcements, and more titles after names in the Pat'-Sat'. Now that [illegible] perhaps it is best to tolerate them and allow the "elite" to bask in the pseudo-prominence that they attain by being able to say casually, "... but I can't stay long. I've got to dash over to a meeting of the XYZ."

[illegible] high time the student body began to question the [illegible] other activities [illegible] some [illegible] to [illegible] Dramatics [illegible] something to life at P. C., [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Library Notes

The theft of amounts to that of the current number of Collier's from the reading room Thursday morning, the twenty-first, in less than three hours after it was placed on the magazine rack is but an example of the abuse certain students make of the open nature of the reading room. Magazines, such as Collier's, the American Magazine, the Literary Digest and others are frequently removed, and often permanently, from this room. This is stealing in its worse form as it is robbing not one person but the rest of the student body of the privilege of using these magazines. Such actions on the part of a few of the more thoughtless students is not in keeping with the high moral tone of the Presbyterian college student body.

The only way to prevent this outrageous state of affairs from continuing is for the students as a whole to look after their interests and see that no student shall be guilty of infringing on the rights of others.

Thru the generosity of Prof. Orr the library has copies of the PaC-SaC for the years 1914 and 1915. This gives library the following PaC-SaCs: 1914, 1915, 1916, 1922, 1924, 1925, 1927, and 1928. The years 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1923, and 1926 are missing. Anyone who can help the library to fill in these gaps please get in touch with the librarian.

The library now has arranged an almost complete file of The Blue Stocking from 1921 to the present. Several numbers are missing and any help in getting these numbers for the library and the numbers preceeding 1922 would be appreciated and make a valuable addition to the historical services of the college.

The library has practically no numbers of the The Collegian. If any of the students or other friends of the college can help in filling in this vacancy in our files it would also be appreciated.

Students taking Dr. Jones' South Carolina history course will be interested to know that the books necessary for reference on this course have been placed on reserve down stairs. However, no over-night privileges are to be granted with these books due to their value and rarity. A good many new books and historical papers are being added to this collection.

P. C. RING MEN LOSE TO CADETS

Earl, who had never been in the ring before and had not had much training, certainly deserves a great deal of credit for the spirited scrap he put up against "Firpo" Oswald, fast Citadel 115 pounder. Johnny stayed with Oswald the entire three rounds and a great deal of the time was carrying the fight to his faster and more experienced opponent. Both Keels and Oswald hit the canvas once but neither was jolted enough to stay down. This was a true "boxing" match, both of the ringsters being styleists. They, like most of the ones that followed, started slow in the first round, only to come back fast in the last two. The judges gave Oswald the decision which was very close.

"Rattling Bad Eye" Perry made the same one ah in the second bout when he easily stopped Barnes, Citadel feather-weight hope, in a fast three round encounter. The judges unanimously decided in favor of the P. C. representative. Perry, like Keels, started slow and finished fast. In the first round, Barnes put him on the mat for a count of four. He quickly recovered, however, and held his own throughout the rest of the bout. He had Barnes on the floor three times in the last two rounds.

The next number on the program was the lightweight bout in which Sanders took an easy verdict over Dendy of P. C. Sanders was probably the most experienced and scientific "leatherpusher" on the Citadel card. The advantage showed throughout the bout but it did not prevent Dendy giving him a run for his decision and the spectators a beautiful exhibition of stamina and come-back. He landed quite a few blows that had the soldier guessing and tired at the end of the second round and throughout the third.

The welterweight bout between McQueen of Presbyterian and Howie of Citadel, which came next, was probably the best of the evening, and it was only after an extra round that a decision in favor of McQueen was reached. Soon after the extra round began it was apparent to all that the strength and punch of McQueen would easily carry him to victory. Both boxers started slow, feeling each other out. However, with cries of "Fight!" coming from the crowd they began mixing and before the first round was over, McQueen had been on the floor twice. In the second round, McQueen was more cautious and fought Howie on almost even terms. During the third round, McQueen's endurance began to tell on Howie and the latter had been on the floor four times when the gong sounded, twice from terrific rights delivered near the end of the round. Howie was still on the floor at the count of eight when the bell rung. The bout was called a draw and the judges asked for another round. McQueen carried the fight to Howie the entire time of the extra two minutes and kept him continually on the run or in the ropes. Howie also spent part of his time on the canvas. At the end of the extra period, there was no doubt as to the winner.

The middleweight bout was the first of the night to begin with a rush. Wood of P. C. who was outweighed 17 pounds by Carlisle of The Citadel, opened fast, rushing his man the first thing after shaking hands and breaking. He landed several good lefts to the body before Carlisle could get started. However, Carlisle got the big end of the round by landing a series of terrific right uppercuts to Wood's face. The second round was fought on almost even terms with Carlisle having a slight edge. He continued to land a number of uppercuts to Wood's face. As the third round opened, Wood renewed his fierce offensive tactics and rushed Carlisle into the ropes time after time and several times had him in a condition that predicted a knockout. This did not come, however, and because of Wood's spirited rally in the last round, the bout was called a draw. The judges considered neither man to be in condition for a fourth round, so they let their draw decision stand.

In the last exhibition of the night, "Killer" Oglesby of The Citadel, scored a technical knockout over Martin in the second round. The bout started with a rush, then a pause for the opponents to feel each other out. Toward the end of the round Oglesby was entreating Martin to "Come on." As Martin rushed, he was floored twice by jolting rights to the chin. The bell rung with him on the floor. This did not daunt the sturdy P. C. lightheavy, however, for as the second stanza opened he again rushed "The Killer." He got in several good blows but Oglesby landed again to the chin and Martin took nine and got up. A short spun of sparring and Martin went down again. At this point, the P. C. seconds tossed in the white towel, giving the Citadel man the technical K. O. Martin's was truly a beautiful exhibition of spirit, true sportsmanship, fight and come back.

The heavyweight was forfeited to Skelton of The Citadel, as P. C. failed to have a representative in that weight.

to without delay. The priority list has become a necessity inasmuch as past experience has shown that in this corps area alone there were over 8,500 applications received for the 1,000 places in the camps.

Dr. J. W. Davis and Dr. T. J. Peake will give the necessary physical examinations without charge to any applicant. Application blanks should be be sent in as soon after March 1st as is possible. Students from other states may make application to attend the camps at Lieutenant Taylor's office, and mileage, etc., will be suitably arranged for.

JOKES

A tramp had been admitted to the casual ward of a workhouse late one evening and the following morning he duly appeared before his master:

"Have you taken a bath this morning?" he was asked.

"No, sir," answered the tramp in astonishment. "Is there one missing "

Have you heard about the Scotchman who was building a house and telephoned to the Masonic Temple for a couple of Free Masons?

A barber was shaving a new customer. "Haven't I shaved you before, sir?" said he.

"No," I got these scars in France."

DR. S. C. HAYS TO FILL VACANCY

1917 Dr. Hays was a member of Presbyterian's faculty, and gave courses in anatomy and physiology. Later, and not soon to be forgotten by present students of the upper classes, he consented to fill Dr. Hoy's place when the head of the biology department was away on leave last spring. His courses aroused a great deal of interest among his students, and much favorable comment was heard about the campus.

Dr. Hays is making a special effort to serve his Alma Mater. His practice is so large as to require nearly all of his time at present, yet he has consented to make room for his service to the college. It is understood that he will give two one-semester advanced courses next year, probably in genetics and human physiology.

Last year when he taught freshman biology, Dr. Hays was assisted by A. W. Grafton, of the class of 1928, who had charge of the laboratory work, thus relieving him of that addit onal burden. Next year he will be assisted by C. W. Grafton, '30, who has been student assistant in biology this year.

RATS TO STAGE PLAY

Jimmy Monroe and "Thin" Smith, other juniors—Ralph Heller and Bernie Boyd.

Merwyn, Ricketts, Rockwell, seniors —Marvin Murphy, Bob Gillespie, "Butterfly" Hamilton.

Thomas J. Highfield, a captain of finance—Bill Simpson..

President Fowler, of Lakeville university—"Cicero" Brigman.

Janet Hale, Highfield's niece—Miss Almena Milling.

Mabel Gray, Vera Griswold, visiting Lakeville—Miss Gladys Aldred, Miss Margaret Copeland.

Violet, who was born there—Bill Collins.

The freshman class has very generously voted to turn over the net receipts from the play to the PaC-SaC. This means that, aside from the actual enjoyment to be derived from seeing the play, students will actually be paying money back into their own pockets. It is a case of "the more you put in, the more you get out." The frosh are to be commended on their planned division of the spoils. Let us now see to it that there are spoils to divide.

advantage. The judges have not yet been announced.

President Davis of the local chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, also states that the time for the annual triangular varsity debate between P. C. Wofford, and Newberry has been set. On March 1st, T. E. Davis and J. T. N. Keels will journey to Newberry to meet Wofford, while O. W. Chapin and T. M. Johnston will trek to Spartanburg where they are to meet the men from Newberry. On the same date, P. C. will be host to the teams from these two institutions.

The question for debate on this question will be the same as that for the Carson-Newman contest tonight. The winner of the triangular affair will have the right to represent South Carolina in the regional debate conducted by P. Kappa Delta every year.

Dear Sirs: For twenty years I had suffered with two severe bunions. I tried numerous cures, but to no avail. Finally, a friend recommended your wonderful bunion cure. After one application my bunions were completely gone. By the way, have you anything to bring back the two toes that went with the bunions?

VOLUME X PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, CLINTON, S. C., MARCH 2, 1929 NUMBER 22

SIX-DAY TRIP FOR GLEE CLUB

Organization Is Ready After Preparation Under Direction of Rev. M. C. Dendy.

The Presbyterian College glee club will leave Clinton on Monday, March 11th, for a six-day trip. The itinerary includes six programs to be given on successive nights at towns in the upper part of the state. A separate trip, probably of three days duration, will be made later in the month to towns in the lower-state districts.

Present plans are that the club will leave the campus Monday morning, March 11th, and motor by bus direct to Piedmont where the opening performance is scheduled for that night. Tuesday evening will find the songsters in Pelzer, and Wednesday evening they will perform in Anderson. Westminster is to be the scene of Thursday night's program, and Clover that of the program for Friday night. Of course no glee club trip would be complete without a performance at Chicora, so that is where the boys

Erskine, Clemson Win From Hose

The varsity basketball season was brought to a close with two games, early in the past week. Coach Johnson and his flock of basket-flingers adjourned for 1929 after playing Erskine Monday night at Due West, and Clemson Tuesday night at Clemson. Erskine handed the Stockings a defeat by a thirteen point margoin, when the final count read 45-32. Clemson, playing her last game before the conference tournament, administered a crushing defeat at 38-17.

Early in the Erskine game, Presbyterian took the lead. Orell Dunlap and Mac Adair scored repeatedly in the opening minutes, while the much-touted offense of the Seceders was baffled by the stellar guarding of Bill Adair. However, the floor was a small one, and Erskine found it less difficult to score from longer range than to try

Freshman Win From Erskine

The P. C. frosh ended the basketball season here Thursday night with another of those "queer" games by downing the Erskine freshmen by a score of 49 to 26. The boys from Due West downed the Hosemen at Erskine recently by a close score and "sweet was the revenge" of the home boys when they put up an attack that the little Seceders could not stop. The game was at times flashy and brought screams of delight from the spectators but at others it was very dragging and slow. The Hosemen showed the Seceders how to use the man to man defense and easily overwhelmed them in the rush. The game, though slow, was very close in the first half, with the P. C.. men leading 13 to 11.

The second half saw some beautiful dribbling and floor work by the boys in blue, with McNaull, flashy guard, showing the way. In this period, the locals seemed unable to miss on their long shots, but they missed terribly on the "crips."

For the Hosemen, Senter and Abercrombie were the best on the offense, Senter being high point man of the game, while McNaull was like a lightning bolt on defense. Carson and Williams held the light for the Seceders.

Simpsonville Keeps State-Title March

The Simpsonville high school girls defeated the Winnsboro lassies in the Leroy Springs gymnasium last night by the score of 56-40. Both teams played a magnificent brand of ball, Simpsonville having a slight edge in the scoring department. The Misses Harris and Cabbort were the shining lights for the winners, while Miss Elliot was outstanding for Winnsboro. By virtue of this victory Simpsonville entered the final rounds of the march for the upper state championship.

P. C. BOXERS TO MEET CLEMSON

Leather Pushers Will Collide Before March 15th. Will Be Hot Contest.

A boxing match between Presbyterian college and Clemson has been definitely scheduled. The date is not yet fixed, but it is certain that the two colleges will meet in the squared circle on some night in the next two weeks. Previous communications with Clemson had set the date for March 9th, but at the urgent request of The Citadel team, Clemson was obliged to alter both dates.

While on the basketball trip to Clemson early in the week, Coach Johnson was given an opportunity to see some of the Tiger leather pushers in action. After the bouts, he gave it out as his conviction that P. C. can give Clemson a very nice evening's entertainment in nearly every division. It is felt that the two teams will be very evenly matched, and the bout should be of interest. .

Clemson has a team that is already weather-stained and battle-scarred. The ring men from Tigertown have

Carson-Newman Wins In Deate

The first intercollegiate debate of the year was held with Carson-Newman college in the auditorium last Saturday night. The query was: "Resolved: That some substitute should be found for the jury system." Messrs. Satterfield and Beasley held up the affirmative for Carson Newman and Messrs. J. I. Copeland and G. A. Pelmer the negative for P. C. The decision of the judges was two to one for the visiting team.

The Blue Stocking's All-State Team

The selection of an All-State basketball team by The Blue Stocking is made solely on the basis of the games that have been played on the Clinton floor. It will necessarily, therefore, differ materially from selections made by other journals and coaches. The men chosen are the ones who have played the best basketball in Leroy Springs gymnasium this winter.

Position	Player	College
Forward	George Weeks	Citadel
Forward	Huff	Furman
Center	Johnson	Citadel
Guard	Willard	Citadel
Guard	Adair, W. D.	Presbyterian

Honorable mention is the custom, so it will also be included in The Blue Stockings program. In some cases the judgment on the All-State team was difficult, where competition was close:

Forwards: Burts of Furman, Tiedeman of Citadel.

Centers: Watson of Furman, Caldwell of Presbyterian.

Guards: Hewitt of Clemson, Rushe of Newberry, and Epps of Citadel.

LETTERS GIVEN TO ATHLETES

Athletic Council Holds Meeting and Decides Several Important Matters.

The Presbyterian College Athletic council met on Friday afternoon, March 1st, for the purpose of awarding letters and deciding some important matters with regard to new sports that have come in this year.

In regard to the boxing team, it was decided that letters will be given to all men who fought in any bout and stayed out the whole season. This will include Wood, Perry, J. T. N. Keels, E. B. Martin, Truesdell, McQueen, and J. S. .Dendy.

Upon Coach Johnson's nomination, the following men were accorded letters in basktball: Orell Dunlap, Jimmy Green, Knox Wyatt, Manager Latimer, and Marvin Snipes. Those entitled to wear stars in addition to the letter are: Bill Adair, Mac Adair, Phil Roberts, Lonnie Dunlap, Bobby Caldwell, and Mason.

Instead of having a football banquet, the decision was in favor of having a gigantic banquet at the end of the year for all the block-letter men. This is a fine feature for the social program of the year, and it is hoped that it may be made an annual affair with much the same rating as the Pan-Hellenic and Junior-Senior banquets.

Frosh Down Inman High

The P. C. freshmen in their semi-final bow of the season, downed the fast Inman high school five, 57 to 26. The game was fast throughout and showed a wonderful fight and comeback on the part of the Inman boys. They were completely outclassed by thePresbyterians but never seemed to realize it, always fighting, always coming back for more. The least that can be said is that they were a mighty clean and hard fighting aggregation. The Hosemen showed better form than at any other time of the season, working consistently and with beautiful team work.

Cheatham and McNaull were outstanding for P. C., the former being high point man of the contest with 16 to his credit, and the latter, runner-up with 14. McNaull played a good floor and defensive game. Steadman and Bonham featured for the visitors.

Meet With Emory Placed On Menu

The P. C. track team will close its 1929 season in Atlanta when it meets Emory university on Monday, May 13th. Until this week the date had been pending, but a recent communication from Emory track officials, settled the affair. It now remains to hear from the University of Georgia in order to fix the entire track schedule. If Georgia comes to Clinton, on March 28th, the schedule will be identically as announced in The Blue Stocking for February 16th.

The 1929 season will indeed end in a flurry of activity. After the careful grooming and eager preparation for both the State and S. I. A. A. meets, the men should be in excellent shape. Snatched from the S. I. A. A. meet, the team will be hustled directly to Emory university, where the final meet will be run off just two days later.

FROSH PLAY COMES FRIDAY

"The Junior," Three-Act Comedy, Is First Production of Freshmen.

Postponement of the date set for the presentation of "The Junior," the freshman class play, makes Friday evening, March 8th, the great and glorious day. The curtain will rise promptly at eight o'clock next Friday evening at the Florida Street school.

The additional week has given the cast and property men time to put on the necessary polish to the production. The stage settings are to be appropriate and well-planned, and the dramatization will be keen and subtle. A glance at the cast, as it was published in last week's issue of The Blue Stocking, will be sufficient to convince any who may be in doubt. There is unusual dramatic talent among the rats, and it looks as if most of it has been cornered for their first production. "The Junior" will be well worth seeing.

Y. M. C. A. Spirit Continues Good

The regular weekly Y meeting was held in the college chapel Wednesday night and at this meeting, Dr. D. J. Brimm again enhanced the extraordinary spirit of study and interest that has been so evident since he began his series of talks a month ago.

The slight decrease in attendance at this meeting must necessarily be deplored by the administration because it is felt by faculty and students that anyone who is absent at the meetings sustains a distinct loss. It is needless to repeat the maxim that Dr. Brimm's discussions, filled as they are with the richness of human experience, are informative and worth while to the nth degree.

The subject for the discussion was "What Part Does Emotion Play in Religion? Dr. Brimm took up the various phases of religion and gave a complete analysis of the various attitudes taken by mankind toward religion. There is the connative attitude and the coldly intellectual attitude taken by a great many individuals toward religion. Then there is, on the other hand, the very large group who view religion entirely from an emotional standpoint. They do not necessarily consider the complete knowledge of theory and doctrine essential to religious perfection. They find re-

SMYTH MAKES SPLENDID GIFT

Presbyteria nColleges Gets Valuable Books and Manuscripts From Former Benefactor.

The Presbyterian college is again fortunate through the generosity of Capt. Ellison A. Smyth. He has given to the college his engravings, manuscripts and books bearing on South Carolina. Captain Smyth's collection of Carolininana is one of the most valuable and notable private collections in existence. For 40 years Captain Smyth has been gathering the precious items that constitute this accumulation. Some of the volumes are rare, and many of the items have been obtained abroad as well as found in this country. This acquisition will lend a unique distinction to the library of the Presbyterian college and be a means of stimulating and sustaining an interest in the history, culture and affairs of the state. A course in South Carolina history is being taught as part of the college curriculum and the Smyth collection will be helpful for its source value.

Captain Smyth's father was an eminent divine and minister of the Presbyterian church and pastor of the Second church of Charleston for many years, and the author of more than 30 volumes. In honor of his father, Captain Smyth gave in 1923 the first $25,000 to erect one of the finest college dormitories in the state, Smyth hall, on the campus of Presbyterian college.

The library just donated is the result of years of discerning judgment and selection in the midst of a busy life. Captain Smyth, after returning from the Confederate war, spent more than ten years in business in Charleston, and in 1880 became a pioneer textile manufacturer at Pelzer. A few years ago he left Greenville, where he had made is home, and removed to Flat Rock, N. C. There, although beyond three score and ten years of age, he built the new manufacturing plant at Balfour which he is now managing. During all these years of business and in an active social and public career, Captain Smyth maintained a steady interest in the larger affairs, traditions and institutions of the state, of which his collection of books given to Presbyterian college is one expression.

The Collegian Appears Again

The winter number of The Collegian made its appearance on the campus last week. It has received some very worthy criticism, both constructive and destructive, though mostly constructive. The reviewer is inclined to think that those who are handing out brick-bats with ruthless expediency are those who do the same concerning any attempt made at literary composition, yet it must be admitted that it has some faults.

Probably the most attractive portion from the standpoint of content is the discussion, "What Are Modern Girls Made Of?" by the "Cynic" and "Berry Du Spain." It is felt that "The Cynic" has recently had his love illusions shattered since he says that modern girls are made of "sawdust" and are full of deceit. We cannot agree with him exactly but he deserves much credit. "Berry Du Spain" is more in line with general opinion but he has much opposition.

to maneuver under the basket. Until the closing moments of the first half, the P. C. boys stubbornly held the lead by a slight margin, but a slight relaxation of the defense allowed Erskine to break into the lead and hold it until half-time. The score at this period of the game stood at 22-17.

The last half started out as hotly as the first. Erskine made several determined spurts and twice lengthened the lead through the marksmanship of Hambright and McMakin. However, in each case the steady play of the Blue Hose cut down the advantage again, so that the tallies hovered at close range. Unfortunately, the P. C. team was crippled by the elimination of three of her stars, while there yet remained nearly ten minutes to play. Bobby Caldwell and the Adairs were all ejected on the count of four personal fouls.

The last few moments of the game saw the entire Erskine team locating the hoop with uncanny regularity. Most of the shots caged at this time were long ones from well out in the wide open spaces. The final whistle caught things at 45-32.

On Tuesday night Clemson showed no disposition to dally on the way. Presbyterian did not come out of the fog until the score stood 10-1 with more on the way. However, at this time a little improvement in organization showed itself. Knox Wyatt contributed two counters, and Bobby Caldwell made another good. Clemson continued to ring up points, but the Hosiermen succeeded in trailing at not worse than a ten-point margin for the entire first half.

In the final period the superior size and weight of the Tigers began to tell. Crane, the gigantic center, moved about the floor with little regard to who ever might chance to get in the way. P. C.'s shots were rather long and difficult, while Clemson succeeded in working in fur snow-birds at will. The score at the final whistle was 38-17.

TRIP FOR GLEE CLUB

will sojourn before the footlights on Saturday evening. They plan to be home again late Saturday night, after a complete week's absence from college work.

Under the direction of Marshall Dendy, a P. C. graduate and now a Presbyterian minister at Newberry, the club has been quickly taking shape. Constant and faithful work has made it possible to bring the work of the group to a high spot in a very short while. With the finishing touches which the work next week will bring, the P. C. glee club will be fully prepared to make its debut for 1929.

It is felt that the club has been especially fortunate in the selections chosen for the program. From past experience, always a hard taskmaster, the men on the club have learned pretty well just what songs and features "go over" well to the representative audience. Benefitting from the lessons learned in the past, those in charge have picked songs that have plenty of interest and snap. There will be no numbers that drag.

A few of the interesting and unique features are a vocal solo, a violin solo, a marimbaphone duet, a violin-marimbaphone duo, and a snappy quartet that promises to get real low-down. In addition, there will be the usual variety that is obtained by making the program a combination of glee club and orchestra presentations. It is learned also that two or three of the members of the club are working on a short skit which will fit in well with the rest of the menu. If all of those dreams come true, the performances of the Presbyterian college will be well up to the standard that has been set in previous years.

We think the short stories, "The Silver Cord" and "The Half-Pint Smith and Wesson," by Messrs. Grafton and Bolt respectively, tie for highest honors.

The book reviews show deep thought on each individual book and are worthy of praise. The editorials are above those of the last issue. The "Light Verse" section could be improved but it shows a true and honest effort which is sure to yield greater returns.

BASEBALL MEN HOLDING STAGE

Thirty Men Report for Duty. Formidable Team Is Expected for This Season.

With the termination of a comparatively successful basketball season, the diamond squad, under the soothing touch of spring, have been daily working the kinks out of eager arms and willing backs on the Florida Street school field. Thirty men have reported to Coach Johnson and under his expert tutelage the team bids fair to eclipse the records set by Charlie Wilson's cohorts of last year.

Seven of last year's letter-men are back and offer an excellent foundation from which to build a championship nine. These men are reinforced by the freshmen performers of last year and those men who couldn't quite make the varsity grade a year ago, but who, now, are determined to hammer their way to a regular berth.

Joe Owens, all-round athlete, and star third-baseman of last year, has been named to lead them through the coming season. In all probability he McMillian's Cohorts Daily Doing Their Stuff. Many Men Are Trying for Places.

With nearly two weeks of intensive training behind them, the Presbyterian track team is fast working to form that looks good this early in the season. Despite the abundance of bad weather which has made outdoor work practically impossible the team has been working as best they can in the gym and as the preliminary work of conditioning ends, the men begin on their individual tasks with zeal that bids fair to make a good track team.

Coach Lonnie McMillian is faced with the problem of not only getting his team in shape within an exceptionally short period of time but also fitting them for as hard a season as the P. C. tracksters have ever had. All the dates of meets have not been definitely fixed and there is a probability of an additional one being added, as the Furman date has been set up several days. At any rate there is a meet the 28th of March and that means work

Last Wednesday night Dr. Brimm closed his first series of meetings which he has been holding for the Y. M. C. A.. During the past month Dr. Brimm has lead the Wednesday night devotional which has been a sort of open meeting or round table discussion on subjects pertaining to the student and his life. The last of this series was attended by about half the student body.

Those meetings have been received with so much interest that it was decided to continue them for at least another month. It was also decided that the "Y" council should pick the subjects used in the meetings. The cabinet has not yet met but the subject for next week is to be the same as used in the first meeting, which was, "How can we increase our faith in the Bible?"

The Y. M. C. A. cabinet has also made plans to sponsor prayer meet-

Glee Club To Leave Monday

The Presbyterian college glee club and orchestra leaves Monday for its annual trip over the northern section of the state. This year the boys have planned a six day trip and have scheduled performances in different towns for each of the nights while on the road. A bus has been chartered which will take them to Piedmont, Pelzer, Anderson, Westminster, Clover and Columbia, respectively, for engagements. Under the direction of Rev. M. C. Dendy, the songsters have worked hard since fall and are now ready to reap some pleasure.

Last Monday the club went to the State Training school and gave a performance. Thursday they repeated at Goldville. While there was no expectation of profit, the members had an opportunity to get warmed up and see just how the numbers were going to work out, and the time used to put the mon. It also served to break any possible "stage fright" a timid member might have.

Besides this trip next week, the glee club will probably make a two or three day tour later in the spring. Usually they put on a performance in Clinton and some of the surrounding towns after returning from the main tour. Those to leave Monday are: Huggins, Means, J. L. Anderson, J. S. Anderson, Hart, Myers, McInnis, W. C. Dendy, O'Neal, Murphy, J. N. Gaston, Heller, Collins, Copeland, Welch, J. S. Dendy, Ritchie, Bennett, Stevenson and Reid.

Pan-Hellenic Plans Are Going Forward

Despite the doing away of spring holidays this year, plans are being completed for the annual Pan-Hellenic banquet. Friday, March 22, is the day that has been set for this outstanding social event of the campus, so looked forward to from year to year, at which time there will be present not only fraternity men but many young ladies from over the state. Friday evening will be a big time on the P. C. campus indeed.

The banquet will be at nine o'clock in Judd hall. Usually there has been a reception preceeding this but no plans have been made as yet. Some ladies' organization of Clinton will serve the banquet as is the usual custom. The music for the evening will be furnished by the Carolina Gamecocks. The speakers and honorary guests will be announced at a later time.

The visiting ladies will be kept in the middle section of Smyth hall. This will be for Friday night only and the students can again move back in their dormitory after six o'clock on Saturday.

CLUB GIVES TO LIBRARY

Sigma Upsilon Makes Presentation of Books. Adds To Shelves of Fiction.

At the regular meeting of Sigma Upsilon, honorary literary fraternity, Thursday night, eight books were presented to the library. Paul Milus, president of Sigma Upsilon, made the presentation and in a short address made it known that the object of the fraternity was to give such books that could not be bought by the library under present conditions. They are the latest works and present the best of literary compositions. These are books that are of advantage and worth while for the library shelves and those that the library would probably have been unable to buy at the present and yet are needed.

The books were accepted by Dean Brown of the library committee. Prof. Brown remarked that he thought the selection a very good one and expressed the appreciation of the library for the books. He also commended the club upon its interest in the library improvements and other literary activities.

The books selected by the committee composed of J. R. B. Martin, P. R. Milus and R. T. Gillespie, and approved by the fraternity were:

"Elizabeth and Essex," by Lytton Stracby.

"The Green Murder Case," by S. S. Van Dine.

"John Brown's Body," by S. Vincent Benet.

"Claire Amble," by Booth Tarkington.

"Shadowed," by Belloc.

"Strange Interlude," by Eugene O'Neill.

"Scarlet Sister Mary," by Julia Peterkin.

"The King's Passport," by H. Bedford Jones.

After a discussion of the books the annual short story contest which is sponsored by the national organization, was discussed. It was decided to select a representative story from the club and enter it in the contest. After other minor matters were discussed the meeting was adjourned.

College Press Names Winners

A recent letter from the corresponding secretary of the South Carolina College Press association, announces the winners of the various contests that are sponsored by the group each fall. There has been considerable delay, due to unfortunate circumstances, but the winners are at last ready for introduction to the public. It is notable that the prizes were very evenly distributed over the state. Greenville Womans college was awarded two of the prizes, but in every other case, not more than one was cornered by any one institution. The prize is ten dollars, or the standard medal offered by the association. .

Following is a list of the various contests, the publications that won them, and the colleges represented:

Story, The Chronicle, Clemson.
Essay, Isaqueena, G. W. C.
Feature Article, Old Gold and Black, Wofford.
News Article, The Spokesman, G. W. C.
Sketches, Concept, Converse.
Plays, Chicora Magazine, Chicora.
Poems, Bashaba, Coker.
Book Review, Erothesian, Lander.
Editorials, Carolinian, University.

Rifle Team Shoots Against Ga. Tech

This week the rifle team met its third opponent when they shot against Georgia Tech. The results from the Georgia team will not be available until the early part of the week, and will be published in the next issue of The Blue Stocking. The results of the P. C. team are very satisfactory, as can be judged by the scores made. The necessity of cutting the team down to eleven men on account of shortage in ammunition has perhaps had some effect on the score for this time, as there are always one or two who do not come up to their usual form in every match.

The scores below show that the best shots in any of the matches have been made by some in this meet. This shows marked improvement and also brings out the finer shooting which shows up in the standing position as a good means of discrimination between shooters. With the experience and practice the team is getting this year those that return should be able to turn in very good scores next year.

The results of this week's match appear below, with the following positions in order: Prone, sitting, kneeling, standing, and total:

Anderson, J. S.	95	92	90	66	343

Clemson Match Is Called Off

Contrary to the announcement in last week's issue of the paper, the boxing meet scheduled with Clemson sometime around the 16th at Clemson, has been called off. Probably the chief reason for this was the lateness of the season for this sport and the need for the men in baseball and track. Besides this, Clemson went to the S. I. C. meet last week and those tournaments usually mark the closing of a season. The meet had been set for earlier in the year, but P. C. had asked for it to either be postponed or called off due to sickness and condition of the team. It is regretted that this meet could not be held as the team was in the best of condition and more experienced, having gained much from their first two contests.

"THE JUNIOR" DRAWS CROWD

Freshman Class Successful In First Presentation. Number of Stars Discovered.

The freshman play, "The Junior," staged last night at the Florida Street school, was a distinct success. Playing to a full house, the freshmen outdid themselves and set a mark which the dramatic club, in answering their challenge, will do well to equal. The dramatic ability that has long been reported as being in the freshman class is now an established fact.

Although the entire cast gave their parts well, special mention is deserved by several who were largely responsible for putting the play across. Rat Murphy, as Merwyn, the dignified senior, was everything that is to be desired. He did much to put life into the play, and his lines were spoken with vigor and expression from beginning to end. "Caesar" Myers, as "the Junior," was another shining light, and Bill Collins, in a very effective feminine costume, all but brought down the house on several occasions.

A great deal of credit is due the workers behind the scenes, who labor for weeks and never find the gratification of the applause. In this case, the workers are Mrs. M. W. Brown and Jack O'Neal, the worthy president of the Dramatic club. It is largely due to the persistence and unfailing interest of these two, that the play attained the finish and smoothness that was demonstrated last night.

The frosh have set the ball to rolling. In about three weeks, it is understood, the Dramatic club will stage a play in competition with "The Junior." Three competent judges have already

Wofford Wins Triangle Debate

The annual triangle debate between Wofford, Newberry, and P. C. was held last Friday, March 1. Wofford won two of the three debates, thereby winning the triangle. P. C. won the third corner and finished second.

The debates were arranged as had been done in the past so that the competing schools would not debate on their own college grounds. P. C. sent J. T. N. Keels and T. E. Davis to Newberry where they lost a 4-1 decision against Edison and Mays of Wofford. C. Plyler and A. Mosely of Wofford, met the Newberry team at P. C. and won a unanimous decision. T. M. Johnston and O. W. Chapin of P. C., were sent to Spartanburg, where they met R. Swygert and J. O. Kempsar of Newberry. This the P. C. team won by a 5-0 decision.

The question used by all the debaters was the national Pi Kappa Delta query on the abolishment of the jury system. This question is being used generally throughout the colleges this year, and as there is plenty of material and equal chances for both sides, it makes an excellent subject. This year in the triangle a new method of time was tried and proved to be successful. All four of the main speeches were the same but the last speaker on both the negative and affirmative of the rebuttal were given three minutes more time than the first speakers. This adds a final touch to the debate and proves interesting.

There are other debates on the schedule for this season. Mercer is due to meet P. C. at Clinton, and the home team goes to Furman for a battle of words. A debate with Erskine is pending.

THE RIFLE TEAM

The [illegible] of sports at P. C. seems to be gradually increasing itself over a larger field. This year has seen the addition of boxing and rifle teams. The [illegible] P. C. intercollegiate matches [illegible] sport, a variety large enough to give every man a chance to represent [illegible] some team.

The rifle team made its debut this year and, though the season is less than half complete, the interest and success has been sufficient enough to guarantee its remaining as an annual sport. At the beginning of the season competition was open to all and the fact that interest was high was displayed in over half the student body competing for positions. The fifteen chosen for the team have continued to practice several times a week. From a green bunch there has been developed a good steady shooting team with some that show exceptional ability.

Defeating the University of Florida gave the team a good start off and some confidence. In entering a new sport a team will quite naturally wonder just how they compare with other schools. The first competition showed this and despite their defeat in the second matches against some of the [illegible] P. C. men made a good showing and were only beaten by a narrow margin. The [illegible] were made [illegible] match, with Georgia Tech as competitors. After this comes the real test, when they face the best teams in the United States in national competition.

To each [illegible] of the rifle team [illegible] and rifle [illegible] such other schools that would [illegible] in any other branch of athletics. It gives the students an opportunity to compete in a work with that of colleges many times their size; it [illegible] on a larger scale in the realm with the other schools; it serves as one of the best advertisements to the college; and over all these things comes the better chance for the [illegible] student to take part in school activities.

Much credit is due the military department for its work in sponsoring the rifle team. Lieutenant Taylor and Sergeant Parham have spent much time in training the members how to fire correctly and coach them in the competition as they fired against other schools. It requires much time and work to handle and score the points in each match, besides it is due to the efforts of them also that the range is here and kept in the best of condition all the time.

UPSETTING THE DOPE BUCKET

According to an article in a recent issue of a current magazine by Grantland Rice, the upsetting of "dope" should not be considered an unusual happening in athletic circles. To back up this statement he gives examples of team A beating team B; B beats C, and C in turn defeats A, and accounts for it by the statement that it depends on the formation or character of the playing of the team against a particular opponent. In other words, the defense of a team may be its success or downfall.

Perhaps there is a world of truth in this. It is wondered if the same will apply to the recent basketball tournaments of the S. I. C. and S. I. A. A. In the case of the S. I. C. tournament last week the favorites were Georgia Tech, Washington and Lee and Kentucky. All of these teams were eliminated before the semi-final round with [illegible] and the finals were between [illegible] and N. C. State, the latter being the winner. Certainly it is more than [illegible] that [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] in the [illegible] of the S. I. A. A. [illegible] Mercer was the general choice to win, with Chattanooga having nearly as good a chance. Both teams had excellent records and had defeated teams that advanced further than they in the tournament. Yet, Chattanooga was eliminated in the first round and Mercer in the semi-finals. Mississippi college met Southeastern in the final round and came out the victor.

Where Mr. Rice had football in mind when he wrote the article, it certainly seems feasible to apply to rule to basketball as well. At least the old dope bucket was actually upset in basketball circles as in that of football and as both are based primarily on team work and defense, they may be considered parallel.

COLLEGE BUSSES

With the coming of spring the college students once more "take to the road" for their week-end trips. All over the state, as a matter of fact, all over the country, this statement holds good. Bumming has come into the colleges and is there to stay. The week-end diversion of the college student must come from somewhere and the college busses are filling the bill to a "T." There are few boys attending school that have sufficient money to pay for the trips that bumming affords. Faculty members throw up their hands in disgust, hoping against hope that the students will stay on the campus, trying to devise a plan to keep them in, but as Friday and Saturday draw near, away go the students with all thoughts of study and work forgotten untill Monday. The college bus runs often and is cheap.

There are those that do not approve of this "sport," as it may be termed. They advance the theory that if the student cannot pay for his pleasure he should stay on the campus. But does [illegible] anyone else anything? No one is forced to give the student a ride. True, some will not, but this is gradually decreasing. Others say the student should stay on the campus and study, for that is what they are sent to college for. They see boys leave every week but are they the same students? There are some that leave often but the average ones do not go often enough to make this idea worth discussing. The college days are naturally the time when one will seek pleasure most. When it comes so cheap with so little trouble to anyone, why try to suppress it. If those that go occasionally begin to fail, must the rest suffer?

Those that travel the highways in cars have become sufficiently acquainted with the college type that there are very few that turn down one seeking a ride. It is a sport as well as a vocation to be an expert bummer. The college man must learn the corners to wait on for best possibilities of a ride. He learns to judge the drivers and car owners most likely to give him a ride, so he does not waste energy on some. There is a "line" or conversation that develops and fits the varied mood of the driver. Many automobile owners prefer company and frequently it is the case of the driver asking the student if he wants a ride.

Taking bumming as a whole there is no reason why a college man should not stick to it. It may tend to lead some to leave oftener because of the offered opportunity. It may effect grades to some extent. But there is no way to check up on this to find out how much. The students are going to get their trips somehow at whatever the cost may be. It's better to just let them go; they can settle down after their college days.

REVIVAL AT P. C.

Next week, from the 19th to the 21st inclusive, comes a speaker to P. C. for the annual "revival" or week of prayer for the college. This has been an annual affair at P. C. for the past several years with the exception of two years ago when a speaker could not be obtained. Every one will recall the work of Dr. Lapsley last year and the good derived.

Even in a demonstrative school like P. C. this annual revival is of [illegible] value. It brings in new [illegible] to the Christian organizations on the campus, and sets many [illegible] thinking of religion and Christian work in a new light. With the thirty-odd candidates for the ministry in school and the work of the Y. M. C. A. there is indeed plenty of material for a speaker to work with even if there were no other students who took an active part. While a definite schedule has not bene layed out there will probably be services in the morning and evening, with time for individual conferences in the afternoons for those with personal problems which they may wish to discuss.

Religion has its part in every college man's life. To a great extent one's future ideas will depend on those formulated in college. With daily chapel exercises at the beginning of each day's work the students will naturally tend to look upon such questions in a different, and probably a more open-minded, point of view. But it requires more than the daily chapel or the usual information from the Bible class to bring the average student to closer realization of Christian work and duty. Such is the general aim of the annual revivals. Anyone who attends with an open mind will absorb new thoughts and ideas. Perhaps it will make no great different in ones ideas, but with the material received by the students as a whole the life on the campus is changed to a noticeable extent. Each one should take it upon himself to attend as many of these meetings as possible. It is for the general betterment of the campus life and will be what the students make it.

Mrs. Depew: "Yes, this is where my George eats his grapefruit.

Here And There With the Colleges

A writer remarks that in some ways the modern man is very similar to the primitive man. If his women-folk talk too much he goes to his club, while his ancestor just reached for it.—Punch.

Clemson Prepares To Fly

Our Clemson brothers have literally taken to the air! "The Clemson Aero club has completed its first plane, according to an announcement made by officials," stated The Tiger in a recent issue. "With bright silver wings and a red-trimmed body, it now stands ready to try its fitness in the upper elements."

Good luck to you, brothers, but please don't suddenly decide to "give up the ship" in mid-air, or you will certainly be "down and out" without any extra trouble!—The Johnsonian.

New System At Emory

Emory university is inaugurating a new academic system. To give a man a broad general knowledge and at the same time a specific training is the object of the new system. Capacity for achievement after graduation, and not a mere set of majors, minors, and quality points on the registrar's books is the ideal we are seeking to attain in our students," according Dr. Goodrich C. White, dean of the college—The Plainsman.

"Blue Gator" Suppressed

Publication of the University of Florida Blue Gator has been indefinitely suspended, and its editorial board dismissed from their positions by the faculty committee on publications.

During the three years in which the Blue Gator has been published, it has at one time or another been the center for a storm of criticisms from the entire state, and twice it has been barred by post office authorities who charge it with printing obscene matter.—The Plainsman.

We Told You So!

The dashing collegian of 75 years ago was much wilder than his modern brothers and sisters, according to a writer in the Tar Heel, who backs up his statement with letters of an undergraduate of the fifties and other records which make the modern college youths appear tame when compared with grandad's day. Some of the more common pranks of the collegiate of the fifties were: It was considered quite the thing to get high and assault members of the faculty with clubs and firearms, and also to burn unpopular professors in effigy, and other such charming little entertainments.—Mercer Cluster.

The Gedunk

I am the gedunk. I am the boy who always has a remedy for the current faults of the college. I continually speak of these faults. I always return from a week-end with amusing anecdotes on how I have been pursued and cajoled by the various girls. I am always eager to read extracts from my letters. I can play football, basketball, baseball. I am also an expert swimmer, boxer, and track man. I tell my friends so and that I do not care to go out for these sports at such a small and unimportant college.—The Plainsman.

"No, certainly not. Let her talk."—Exchange.

"I want a quart of red oil," he said.
The man gasped and hesitated.
"Give me a quart of red oil," she repeated.
"A q-quart of r-r-red oil?"
"Certainly," she said. "My tail light has gone out!"—Washington and Lee Mink.

Cop: "You're standing on it."
Stewed: "Shno wonder I couldn't find the darn thing."

"Please buy some Christmas seals, mister!"
"I'm sorry, miss, but I bought my wife one last year and I'm still paying for it!"—Ollapod.

"I hear the zoologists found a lamb in South America that could run forty miles per hour."
"That's the only kind of lamb that could keep up with Mary nowadays!"—Mugwump.

Girl: "How dare you come into my room without knocking. I may have been undressed."
Bellboy: "That's all right lady, I always looks in the keyhole first."—Ex.

"Spring is the time for love."
"Well, it's not so bad during the other seasons, either." Missouri Outlaw.

The Poet's Corner

Mary of The Raven Hair

My head is all awhirl today,
And all because I met,
As I passed down a certain way,
A charming young brunette.

Her lips were like two rubies red,
And when I saw her eyes,
All thoughts of other maidens fled
Like lightning from the skies.

Her hair was black as polished jet—
Too soft for words to tell—
And shape and slenderness ne'er yet
Were blended half so well.

Your heart may beat for blonde so fair,
That you may think divine;
But Mary of the raven hair
Is all the go with mine.

High School Issue Comes Next Week

Next week The Blue Stocking will print the annual high school edition. This year plans have been made to put out an eight-page paper. Besides the usual weekly campus news there will be feature write-ups of all athletic teams with pictures to accompany them. Views of the campus, campus activities and pictures of various faculty members will be shown.

There will be around 2,000 papers printed and sent throughout the state and adjoining states to all high school prospects. For the three weeks following this issue 500 extra papers will be printed and sent to high school students. This is one of the big ways of advertising the school. If you are called on to help with this issue, do so with the thought of benefit to the college.

Southern I. R. C. Meets In Athens

The sixth annual meeting of the Southern Students Conference on International Relations was held on Friday and Saturday, March 8th and 9th, at the University of Georgia.. The program as it has been planned has already reached the hands of authorities of the local International Relations club. It is learned that such distinguished men as William W. Pierson, Jr., of North Carolina university, J. Fred Rippy, of Duke university, P. B. Potter of the University of Wisconsin, Prof. W. H. Bocock of the University of Georgia, and C. B. Gosnell of Emory university, have been secured for speeches during the conference.

The local International Relations club, at a recent meeting, named R. T. Gillespie, Jr., as the official P. C. representative. He was accompanied by Professor M. W. Brown and L. R. Williamson.

The program as it has come into our hands, was as follows:

Friday, March 8th

11:00 a. m.—Opening business session. Reports from clubs.

1:00 p. m.—Luncheon.

3:00 p. m.—Round tables — "The United States and Caribbean Countries," by William Whatley Pierson, Jr., M. A., Ph. D. (Columbia University), University of North Carolina. "Mexico and the United States" by J. Fred Rippy, Ph.D., Duke university.

4:30 p. m.—Business session.

6:30 p. m.—Banquet.

8:00 p. m.—Address, by Pitman B. Potter, Ph.D., University of Wisconsin.

10:00 p. m.—International costume ball..

Saturday, March 9th

9:40 a. m.—Round tables — "The League of Nations," by Prof. W. H. Bocock, University of Georgia. "Codification of Maritime Law," by Cullen B. Gosnell, A. B. (Wofford), M. A. (Vanderbilt), Ph.D. (Princeton), Emory university.

11:00 a. m.—Address, by an outstanding speaker to be secured.

12:00 p. m.—Luncheon. Final business session.

BASEBALL MEN HOLDING STAGE

will be shifted to short or second where there is a vacancy, and leave the hot-corner guarded by the hard-hitting Odiorne.

No position has been definitely clinched as yet, for competition is unusually keen and there seems to be a galaxy of stars to choose from. Perhaps the most fought-over job is catching, for five receivers are daily displaying their wares and reasons for the regular assignment. Hart and Brunson, last year's regulars, seem to have the edge at present, but they are being pushed by Rigby, Weldon and McQueen.

Andy Jordan and Dick Greene are fighting for the initial sack, while Roberts, Lynn, Anderson and Keels are debating over the advisability of stationing them on second. Owens and Babb are patrolling short with Owens having a little better of the argument. If Babb and Mason do not find a regular berth in the infield they will in all probability be shifted to the outfield because of their powerful stick-work. Odiorne and Huggins are scooping the mup at third.

In the outfield Dunlap, Neighbors, Perry, Drake, Barron, Palmer and others are shagging the apple. Caldwell and Adair, pitching aces of last year's team, are gradually rounding into shape. Young, freshman twirler of last season, is another addition to the staff.

As young as the season is, from all indications, it is safe to say that the team will give a good account of itself in all of its games, with a chance of breaking the tape—a winner.

Dr. S. M. Glasgow To Lead Services

The annual revival for Presbyterian college is to be held this year from March 18 through 21. The speaker is to be Rev. S. M. Glasgow, D. D., of the First Presbyterian church in Knoxville, Tenn., a minister who is known over the Southeast. The college is fortunate in obtaining a man with the personality and ability of Dr. Glasgow to lead the week of worship. These annual revivals do much to advance the religious and moral conceptions of the students. The better qualified the leader, the more good is left after he is gone; so, with Dr. Glasgow as speaker this year, one can look forward to a profitable week.

Plans are being made to hold services twice a day. These will probably be at chapel and immediately after supper. In the afternoons Dr. Glasgow will be available to any students who have personal questions to discuss or who seek advice. During his stay on the campus he will also lend his ideas and aid to the problems of the Y. M. C. A. and other organizations that function for the development of Christian work at Presbyterian college. He will be here for the students and they should feel themselves free to seek his aid or advice.

As a usual thing it is tried to get the revival at the time of the week of prayer for schools and colleges in the Southern Presbyterian church. Last year this came in February and all the upper classmen will recall the interesting sermons and talks that were made by Dr. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., of Columbia, in the four days he was on the campus. With cooperation such as was had last year the work can be carried on and will be of interest and benefit to all. .

TRACK TEAM GETS IN SHAPE

and lots of it for the team within the next couple of weeks.

On account of doctor's orders the squad loses a good man in the hurdles this year. Frank Pearce, a sure point winner in any meet on the schedule, is not able to come out. For two years Frank has stepped the low sticks in fast time, usually being the winner. Both years he was a letter man and he will certainly be missed from the squad this season.

The letter men to report are Capt. Hogrefe, Grafton, Marshall, Fewell and Martin. Besides these there are eighteen other men out, some of whom have been on the team years previous. Among the aspirants are eight men from last year's team, all of whom made a good showing in their meets and most of whom bid well to secure births on the varsity this season. With the material which is as much, or more, than is usually out for the team, Mr. Mac hopes to develop a well balanced squad which will compete to again attain the honors of the 1927 P. C. champions.

Hogrefe, Green and Ritchie are the chief men out for the sprints. Marshall, A. Wyatt, Chapin and E. Wyatt will compete for places in the hurdle events. The middle and distance runs will find Martin, Means, Ketchum, Wham, McCord, Campbell, Thornton, McQueen, Jones, Floyd, Clinton, and Williamson fighting for berths. In the field events Grafton, Fewell, Wyatt, Gosnell, Ritchie, Hogrefe, Templeton, and McQueen are out for the various weights and jumps.

The freshmen have been working along with the varsity and getting into good condition. It is hard to tell yet just what the rats have, but if they are anything like the first year men in the past few years they will have a good team. W. Ferguson, Abrams, Burns, Carothers, Kluttz, Dempsy, Hamilton, Whiteside and Senter, have drawn uniforms so far. This seems like a small number but as time goes on there are always more to report. The schedule for the frosh has not yet been completed but meets with Carolina and Furman are assured.

The prospects for a good team in both varsity and frosh track look good. At least four of the meets will be in Clinton which will give the students ample opportunity to see the team during the season as they develop. There is still room for more men on the team if they are willing to get out and work. Three men are eligible to enter each event.

Former Professor Speaks To Students

Professor H. T. Lilly of Davidson college, a former English teacher at P. C., was the speaker in chapel Monday morning. Mr. Lilly has spent the past summer traveling through Russia and he took this subject for his speech.

When Mr. Lilly was at P. C. he was one of the most popular professors. In the past he has traveled over Europe with Dean Brown, and his travels have not only given him plenty of material to work with but also given him ideas which makes his speeches interesting on almost any subject. The subject of Russia was especially so inasmuch as the conditions in that country today are very different from any other country in the world.

Mr. Lilly began his talk with the difficulties of getting into Russia except by a guide who shows the visitor only those things that make the country look best. He said that one could take very little into the country. A month or six weeks is required to obtain permission to enter. Russian money must be exchanged at the border.

Probably the most interesting part of the subject was the attitude the Russian government takes towards marriage. It is altogether Communist and does not favor marriages. The marriage ceremony is a matter of signing a book. The same holds true in case a divorce is desired. Either party can obtain this without consent or consideration of the other. The government takes care of the children until they are of age, which is about sixteen years. In this time they are taught communism, to follow the teachings of Lanning and to believe that there is no God.

The Russian government will let no one into the country who might in any way effect the teachings of the government. The people are not allowed to hold property and ninety per cent of the population is the poor class. The people are willing to work but have no trade. The government handles all food and sells directly to the grocer. From our point of view some of the conditions seem practically hopeless and we are prone to wonder how such a government can exist.

Another interesting thing that Mr. Lilly pointed out was the misconception of the average Russian. He said the American people tend to look on the Russians as a bloodthirsty, evil type that would kill you were the opportunity to offer itself. Instead of this the people are as kind-hearted as any that can be found on the face of the earth. They are mistreated, but kind, and will gladly do anything to help a stranger. True, they are emotional, which accounts for the wonderful music produced by the Russian people. Mr. Lilly said that some of the most beautiful operas in the world are in Moscow. .

It was surprising to hear just the conditions that existed in a country that formed one-sixth of the total world. While their condition looks hopeless, it is better today than it was before the war, and where it will end is a matter of guesswork only.

ings which will come a few days before the revival opens. The object of this is to get the students more interested in the work which Dr. Glasgow will present. According to the plans, a member of the council will meet on each floor of the dormitories sometime during the evening for a short service. In this way the students will be divided into small groups with a cabinet member as leader. With the cooperation of the student body this can be worked successfully as well as beneficially. It will pave the way for the revival and again start that which has not been used in the school for some time.

consented to officiate, and every eye is turned toward Mr. O'Neal's tribe of actors. It is reported that their cast has already been selected, and work should begin as soon as the glee club returns from its trip.

This is but the beginning of dramatics at Presbyterian college. The fact that the freshman play called out a crowd served to encourage the producers, and it is felt that the footlights are now firmly established in the P. C. constellation.

The play attained, perhaps, its greatest success in the field of finance. It is estimated that after all expenses have been deducted from the "net gate," something like sixty round silver dollars will clink in the coffers of the PaC-SaC. This is not to be sneezed at, when one considers how hard traveling has been for the year-book in the past. The freshmen are to be heartily commended for their generosity.

FOUNDERS DAY IS OBSERVED

Faculty and Student Body Recall Life of Dr. W. P. Jacobs. Ansel Makes Address.

Founders Day was celebrated at Presbyterian college by appropriate exercises at the chapel period on Friday, March 15th. The program was impressive, and the whole tone was one of genuine love and respect for the memory of the beloved founder of Thornwell orphanage and the college, Rev. William Plumer Jacobs, D. D., LL. D.

The speaker of the morning was former Governor Martin F. Ansel, of Greenville, present judge of the county court for Greenville, and chairman of the board of trustees of Thornwell orphanage. He spoke warmly and appreciatively of his twenty years of association with Dr. Jacobs, and of the great work that is now being carried on as a direct result of his vision and energy.

Rev. L. Ross Lynn, president of Thornwell orphanage, Rev. D. J. Woods, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and President John McSween, of the college, also took part in the memorial services.

DR. GLASGOW COMES MONDAY

Knoxville Minister To Lead Students In Week of Services. Preparations Going On.

Special revival meetings will be held early next week by Rev. S. M. Glasgow, D. D., of the First Presbyterian church of Knoxville, Tenn. Dr. Glasgow will arrive in Clinton on Monday, and will conduct a meeting on Monday evening, and two meetings daily through Thursday, March 21st.

Dr. Glasgow is a great leader, an inspiring speaker, and a prolific writer. Several hymns in our own hymnal are products of his talent, as well as others which are less familiar. He is well-known for his fine delivery, excellent subject-matter, and pleasing personality, as they are presented in his sermons and talks.

For the past week the student body has been preparing for his appearance. Groups throughout the dormitories have bene organized and are conducting nightly prayer meetings. There has been manifested an attitude of real earnestness and devotion in these

P. R. C. Session Is Interesting

The International Relations club held its bi-monthly meeting last Thursday night. For the greater part of the year the club has had under discussion the South and Latin American countries, each man taking some special country for his part. The last meeting was held in the form of a Pan-American conference when each man presented some problem of his country to the conference. This closes the regular work of the club for the year, and the last meeting of the year next Thursday week will be devoted to the election of officers and report of delegates to the recent convention at Athens.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS

JOHN McSWEEN

One of the most vital questions a man ever is called on to decide is Which college shall I attend?" Sometimes a man's whole future is determined by the answer to this question, and in every case his life is very definitely influenced.

Some of the factors which should be considered by those choosing a college are the academic standards, the social contacts, the college activities, and the spirit of the college.

Presbyterian college challenges the interest of high school students of the crop of 1929 by calling attention to the fact that nowhere will be found a larger emphasis on scholastic standards. When you get your "dip" from P. C. you have something to be proud of and which will rate you A-1 wherever you may go. And you won't get that "dip" by loafing!

The student body and faculty and college staff at P. C. make one big happy family, and this insures a wide circle of the kind of friends you will always have pleasure in. Everybody knows everybody else and is interested in everybody else. The social features of college life are encouraged by those in authority and by a delightful and typical college community.

College life is neither all study nor all play but a development for leadership. At P. C. all forms of college and campus activities are to be found and, because our student body is limited to 300 men, the men of the student body have larger opportunities to participate in these activities and so develop these qualities which make for leadership. A man has a better chance to develop, for example, on a football squad of 30 men than on one of 150. This same principle holds good in every form of athletics, in honor societies, in college publications, in class-room and social groups.

Above all we have pride in the

ANNUAL PAN-HELLENIC AFFAIR COMES NEXT FRIDAY EVENING

High Spot In College Year Looms On Horizon. Judd Hall Will Be Scene of Festivities. Council Is Busy Making Preparations Which Are Going Along Nicely.

On Friday evening, March 22nd, the annual Pan-Hellenic banquet will mark one of the high spots of the social year at Presbyterian college. It is not simply a banquet, as other banquets; it is an institution of the college that has found for itself an enviable reputation throughout the state. Pan-Hellenic and Junior-Senior are the twin peaks of the P. C. social program.

President Spencer Elliott, of the Pan-Hellenic council, reports that plans are going forward toward a finer banquet than ever before. The contract for the service has been let to Mrs. Wilson, of Hotel Clinton, who has provided "eats" for college functions on more than one occasion in the past. The menu is given at the end of this article.

The hour set for the banquet this year is nine o'clock. It was felt that in previous years the affair was dated for too early an hour; and at the vote of the council, it was set back. It is learned also that the number of toasts has been cut down in order to keep the banquet from dragging out to great lengths. This year toasts will be made by President McSween, of the college, Dr. A. E. Spencer, and President Spencer Elliott, of the council.

The honorary guests this year are Mr. and Mrs. John McSween, Coach and Mrs. Walter A. Johnson, Coach and Mrs. Lonnie S. McMillian, Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer, and Mrs. Myrtle Hunter.

Brimm Continues "Y" Discussions

The favor with which the student body received Dr. Brimm's February meetings of the Y. M. C. A. has led to an effort on the part of the cabinet to secure his leadership for coming meetings. When approached on the subject, Dr. Brimm consented to continue his discussions; and it is understood that he will be present at the Wednesday evening gatherings for the rest of the school year.

DR. BRIMM

On last Wednesday evening the open forum meeting centered around the topic, "Difficulties in Bible Study." Dr. Brimm gave some of his personal views and then showed how specific difficulties easily solve themselves when a little thought or study is resorted to.

The meeting next week will be on the subject, "What to consider when choosing a vocation." This is a question that must be answered by every college man before commencement, or shortly after. There is every reason, therefore, to expect a large attendance.

Dramatic Club Prepares For Play

On Thursday evening the cast selected for the dramatic club play, "Second Story Peggy," met in the chapel to begin work. It was decided that practices will go forward with all the speed and regularity that is possible, with the idea of staging the play not later than April 1st. As a tentative date, Friday evening, March 50th, was set. The club will bend its efforts toward preparation for this

WHY THE SMALL COLLEGE?

Every high school graduate who plans to continue his education must decide between the large university, on the one hand, and the small college, on the other. It is not a new problem, for boys and girls have been deciding it ever since colleges began. The fact that there are students attending both types of institutions is a sufficient indication that there is difference of opinion.

However, it is, we think, the small college whose case is usually slighted by the public. There is something vastly impressive and alluring about the campus of a great university; and this, in itself, is enough to cause many students to decide in its favor. One likes to think of brushing against thousands, perhaps, and of walking blocks to classes, and of watching the respectful expression that people will register when you tell them you are from some place of world-wide fame. But the points in favor of a small college are seldom brought to notice, and so we shall venture to enumerate some of them here.

Responsibility

A great many boys pass through college as if it were an amusement park. They neither seek nor receive the slightest responsibility; and wher they have gone their respective ways they do not seem to realize that they have missed one of the greatest things a boy can get out of college. It is often too late to wait until you have graduated to learn to be responsible for things. You ought to spend four years at college, always reaching for work—work on the athletic field, or work on the debating platform—work in the laboratory or upon the paper. Instead of shying from responsibility, you ought to search for it and then show people that you are to be trusted. In other words, you ought to try to BE somebody on the campus. And that is one point for the small college: it gives you a better chance to learn to be a leader.

Professors

Many students favor the large institutions because of the renowned faculties they have. Perhaps they do not realize, however, under just what handicaps such professors work. They mount the platform two or three times a week to lecture before a large class. Their classes number so many students that they can become familiar with only a few, if any at all. Oftentimes papers are graded by an assistant, so that the professor actually has little contact either with the mind or the personality of the undergraduate. A boy named Jones, let us say, may perhaps be known to his professor as an individual with glasses who sits on the second row of English 305 and received a "D" last semester.

In a small college the situation is radically different. Teachers often know the entire student body by name, and have personal contact with many of them. Jones, under such conditions, is no longer simply a bespectacled young man on the second row. He becomes, let us say, "a good student, but one who needs prodding. Does excellent work when made to." A professor in a small college thus has an opportunity to help students through an intimate knowledge of their strong points and their failings.

Athletics

Whether you are in a large college or a small one, there are eleven men on the football team. In the first case, you must compete with several hundred men. If you are already a finished player, you may have a chance to play before the season is over; but unless you are already a football star, there is little chance to become one. The very fact that there are so many aspirants to athletic fame makes it impossible to give real attention to the developing of a man. If you have the goods, well and good—if you can't produce top-notch stuff, step aside, for there are plenty of others who can.

Perhaps the teams that represent a small college are not, as a rule, as strong as those that represent her larger neighbor. Nevertheless they more nearly fill the need for college sports. In a small college, the coach, more often than not, has to make his own team. He is not given a group of stars, but a group of men who want to play football. He is lucky if he has two or three men who are football stars, to begin with. Hence he must develop and study each man. This gives everyone a chance to get physical attention and advice. The small college offers a more democratic system of physical training.

Associations

In a small college you are familiar with everyone. You learn to know your friends because you live with them and eat with them and work with them and play with them. There is an atmosphere of close-knit friendship that cannot be attained unless everyone knows everyone else. In a large university, you may, at best, know the names and faces of a hundred or so of those with whom you are most frequently thrown. The rest of the student body is a vast crowd of strangers. If you met them in another town, there would be nothing to identify them as students of your college. You might be in the same class with a man for six months and nexer know as much as his name. Such things are not idle hypotheses—they are actual facts. Which do you like the best?

What To Consider

Leaving aside for the present the question of size, let us think of the things a student should consider when he is choosing his future Alma Mater. Before you pick your college there are about four main things to investigate.

First, the reputation. What do people think of it? What has it done? Do its teams show real sportsmanship? Do the students you know from that college strike you as gentlemen? Is it a college you will be proud to claim as your own?

Second, the equipment. Ask yourself if the material equipment is sufficient. Find out if there are adequate facilities for laboratory work, or for athletic work. Ask yourself if the dormitories are such that you will not be dissatisfied.

Third, the faculty. Find out what kind of men will teach you. Will you be able to make friends with them? Are they the kind who will help you out of trouble or help you solve your problems? Do they know what they are talking about?

Fourth, the students. This is the hardest of all, and yet one of the most necessary. Try to get into contact with some of the students. Ask yourself if they are clean, straight men. Would you be proud to ask any of them to visit in your home? How many of them are the kind that can get next to your skin and win your admiration?

When you have satisfied yourself on these points, see if you can possibly go there and look things over first hand. Make sure it's a good place and one that you can sincerely learn to love. Try to imagine how it would be to live there for four years. Then decide.

WHAT P. C. CLAIMS

Presbyterian college does not claim to be the greatest on earth. In fact, she would like it better if she needed to make no claims at all. P. C. is perfectly content to have prospective students make up their minds on the grounds of things they can see and feel. Nothing would be more satisfactory to the college authorities than that every high school student should come and stroll over the campus and walk through the buildings.

There are things in Clinton that speak for themselves. We need not brag, for some things do their own bragging. For example, Presbyterian college is not afraid to match Leroy Springs gymnasium with any in South Carolina. Smyth hall, the new, modern, fire-proof dormitory, erected in 1924, is in a class with the best that has bene built anywhere. Presbyterian's track is unequalled, not only in the Palmetto state, but in other states that could be mentioned. It is significant that five state track meets and one S. I. A. A. contest have been held in Clinton. This spring P. C. will again be host to both meets.

Perhaps you are familiar with the P. C. slogan—"Where men are made." It is not a meaningless phrase that is used simply because it sounds well. It is one of the beliefs that we hold most dear. If you want to laugh at it, trace a few P. C. alumni and see if they haven't made good. Take a dozen graduates of Presbyterian college at random and try to look at their records with a fair and open mind.

See For Yourself

This is a "see-for-yourself" issue of our college paper. We are trying to show you just what we have, and just what it looks like. Remember that you can't fool a camera. We could fill these pages with column after column of description, but you might doubt that. Instead, we are taking it for granted that you are all from Missouri. We want to SHOW you.

THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Aims of the College

Presbyterian college is a Christian college of the liberal arts and natural sciences. In pursuing its work it has some very definite aims in view. Some of them are as follows:

1. To do high-grade, honest college work. The college does not appeal to its constituents for patronage on the ground that it is a church college, but on the ground of the class of work it is doing. Its faculty is strong, its buildings modern, and its location conducive to study. The entrance standard is fifteen units. By means of a well-rounded course of study the college aims to provide fundamental cultural training, and to furnish opportunity for such specialization as an undergraduate course admits.

2. To furnish preliminary preparation for university work and for entering the several professions. A student planning to enter the legal profession finds courses adapted to his needs in history, economics, politics, and English. Those preparing to practice medicine find provision made for them in the departments of physics, chemistry and biology. For those planning an engineering course, the department of mathematics and physics offer courses they would be expected to pursue in the first years of their technical training. Candidates for the ministry find strong courses provided in the classics, English, history and philosophy. To those expecting to teach, special work in education is offered. Graduates who wish to teach are able to obtain a first-grade teacher's certificate on the same terms as graduates of the State University. Thorough preparation for post graduate work is offered.

3. To build up a strong Christian character. The college authorities are not of the number of those who believe that a college should assume no responsibility for the moral and spiritual welfare of its students. Therefore they have determined that the development of a Christian character must be emphasized. They believe that the directing of the student's vision to the highest ideal character is not a secondary matter. The college stands firmly on the great truths of evangelical Christianity. Every member of the faculty is required to be a consistent member of the church. The Bible is taught in the regular curriculum as the word of God and the one book of divine authority. Chapel exercises begin the work of each day and every student is required to attend at least one preaching service on the Sabbath. The college is not sectarian, but it is Christian.

While the college attempts to throw every possible safeguard around its students, it is not a reformatory school. Parents who cannot control their sons at home must not expect the college to assume the responsibility.

4. To develop all sides of the student's nature. Athletics and out-of-door sports are needed for the development of the physical side. The gymnasium is in charge of competent directors. All students are required to take some form of physical exercise.

5. To place a college education in reach of young men of limited means. No matter what the student's future life work is to be, the value of the broader outlook acquired, the mental discipline obtained, and the higher ideals obtained, is incalculable. Not only is the student prepared to live more fully and to get more real enjoyment out of life, but his usefulness as a member of society is increased manyfold. To place these benefits within the reach of all those who desire earnestly to obtain them, the expenses have been made as low as is consistent with the maintenance of high scholastic standards.

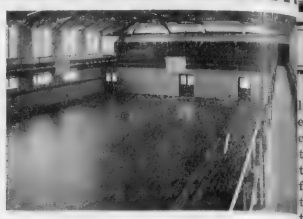
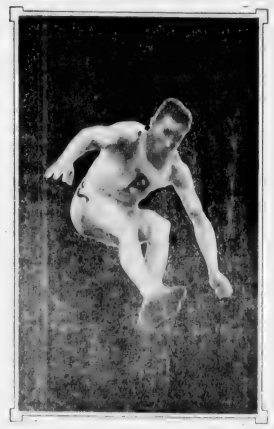
Above is Leroy Springs gymnasium, the finest gymnasium owned by any college in South Carolina. In this building is the large basketball floor, with room for about four hundred spectators in the gallery. Adjoining are the band practice and boxing rooms, while the offices of the coach and the director of student activities are convenient. The canteen is downstairs, together with the rifle range, dressing rooms, armory, and Y. M. C. A. rooms.



P. C. HOSPITALITY

Presbyterian college maintains a cordial attitude to other institutions in the state, and has often had the opportunity to prove herself a good hostess. Ever since there has been a state track meet in the Palmetto state, it has been held in Clinton. It is becoming an institution that may become as permanent to P. C. as the Tech Relays are to Georgia Tech. In the spring of 1926 the S. I. A. A. track meet was held at Presbyterian, and the performance is to be repeated this year. The state meet has been scheduled for May 4th, and the S. I. A. A. meet for the following Saturday, May 11th.

The college also acts the part of host to the summer conferences of the church, which are held every June on the campus. A great many high school students have thus had the opportunity to taste of P. C. hospitality at first hand.



Colonel Leroy Springs is a generous friend of the college who has demonstrated his affection for the institution by liberal gifts. The fine gymnasium that stands on the campus is a monument to his generosity. In the future, when the finances of the college are established on a firmer footing, Col. Springs promises to add a swimming pool that will round out the athletic equipment of the college to perfection.

This is a view of the spacious floor which the basketball and boxing teams of P work out. There is every facility for a range of indoor sports, including basket volley ball, indoor baseball, and gymna paraphernalia work. Credit is given in the riculum for a gym course and one adva course that has for its purpose special prep tion for coaching.

THE CHANCES YOU HAVE AT P. C

The wide range of student activities organizations at Presbyterian college give everyone who is willing to work, an opportu to develop himself. If the student wishes an athlete, there are open to him seven fi through which he may represent the col Football, basketball, tennis, baseball, t boxing, and shooting are the teams that annually put out. If one is inclined toward ary pursuits, there are the literary socie active and honorary literary fraternities, three college publications. These are all to any one who applies himself. Those who histrionic ability may try for the deba teams, the oratorical contests, or the dram club. Truly there is every opportunity to come a well-rounded man at Presbyterian lege.

Baseball Prospects for 1929 Are Good

Presbyterian college is expected to do well in ba ball this spring. Practices thus far have shown k competition for every position on the team, and th of course, means that those who win out will have be always "on their toes." Coach Johnson has a ver tile and well-rounded squad. His staff of pitchers cludes four men who have either been tested under f already, or give every indication of being able to pr duce the goods. Captain Owens is snatching grounde in the infield in great style, and several new men a making infield prospects soar. There is a great deal material in the outfield class, and from these Coa Johnson should have little difficulty in finding the r quired number of "tar-buckets." P. C. is looking her jewelers (diamond experts) for great things th spring.

The Frosh Coach

Assistant Coach Lonnie S. McMillian has charge of all freshman teams except baseball, and in addition he is coach of varsity track. His reputation does not date from his acceptance of the position at P. C., for while receiving his education at Presbyterian he won distinction in football, baseball, and basketball. In several of these sports, notably football and basketball in which he never failed to scintillate, Lonnie McMillian achieved a position on the mythical all-state teams.

His performance since completing his college course has shown that his laurels were won by thorough knowledge of every game he entered. He is conceded to be one of the brainiest coaches in "these parts."

gram met with universal favor. Jack O'Neal's violin solo and the violin-piano-marimba trio were applauded everywhere. Another feature that "went over big" was the marimba duet.

People in every town commented on the fact that the program was ively and interesting. The orchestra lid well, and the work of the club on he more serious chorus work was excellent. An attractive diversion that found great success was a short negro skit.

The itinerary was as follows: Monday night, Pelzer; Tuesday, Woodruff; Wednesday, Anderson; Thursday, Abbeville; Friday, Clover. The statement in a previous issue of The Blue Stocking that the club would visit Piedmont and Westminster was erroneous.

The following excerpt from The Anderson Independent" for Thursday morning, March 14th, gives an idea of the reception that the club is receiving everywhere:

"The glee club and orchestra of Presbyterian college, of Clinton, scored a distinct 'hit' with an Anderson audience when they appeared in concert at the Boy's high school auditorium last evening.

"Declared by many of those who attended to be one of the finest musical organizations of its kind ever to appear here, the P. C. club rendered a varied and interesting program which found popular response throughout. Under the direction of Rev. Marshall A. Dendy, the glee club presented ensemble numbers, quartet renditions, and various instrumental selections."

Rainfall Retards Spring Practice

The heavy rainfall of the past few days has seriously handicapped both the track and the baseball team. Indoor workouts are all right, but they can never be said to take the place of the regular outdoor practices. Even if there is no more rain, the cessation of practice that has already been caused may make its mark. The time is growing short, and the two schedules will open in a few weeks. It is high time the teams were reaching top-notch form.

However, in spite of handicaps, the outlook is far from gloomy. The track team is counting on one of the best years that P. C. has ever had in that sport; while the basketball team feels confident that this year's record will be at least the equal of last year's, with strong possibilities of improvement. The coming of fair weather promises a great deal of hard work for all athletes, in order to make up for lost time.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS

"P. C. Spirit." This spirit has carried the college thru difficulties and over handicaps to the charmed circle of the Big Five. It is seen and felt on the campus and is the biggest single asset P. C. has. The comfortable dormitories, the unsurpassed "chow" at the dining hall, the modern, up-to-date laboratories, the wonderful gymnasium, the high standing in the college world, are all great assets; but the peculiar spirit of P. C. is the thing that grips and thrills and makes the heart swell when "Alma Mater" rings out.

It is the ambition of the President to be the personal friend of every student in college. To the High School Seniors of 1929 we say, "Let's be Friends!"

Coach Walter A. Johnson has been with Presbyterian college since its athletic infancy. He came as a young man about a dozen years ago, and started out with the same aggressiveness and geniality that he is now famous for. Quoting one write, "We can never say enough of his virtues. His faults are few. It is one of the priceless heritages of Presbyterian college graduates to go out into the world and recall and real of the achievements which P. C. has reached in the field of sports under the guiding hand of Walter Johnson."

Greenville "Y" Team Performs

The gym team of Greenville Y. M. C. A. performed before a Clinton audience in Leroy Sprpings gymnasium last night. Under the direction of Mr. Mackey, who is well known in the Palmetto state, the score or so of lithe young athletes acquitted themselves in a manner that was worthy of the institution that they represent. The same team has, as in previous years, made an extensive tour; and it has met with a warm reception everywhere.

The seventeen numbers which comprised the evening's entertainment were well chosen and beautifully worked out. The work on the parallel bars and on the horizontal bars was especially good; and gave evidence of much hard practice. The folk dances were very enjoyable, and went off with precision.

The "life of the party," as it were, was the clown. He was always present with some little crazy stunt. And, unlike most clowns, this one was actually funny. In addition, he was a good athlete, and proved to be the equal of his team-mates in every phase of the program.

The performance was very enjoyable, and it is hoped that the Greenville Y. M. C. A. team will return to Clinton again next year.

Chi Beta Phi Hears Sturgeon

At the regular bi-weekly meeting of the local chapter of Chi Beta Phi last Wednesday, the group had the distinct pleasure and opportunity of hearing Prof. Harry E. Sturgeon, head of the chemistry department at Presbyterian college. A general invitation was issued to the student body to be present, and the invitation was taken advantage of by the majority of the men who are either majoring in science or who are taking pre-medical work.

Prof. Sturgeon gave an extremely informational and enlightening discussion of the work of the synthetic chemists in formulating new and more economic methods of manufacturing chemical products and by-products for commercial use.

At the conclusion of the lecture and of the discussion which followed, President Milus thanked Prof. Sturgeon on behalf of the chapter; and the meeting was adjourned to meet again two weeks from that date.

Four young ladies of Clinton have vrey kindly consented to accept parts in the plays. They are Misses Martha Todd, Georgia Blakely, Lois Blakely, and Medora Browning. Mrs. M. W. Brown has agreed to direct the play, and in this herculean task she will be assisted materially by the efforts of Jack O'Neal, president of the dramatic club.

The play is a delightful comedy-drama in four acts, written by Katherine Kavanaugh. It is wonderfully entertaining, and moves swiftly and smoothly from beginning to end. The club is confident that it will meet with the approval of the student body as well as of the Clinton audience. Unless announcement is made to the contrary, "Second Story Peggy" will be staged at the Florida Street school on Friday evening, March 30th.

The Most Interesting Part of Campus Life

Waiting under the trees in front of Judd Hall

Spencer Hall

(Dormitory)

Spencer Hall, standing in stately dignity among the trees, is one of the best beloved of our campus landmarks. Either single rooms or suites are obtainable at a moderate figure. A suite consists of two bedrooms and two studies, with connecting bath room.

Spencer Hall is centrally located between the administration building and Science Hall.

Alumni Hall

(Dormitory)

Alumni Hall is one of the oldest buildings on the campus. It is close to the gymnasium and football fields, as well as to the administration building. The building is steam-heated, and every room has an open fireplace. The accommodations are very comfortable and the rates are low.

Laurens Hall

(Dormitory)

Laurens Hall is another of our landmarks. It is a stone's throw from the administration building, while Smyth Hall is an even nearer neighbor. Rooms are heated by stoves. Accommodations may be had at a very low figure.

Pan-Hellenic Celebration Is Colorful Affair

REV. S. M. GLASGOW LEADS SERIES OF INSPIRATIONAL GATHERINGS

Well-Known Knoxville Minister Attracts Large Audiences of Students and Friends. Leaves Deep Impression.

On Thursday evening, March 21st, Rev. S. M. Glasgow, D. D., of the First Church of Knoxville, Tenn., concluded the greatest series of religious meetings that has ever been held on the campus of Presbyterian college. Throughout his series of seven talks, Dr. Glasgow succeeded in attracting and maintaining so great an interest that on no occasion did the attendance fall below two hundred. Not only did the students take advantage of Dr. Glasgow's presence, but many people of the town turned out regularly to hear the great preacher.

President McSween inaugurated the series with a preliminary meeting at noon on Monday. During the day the speaker arrived, and on Monday evening he made his first talk before a Clinton audience. For the ensuing three days, Dr. Glasgow spoke twice daily, his appearances being at twelve o'clock and at seven. Morning classes were modified to meet a special schedule which allowed more time for the gathering.

A number of students have been heard to remark that Dr. Glasgow is the greatest preacher that they have ever heard. He is certainly one of the pre-eminent leaders of the church, and one whose services constantly are in demand. It was only after some effort that he was able to arrange his schedule to include Presbyterian college. Those who heard him feel that he has left a deep mark on the college.

While he was on the campus, many students availed themselves of the opportunity for personal consultation. Dr. Glasgow welcomed each one, and from the richness of his knowledge and experience, gave helpful advice. Presbyterian college is looking forward to having Dr. Glasgow conduct another series of meetings next year.

NEW RULINGS IN CATALOGUE

Cut Allowance Abolished. College Opens Later Than Usual. Courses Announced.

The appearance of the college catalogue, during the past week, has caused considerable comment. There have been several changes that are of importance to students. These should be carefully reviewed in the booklet, in order to insure a minimum of misunderstanding when the new measures go into effect.

Perhaps the greatest shock was when students came face to face with the stark fact that there will be no cut allowance next year. This step has been taken by the college authorities because students have been abusing the privilege. The system of a week's cut allowance was first started at P. C. in order to take care of absences due to illness and college activities. It has slowly degenerated to the point where students expect to get their week of cuts in addition to these absences. Next year, every absense must be excused, or two demerits will be awarded the absentee. A tardiness, or a chapel or church ab-

PaC-SaC Now Taking Shape

The PaC-SaC for 1929 is taking shape according to schedule. The majority of the photographs have already been turned over to the printers, Jacobs and Company, of Clinton, and many of the cuts have already been completed. Editor Jack O'Neal has completed the planning of the dummy; and most of the material is either in his hands or is due within the course of the next few days.

Every department has been given special attention this year. All of the [illegible] features of past PaC-SaCs have been retained, and many new and original ones are being added. The tendency of the staff for the 1929 year-book has been [illegible] as possible, and to get out the finished product with as little damage to the pocket-book as is consistent with the quality of annual that students desire.

This does not mean that the annual is sacrificing appearance for the sake of cutting down expenses. Instead, the idea has been to achieve the beautiful and the tasteful effects without any accompanying extravagance. The result will be, we feel sure, a PaC-SaC that every man in the college will be proud AND ABLE to show to his friends.

Everyone has doubtless noticed that next year the charges for the yearbook will be covered by the literary activities fee. This his been slightly enlarged, but the compensations are more than ample. Students next year will not have to worry about the bills that have caused so much stir for the past few years. P. C. annuals are getting to be run more and more on a business basis.

Track Team Faces Georgia Next Week

University of Georgia will send her track team to Clinton to meet the Presbyterian Blue Hosemen on next Thursday, March 28th. It is the first time the two institutions have ever met on the cinders, and there has been a great deal of conjecture as to the relative merits of the two teams.

It is impossible to make any predictions in advance. The two teams meet as strangers, and must solve their respective fates for themselves. However, it is known that Georgia numbers among her cohorts a number of Bulldogs whose bite is equal to their bark. Unless information that has been received is incorrect, McCrary, the well-known fullback of gridiron fame, will run in the sprints. He is reputed to be a "ten-second man."

Others of the Georgia aggregation are equally as well-known, and are equally as dangerous. It is understood that they are especially good at playing around with the heavy things. It looks as if it might be a match between fast sprinters and far-throwers. But it is impossible to hazard any guesses. P. C. is only confident that the Bulldogs will not win without scars; if, indeed, they win at all. There are at least two dogs in a dog-fight.

Elections Will Come Soon

Students are reminded that it is not too early to be thinking of the annual student body elections, which, according to the constitution, are to be held on Tuesday, April 9th. This is an event of the greatest importance, and has always received the deepest thought of the students at large. Following the provisions that were incorporated into the constitution a year or two ago, election will be by ballot.

Among the officers that are to be elected at this time are: President, vice-president, and secretary of the student council, together with five other members. The president and vice-president are chosen yearly from the rising senior class, while the secretary is taken from the rising junior class. Other members are taken as follows: One from the senior class, two from the junior class, and two from the sophomore class. The freshman member is elected in the late fall.

In addition to these officers of the student council, there are the offices of the Y. M. C. A., PaC-SaC, and The Collegian, to be filled. For the Y. M. C. A. the student body designates a president, vice-president, and a secretary. For the two publications, an editor, a business manager, and an advertising manager must be chosen. The student body is urged to give thoughtful attention to the matter of elections.

Baseball Aspirants Ready For Action

Coach Johnson and his crew of "Slide-Kelly-Sliders" are preparing to go into action for the Garnet and Blue on April 1st. The recent heavy rains have hampered practice considerably, the progress was not [illegible] as, and the team is expected to be in good condition. The week of grace that is yet before the squad will be needed simply to polish off the rough spots and insure the perfect action of an already well-organized group.

For the first two weeks of their campaign, the baseballers will swat the spheroid away from home. Following the opening game, to be played with Wofford, in their home environment, will come the week-end trip to Parris Island and Charleston, which will be the Mecca of all Blue Stocking diamond-men. On this trip, the Hosemen will meet Parris Island twice, Citadel and College of Charleston once apiece in the city-by-the-sea, and University of South Carolina in Columbia on the way home. The first home game is to be with Newberry on Saturday, April 13th.

Infield probabilities, as they stand to date, are: Dick Greene at first, Captain Joe Owens at second, Phil Roberts at short, and Odiorne at third. Perry, Riby, and Dunlap are heaving the long ones in from the grassy plains of the outfield.

Among the strike-and-ball men there is considerable competition

LARGE NUMBER ATTENDS THE ANNUAL BANQUET OF GREEKS

Considered Finest In Recent Years. Program Is Delightful. Music By Gamecock Orchestra Enlivens Evening.

Pan-Hellenic, the major social function of the year at Presbyterian college, has moved from the future into the past. It has left the ranks of our cherished expectations to join the multitude of those memories that we love to review from time to time. The 1929 Pan-Hellenic celebration has been one of the most delightful and successful that has ever been conceived by the Greek-letter association in recent years.

At nine o'clock last night about seventy-five girls were escorted into Judd hall for the banquet. It was a beautiful scene. Never before has the campus of Presbyterian college seen quite the equal of that array of feminine beauty and subtle charm.

The decorations, over which the committee had been laboring for nearly a week, were in excellent taste, and provided a worthy setting for the evening's drama. The long tables, illuminated by the golden glow of scores of candles, were all that was needed to give the whole atmosphere the aspect of a dream. And when the Carolina Gamecock orchestra struck up with the opening notes of their first piece, it became at once apparent that the Pan-Hellenic council had not overlooked a single small point that might have added to the splendor of the occasion.

The menu was equal in every way to the difficult task of living up to the rest of the evening's program. Mrs. Wilson, of Hotel Clinton, showed that she has not lost the fine art of planning meals — and gave ample

DRAMATIC CLUB GETTING READY

"Second Story Peggy," a Four-Act Comedy-Drama Scheduled for Friday, April 5.

The Dramatic club has at last come forth with a definite choice of a date for the performance of their play, "Second Story Peggy." Friday evening, April 5th, has been set for the Clinton appearance of the college's first sortie into the realm of the dramatic. It is learned that attempts are being made to arrange for one or more performances away from home. This should arouse a greater interest in the play, and in the future activities of the dramatic.

"Second Story Peggy" is a delightful comedy-drama in four acts, written by Katherine Kavanaugh. It was designed to provide a pleasant evening's entertainment, and has been chosen by the authorities of the dramatic club for the same reason. Those who are in charge feel confident that Clinton folks will be pleased with the production.

Mrs. M. W. Brown, whose original ideas and unfailing energy have added

Sigma Upsilon Names Leaders

[illegible] Sigma Upsilon, national honorary literary order, met for the purpose of electing officers on Tuesday, March 19th, immediately after dinner. As provided in the by-laws of the local chapter, officers for the coming year are elected at this early date in order to relieve the senior [illegible] proper continuity next fall.

[illegible] was unanimously named president of the club. He has shown a fine interest in the activities of the club, and has shown himself by other activities to be a capable executive. The club is looking forward to a year of widespread influence and interest under his guiding hand.

Other officers who were elected at this time were C. W. Grafton, vice-president; B. R. Young, secretary; and B. H. Dickson, treasurer.

This year the club has been more of a force on the campus than ever before. Raising itself from what was apparently its death-bed, it has developed and grown with enormous strides. The recent gift of about ten books to the library would awaken students to the realization that the organization is one of the most active and worth while on the campus.

Cinder Path Men Carrying Forward

With the meet with the University of Georgia but a week off, Coach Bonnie Mac is pushing the squad to the limit to make up for time lost earlier in the spring and to get them into shape for Thursday's combat. This means the [illegible] for the trackmen. From then until the middle of May they will be busy with [illegible] the hardest schedule P. C. has ever faced.

Thursday the tryouts were held in most of the track events and from the [illegible] made in most of the races, the [illegible] are certain of fulfillment. There will be no elimination in the field events [illegible] been known from the practices.

[illegible] three seem very evenly matched and in the tryouts there was little difference between [illegible] Ritchie leading by a narrow margin and Hogrefe and Green tied for second. For the past few years P. C. has ranked at the top of the state in sprinters, and the prospects for keeping [illegible] good from the way the boys are stepping.

[illegible] representatives in the high hurdles; and Marshall and Chapin will probably [illegible] hurdle even for P. C. In the high sticks Shirley Timmons has left a place that is hard to fill. Marshall is running the low hurdles for his third year and bids fair to exceed his former time in this event.

"Red" Means was the only one out for the two-mile run; but judging from the way he stepped the eight laps, and the time made, "Red" is go-

THE MEETINGS THIS WEEK

Dr. Glasgow, in the series of meetings he conducted during the early days of the week, made a bigger and deeper impression on the student body than any speaker in recent years. He found the note that sings in everyone's heart, and he played it with the rare talent and touch of one who knows people. If there really was a "lost chord," it is not lost any more; for Dr. Glasgow helped all who heard him to search for that lost chord, and to find it.

Perhaps the finest part of his message was the sincerity with which it was delivered. Throughout all of every meeting, one was repeatedly impressed by the realness of the man who was speaking. He seemed to breathe from him the vitality of his message, so that it succeeded, not only in entering, but by finding root in many hearts.

If we may venture to offer another suggestion as to why Dr. Glasgow succeeded so well in impressing his hearers, it is this—and there are plenty of speakers who would do well to follow his example — that he never opened his mouth to say anything unless he had something to say. And it is significant of the man that he never had to hesitate, for every word that he used in his talks was directed toward his goal. He always had something to say something that did not miss the mark that he set.

Unlike a great many speakers, Dr. Glasgow showed no inclination to deal with technicalities. He did not search the corners of his knowledge for intricate questions. He did not try to hold up to his hearers a myriad of twinkling lights for them to follow. Instead, in every meeting, he held up a torch-light; and when one looks back it is plain that the torch-lights were so arranged that they lead the way to something definite. Dr. Glasgow spent three days on the campus of Presbyterian college to help students to find life, and "that they might have it more abundantly."

The Singing

Second only to the inspiration of the talks themselves, was the inspiration of the singing at each of the series of meetings. The chapel of Presbyterian college has not been shaken for many a day as it was shaken by the voices of those who joined in on the familiar hymns that were chosen. If anyone had been in doubt as to the spirit of the groups gathered to hear the great preacher from Knoxville, it would have been dispelled by the hearty vigor and volume of the singers.

Outside Interest

Another factor that contributed largely to the worth of the meetings was the warm interest that was shown by the people of the town of Clinton. Dr. Glasgow may have been asked to speak before the students of Presbyterian college, but his messages were sown abroad in the town, as well. Long after the present student body has scattered to their various tasks in life, the people of Clinton will bear the imprint of his presence. Truly he may feel that these days have not been spent in vain.

SPIKES

Amid the changing scenery of the college year, the spike-shoe squad is preparing for its debut. In the opening meet with University of Georgia, on Thursday, March 28th, Presbyterian is again sending out a team that will be matched with the best in this section of the country. Georgia, South Carolina, Furman, Tech Relays, State Meet, S. I. A. A. meet, and Emory University—surely this is a season that will try the mettle of Lonnie Mac's track team.

P. C. students have been eagerly watching the track team during its brief period of training. There have been many conjectures as to whether this year's squad will be able to stand up under strong competition, as P. C. track teams have been doing for the past few years. Next Thursday afternoon will give everyone a chance to get a line on the team. A large crowd is expected for the meet, and every indication is that it will be a "humdinger."

The University of Georgia is an unknown quantity. This is the Blue Stockings' first encounter with the Bulldogs. There is no way of predicting anything, nor is there any way of even guessing with any degree of accuracy as to their probable strength. Every event that is run off Thursday will be a new contest.

In meets with other colleges, there is always the possibility of figuring from last year's data. Each man has his own event "lined up." He knows what he had to face last year, and what new men are coming up from the freshman class. He can thus place himself with some accuracy before the meet begins. But here it will be different. Every man will be standing face to face with a brand new adventure. It will be even more interesting to the team than to the onlookers, and this has not always been the case.

PAN-HELLENIC

Another Pan-Hellenic banquet has come off in great style. Once more the great social event of the year has come and gone. Now we must settle back again into the girl-less rut until Junior-Senior comes to jar us out again for a brief spell.

It is to be hoped that Pan-Hellenic will always be at Presbyterian college. Whatever other institutions may pass away, let us cling to this one as long as we can. It is bad enough to be deprived of feminine company as long as we are. Let's try to hold on to the one contact we have with them during the college year. And if we can, let us make it even more pleasant for the young ladies than we have tried to this year.

DON'T FORGET

Don't forget that the Dramatic club has "ducks" on your plans for Friday evening, April 5th. At that time, their four-act comedy-drama, "Second Story Peggy," will be staged in competition with the frosh play. Work is already far gone on the production, and it seems to be getting rapidly into shape. The young ladies of the town who have consented to take part are cooperating wonderfully, and will certainly do their part toward making the play a success.

Whatever else may be said of the play—it is certainly entertaining. It is a delightful story and it is told in a delightful way. The Dramatic club hopes that students and friends of the college will not let anything interfere with their presence at the Florida Street school auditorium on Friday, April 5th. Watch for further announcements next week.

SPRING

The other day a little girl heard something up in a tree and tugged at her mother's skirt and asked, "Mama, is that a pecker-wood?" It was. The "pecker-wood" and the other aviators are coming back to us. Sometimes you can actually go out-doors without your skin shrinking up on you. And, do you know, the sun is beginning to come out once in awhile.

It is at just about this time of the year that classes begin to become irksome. Of course, you understand, they are granted to be irksome all the time —but it's just about time for professors' voices to sound unusually droning and dull. Have you ever sat for an hour with your eyes directed straight at a man, and at the end of the hour still be absolutely innocent of any knowledge of what he has been saying? Have you ever felt perpetually drowsy, with a tendency to open only one eye at a time? That's what sometimes happens when this strange phenomenon they call spring comes around.

How nice it is to be able to go out in your shirt-sleeves and get really hot and bothered again! How nice it will be to lie out on the grass (it won't be long now!) and let the ants crawl all over you. And caterpillars have an annoying way of dropping out of trees and mooching around, haven't they? They ought to be doing it before very long. Not only that, but the "hopper-grasses" will come back, and those things that make that awful noise in the trees, just when it's time to take a nap on a sultry afternoon.

A month ago these things were too far away to even think about. They were definitely over the fence, and the best we could do was to lean on the fence and stare out that way and dream. It's just a gentle reminder that years and seasons do come and go after all—and although we may bustle and hurry for twenty-four hours—it's only a day, when all is said and done. It hasn't been so terribly long since last September, has it?

Some people love winter, with its cold winds, and a hard snow-ball that catches you just behind an ear that is already numb. And some people love summer, because you don't have to worry about the furnace, and about water-pipes, and all. Yes, and there are many who live the year around just so they can see autumn and Indian summer again. But how can they compare with spring? Summer is middle-age, autumn is dying-time, and winter is death itself. Isn't spring the time of birth for all that's living down in the ground? Spring is Youth in the sycle of the year. It is the awakening. Spring is a little child, with chubby hands and merry eyes and fat little pink cheeks. It is what that fellow Shakespeare calls:

" . . . the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing hey ding a d
Sweet lovers love the spring."

FRESH MEATS THAT ARE FINER

And we really mean it. Our Western cuts all come from grain fattened, stall fed cattle, which are tenderer and better flavored than those from cattle grown on the range.

BROWN-EYED MARY

My brown-eyed Mary has a charm
That's very bright, and live, and warm.
She's all the world to me.
And I would set her on a throne,
Where she would reign, for aye, alone,
And I her slave should be.

She carries beauty where she goes,
Relieving life's dull cares and woes
Along her joyous way.
And she should have a shrine, where all
At her fair feet, entranced, might fall,
And for her favors pray.

But that would never suit her taste.
She'd think such jewels were but paste,
And never happy be.
She'd rather bear the common lot,
By raging stream, or quiet spot,
And live along with me.

—T. E. Davis.

SUSIE

Helen is a dark brunette.
Rose Marie is fair.
Susie comes somewhere between—
I do not know just where.

Edith's eyes are darkest brown.
Sarah's eyes are blue.
Susie's eyes are neither one,
But how they look at you!

Annie Laurie passes by
And leaves you in a daze.
Susie cannot boast o' that,
But oh, her loving ways.

Susie's not the best I know,
Nor prettiest, but mark!
I never seem to think o' that
When we are in the dark.

—T. G. Ellis.

Here And There With the Colleges

Jest Irks Faculty

University of Michigan professors, in protest against a plan to have students grade the efficiency of the faculty, will resign if the proposal is carried out, declared Prof. Claude H. Van Tyne, of the history department.

Prof. Van Tyne denounced the plan as "ridiculous" and that it would result in freshmen "spying" on their professors and instructors. He declared the faculty, with which he has been identified for a quarter of a century, had never before been so aroused as by this proposal of a "professor's efficiency test."—T. P.

Many Actors Are College Men

With every click of the camera in Hollywood there comes a growing realization that colege men are numbered among the most successful actors in the business. A review of the Paramount studio alone discloses the fact that twelve of the leading men—a prevailing majority—are college or university men.

From where do the prominent actors come?

Adolphe Menjou is a graduate of Cornell; Richard Arlen hails from the University of Pennsylvania, while Charles "Buddy" Rogers gives the University of Kansas as his Alma Mater.—U. of Ga. Red and Black.

Collegiate

The collegiate mode is passing out. The drug clerk and the farm hand have caught up to it. The next job is to create a new fashion. Otherwise the four years at college would be wasted and there would be no way to distinguish between those who have had the privileges of a college education and those who have not.—The Campus.

Politeness

Most people will agree that it is better to make a few mistakes in trying to cultivate politeness than to make no efforts whatever in that direction.

Little Mary had been taught politeness, and was an apt pupil. One day the minister called; and Mary, waiting carefully for a pause in the conversation, remarked: "I hear we are going to have the pleasure of losing you."—Sun Dial.

"Whoopee" Is Waning Among College Students

College students and other youngsters are rapidly recovering from the "whoopee" period; and the plane of morality, especially in colleges, is much higher than it was two years ago and is constantly rising.

This is the conclusion of the Rev. Leslie Glenn, secretary of college work of the National Council of the Episcopal church, who for the last eighteen months has been conducting an intensive survey of students' morals in all sections of the country, with especial reference to the "whoopee" craze.

"There are still cocktail and petting parties, of course," said the Rev. Mr. Glenn, "but they are diminishing and are now merely a fading gesture of the so-called 'revolt' of youth. Two years ago saw the lowest moral trend among students. Today it is very much higher and mounting steadily.—Clemson Tiger.

When the term of an old negro preacher had expired, he arose and said:

"Brethren, de time am heah fo' de relection ob yo' pastah fer annudder yeah. All dose favorin' me fo' yo' pastah will please say 'Aye.' "

The old preacher had made himself rather unpopular and there was no response.

"Ha," he said, "silence gibs consent. I'se yo' pastah fo' annudder yeah."

"Onion is a new color for dress goods. It is said to be a strong fabric."—Exchange.

Cholly: "Are you sure that Jack loves you; and you alone?"

Molly: "Oh, yes, more then than at any other time."

First Boss: "That new clerk of yours seems to be a pretty steady fellow."

Second Boss: "Yes, and if he were any steadier, he'd be motionless."

The girl lion tamer at the circus beckoned to a big lion. It came and took a piece of sugar out of her mouth.

"Why, I could do that trick," cried a young man in the front row.

"You!" retorted the lady performer.

"Yes," said the eager young man. "Just as well as the lion."

Ecstatically the young man heard the girl beside him whisper the delightful words. Quick rushes of joy pulsed through his frame. He felt a soft pleasant wave pass over his cheek.

It was a marcel wave.

proof of the reason for having been awarded so many Pan-Hellenic contracts in the past. There was not a hitch, not a flaw. The evening was perfect.

When the curtain was just preparing to fall on the last act of the drama, President Spencer Elliott, of the Pan-Hellenic council, arose to inaugurate the short series of toasts. He spoke a few words of welcome, on behalf of both the council and the student body. Following this speech, President John McSween, of the college, was called upon for a short toast. In a few words his rollicking good-humor had lightened the whole [illegible] the evening. After a number of anecdotes and fitting stories, Mr. McSween closed with a few serious words of welcome and of praise. One of his remarks was so fitting that it is passed on here. He complimented the P. C. student body on their excellent taste in picking women; but it was not an extravagant compliment, for even the modest students themselves could not help but agree.

The third and last response of the evening was made by Dr. A. E. Spencer, chairman of the faculty committee on fraternities. His words were few, but the thoughts they expressed were in perfect accord with the spirit of the occasion.

The Gamecocks put life into the whole affair with their excellent playing. The leader of the orchestra carried off most of the interest of the evening with his marvelous contortions. He is certainly an orchestra leader among many, in a world where there are many good ones.

to so many college functions in the past year or two, is entering into the production of the play with great interest. Under her guiding hand, and with the able assistance of President Jack O'Neal, of the dramatic club, the play can be nothing but worth while. It was the same combination that staged the Freshman success, "The Junior," not so many weeks ago.

Students are asked to put a circle around April 5th on their calendars, in order that no other function may become confused with "Second Story Peggy." P. C. GLEE CLUB GIVES CONCERT Home Performance Is Good. Program Is Varied and Interesting. Hits Are Many.

The P. C. glee club gave its home performance at the Florida Street school auditorium on Friday evening, March 29th. After the excellent reports that have been coming in since the up-state tour, the people of Clinton, as well as students of the college, were well prepared for the fine concert that was given.

The best numbers of the program were Jack O'Neal's violin solos, the marimba duet by Clay Dendy and Rev. J. C. Dendy, and Jimmy Reid's piano numbers. Jack O'Neal gave the same kind of beautiful numbers as he has always given. Of the marimba duet numbers, the first was the best; and was truly remarkable as a bit of in-

Tennis Season Opens Thursday

The Presbyterian College tennis team will open its 1929 season with Furman university. The match will be played on P. C.'s courts, Thursday afternoon, April fourth. Manager Spencer Elliott has posted a notice for tryouts; and an elimination tournament will be held next Monday afternoon, weather permitting.

Clemson college will appear in Clinton on April 19th for a tennis match. Several others are pending, with further announcements of a more definite nature promised in the near future.

The tennis team will have a real junction this spring. With a fuller season that ever before, interest should develop more rapidly. All who play the net game should report immediately to Manager Elliott so that proper arrangements may be made to enter in the elimination contest.

ALUMNI GROUP HAS BANQUET

Association Meets In Columbia. Douglas, McSween, Johnson Speak. Plans Discussed.

The Alumni association of Presbyterian college held a banquet at the Rose Mary tea room, Columbia, S. C., on Friday evening, March 22nd. Since at that time the annual meeting of South Carolina teachers was being held in Columbia, it was possible for about thirty P. C. graduates to attend.

Rev. C. K. Douglas, of Manning, S. C., president of the association, presided at the gathering. After a few preliminary remarks, he introduced John McSween, president of the college. Mr. McSween informed the association of the progress made since he has been working for the college.

Coach Walter A. Johnson was the next speaker of the evening. He outlined recent progress in athletics, and presented a general view of his plans for the future.

Dr. Davison McDowell Douglas, president of the University of South Carolina, and former president of Presbyterian college, then addressed the alumni. He stressed the need for a loyal and active association to support the president in his campaign for the college.

The matter of home-coming day was discussed, and each alumnus was urged to be present next fall for this annual event held on the college campus. Everyone pledged his support to the event, and it is expected that next home-coming day will be the best in the history of the college.

After the meeting, Coach Johnson and President McSween returned immediately to Clinton, arriving in time to attend the Pan-Hellenic banquet.

Baseballers Prepare For Charleston Trip

The big Parris Island-Charleston baseball trip comes next week, and the baseball squad is working hard to make the team and win the right to go. It is the only big trip of the baseball season. The team will leave Clinton on Wednesday. Thursday and Friday there are games with Parris Island marines. Saturday the squad goes to Charleston where they meet Citadel. University of South Carolina is scheduled for Monday, as they are on their way home. This gives them nearly a week away from the campus.

Monday, April 1st, is the opening game of the season, to be played with Wofford in Spartanburg. The team will then have one day of rest before setting out for the big doings down south.

S. C. And Georgia In Contest Today

Today the Universities of South Carolina and Georgia clash on the cinders of Columbia, S. C. The meet will be of great interest to Presbyterian college men, especially those interested in track. Georgia met P. C. last Thursday. The contest today will give the team a chance to measure against South Carolina, and become well prepared for next Saturday's meet.

The University comes to Clinton for the annual meet between the two institutions, on Saturday, April 6th. It is reported that Zobel and other star performers have been working out steadily, and are in excellent shape.

UNFAIR COMPARISON

The Fort Meade, Florida, Leader propounded the query, "Why is a newspaper like a woman?" and offered a year's subscription for the best answer which brought forth these replies:

"Because you can believe everything they say; they are thinner than they used to be; they have bold-faced types; they are easy to read; well worth looking over; back numbers not much in demand; they are not afraid to speak their minds; they have a great deal of influence, and if they know anything they usually tell it."

"Because they always have the last word. Because they carry the news wherever they go."

The correct answer is: "Because every man should have one of his own and not run after his neighbor's."—Walton Tribune.

Dramatic Club Play Comes This Week

The Presbyterian College Dramatic club will present its first attempt, "Second Story Peggy," at the Florida Street school auditorium on Thursday evening, April 4th, at 8:00 P. M. Work on the play has been going forward for the past two weeks, and everything is rounding into shape in fine style. The dramatic club promises a delightful evening to all who attend.

This play is being staged as an answer to the challenge issued by the freshmen when they put on "The Junior," early in March. Students should be interested in the judges' decision, which, it is thought, will be given after the performance on Thursday evening.

The cast that has been working on the play is given below:

Mrs. Delancey, who keeps a boarding house, Lois Blakely.

Peggy, the girl, Meleen Browning.

Daisy, the maid, who isn't as dumb as she seems, Georgia Blakely.

Helen, Peggy's sister, Martina Reid Todd.

Kenneth Sterling, her admirer, Tommy Johnston.

Murphy, a cop, T. J. Cole.

Dexter, a detective, D. L. Wood.

Bill Durland, a young adventurer, C. W. Grafton.

Songsters Perform For Chicora Girls

The Presbyterian College glee club made is annual trip to Chicora college on Tuesday, March 26th. The club left Clinton in the afternoon, performed for the girls in Columbia, and returned late the same evening. It is reported to have been a very successful concert and had a good reception.

The quartet did especially well, and the orchestra numbers "went over big." The marimba-piano-violin trio attracted a great deal of interest and aroused much favorable comment. Isaac Copeland and "Caesar" Myers were good in their comedy stunt..

This concert is one of the permanent features of the glee club schedule. It is an annual affair that has never failed to win popular approval with the girls of Presbyterian's sister college. It is to be hoped that it will always continue as a monument to the good will that exists between the two institutions.

GEORGIA TRACK TEAM TAKES CONTEST BY DECISIVE MARGIN

Bulldogs Are Strong In Field Events and Distance Runs. Hogrefe High Point Man With Firsts and Second. Young, of Georgia, Is Sensational. Chapin Is Injured.

Georgia Bulldogs outran, out-threw, and out-jumped the P. C. track representatives last Thursday afternoon, to win by the decisive score of 78-50. The meet was the first that has ever been held between the two institutions. It was held on Johnson field, at four o'clock.

Presbyterian got off to an astonishing start when Hogrefe, Ritchie and Jimmie Green took the first three places in the hundred yard dash. This was easily balanced, however, when Georgia retaliated with corresponding points in the shot-put. The university then surged into the lead with the two leading positions in both the mile and the pole-vault.

Templeton, of P. C., won the discus. The margin remained the same when and Chapin took the high hurdles, but second and third in both of these events went to the Bulldogs.

Herdis McCrary, Georgia flash who was conference champion in the furlong in 1927, and who failed to place in the century, came back in fine style, capturing the 220-yard dash in 22.9 seconds. Hogrefe and Green were on his heels and took second and third respectively.

Young, another conference champion of more recent date, stretched out like a real champ. After winning a sensational mile, the first half of which was clocked at 2:07, he ran a half-mile in just half a second over two minutes. Aside from his first performance, this is very creditable

What We Hear Of Charlie Wilson

Charlie Wilson, a four-year star in athletics at Presbyterian college, has made a most impressive showing with the St. Louis Cardinals in spring training, but Manager Southworth announced a few days ago that he intends to send him to one of the St. Louis camps for more experience. He will in all probability go to Houston, Texas.

In an account of two games, played recently in Miami between the Athletics and the Cardinals, The Sun of Avon Park, had the following to say of Charlie's appearance there and the way he hit the ball:

"Sam Breadon's rookies do hit the old apple. He uncovered another swatsman Thursday in Wilson, a rookie second baseman, who hit 'em fast, far and frequent to help the Red Birds pile up a 14 to 7 victory over the Philadelphia clan of ex-Cardinals. The newcomer cavorted around the Topeka square last summer, and the training must have been good for the eyesight for he hammered out a triple, a double, and two singles while Don Hurst robbed him of another hit."

Revised Diamond Menu

A few changes have been made in the baseball schedule recently. The game with Erskine that was cancelled for April 26th is to be played on April 12th, causing conflict with Junior-Senior. A third game with Parris Island Marines has been added to several games changed dates. The revised and complete schedule follows:

April 1—Wofford at Spartanburg.
April 4—Parris Island at Parris Island.
April 5—Parris Island at Parris Island.
April 6—Citadel in Charleston.
April 8—Carolina in Columbia.
April 10—Newberry at Newberry.
April 12—Erskine at Chester.
April 13—Newberry at Clinton.
April 15—Erskine at Clinton.
April 17—Furman at Clinton.
April 19—Furman at Greenville.
April 24—Clemson at Clemson.
May 1—Wofford at Clinton.
May 7—Clemson at Clinton.
May 8—Citadel at Clinton.
May 10—Parris Island at Clinton.

Science Academy Meets In Capital

On Saturday, March 30th, the sixth annual meeting of the South Carolina State Academy of Science will be held in Columbia. Dr. W. E. Hoy, retiring president of the organization, and Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, of the chemistry department, are members who are attending from Presbyterian college.

The Academy of Science states as its object: "To encourage scientific research, to promote the diffusion of useful scientific knowledge, to unify the scientific interests of the State, and to investigate and report on any subject of science or industrial art [illegible] department of the government." In this, its sixth year, it is well established as an institution in the Palmetto State.

Dr. D. M. Douglas, president of the University of South Carolina, is on [illegible]. He is to be followed by Dr. W

Debaters Will Meet Mercer On Friday

On Friday evening, April 5th, Presbyterian college will debate with representatives from Mercer university. The debate will be held in the college chapel, and the hour will be announced later. The question for debate is: Resolved: That expert jurists, three or five in number, should be substituted for the present jury system. P. C. will be represented by Copeland and Palmer, the team that debated against Carson-Newman earlier in the spring.

There are several other debates definitely scheduled for this year. P. C. will debate against Furman university on April 23rd. Erskine college is also on the card, but the date is not yet decided.

The frosh will have the annual P. C.-Wofford-Newberry triangular debate on their hands before long. Those in charge are not yet ready to announce the date. As soon as it is decided, The Blue Stocking will carry the announcement.

THE ELECTION FORUM

The approaching student body elections will be one of the most important events of the college year. Upon the officers elected will largely depend the whole tone of life on the campus. We must decide now whether certain men are fitted for certain positions, and whether or not there is another man who is better qualified for the position. We must decide now whether we will vote for the best man, or for the man we like best. It is not something that can be passed over casually, but is something that calls for sincere thought.

For that reason, The Blue Stocking will give two columns on page three to the cause of the candidates, in next week's issue. At this time there will be published any letters to the editor that may be written in support of any candidate for any position. Names need not be signed to these letters.

Letters written in support of a candidate should be short and concise, preferably limited to one hundred words. Any that are turned in obviously to be nothing more than a source of humor, will be thrown out at the discretion of the editor.. The editor also reserves the right to limit the number published to one letter for each candidate, in the event that there are too many turned in.

This step is taken in the college paper in order to call attention to certain nominees who might otherwise be passed over in the rush. In the last moments before elections we are too prone to glance hurriedly over the list of those named, and to pick out the first one that strikes our fancy. When a great many voters resort to such a procedure, the result is that a man may be elected who is not the choice of the student body when they stop to think about it afterward.

Since the results of the elections are so important, it is wise for everyone to do his thinking in advance. That is why the college paper wishes to give students an opportunity to lay before their fellow students the desirable qualities of their choice. It is hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity. Letters should be handed in to the editor not later than Wednesday noon, April 3rd. The material will go to press on Thursday, and it is necessary to organize everythnig before that time.

It is felt that this is a desirable custom. If it meets with enthusiastic support this year, it is entirely possible that future staffs will see fit to carry it on. Lack of response will cause it to die a natural death. If students want it to die in infancy, it is easily throttled. It is merely an experiment.

MARCH WEATHER

Much has been said about March weather. It is said to be one of the most fickle things in all nature. We feel certain that the person who originated that idea must have been a resident of South Carolina, and that he hails from some town not far from Clinton. March may be fickle in other places, too, but it is hard to believe that the weather could be more exasperating at any other place on earth.

This has really been a queer month. Just when we have most longed to get outdoors, it has either rained or turned chilly. And then the warm days have not been reasonable, but have dropped suddenly, bringing with them a veritable epidemic of spring fever. If you take your slicker with you, it remains bone dry—but if you have lent your slicker or left it at home, you are sure to be caught in a deluge. One week of this past month might well have caused another Noah to start work on Ark II. The worst of it is that everyone knows we aren't through with the rainy season yet.

SEASONS

The year has but four seasons, and is fully equipped for every emergency. The college year has them one right after another, even to the point of overlapping and doubling. Just now P. C. is entering the throes of baseball and track seasons. The track team has already been launched, and the baseball team is getting ready for the big shove-off on Monday.

This means that there will be much to hold the attention and interest of students for the next few weeks. Both seasons run well into May, and after that it will be time for interest to center around commencement and exams. There is little chance for life at Presbyterian college to become dull between now and summer time.

APRIL FOOL

April fool is reminiscent of the good old days when boys looked upon the donning of long pants as the threshold of manhood. It brings to mind all manner of boyhood pranks, and of the number of times when even the most alert would "bite" on something foolish.

It is a good thing that boys of college age do not go in for April Fool tricks on the same scale that younger fellows do. If they did, there would be a great many dark heads turning grey, and a great many grey heads turning positively white. As for the blondes—they would soon be absolute albinos.

The possibilities of April Fool for men who can think of nothing better are infinite. If real inventive genius were brought to bear on this day of licensed deviltry, there is no telling just how far it could go. However, boys of college age have fortunately passed the stage of such kinds of fun. They have reached the place where they can benevolently watch the pranks of the little ones. April Fool is a real chance to feel grown up.

PROSPECTS

Until just recently all the talk has been of "prospects" for next year. It is getting to be time to count actualities. Applications are beginning to come in, and every day or two we are hearing of some new men who have decided to come to Presbyterian. We need no longer say "if" we have a big freshman class, for that freshman class is fast materializing before us.

P. C. is ready for all the men who can get here. Her equipment has often been commented on as the best for its size in the South. The equipment in some departments does not even need that qualifying clause, "for its size."

With its comparatively small student body, Presbyterian college has been putting out teams that rank well up in outside competition. What cannot be done when the coaches are given large squads to pick from? Not if, but WHEN college opens next September, P. C. will be facing the most successful year she has ever had. Bring on new men. The more the merrier!

PAN-HELLENIC

There has been much comment on the Pan-Hellenic festivities that came off last week. On every hand, people of the town, and among the college authorities, have repeatedly spoken of the high standard of the entertainment provided. The girls that were present made the best impression that has ever been made by a group of Pan-Hellenic guests. Every favorable comment that comes in makes it all the more sure that P. C. will always have the inter-fraternity banquet as one of the biggest events of the year.

The next number on the program is Junior-Senior. There is every reason to expect just as big a time on April 26th as htere was last week. It is hoped that the same fine impression can be made by the coming festivities.

A TOUGH BREAK

O. W. Chapin's accident while running the low hurdles in the Georgia meet was certainly a "tough break" for the young athlete. It is bad enough for anyone to suffer the painful injury that he sustained when he fell; but to have it come during his first varsity track meet, and when he was winning, makes it worse, both for the boy himself and for the track team.

Although only a sophomore, and wearing the grown up Garnet and Blue for the first time, Chapin has been considered one of the strong points of the team. His excellent time over the high sticks last Thursday, when he took first place a few moments before his mishap in the sister race, would be enough to guarantee points in every meet. In the low hurdles he held a commanding lead and was stretching out in a fashion that indicated phenomenal time.

Chapin's victory in the high hurdles has won him the right to wear the "P." In his case it will stand not only for points that were well won, but for days of pain and lying in bed, not to mention a longer spell of recuperation.Surely this is one letter that the college will be proud to give, and that the wearer may feel he has earned several times over.

THE SMYTH COLLECTION

It may be of interest to the students of the Presbyterian college to know something of the Smyth collection of South Caroliniana that has been recently donated to the college by Capt. Ellison A. Smyth.

Capt. Smyth has long been a friend of the college. His generosity made the erection of Smyth hall possible. That building is named for Capt. Smyth's father, Rev. Thomas Smyth, D. D., for many years pastor of the Second Presbytreian church of Charleston, S. C., and an author of wide reputation. His complete works may be found in the library. Capt. Smyth's grandfather was vice-president of the anti-nullification party of the Jackson period.

The collection contains almost three hundred books, twenty-five framed engravings, papers, letters, etc., and a large number of unbound pamphlets.

Perhaps the most interesting of the collection is a copy of John Lawson's Voyage to Carolina, printed in London in the year 1709. In point of age Catesby's Natural History of Carolina, Florida and the Bahama Islands, printed in London in 1731 (second volume in 1742, comes third. Catesby came to Virginia in the early part of the eighteenth century, but expresses shame that he tarried there. He then came to Charleston where he was received by the governor of the colony. He labored here for several years gathering specimens, often going into the back country with the Indians, of whom he speaks highly. He then traveled down into Georgia and Florida and on to the Bahama Islands. It was at this last spot that he made most of the drawings of the fish described in the second volume. The books are large volumes and were obtained by Capt. Smyth from the British Museum. Catesby, after returning to England in 1726, was unable to get an engraver to prepare the plates for the work, so he mastered the engraver's art himself. The coloring, which is yet remarkably bright and clear, was put in by hand. These volumes are truly works of art.

The oldest item is a History of Carolina, printed in 1708.

Another interesting and often quoted book is Adair's History of the American Indians, printed in 1775. The copy in the Smyth collection is a beautiful leather bound edition.

On a seven volume set of Audubon, Birds, the beautiful bindings alone are worthy of note. The beautiful color engravings of our feathered friends are noted for their exactness. .

Among the framed papers is an extra issued by the Charleston Mercury announcing the secession of South Carolina at "1:15 o'clock P. M., December 20th, 1860." There is also an extra announcing the fall of Fort Sumter.

The collection will be housed in a case at the entrance to the stacks. As soon as possible the library's collection of South Caroliniana will be brought down and housed in a like manner near the Smyth collection.

The collection is of such value it is almost impossible to make any estimate of its money value. The worth to students of South Carolina history is inestimable. Many of the items cannot be duplicated, others are extremely rare, and all are of interest. The library already has a large and valuable collection of Caroliniana. This priceless addition will make the Presbyterian college library a mecca to students of this state's history. As soon as possible the whole body of material will be fully catalogued and indexed.

—W. L. Jones.

Here And There With the Colleges

"Miss" Information

No more blind dates at the University of Washington. They have installed a "Dating Bureau." A card index is being fixed up, containing names and descriptions of those available for parties or dances.

The young shiek can look over the cards and pick 'em, long, short, fat or lean; red-headed, blonde, or brunette; and the age is given, too, but doubtful.

The list is maintained by the Newman club to bring together young men and women for the dances at the Seattle Tennis club.—The (Auburn) Plainsman.

Unlucky Freshmen

The freshmen boys at the University of Hawaii are required to carry at least two brands of popular cigarettes in an old sock, but the sock must be clean and white with no holes. The co-eds are required to wear grass skirts and goggles; and, instead of carrying cigarettes, they must always have a good supply of jelly-beans.—Orange and White (U. of Tenn.)

Preserve Him

To Wake Forest college and N. C. State recently came letters addressed "To the Cutest Man in College." The Wake Forest student body met to decide the rightful owner of the letter, but the State letter was given to a student by the postman, without proving his right to it. The letters contained requests for college stickers by girls from neighboring sister institutions.—Richmond Collegian.

At Princeton

"Why did you come to Princeton?" was the question asked the students entering Princeton university this fall. The following are some of the answers from the erudite freshmen:

Father and brother Princeton men.

Princeton spirit, tradition and reputation.

Thought more college life could be found here.

Because my father wanted me to go to Yale.

I didn't know the place then.

To graduate.

Advantages of country life can never be over-stressed.

Because I like the atmosphere of beautiful buildings and gentlemen.

Good looking campus, faculty and president. .

For social reasons.—Wilson Billboard.

Lest We Forget

A student handed in an exam paper at the College of Industrial Arts, Denton, Texas, with the following written at the bottom: "The Lord of Hosts be with us yet; lest we forget, lest we forget."

The professor put an "F" on the paper, and added: "The Lord of Hosts was with us not; for we forgot, for we forgot."—The (Auburn) Plainsman.

Literary Societies Hold Sessions

The Eukosmian and Pikadelt literary societies held their regular weekly meetings on Tuesday night.. The Pikadelt society has recently taken in five new members recruited from the ranks of the Eukosmian society. These new men are: Jack Whiteside, Gray Ellis, J. C. Smith, Walker Sessions, and Gus Adams. They were selected because of thier outstanding work in the other society, and it is hoped that they will continue their good work in the new place.

In the Pikadelt society a debate was held. Ellis, one of the new members, made a talk on one of the ten best magazine articles of the month. .After this, T. E. Davis and T. J. Cole, who have just returned from the convention of Pi Kappa Delta, national forensic fraternity, gave reports of their trip.

Both of the societies have been troubled by rather ragged attendance this semester as compared with that of the first semester; but it should pick up now since it has been chiefly brought about by various athletic and other trips on college business. It is hoped that a great deal of work may be accomplished during these last two months of school.

Officers Named To Lead I. R. C.

The International Relations club held a short business meeting on Thursday night for the election of next year's officers. Joe Babb was elected president. He promised his best efforts to the club if the members would support him in his work. Immediately upon election, Paul Milus, the out-going president, turned over his cares and worries to the new leader, wishing him success in his work with I. R. C. R. S. Crawford was elected vice-president, and J. I. Copeland, secretary and treasurer.

At this time the club had a report from the four delegates, R. T. Gillespie, Joe Babb, L. R. Williamson, and D. D. Beckman, who attended the I. R. C. convention at Athens with Dean Brown. All four gave good reports of the meeting.

High School Meets To Be Staged Here

P. C. is to be host again. This time it is to the Tenth district girls' track meet, and to the Laurens county track meet that her hospitality will be extended. Both these meets will be held on Johnson field, during the coming week.

The tenth district girls' meet will be held on Thursday afternoon and the Laurens county meet on Friday afternoon. This is not the first time the latter has been held here, as it is a regular affair that is attended with considerable interest by Presbyterian college men. It will certainly be interesting, and well worth while for an afternoon's diversion. All college men are urged to attend both meets and to be fo assistance to officials whenever it is possible. Many of the college men will possibly have an opportunity to serve in the capacity of field judges, track judges, and timers.

Frosh Track Men Prepare For Meets

FROSH TRACK SCHEDULE

April 6th—Carolina Frosh here.
April 16th — Furman Frosh in Greenville.
April 20th—Bailey Military Institute here.

The Freshman track team, though limited by a small squad, is fast rounding into shape and they are expected to hold up the tradition of a freshman track team never losing a meet. Most of the men have had experience in the sport and should show up well throughout the season. Senter, 440-yard dash, broad jump nad relay, probably brings with him the best reputation. He is a product of Morristown (Tenn.) high school, and represented that school in the National high school meet last year at University of Chicago. The relay team of which he was a member took the national championship. Murphy has had a great deal of experience at Baylor prep, located at Chattanooga, and brings with him a very good record in the sprints. Among the others Carothers and Kluttz are outstanding. Carothers is trying out at present in five events but will probably cut his field down in the near future. Kluttx is participating in three.

Men out for the 100 and 220 yard dashes include Murphy, Myers and Carothers. Murphy is so far holding the edge. Senter is alone in the 440 field and should be able to hold his own in that department. Collins, a product of Chester high, is showing the best form on the 880; while Burns is fast improving, and should give Collins a hard race before the final. Abrams and Bennet, both of Clinton high are representing the 1-milers, with Bennet showing the best form. Whiteside and Gillespie are in the field for the two-mile, with Gillespie showing good form. Whiteside is a brother of the famous "Whitey" of the last three years, and may well be expected to hold up that reputation. On the shot, Anderson, E. V., Heller and Cheatham are all green, but are improving fast. All are able to get it over 30 feet with ease. Dempsey is showing up best with the javelin in a field of Carothers, Dempsey and Copeland. McNaull and Copeland are both excellent on the discus, and this should be one of the strongest events. Carothers is working best on the high jump, with Copeland and Myers close behind. On the 220 low hurdles, Kluttz is going good, and Carothers is close behind. Carothers has the 120 high hurdles to himself and is showing good form. Kluttz and Senter are about evenly matched at the broad jump and are both improving. Kluttz is the lone pole vaulter.

As a general summary, we would say that the other colleges and universities of the state will be well aware of the fact that Coach Lonnie McMillian can product a winning team from limited material by the time May 20 arrives.

SCIENCE ACADEMY MEETS IN CAPITAL

E. Hoy, head of the biology department will be the program as first speaker. He will deliver a short address of welcome on behalf of the institution he represent at Presbyterian, who will make his address as retiring president of the Academy. Dr. Hoy will speak on "Some Aspects of the Chromosome Theory." This is the ground which he has studied most thoroughly in his extensive research work.

The remainder of the morning session will be devoted to speeches on physics and chemistry. The speakers scheduled are from the University and from Clemson college.

In the afternoon session the first item is business. When this has been completed, geology, zoology, and botany will have the floor for the rest of the evening.

The present officers of the Academy are: Dr. S. A. Ives, president, Furman university; Miss Laura N. Bragg, vice-president, Charleston Museum; Dr. G. C. Mance, secretary-treasurer, Winthrop college.

Must Know Sports

A firm in Utah, according to Lawrence Perry, demands that its prospective employees know something of sports. No man can get a job unless he is familiar with some of the most popular sports and athletes. The argument of the firm in demanding this is that over half of the conversation in Amreica is concerned with sports and no man who is unfamiliar with them can be very congenial with prospective buyers.—Gold and Black (U. of Ga.)

GEORGIA TEAM TAKES MEET

...and is enough to win any half-mile run in this section.

Sanford, a sophomore, won the high jump for Georgia, and in addition, took second in the broad jump. He is one of the most promising men that has ever been on Johnson field.

Chapin Is Injured

After running off with the high hurdles, Chapin met with disaster in the low events. He had just rounded the curve, and held a commanding lead, when he tripped on a hurdle, and fell heavily, dislocating his hip. This accident will very probably keep him from the track the rest of the season. It is exceedingly unfortunate both for Chapin and for the track team, and the student body is deeply concerned with his condition. Recent reports are that he is resting comfortably in the hospital. It is just a question of time before he will be back on the campus again, but his recovery will not be complete for some time.

In the mile relay, Presbyterian, with a team consisting of Green, Marshall, Ritchie and Hogrefe, won in a walk.

The summaries follow:

100-yard dash: First, Hogrefe, Presbyterian. Second, Ritchie, Presbyterian. 10.3 seconds.

220-yard dash: First, McCrary, Georgia. Second, Hogrefe, Presbyterian. Third, Green, Presbyterian. Time, 22.9 seconds.

440-yard dash: First, Ritchie, Presbyterian. Second, Earnest, Georgia. Third, Wyatt, Presbyterian. Time, 51.5 seconds.

CO-ED FOLLIES COME FRIDAY

Annual Appearance of University Group Is Set for Next Week. Junior Sponsor.

The big event is almost here. The University of South Carolina Co-ed glee club will present its annual follies program at the Florida Street school on Friday evening, April 12th. The Follies have already been staged several times, and on every occasion have met with great success. Reports have it that this year's program is even better than those that P. C. students have had the chance to see in years past.

Last year the Carolina Co-eds scored a distinct hit in Clinton. Their program was chosen with entertainment in view, and they certainly knew how to do their part. There was not a single number that dragged or fell below the level of the rest.

This will be the third or fourth time the Co-eds have come to Clinton for a performance. During the time since they first made a local appearance they have won increasing notice. Their performances have that breath of originality and life that makes the evening pass quickly. Reports, especially from Charlotte, have it that this spring they have excelled themselves.

The appearance of the Follies in Clinton, is, following the custom of past years, sponsored by the junior class. They will also have charge of providing local entertainment for the charming Carolina Co-eds. .

McSween Continues Trips For College

That the life of a college president is a busy one is shown by the fact that President McSween has been away on college business for over two weeks. During that time he has spanned the Palmetto state in his travels, and in addition has left South Carolina for an extended trip north. This time his objectives were New York and New Haven, where it is undrestood there was important business that called for his personal attention.

All last week the president of Presbyterian college was in the lower part of the state. He attended several meetings, among them being an important presbyterial meeting at Charleston. While in Charleston he preached at The First and Second churches and at The Citadel.

On Monday last Mr. McSween took the long hop from Charleston to Greenville, where he attended a session of the leaders of Presbyterian institutions of this section. For a short time on Monday, he touched at P. C., only to transact some urgent business and prepare for renewed absence in the North.

Off Again Tomorrow

President John McSween will leave the campus shortly on another trip. This time his schedule calls for two busy days in the lower part of the state. On Sunday he will preach at the Hartsville Presbyterian church. On Monday he will speak before Hartsville high school and before Coker college students.

On Monday night his program calls for a long flight up-state to a meeting of Piedmont Presbytery. This will complete the program for the present tour, and P. C. will have him on the campus for a short time.

DRAMATIC CLUB PLAY IS SUCCESS

Organization's First Appearance Is Highly Gratifying Performance.

By T. E. Davis

The Dramatic club play, "Second Story Peggy," staged last Thursday night at the Florida Street school, was a huge success. The judges have announced that it wins out over "The Junior," with which the freshman class challenged the Dramatic club. The play showed plenty of snap and pep, and was packed full of enjoyment from start to finish. If it be true that "A laugh a day keeps the doctor away," the doctors of Clinton must now be having a dull time.

The entire cast gave their parts so

Dr. Brimm Leads 'Y' Meeting Again

Another very interesting and beneficial meeting of the campus Y. M. C. A. was held in the chapel on Wednesday night last; the meeting being led by Dr. D. J. Brimm.

The discussion was full of interest for everyone present, the subject "Prayer," being one that is pertinent to the every-day lives of the students.

Dr. Brimm made a talk preceding the open discussion of the topic, in which he gave a detailed outline of the four elements which must constitute an acceptable prayer. First, there must be communion. The suppliant must get in touch with the Creator. He must feel that his soul is in direct communion with God. Second, there must be a complete confession. The suppliant must make an open-hearted confession of his sins to God, withholding nothing from the Divine Master. In the third place, the prayerful one must come into the presence of God with a full realization of God's omnipotence and with a heart that is overflowing with thanksgiving for all the blessings which God has showered upon him. God has told us that He will give unto us the things that are good for us for the mere asking, therefore we should never cease to thank Him and to sing His praises. In the fourth place We should send up a petition to God, asking Him for the things which we desire. We should not ask for vain, worldly things but for blessings that will enlarge our spiritual natures, and assist us in doing God's work on earth, always remembering the doctrine of others before self.

Col. Springs Adds Swimming Pool To Gym

Is Hitch-Hiking Doomed?

New York. (By New Student Service).—Some joker in the New Hampshire legislature has proposed a license fee for hitch-hikers amounting to $5.50 per person. According to newspaper reports, another measure was also proposed that would require them to display two headlights and a tail light when traveling at night.

No cause for laughter is contained in the pending Pennsylvania bill, however. It follows the example of New Jersey in forbidding this most pleasant and diverting form of travel.

"When it becomes a crime," complains The Dickinsonian, student newspaper of Dickinson college, "for a clean cut, intelligent, honest college boy to ask a passnig motorist for the means to get to his home and parents during a brief vacation period, then it is time to question the discretion of legislative bodies."

JOHNSON MEN TRIM WOFFORD

Take Opening Enconter of Season, 7-5. Owen's Mighty Wallop Scores Three Men.

Coach Johnson's Blue Stocking nine opened the season Monday in Spartanburg with a 7 to 5 victory over the Wofford Terriers. The Methodists seemed sure of winning until the ninth when the Hosemen put on a powerful rally led by Captain Owens, and pushed over four runs. The game looked like it would be a "hot" contest between pitchers during the first two innings when neither team was able to make the circuit. But in the third, P. C. pushed over one and Wofford retaliated with a couple. In the next round, the Presbyterians were unable to score; while the Terriers tallied three times. However, after these two bad innings, Caldwell settled down and didn't allow another Wofford man to

Mercer Debate Tonight In Chapel

Tonight at 7:30 o'clock the varsity debaters will meet Mercer university in the chapel. This is the first time the two institutions have met on the rostrum, and it is expected that a large representation of students will be present. The question for debate is: Resolved: That expert jurists, three or five in number, should be substituted for the present jury system.

Presbyterian college will be represented by J. I. Copeland and G. W. Palmer. This is the same team that debated for P. C. in the Carson-Newman debate, earlier in the spring. Both men have expended considerable time and effort in their research on this question, and the debate promises to be an unusually good one.

The next debate that has been definitely dated is with Furman university, on April 23rd. It is expected that dates for the match with Erskine and for the frosh triangular affair will be announced in an early issue of The Blue Stocking.

JOHNSTON IS STATE ORATOR

Selected At Preliminaries Held Tuesday. Will Go To Rock Hill On April 26.

At the preliminaries of the State Oratorical contest last Tuesday night, Thomas M. Johnston was chosen to represent Presbyterian college in the finals at Rock Hill on April 26.

The preliminaries were unusually good, and Johnston, speaking on "The American Constitution," fully deserved the honor he won. However, it was by no means a "cinch," for all of the speakers were good, and deserve much credit for their efforts.

T. G. Ellis was the first speaker, using as his subject "Modern Ulysses." The other speakers were W. H. Jack-

Newberry Greets P. C. Glee Club

On Friday evening, April 5th, the P. C. glee club gave a concert in Newberry. Since the director, Rev. Marshall C. Dendy, is pastor of a church in Newberry, there was considerable interest shown in the club, and a good crowd turned out. The boys seemed to be feeling good, for the program was unusually snappy and interesting.

The quartet made its usual hit and was called on for several encores. Other features that merited the warm approval of the audience were the solos by Murphy on the piano, the numbers by Clay Dendy on the marimbaphone, and the violin pieces by Jack O'Neal.

First Year Men Make Debut Today

The freshman track team makes its debut in the meet with University of South Carolina. It has an enviable record to uphold; for P. C. freshman track teams have never been beaten in the Palmetto state.

It is understood that the frosh have some good material for track honors. Senter comes to us highly recommended, having been a member of the four-man team from Morristown, Tennessee, which won the two-mile relay in the National Interscholastic meet in Chicago last year. Carothers has been throwing the javelin nicely, and will also be entered in some of the sprints. Copeland is doing well with the discus, and will be in the high jump as well. Among the distance men, Gillespie looks best, although Whiteside is also showing up well.

The following are the entries for this afternoon, as they have been arranged by Coach Lonnie McMillian:

100-yard dash — Murphy, Senter, Collins.
220-yard dash—Murphy, Carothers.
440-yard dash — Senter. Hamilton.
880-yard run — Collins, Senter, Burns.
1-mile run — Whiteside, Gillespie.
High hurdls — Carothers.
Low hurdles — Klutz, Carothers.
Shot put — Cheatham, Anderson.
Discus — Copeland, McNaull, Williams.
Javelin — Carothers, Dempsey.
Broad jump — Senter, Myers.
High jump — Copeland, Carothers, Myers.
Pole vault — Abercrombie, Klutz.
Relay — Cheatham, McNaull, Copeland, Gillespie.

WILL BE BUILT THIS SUMMER

Enhances Athletic Equipment of the College. Will Make Gym Complete.

Colonel Leroy Springs, donor of Leroy Springs gymnasium, the finest gym in the state, has now promised to add to it a swimming pool. This feature, which will complete the athletic equipment of the college and make it the equal of any in the South, will be finished, we are told, in time for use next fall. The pool will be added as a unit to the gymnasium, in the space that has long been excavated for it.

Col. Springs told John McSween of his decision to make the gift, while the president of the college was in New York during the week. He showed a warm interest in the college and assured Mr. McSween that his addition to its equipment would be made at an early date. The same engineering company that designed and erected the pool Col. Springs built in Lancaster, will come to Clinton to make a preliminary survey and get the work under way.

It is needless to call attention to the new field of activity that the new pool will throw open. Not only will it give opportunity for natatorial recreation to large numbers of students, but it will make possible the forming of a swimming team for inter-collegiate competition. Students who have been developing their swimming talent during the summer months, may now do so with added vigor for it will not be wasted.

The athletic equipment of the college will now be rounded out to perfection. Except for the present inconvenience through lack of a baseball field, there is none that is seriously needed in the way of buildings and grounds. It now remains for the other phases of college equipment to keep pace with the athletic department.

Blue Hose Men To Attend Relays

Following the custom he has established during the past two or three years, Coach Lonnie McMillian, of the varsity track team, will take a P. C. representation to the Georgia Tech Relays, Saturday, April 13th. The group will probably leave the campus Friday morning, the 12th, and return immediately after the track meet.

Owing to the fact that officials at Georgia Tech have placed certain restrictions on teams out of the Southern Conference, P. C. will be unable to enter the one-mile relay and one or two other events in which the team is strong. After consideration of the circumstances, Mr. McMillian has decided that the only opportunity left is in the sprint medley. This race is for one mile, made up of successive relays as follows: First man, a quarter mile; second man, 220 yards; third man, 220 yards; fourth man, a half-mile.

Presbyterian's team for this race will probably be Ritchie on the quarter, Hogrefe and Green on the furlongs, and Jack Martin on the half. This team can make pretty good time, and is expected to make a very creditable showing.

In addition, Hogrefe may be entered in either the 220-yard dash or the broad jump, or both. Two years ago he captured second in the latter event, bowing only to the now-world's champion, Hamm.

THE MOB

In the March, 1929, number of a small periodical called "What The Colleges Are Doing," there appears an article called "The Stampede," over the initials, "G. H. M." We quote here two paragraphs:

"The favorite mass movement in American life is the stampede. We are an alert and active people. When we see what we want, we start all together and at once to get it. It makes little difference whether we need it or just think we ought not to miss it. Be the lure some form of personal indulgence, some new avenue for spending the public money, or some new way to beat neighbor Jones, the method is the same. The vogue is the thing, and off we go!

" . . . The postwar rush into college was a stampede. The exaltation of athletics is a stampede. The glorification of 'activities' at the cost of intellectual objectives is a stampede. The deification of the superficial attributes of personality, to the discredit of individual worth is a stampede. The acceptance of the single standard of success, the economic, is a stampede. Modern life in the college, as out of it, is one stampede after another. Some adventurous starter blows the whistle, and off we go."

And there is more of it—and the worst of it is that "G. H. M." does not lack much of being absolutely right. There is no way of getting around the fact that college life is just one "fad" after another. Today it is a certain kind of hat that "is being worn," and nothing will do but we must all get a hat like that. Last week, perhaps, it was a new way to tie your tie, or another of those little things that sweep over the campus like wild fire.

All that is necessary is to be satisfied that it is the style, or that "they're doing it" somewhere else. It makes no difference where they're doing it—just so "it's being done." We come to college and live four years, most of us, feeding on other people's ideas, and traveling roads that have been picked for us by somebody else. If we once originated an idea of our own, it would no doubt perish for lack of proper care and cultivation. It is not much of an exaggeration to say that some people have never had an idea in their lives, and give splendid promise of never having one unless they snap out of it.

One idea of going to a small college is to take advantage of the opportunity to stand out from the crowd. The smaller the group, the better the chance to accept responsbiility and develop leadership and initiative. Once we have acted on an idea of our own, it becomes much easier to think thoughts of our own. The ability to have ideas of your own, and to act on them decisively is the factor that determines whether or not you will ever succeed in getting away from the mob that is rushing madly about. You are given the choice of leading or being led. What are you going to do about it?

On the campus of Presbyterian college there are unlimited opportunities to develop initiative. There are innumerable positions of responsibility, and too often there are none to fill them. That is, there is no competition for the place, so that the first man who comes along may have it. Such a state of affairs simply means that there are numbers of us who don't care whether we are ever able to do things or not. We are satisfied that "we could do it if we wanted to," but we never want to—and at the rate we're going, we never will want to..

There are only a few who can stay out of the mob. They are the ones who lead and direct the movement of the mob. It is difficult to find a middle ground. You must be either a shepherd, or one of the sheep. Unless you are thinking thoughts on your own hook, you must absorb thoughts of other people.

The time to decide is right now. Once a man has become accustomed to following, it gets hard to lead. The reverse is sometimes true, also; but there are few who have that difficulty to attend to. A man who graduates from college as one of the mob is pretty certain to stay there the rest of his natural life. One purpose of college life is to develop leaders. Is this purpose to be lost on you? It is a question that will bear a great deal of serious thought.

TRACK

In the light of subsequent events the defeat of the track team by the University of Georgia does not look quite so bad. Although the margin of defeat was rather large, it is excusable when the score is compared with the scores of the two meets that the Bulldogs have had with our neighbors, U. S. C. and Clemson. P. C. made a better showing in actual points won than either of these vastly larger institutions.

Leaving Clinton Friday morning, the Georgia team journeyed to Columbia. There after a day of rest, they met the University and gave them a thrashing even more decisive than ours. Not satisfied with this, they went to Clemson, and on Monday handed them a similar dose. In the latter case the score was almost the same as that of the Presbyterian meet.

A glance at the record of the team that has done all this will show that some of the men they exhibited here are first class men. Young, the man who ran both the mile and the half-mile in the P. C. meet, ran the mile against the University and both races again in the Clemson contest—all in the short span of five days. This is nothing short of marvelous. It is not hard to believe that he is Conference champion in cross country.

Sanford, the wiry jumper who took first honors here with five feet ten inches, tied with Kennedy of Carolina, at six feet two on the following Saturday, and then leaped an inch better against Clemson. If his improvement continues as rapidly as this—there are a great many high jumpers in the country who would do well to look to their laurels.

And then there is McCrary, the Bulldog sprinter. In the hundred yard dash here he failed to place, but in the furlong he stepped out in beautiful style and took first. This must have served to warm him up and "get his hand in," for two days later he took first in both events, in both cases defeating the redoubtable Zobel, who made such a sensation both in football and track last year. There are many other stars on this well-rounded team.

ANOTHER MISTAKE

Among the numerous mistakes that people make every day in this old world, one notable error has been called to the attention of The Blue Stocking. Last week it was announced in these columns that the annual elections would come off April 9th. Information from President Frank Pearce, of the Council, is to the effect that this date is a week earlier than the correct one. Election day is April 16th.

However, do not forget the election forum that will be open to all students next week. Nominations for the various positions will be made early next week. If you want to boost your man, write a letter to the editor of The Blue Stocking. No names need be signed.

The only right reserved by the editor is the right to edit. No letters will be printed if they are obviously for humorous purposes. The other inalienable right of the editor is the right to choose from the material, if too much comes in. However, this is such a distant prospect that no one need worry about it. Please get your letters in early next week. They should be not over one hundred words and, if possible, written on the typewriter.

BASEBALL

This week-end the baseball team is away from the campus on a trip to the lower part of the state. The immediate schedule includes two games with Parrsi Island Marines which

Here And There With the Colleges

Professors To Blame

College professors are largely to blame for their own low salaries, according to a report by a committee of Yale professors made public recently. An excess of teachers is blamed.

"The proportion of teachers to students in American universities is far higher than in the universities of Europe," the report said. "Unless radical alteration of the American university policy is put into effect, a progressive deterioration in the quality o university teachers and scholarship is indicated as inevitable."—Critograph.

Human Nature

Call a woman a chick and she smiles; call a woman a hen and she howls. Call a young woman a witch and she is pleased; call an old woman a witch and she is indignant. Call a girl a kitten and she rather likes it; call a woman a cat and she hates you. Women are queer.

If you call a man a gay dog it will flatter him; call him a pup, a hound or a cur, and he will try to alter your map. He doesn't mind being called a bull or a bear, yet he will object to being mentioned as a calf or a cub. Men are queer, too. And how!—The Cadet (V. P. I.)

Amen

The early bird catches the worm, provided the worm is where the early bird looks for him. "If you get up earlier than your neighbor," says the man at the key-hole, "and work harder and sheme more and stick to the job more closely and stay up planning how to make more money than your neighbor and burn midnight oil planning how to get ahead of him while he is snoozing, not only will you leave more money when you die than he will, but you'll leave it a damsite sooner." Amen. How true of college.—The Plainsman.

"Frat" Vulgar

In a handbook ("rat bible") issued by a Northern university I noticed, the other day, a list of campus definitions. The word "frat" was defined as "the term applied to a fraternity by illiterate freshmen and co-eds. Persons using it should have their mouths washed out." That isn't bad. The word "fraternity," derived from the Latin word meaning brother, is a beautiful word. It has meaning. The illegitimate word "frat" has no meaning; is flat and harsh when spoken. It is vulgar. It reminds one of comic strips and gaudy paint. If that school actually makes users of the word use soap and water, it is a good thing. When we have a word that is euphonious and meaningful, why abandon it for a cheap substitute?—The Plainsman.

A New York professor has gathered statistics showing that our crowded educational institutions have brought about a condition whereby an education decreases the college man's earning power. Which fits in with this balmy weather to convince us that we are working too hard.—Stormy Petrel.

This is the way to write a thoroughly angry business letter:

"Sir: My typist, being a lady, can not take down what I think of you. I, being a gentleman, cannot write it. You, being neither, can guess it all."—"Clipped."

LAUGH, CLOWN, LAUGH

"How do you mean you made a faux pas last night?"

"Well, I told Jack I'd never been kissed before, and it appears I was engaged to him last summer."—Havana Post.

Little Girl: "Ma, I'm afraid baby will have seven years of hard luck. He's swallowed a piece of mirror."—Life.

Lady: 'Why are you crying?"
Boy: "My aunt has fallen down the stairs."
Lady: "But she will soon get better."
Boy: "I know, but my little sister saw her fall and I didn't."—Lustige Koelner Zeitung (Cologne).

He: "Only the brave will take them.—Cornell Widow.

Proud Father: "Don't you think it's about time the baby learned to say 'papa'?"

Mother: "Oh, no, I hadn't intended telling him who you were until he becomes a little stronger."

And then there was a man who had two children. He had only one of the kids' picture taken, 'cause he was a Scotchman and the children were twins.

were to be played on Thursday and Friday of this week, one game with Citadel, carded for today, and one clash with the University, set for Monday as they journey homeward.

This trip follows the victory snatched from Wofford last Monday on the ninth-inning swat of Captain Owens. A triple with the bags all cluttered up with men gave the margin that was necessary to put P. C. in the lead. Owens then made it a sure thing when he scored a moment later on a passed ball.

This gave the team a fine send-off for a season that should be a good one. With three good men for the mound, backed up by a hard-hitting, fast-fielding team, Coach Johnson should be able to snatch quite a few games this spring.

At the time of going to press, nothing has been heard of the two games at Parris Island. However, these games will appear next week in The Blue Stocking if the material does not come in time to get in a write-up this week. Watch the papers tomorrow morning for the outcome of the Citadel game. A victory will give revenge for football and basketball defeats. Don't you wish Citadel would put out a track team?

HOGREFE AND ZOBEL

A great deal of interest is quite naturally centering around the "we-meet-again" occasion this afternoon. The meeters are Hogrefe of Presbyterian college, and Zobel of the University of South Carolina. It will be remembered that last year in the opening track contest for both colleges, Hogrefe won in the century, and the two men tied in the two-twenty. Zobel's brilliant performances for the rest of the season focused unusual interest in the State Track meet, held in Clinton on May 5th. On this occasion Zobel nosed out the Presbyterian college sprinter in both events by a narrow margin.

This year both runners are back, though neither is in quite the top notch condition. However, both have had competition recently, and should be prepared for the fracas that is fast becoming an annual event. It is impossible to make any reasonable predictions without having seen both men in action this spring, but it is safe to venture that it will not be a merry-go-round for either.

Furman Takes Tennis Matches

On Thursday afternoon, April 4th, Furman university defeated Presbyterian college in the first tennis match of the season. The match was played on the courts of Presbyterian. Furman scored decisive victories in every match, only two sets being required in every instance but one.

A. O. Jackson, playing first singles for P. C., was defeated by Burts of Furman, in two sets, 6-3, 6-4. The play was fast and hard, but lack of practice told in the final reckoning.

The most hotly contested match was between Johnston of the Calvinist group, and Dermut of the Baptists. The latter won out in the end, but it was only after the fight had surged to three sets. The scores were 6-2, 5-7, 7-5.

In the third singles Abrams defeated Elliott of P. C., 6-2, 6-2, and in the fourth singles Matthews was victor over Reid, 6-1, 6-3.

The two P. C. doubles team were composed of Jackson and Johnston, and Elliott and Reid respectively. The former fell before the Burts-Dermut combination by 6-2, 7-5; and the latter suffered defeat to the tune of 11-9, 6-1.

The Presbyterian college team had been out for practice only during the early part of the week. Practice will continue in preparation for the match with Clemson, which is scheduled for April 19th.

Manager Elliott announces that anyone wishing to challenge a member of the team as it now stands is at liberty to do so. However, it must be agreed in advance that the decision shall rest on three out of five sets.

The Clinton boys were playing under a tremendous strain, with defeat staring them in the face; but they were undaunted and soon showed that they well knew the art of tapping the apple on the nose in the crisis. They annexed a run in each of the seventh and eighth innings, but the victory still seemed very improbable, with Hall going good for the Terriers.

In the ninth, the first three men up, Caldwell, Green and Roberts, panched out singles. Captain Owens then came up and proving that he was most worthy of the honor bestowed upon him by hitting a terrific liner into right field that was good for three sacks, scored the speedy Owens scored a moment after on a wild throw. Woffford failed to score any punch at the turn in the ninth.

Although the game showed that P. C. had batting power, it also showed that power could be improved, as evidenced by the fact that the Hosemen had 20 men on the packs and were only able to put across seven. Woffford was able to get 17 on board.

well that it is hard to single out anyone for special mention. C. W. Grafton played the part of hero very heroically. Miss Medora Browning was equally charming as the heroine. Although her penchant for papping in and out of windows on fire escapes rendered her subject to the suspicion of the audience, she completely won their hearts as the little sister who had always been in love with the hero. D. L. Wood, as the detective, detected everything, with the aid of his cigar, except the criminal. He was rendered valuable assistance in this by T. J. Cole, as the cop Murphy. J. M. Davis, as Noah Perkins, furnished refreshments in the way of fresh egs and all the latest tunes.

The play was directed by Mrs. M. W. Brown, who deserves great credit for her work in making it a success. She was assisted by other members of the Dramatic club not in the cast.

She is one of the most popular members of the younger society set of Anderson, and her many friends regret her marriage will take her away from Anderson.

Mr. Jackson is the son of Mrs. T. C. Jackson. He is a graduate of of Presbyterian college where he was a member of Kappa Alpha and Sigma Upsilon. He served as adjutant in the R. O. T. C. and was president of the junior class. He was also quite prominent as president of the College Press association and editor of The Blue Stocking, the college weekly paper.

After finishing college he became associated with the Hunter Manufacturing and Commission company of New York City where he now lives.

The marriage of this popular couple will be the outstanding social event of the summer and will be preceeded by a number of parties given by friends of Miss Brown and Mr. Jackson.—Anderson Independent.

son, whose subject was "Conflict Between Materialism and Beauty," and T. J. Cole, with his now classic oration, "Dollars and the Western Hemisphere."

Johnston handled his theme, the Constitution, very effectively, and introduced an unusual amount of feeling into a subject whose content is in its nature mostly expository. He spent a short time tracing the history of the Constitution and the way it has proved its worth in national crises. He also took up a comparison of government in America under our present code and the many weak and unstable governments of other countries. This in the final analysis, he traced to the lack of such a Constitution as that of the United States, which provides the structure of our whole swstem. He closed his oration with an impassioned plea for the preservation of this document in our national life.

Johnston will go to Rock Hill on April 26, with R. T. Gillespie, the executive committeeman from this school, to speak in the finals. The contest will be held at Winthrop college, with representatives from each of the nine colleges in the association competing.

P. C. WINS VARSITY TRACK MEET; CAROLINA CAPTURES FRESHMAN

Men From State University Appear Here In Annual Tilts. Hosemen Win From Gamecocks, 71-60. Bantams Down Sox By 60-40. Thrilling Contests Are Seen.

The Bailey stadium was the scene of an excellent track meet here Saturday afternoon when the varsity track team of Presbyterian college defeated the varsity of the University of South Carolina team by the very close score of 71 to 60. The freshman team of the University beat the P. C. freshmen by the score of 69 to 40.

The varsity meet was very thrilling and it was not until the very last that the Presbyterian team was able to forge ahead. The Carolina frsehmen led the Presbyterian team throughout the contest.

The track was in exceptionally good shape by the good work of Manager Fraser and Assitant Manager Kennedy. The meet was run off very smoothly by Prof. H. E. Sturgeon of Presbyterian college.

The Blue Stocking team far excelled the Gamecock team in the track events, and the visitors were best in the weights and throws. .

The 100 and 220-yard dashes were very pretty, Ritchie, Green and Hogrefe of Presbyterian, winning first, second and third in the 100-yard run, and in the 220 Ritchie, P. C., Hogrefe, P. C., and Rubenstein, Carolina, winning first, second, and third. The half-mile, led by Martin of Presbyterian, was a pretty race, with Farnum of Carolina, and Cardwell of Carolina, second and third. The one-mile race was the best race of the afternoon, and the last sprint by Ketchum of P. C., and Cardwell of Carolina, who were neck and neck up to the last few yards when Ketchum was able to break the tape by a few inches' lead. The two-mile run was also a feature, and Means, who was leading by probably one-fourth of the 440-yard track, waited on his running-mate, Truesdale, before breaking the tape in order to tie the race and also put Truesdale in line for a letter in track at Presbyterian, which is given for a first place in a meet. Ketchum of Presbyterian, was third.

The broad jump was also a feature when Roy Hogrefe jumped 22 feet, 7 3-4 inches. The relay race was a pretty series of runs and the Presby-

P. C. Track Men At Tech Relays

Presbyterian college is being represented this afternoon at the Georgia Tech relays, in Atlanta. Coach Lonnie McMillian and the relay team that is to run for P. C. left for the metropolis of the South on Friday morning, by the fast train. It is understood that there will be a number of P. C. men at the relays as spectators.

Presbyterian is entered in the sprint medley relay. This is a relay of four men, the successive legs being a quarter mile, two 220-yard dashes, and a half mile run. The local team is composed of Ritchie, Green, Hogrefe, and Ketchum, running in the order named.

In addition to this entry, Hogrefe is named in the entries for the hundred-yard dash and the broad jump.

Leathernecks Fall Twice Before Hose

Playing the first of a series of two games, the Blue Stockings, playing brilliant ball, were able to set the fast Parris Island Marine team back with a 5-0 defeat. The game was played at Parris Island.

The Leathernecks were able to garner but three hits off Young, who was twirling his first varsity game for P. C. The Hosemen secured but seven base blows off McGowan, but all these came at very opportune times, often driving in men from second and third bases. Owens was high man in the attack, getting two out of three safe blows and leading in the scoring. Mason snatched one out of the clouds in centerfield to furnish one of the sensational plays of the game. Brunson, Veteran receiver, caught a nice game, and again demonstrated that it is next to impossible to steal a base on him. Lock stood out for the Marines, with McGowan, Marine hurler, running him a close second.

In the second game the Blue Stockings again blanked the Parris Island Marines to the same tune, 5-0. Caldwell twirled in beautiful style, alloting them just three hits again. Both teams played good ball; but the Hosemen sewed the game up in the first inning when they pounded Swarts for three runs. It was a pitcher's battle after that, with Caldwell having the edge.

Owens and Greene led the attack, securing two bingles apiece, both of them coming at a time in the game when hits were sorely needed. Lock played beautiful ball for the Marines, handling hard chancees brilliantly without a bobble to his discredit.

This victory marked the third in a row for the Presbyterians, they having previously won from Wofford. In these two games the Marines secured but six hits off of Caldwell and Young, and were unable in either contest to cross the home platter.

PREPARATIONS ARE BEING MADE

Commencement Exercises Begin May 26. Dr. Lyons and J. Lyles Glenn To Speak.

Plans are being completed for the commencement exercises of the Presbyterian college which are to be held May 26-28. The exercises this year will be presided over for the first time by President McSween.

The baccalaureate sermon will be preached in the First Presbyterian church on Sunday morning(May 26th, by the Rev. J. Sproles Lyons, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Lyons is one of the outstanding ministers and leaders in the Southern Presbyterian church and will be heard here with unusual interest.

The commencement exercises proper will occur on Tuesday morning, May 28th, at 10:30. The address before the graduates will be delivered by the Hon. J. Lyles Glenn of Chester, well known solicitor of the Sixth judicial circuit of South Carolina. There will be in addition to the address, the usual class exercises, delivery of medals, awarding of degrees, etc.

On Monday evening at eight o'clock, the annual declamation and oratorical contest will be held in the college auditorium at which time six young men will compete for two gold medals.

This year's graduating class is composed of 54 members, the largest in the institution's history.

Plans Go Forward For Junior-Senior

President I. M. Keels of the junior class reports that progress on the plans for Junior-Senior has been rapid. Numerous committees have been appointed and are functioning well. All that now remains is to gather in the threads from each group and make the final preparations. .

During the week, at a joint meeting of the two upper classes, names were taken of those who plan to attend, in order that favors and plates may be supplied accordingly. This week the final meeting means for music will be made, and the decorations planned. As soon as committee preparations work on the decorations will start.

Those who wish to send out formal invitations will be glad to hear that they will be available soon. Further information may be obtained from President Keels or any of his cohorts.

Citadel Takes Heart-Breaker

In a heart-breaking game last Saturday, the Blue Stockings went down to defeat before the strong Citadel club in Charleston by the score of 3-1. Adair, pitching for P. C., hurled a beautiful game, and only sensational fielding on the part of the Cadet outfielders prevented him from chalking up a victory. With the bases loaded time and time again miraculous catches by Parler would turn back the Presbyterian bids for victory.

The entire P. C. team played excellent ball, but the breaks seemed to be against them. Mason pounded Bookhart for two of the six hits he allowed, besides scoring the lone Presbyterian run. Too much credit cannot be given to Bill Adair for the masterly way in which he turned the Charleston boys back, only to meet an undeserved defeat.

For Citadel, Bookhart pitched a beautiful game, and was ably supported by his mates. Wilson played a nice game at short.

Think These Over!

These are the qualifications for which we must search in the men who are to be our leaders.

1. Personal honesty.
2. Moral courage.
3. Self-confidence.
4. Reliance upon and glorification of God.
5. A tactful personality.
6. Good judgment.
7. Fair-mindedness.
8. Excellence in that particular line.
9. Desire for service.
10. A consuming sense of responsibility.
11. Determination always to do one's best.
12. Unwillingness to supplant another man who is better qualified to fill the position.

CO-ED FOLLIES IS GOOD SHOW

Annual Performance of Lassies From University Up To Its Usual High Standard.

On Friday night the Co-Ed Follies of the University of South Carolina, sponsored by the junior class of Presbyterian college, played to a large and extremely appreciative audience which witnessed the performance in the Florida Street school.

The Follies, composed of young ladies who are students at Carolina, came to Clinton after having scored hits in this and in neighboring states. The fourteen co-eds who took part in the show evinced marked dramatic ability which with the eclat and verve that also entered into the play delighted the audience to the nth degree.

The first scene was a burlesque football scene and, although the costumes were probably not sufficiently padded for a genuine gridiron contest, there was enough simulation of the sport to add a certain vigor to the scene. The most remarkable and admiration-provoking feature of the whole performance was the suppleness and agility of the girls which, in combination with their dancing ability, produced an ensemble that would bid fair to rival any of Flo Ziegfeld's productions at their best.

Literary Bodies In Weekly Meets

The Eukosmian society had a very interesting debate Tuesday night. Those participating were Cook, Myers, Snipes, and Walkup. Speeches were given by Collins, White, and Stephenson. The next meeting will be one of great interest; the first speech being a memorial to Marshall Foch, and the other speeches being toasts to Colonel Leroy Springs.

The Pikadelts opened thir meeting by an open forum, "Should P. C. be co-educational?" It was opened by C. W. Sessions, "Yes," and B. H. Dickson, "No," and created a great deal of fun for the members of the society. The speeches for the program were on topics selected by the speakers themselves. G. C. Adams spoke on "Our National Anthem," W. M. Blakely on "Education In the South," T. G. Ellis on "Radio and Democracy," and J. C. Smith on "The Talkie." The program for the next meeting is posted on the bulletin board.

ELECTIONS TO COME TUESDAY

Members of Student Body To Choose Campus Leaders For Coming Year.

The annual student body elections will be held on next Tuesday, April 16th. Each organization has already met to suggest nominations for the various offices. These nominations appear elsewhere in this issue of The Blue Stocking.

There has been some discussion as to whether or not the ballot system will be used this year. It is felt that there are several serious drawbacks to this system, and the council has considered recommending the return to the mass meeting type of election.

One of the defects of the ballot system as it has been used heretofore is that it prohibits a defeated candidate from running for another office. In such a small student body as at Presbyterian, this causes a great deal of confusion. Frequently a good man and a capable leader is left with nothing to do simply because he failed to carry the vote for president, or some other high office.

At the time of going to press no move has been made one way or the other. However, it would be well for students to be thinking this matter over, in case the question is brought up for a student decision.

Elsewhere in this issue are printed a few qualifications that students should look for in prospective leaders. These points were compiled by Dr. Brimm and a group gathered at the Y. M. C. A. meeting last Wednesday evening. Thoughtful students will read them over and keep them in mind when voting next Tuesday.

come even close to home.

The Clinton boys were playing under a tremendous strain, with defeat staring them in the face; but they were undaunted and soon showed that they well knew the art of tapping the apple on the nose in the crisis. They annexed a run in each of the seventh and eighth innings, but the victory still seemed very improbable, with Hall going good for the Terriers.

In the ninth, the first three men up, Caldwell, Greene and Roberts, panched out singles. Captain Owens then came up, and proving that he was most worthy of the honor bestowed upon him by hitting a terrific liner into right field that was good for three safe bases and three runs. Owens scored a moment after on a wild throw. Wofford failed to score a run in their turn in the ninth.

Although the game showed that P. C. had hitting power, it also showed that power could be improved, as evidenced by the fact that the Hosemen had 29 men on the packs and were only able to put across seven. Wofford was able to get 17 on board.

well that it is hard to single out anyone for special mention. C. W. Grafton played the part of hero very heroically. Miss Medora Browning was equally charming as the heroine. Although her penchant for papping in and out of windows on fire escapes rendered her subject to the suspicion of the audience, she completely won their hearts as the little sister who had always been in love with the hero. D. L. Wood, as the detective, detected everything, with the aid of his cigar, except the criminal. He was rendered valuable assistance in this by T. J. Cole, as the cop Murphy. J. M. Davis, as Noah Perkins, furnished refreshments in the way of fresh egs and all the latest tunes.

The play was directed by Mrs. M. W. Brown, who deserves great credit for her work in making it a success. She was assisted by other members of the Dramatic club not in the cast.

president of the senior class, business manager of the college annual and was voted "the best all round" student in her class. She was a popular member of the Sigma Delta Gamma sorority. She is one of the most popular members of the younger society set of Anderson, and her many friends regret her marriage will take her away from Anderson.

Mr. Jackson is the son of Mrs. T. C. Jackson. He is a graduate of of Presbyterian college where he was a member of Kappa Alpha and Sigma Upsilon. He served as adjutant in the R. O. T. C. and was president of the junior class. He was also quite prominent as president of the College Press association and editor of The Blue Stocking, the college weekly paper.

After finishing college he became associated with the Hunter Manufacturing and Commission company of New York City where he now lives.

The marriage of this popular couple will be the outstanding social event of the summer and will be preceeded by a number of parties given by friends of Miss Brown and Mr. Jackson.—Anderson Independent.

son, whose subject was "Conflict Between Materialism and Beauty," and T. J. Cole, with his now classic oration, "Dollars and the Western Hemisphere."

Johnston handled his theme, the Constitution, very effectively, and introduced an unusual amount of feeling into a subject whose content is in its nature mostly expository. He spent a short time tracing the history of the Constitution and the way it has proved its worth in national crises. He also took up a comparison of government in America under our present code and the many weak and unstable governments of other countries. This in the final analysis, he traced to the lack of such a Constitution as that of the United States, which provides the structure of our whole swstem. He closed his oration with an impassioned plea for the preservation of this document in our national life.

Johnston will go to Rock Hill on April 26, with R. T. Gillespie, the executive committeeman from this school, to speak in the finals. The contest will be held at Winthrop college, with representatives from each of the nine colleges in the association competing.

"A year or so ago, the makers of OLD GOLD ran some ads on the disturbing effect of coughing in theatres. As an actor, I was grateful for those ads. I am more grateful now that OLD GOLD has invited stage folk to help them bring 'first aid' information to our unhappy friends the 'theatre-coughers.'

P. C. WINS VARSITY TRACK MEET; CAROLINA CAPTURES FRESHMAN

Men From State University Appear Here In Annual Tilts. Hosemen Win From Gamecocks, 71-60. Bantams Down Sox By 60-40. Thrilling Contests Are Seen.

The Bailey stadium was the scene of an excellent track meet here Saturday afternoon when the varsity track team of Presbyterian college defeated the varsity of the University of South Carolina team by the very close score of 71 to 60. The freshman team of the University beat the P. C. freshmen by the score of 69 to 40.

The varsity meet was very thrilling and it was not until the very last that the Presbyterian team was able to forge ahead. The Carolina frsehmen led the Presbyterian team throughout the contest.

The track was in exceptionally good shape by the good work of Manager Fraser and Asssitant Manager Kennedy. The meet was run off very smoothly by Prof. H. E. Sturgeon of Presbyterian college.

The Blue Stocking team far excelled the Gamecock team in the track events, and the visitors were best in the weights and throws. .

The 100 and 220-yard dashes were very pretty, Ritchie, Green and Hogrefe of Presbyterian, winning first, second and third in the 100-yard run, and in the 220 Ritchie, P. C., Hogrefe, P. C., and Rubenstein, Carolina, winning first, second, and third. The half-mile, led by Martin of Presbyterian, was a pretty race, with Farnum of Carolina, and Cardwell of Carolina, second and third. The one-mile race was the best race of the afternoon, and the last sprint by Ketchum of P. C., and Cardwell of Carolina, who were neck and neck up to the last few yards when Ketchum was able to break the tape by a few inches' lead. The two-mile run was also a feature, and Means, who was leading by probably one-fourth of the 440-yard track, waited on his running-mate, Truesdale, before breaking the tape in order to tie the race and also put Truesdale in line for a letter in track at Presbyterian, which is given for a first place in a meet. Ketchum of Presbyterian, was third.

The broad jump was also a feature when Roy Hogrefe jumped 22 feet, 7 3-4 inches. The relay race was a pretty series of runs and the Presby-

P. C. Track Men At Tech Relays

Presbyterian college is being represented this afternoon at the Georgia Tech relays, in Atlanta. Coach Lonnie McMillian and the relay team that is to run for P. C. left for the metropolis of the South on Friday morning, by the fast train. It is understood that there will be a number of P. C. men at the relays as spectators.

Presbyterian is entered in the sprint medley relay. This is a relay of four men, the successive legs being a quarter mile, two 220-yard dashes, and a half mile run. The local team is composed of Ritchie, Green, Hogrefe, and Ketchum, running in the order named.

In addition to this entry, Hogrefe is named in the entries for the hundred-yard dash and the broad jump.

Leathernecks Fall Twice Before Hose

Playing the first of a series of two games, the Blue Stockings, playing brilliant ball, were able to set the fast Parris Island Marine team back with a 5-0 defeat. The game was played at Parris Island.

The Leathernecks were able to garner but three hits off Young, who was twirling his first varsity game for P. C. The Hosemen secured but seven base blows off McGowan, but all these came at very opportune times, often driving in men from second and third bases. Owens was high man on the attack, getting two out of three safe blows and leading in the scoring. Mason snatched one out of the clouds in centerfield to furnish one of the sensational plays of the game. Brunson, Veteran receiver, caught a nice game, and again demonstrated that it is next to impossible to steal a base on him. Lock stood out for the Marines, with McGowan, Marine hurler, running him a close second.

In the second game the Blue Stockings again blanked the Parris Island Marines to the same tune, 5-0. Caldwell twirled in beautiful style, alloting them just three hits again. Both teams played good ball; but the Hosemen sewed the game up in the first inning when they pounded Swarts for three runs. It was a pitcher's battle after that, with Caldwell having the edge.

Owens and Greene led the attack, securing two bingles apiece, both of them coming at a time in the game when hits were sorely needed. Lock played beautiful ball for the Marines, handling hard chancees brilliantly without a bobble to his discredit.

This victory marked the third in a row for the Presbyterians, they having previously won from Wofford. In these two games the Marines secured but six hits off of Caldwell and Young, and were unable in either contest to cross the home platter.

PREPARATIONS ARE BEING MADE

Commencement Exercises Begin May 26. Dr. Lyons and J. Lyles Glenn To Speak.

Plans are being completed for the commencement exercises of the Presbyterian college which are to be held May 26-28. The exercises this year will be presided over for the first time by President McSween.

The baccalaureate sermon will be preached in the First Presbyterian church on Sunday morning(May 26th, by the Rev. J. Sproles Lyons, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Lyons is one of the outstanding ministers and leaders in the Southern Presbyterian church and will be heard here with unusual interest.

The commencement exercises proper will occur on Tuesday morning, May 28th, at 10:30. The address before the graduates will be delivered by the Hon. J. Lyles Glenn of Chester, well known solicitor of the Sixth judicial circuit of South Carolina. There will be in addition to the address, the usual class exercises, delivery of medals, awarding of degrees, etc.

On Monday evening at eight o'clock, the annual declamation and oratorical contest will be held in the college auditorium at which time six young men will compete for two gold medals.

This year's graduating class is composed of 54 members, the largest in the institution's history.

Plans Go Forward For Junior-Senior

President I. M. Keels of the junior class reports that progress on the plans for Junior-Senior has been rapid. Numerous committees have been appointed and are functioning well. All that now remains is to gather in the threads from each group and make the final preparations. .

During the week, at a joint meeting of the two upper classes, names were taken of those who plan to attend, in order that favors and plates may be supplied accordingly. This week the final arrangements for music will be made, and the decorations planned. As soon as it becomes practicable, work on the decorations will start.

Those who failed to attend the last meeting will be glad to hear that bids will be available soon. Further information may be obtained from President Keels or any of his cohorts.

Citadel Takes Heart-Breaker

In a heart-breaking game last Saturday, the Blue Stockings went down to defeat before the strong Citadel club in Charleston by the score of 3-1. Adair, pitching for P. C., hurled a beautiful game, and only sensational fielding on the part of the Cadet outfielders prevented him from chalking up a victory. With the bases loaded time and time again miraculous catches by Parler would turn back the Presbyterian bids for victory.

The entire P. C. team played excellent ball, but the breaks seemed to be against them. Mason pounded Bookhart for two of the six hits he allowed, besides scoring the lone Presbyterian run. Too much credit cannot be given to Bill Adair for the masterly way in which he turned the Charleston boys back, only to meet an undeserved defeat.

For Citadel, Bookhart pitched a beautiful game, and was ably supported by his mates. Wilson played a nice game at short.

Think These Over!

These are the qualifications for which we must search in the men who are to be our leaders.

1. Personal honesty.
2. Moral courage.
3. Self-confidence.
4. Reliance upon and glorification of God.
5. A tactful personality.
6. Good judgment.
7. Fair-mindedness.
8. Excellence in that particular line.
9. Desire for service.
10. A consuming sense of responsibility.
11. Determination always to do one's best.
12. Unwillingness to supplant another man who is better qualified to fill the position.

CO-ED FOLLIES IS GOOD SHOW

Annual Performance of Lassies From University Up To Its Usual High Standard.

On Friday night the Co-Ed Follies of the University of South Carolina, sponsored by the junior class of Presbyterian college, played to a large and extremely appreciative audience which witnessed the performance in the Florida Street school.

The Follies, composed of young ladies who are students at Carolina, came to Clinton after having scored hits in this and in neighboring states. The fourteen co-eds who took part in the show evinced marked dramatic ability which with the eclat and verve that also entered into the play delighted the audience to the nth degree.

The first scene was a burlesque football scene and, although the costumes were probably not sufficiently padded for a genuine gridiron contest, there was enough simulation of the game to add a certain vigor to the scene. The most remarkable and admiration-provoking feature of the whole performance was the nimbleness and agility of the girls which, in combination with their dancing ability, produced an ensemble that would bid fair to rival any of Flo Ziegfeld's productions at their best.

Probably the choice of the best fea-

Literary Bodies In Weekly Meets

The Eukosmian society had a very interesting debate Tuesday night. Those participating were Cook, Myers, Snipes, and Walkup. Speeches were given by Collins, White, and Stephenson. The next meeting will be one of great interest; the first speech being a memorial to Marshall Foch, and the other speeches being toasts to Colonel Leroy Springs.

The Pikaielts opened thir meeting by an open forum, "Should P. C. be co-educational?" It was opened by C. W. Sessions, "Yes," and B. H. Dickson, "No," and created a great deal of fun for the members of the society. The speeches for the program were on topics selected by the speakers themselves. G. C. Adams spoke on "Our National Anthem," W. M. Blakely on "Education In the South," T. G. Ellis on "Radio and Democracy," and J. C. Smith on "The Talkie." The program for the next meeting is posted on the bulletin board.

ELECTIONS TO COME TUESDAY

Members of Student Body To Choose Campus Leaders For Coming Year.

The annual student body elections will be held on next Tuesday, April 16th. Each organization has already met to suggest nominations for the various offices. These nominations appear elsewhere in this issue of The Blue Stocking.

There has been some discussion as to whether or not the ballot system will be used this year. It is felt that there are several serious drawbacks to this system, and the council has considered recommending the return to the mass meeting type of election.

One of the defects of the ballot system as it has been used heretofore is that it prohibits a defeated candidate from running for another office. In such a small student body as at Presbyterian, this causes a great deal of confusion. Frequently a good man and a capable lealer is left with nothing to do simply because he failed to carry the vote for president, or some other high office.

At the time of going to press no move has been made one way or the other. However, it would be well for students to be thinking this matter over, in case the question is brought up for a student decision.

Elsewhere in this issue are printed a few qualifications that students should look for in prospective leaders. These points were compiled by Dr. Brimm and a group gathered at the Y. M. C. A. meeting last Wednesday evening. Thoughtful students will read them over and keep them in mind when voting next Tuesday.

NO ELECTION FORUM

It has been decided to omit the "election forum" that was previously announced for this issue of The Blue Stocking. This decision was made for several reasons, which it may be well to explain at this time.

The first reason was that the Y. M. C. A. unexpectedly came to the rescue and accomplished precisely the same ends for which the forum was intended. That is, the Y. M. C. A. program on Wednesday evening served very effectively to stimulate real thinking about candidates for the various student offices.

It has sometimes been true in P. C. elections, as in elections everywhere, that the man elected is not the best man but the most popular man. Although there are numbers of students who actually take a little time to consider the candidates seriously, there are others, and their name is legion, who vote for a man solely on the basis of whether or not they like him. This, of course, is nothing incriminating, but it is nevertheless, an evilence of poor citizenship. The difficult part about it is that, like halitosis, you never know when you're afflicted. It is the most difficult thing in the world to look with no prejudice, at your bosom friend and consider, and then make a really fair decision.

It is only [illegible] to [illegible] best man for a particular job. It is also easy to persuade yourself that at the time you are being forced [illegible] to be interested.

The [illegible] election is one of the most important of the whole year. It is more important than a great football victory, or any other athletic achievement. For in contests of that kind we are merely matching ourselves with others. But on the day of elections, we are making ourselves responsible for the kind of life that will be lost on the campus next year. On the day of elections we are deciding whether our standards, as a student body, are to be raised or lowered. We are deciding whether we will tolerate cheating, stealing, and other evils—or whether we will continue to bend our efforts toward their elimination from our campus life.

For the last two or three years P. C. has done much, through the action of the student body itself, to improve student life. Public opinion has slowly been built up to combat certain things that were much more common just a few years ago. To the present student body is granted the privilege of determining whether this progress is to continue or is to be allowed to go to weeds. Next Tuesday is the day when the test will come. Will the student body of Presbyterian college fall down?

NOW IS THE TIME

Do you know that there are only five weeks before exams? It's a fact, a bona fide, honest-to-goodness, straight-from-the-catalogue, fact. Five weeks from Monday, if you chance to have an exam on the first day, you will be wondering what you've been doing since the beginning of the semester, anyway. It's funny how a man can study, or think he's studying, a book for eighteen weeks—and then at the end look at that same book and wonder what it's all about. And yet it is a pretty safe bet that eighty per cent of the students have had that feeling at one time or another.

To study at the beginning of a semester is a pretty hard thing to do. When one critical ordeal is over, one naturally wishes to make some real first-class whoopee before the next one comes around. The trouble is that the whoopee is so entertaining and pleasant that one never can decide to drop it.

However, there must be, at some time or other, the rude awakening. There will always come a time when the fleeting dream passes away and we come to with a jolt and find ourselves in bad straits. Those who are wise will meet the shock right now, if it has not already been met. There is yet time to get in some good restorative measures before time for final exams.

THE SWIMMING POOL

The announcement of Colonel Springs' gift of a swimming pool to Presbyterian college will no doubt have its effect on the volume of next year's freshman class. It is known that in the past a good many students have gone elsewhere because at P. C. they were unable to develop their swimming and diving talents. Such need no longer be the case, for the new pool, which is to be finishing before the opening of the fall session, will be of ample size, and will be modern in every detail.

It is especially at this season of the year that we appreciate the need of a swimming pool. The summer weather and the lack of convenient "ole swimmin' holes" make the new feature one of value that cannot be figured in dollars and cents. It will be a cool retreat on hot afternoons, as well as a place to train a swimming team.

In addition, the new pool will give opportunity for exercise to many students who do not compete in other forms of athletics. Those who do not have the long hours to give to football, basketball, baseball or track, will no doubt be able to find a few minutes every day for a short swim.

Although nothing definite has been said about it as yet, it is not too far-fetched a prediction to say that P. C. will have a swimming taem next year. Although there are already about ten ways in which a student may represent the college, there are plenty of students who will welcome this new one. After this, there will be little room for more activities until there are more students to do the acting. The Presbyterian college athletic program is well-nigh full.

THE CO-EDS

Last night's performance of the Carolina Co-ed Follies was perhaps the best they have ever given in Clinton. The program was delightful from beginning to end, and the audience was more than pleased. The junior class is worthy of praise for making it possible for P. C. students to get the benefit of South Carolina talents in this line. It is easy to understand why other localities where this concert has been given, have made such hearty endorsements of the club. Let us hope that the Carolina Co-eds do not fail to come to Clinton again next year.

SCHOLARSHIP

The report on the scholarship averages for various groups on the campus has been made, and is published elsewhere in this issue of The Blue Stocking. A brief study of the figures will show some very unusual facts, some of which might very well merit individual attention by students.

One fact that should be of interest in a passing way is the order in which the classes stand in scholarship. The four classes are arranged in chronological order, and their respective averages are almost as regular as the steps of a stairway. The same will no doubt be true next year, and nearly every other year. This is not because the senior class is any better than any other, but because poor students have dropped out, and others have learned better habits of study. It is an interesting proof of the law of averages. Although the classes vary greatly in the number and quality of the students—yet the general average melts down to a figure that could be very closely predicted in advance.

Here And There With the Colleges

Imagine tough Will'yum, football captain, prof. rider, hard-guy, in the shower room three or four years ago, stepping from a pair of sky blue shorts that blended perhaps with a navy blue athletic shirt!

Today, if he didn't have on shirts and shorts of color he'd be more conspicuous than that. The trend to color in every phase of men's apparel industry is the most vivid feature of the trade. Especially is this true in the [illegible] Spring-time [illegible] of tans with contrasting [illegible] dark and scarlet combinations, pastel shades of blue. The idea is to wear a tie not because it's a good-looking tie but because it becomes the wearer and blends with other haberdashery.

For the male of the species is stepping out of drab apparel into becoming and distinctive colors—Clemson Tiger.

To wed or not to wed,
That is the question:
Whether 'tis better
To remain single
And disappoint a few women,
Or to marry
And disappoint one woman
For life—should give us pause.
Pipe Progress.

The Oregon Emerald, official student publication of the University of Oregon, has taken a radical step in the field of college journalism by its recent abolition of editorials. Henceforth space formerly devoted to editorials will be occupied by expressions of opinion from the student body at large. The purpose of this move, according to the last editorial which appeared in its columns, is to stimulate the unguided critical thought of the readers.—Old Gold and Black (U. of Ga.)

For several years cheering at Iowa's basketball games has been notoriously rotten.

There are at least two reasons for this. One is that most women students go to the game with "dates"; the other is that there is no co-operation between the crowd and cheering. The [illegible] believes that the first reason is the root of all the evil.

"Dates" discourages cheering. A couple will sit and watch the game, discuss the topics of the day, whisper sweet nothings, and shout alleged "smart cracks" at their friends; but when it comes to cheering, that couple is usually a minus quantity. By some peculiar psychological twist, the proximity of a woman makes cheering silly and undignified to a man. Especially is this true when he is the woman's entertainer, physical protector, and financial backer for the time being. Apparently the same inhibition affects women placed in the same situation. It is entirely absent when the man or woman is accompanied only by members of the same sex.

When you pay your money to see a basketball game there is no reason why you should not get the full effect of that exhilarating element. To do that you must be in a receptive mood; that isn't the mood you're in when you must be picking up compacts or explaining the difference between a running forward and a free throw to some beautiful but dumb companion. —The Daily Iowan.

YALE REACHES FOR A CIG AND GRABS SWEET VICTORY

Eli Blindfold Testers, Puffing Their Fags With Napoleonic Energies, Defeat Harvard's Green But Promising Team At One Fell Swope.

By Nunnally Johnson, The Evening Post's Roving Reporter
Reproduced thru courtesy of New York Evening Post.

As the red sun sank behind the dim horizon yesterday afternoon, casting gaunt shadows over Soldier Field, the cigarette smokers of John Harvard went down in glorious defeat in the big cigarette decathlon, coming out no better than second, while the blue banner of Eli Yale rode high in victory—for Yale was first!

Harvard lost, but Harvard men are still Harvard men, and if their heads are bloody they are still unbowed. Defeat to Harvard is but a sting, a spur, a flick of the whip that brings out the best. Next year is another year, and the grim tocsin over Cambridge today is, "Watch Harvard next year!"

It was a green team that Harvard threw on the field yesterday, to engage in the brueling blindfold test. "Butch" Nickerson, the giant right wing, who is expected to be a tower of strength next year, was a gum chewer until this year, when school spirit impelled him to give up pepsin and come out for the big blindfold cigarette team. He hadn't hit his stride it was said; despite a natural aptitude for smoking cigarettes blindfolded, he still lacked experience.

"Next year," he said, "I will smoke all of the time, and a cigar, too, because it's for the old school!"

"Butch" Fires the Fans

Even at that, "Butch" put up a smoke that had the galleries in a frenzy. Again and again, as the overconfident team of Yale cigarette addicts relaxed a second, he puffed and puffed, like an iron man; but time demands its toll, murder will out, youth will tell, and if you want a transfer you'll have to ask the conductor when you pay your fare.

At his right elbow every second of the time was Tizzard—"Biff" Tizzard, '32—a cool and calculating cigarette smoker. "Tiz," as he is known to his frat brothers, is not a spectacular smoker; he has even been accused of colorlessness; but the stands noted yesterday that when the pinch came, when a man was needed who could keep his head, good old "Tizn't," as he is called, was always there.

These two bore the brunt of the battle, and if it was a losing battle, still Harvard asks no ptiy, no sympathy. Its colors may have been lowered, but its honor, the very name of Harvard, floats like a white silken guidon, whipping in the breeze, untouched, unharmed, immaculate.

Yale won because she had the weight, the experience, and the generalship. Furthermore, the team was "pentest," as they say, for Harvard. As everyone knows, the easy way to smoke with Rargee's Mixture. Several [illegible] and the Red Star Billiard Academy are little more than incidental to Yale, whose slogan is, "Smoke Harvard out!"

It was a grizzled collection of veterans that Yale trotted out with their eye bandages yesterday. Under the tutelage of Head Grizzle Coach McNutt, the boys went through a seige of grizzling that left them hard and dry and "set." Off cigarettes for two days prior to the contest, so as not to get stale, they plunged into the tilt in the very pink. The exhibition of the first few minutes was a spectacle rarely equaled in cigarette smoking since Miss Millicent Rogers, society belle; Herbert Bayard Swope, international journalist, and Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte reached for a ciggy instead of a Borzoi book.

The tale of the contest was told in those few minutes. Cigarettes flashed like tiny streaks of lightning. Matches fluttered. Smoke rings rose. While the bewildered John Harvards fumbled amateurishly for their coffin-tacks, the New Haven boys took a nice lead, smoking, choosing, discarding with a speed and brilliance that brought the stands to their feet time and again.

Later it was a little more even. Getting their second wind, the Cambridge boys began to smoke nearer their normal speed, and from then on it was more of a contest.

Watch Harvard Next Year!

Immediately after the contest, a "pep" rally was held in the city hall. Head Coach McNutt spoke at length, and the four class presidents followed. The gist of their remarks may be summed up in a paragraph from an old grad's address:

"Smoke, fellows, smoke! Get the old ciggy habit! You big fellows who are too lazy to come out for the team—get a line on yourselves! Every man who smokes is needed! Fellows, it's the old school who calls, the old varsity that needs you. Is Harvard to call in vain? Are you Harvard men at heart? No, I need no answer; Harvard men are still Harvard men—and watch Harvard in the big cigarette pentathlon next year! Look out, Yale!"

According to Coach McNutt, the prospects for next year are great. Two big cigarette smokers from Groton are entering, and the present freshman team contains no fewer than five men who are rated as four-goa[illegible] cigarette addicts.

"[illegible] we ask is co-operation," the grizzled old coach said. "We've got [illegible] and will stand behind us. [illegible] Yale [illegible] Smoke Rargee's Mixture against [illegible]."

Newberry Wins By Big Score

Newberry, April 10.—The Newberry Indians opened their state inter-collegiate baseball season with an overwhelming victory over Presbyterian college, the final count being 15 to 2.

The game started off closely but before the end became a batting avcrage booster for the Newberry men. The Presbyterians showed up well at the bat but were unable to run bases to advantage.

New Leaders Take Over I. R. C.

The International Relations club held its first meeting under the direction of its new set of officers on Thursday night. President Joe Babb presided, and J. T. N. Keels rendered an excellent account of the "I'm Alone" incident and explained clearly the positions of England, France, and the United States in this matter. He said that although the situation appeared rather serious at first, it now seems that a peaceful settlement will be reached.

J. I. Copeland gave an account of the present situation in Mexico pertaining to the revolution, the position of the United States in the affair, and the cause of the uprising.

Y. M. C. A. STUDIES CAMPUS LEADERSHIP

the evening was presided over by a brief talk in which he outlined the six qualifications which a leader should have; and he also pointed out the sharp lines of demarcation between positive and negative leadership.

Dr. Brunson commenced his discussion of the topic by giving several Scriptural quotations pertaining to leadership. Christ taught that a man should aspire to high places not so much for self aggrandizement as for a desire for genuine service. There are many natural leaders who are born to occupy these positions; but a man may develop the qualities of leadership by training himself and fitting himself for service. To be a strong and successful leader a person must know how to be a good follower. A leader must possess the ability to direct and influence the actions, mental and physical, of others. Every man should strive to develop in himself the ability to lead, and should train himself to inspire the confidence of his fellows; but only on the condition that he can develop self-control at the same time, and is willing to deny himself in order that he may be an exemplary character before his fellows.

Carolina Hits Way To Victory

Columbia, April 8.—Behind the masterly pitching of Robert Stoddard, the University of South Carolina baseball team hammered out a 14 to 3 victory over the Presbyterian college team Monday afternoon at Melton field.

Stoddard allowed only four hits and four free bases at first, striking out nine men.

"Ike" Is Winner In State Contest

The following clipping from The Clinton Chronicle should be of interest to P. C. students who know H. L. Eichelberger. Mr. Eichelberger graduated from Presbyterian college with the class of '21. He served a line coach for a year or two after his graduation. Since that time he has been in the insurance business, and judging from this clipping, he is making good:

New York Life Insurance company has just completed their "dedication contest," extending from January 1st to April 1st, commemmorating the dedication of their new home office building in New York City. H. L. Eichelberger, local special agent for the New York Life, finished the contest for the South Carolina branch office with the largest volume written in the contest, also the largest excess over allotment.

ture of the Follies would be between the blues singing of Miss Lucy Coleman and the tap dancing of the now famous Quattlebaum sisters, the Misses Rosa and Sara Quattlebaum. Miss Coleman's singing of the blues hits and the concerted-action dancing of the latter pair were well received by the entire house. The work of Miss Harriet Scarborough was outstanding for her dramatic ability and a stage presence which is unusual in one who is non-professional.

The costumes were good and added zest to the play. It is to be hoped that the junior class of next year will see fit to bring them to the college for a return engagement.

The following young ladies composed the cast of the Follies: Misses Floy Vance, Lucy Coleman, Mignon Wall, Sara, Julia and Rosa Quattlebaum, Dot Dixon, Evelyn Bree, Carrie DuPre, Lib Monteith, Frances Monteith, Mildred Hartness, Julia Spears, Harriet Scarborough.

Airplane Contest For College Men

Colorado Springs, Col.—As a result of an unusual amount of collegiate interest in the Alexander Eaglerock awards for 1929, both an Eaglerock airplane and an aeronautical scholarship will be awarded this year to college students, according to an announcement by J. Don Alexander, head of the Alexander Aircraft company here.

Contestants are now asked to specify whether they are competing for the Eaglerock or the four-year university scholarship. The scholarship has been established in the Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics at New York university.

Four short papers on aeronautics, written as briskly and containing as many practical ideas as possible, are required of the competing students. The manuscripts must be submitted to the committee on awards before May 31.

Prof. Alexander Klemin, head of the Guggenheim school at New York university, is chairman of the committee which will select the successful candidate for the scholarship. A second committee, composed of prominent Colorado educators, aeronautical engineers and pilots of the Alexander Aircraft company, will award the Eaglerock. The awards will be made June 1.

The contest is intended to interest American college students in commercial aviation, now rated ninth in the ranks of American industries.

P. C. WINS VARSITY; CAROLINA FRESHMAN

terians were able to win out in this.

The individual star of the varsity meet was Ritchie of Presbyterian, who won first place in the 100, 220 and 440-yard dashes.

The shot put, high jump, and discus events of the freshmen were of a better calibre than the varsity. In the fresh shot DeVaughn of Carolina, won with the distance of 39 feet, 11 inches. In the high jump Bostick of Carolina, won first with the height of 5 feet, 11 inches.

Senter of Presbyterian, was outstanding in the freshman events, winning the 440-yard dash and the 880-yard dash, and third in the broad jump. Quattlebaum of Carolina, was very outstanding also, winning the 100 and 220-yard dashes and second in the one-half mile. The race that he and Senter of P. C., put up in the 880 was excellent and it was not until the very last feet that Senter edged out for a first.

PHYSICS DEPT. HEAD NAMED

Raymond J. Seeger, Graduate of Rutgers, Will Take Up Work At Opening of Session.

Raymond J. Seeger, Rutgers, '26, has been secured to head the physics department of Presbyterian college next year, according to an announcement made by President McSween in chapel on Wednesday morning, April 17th. Mr. Seeger, since receiving his diploma at Rutgers, has been working toward the doctor's degree in the physics department at Yale university. He has achieved honor in every course he has taken, and is in line for the Ph.D. degree this spring.

While a student at Rutgers, Mr. Seeger was prominent in student affairs as a member of the dramatic club and of the varsity debating team. He graduated with honor. His brilliant scholastic record and experience as instructor in physics at both Rutgers and Yale indicate that he is well prepared to take over the department at P. C.

At present Mr. Seeger is holding the Loomis fellowship in physics. This fellowship, with a stipend of $1500 is awarded annually to that candidate for the degree of doctor of philosophy who passes the best competitive examination in physics (descriptive,

Barron Leads 'Y' Next Year

At the annual elections, held last Wednesday evening, Billy Barron, of Manning, S. C., was chosen as president of the Y. M. C. A. for the session 1929-30. Barron has one of the most important, and one of the hardest jobs on the campus, in the leadership of the "Y." However, his many friends among the students feel that Barron will succeed in making the organization of even greater strength on the campus.

For vice-president, P. A. Roberts was named, and for the office of secretary-treasurer, O. W. Chapin. With these officers, the Y. M. C. A. should develop into an agency of even greater good on the campus of Presbyterian college than it has been.

McSweens Hold Open House

One of the most colorful and altogether delightful affairs of the academic year in Clinton came on Thursday evening last when President and Mrs. McSween received the faculty and students of Presbyterian college, and the young people of Clinton. The doors of the mansion were thrown open to the guests at nine o'clock and the host and hostess entertained a large representation of both faculty and student body. The house itself is a spacious one, having been presented to the college as a home for the president through the munificence of Mr. John H. Young of this city, as a memorial to his late brother, George W. Young. The home was tastefully decorated with smilax and lovely cut flowers for the occasion and made a most entrancing scene.

After passing through the receiving line the guests were conducted to the anteroom where delightful refreshments were served. The President and Mrs. McSween were assisted in the receiving line by members of the faculty and their wives, who were as follows: Professor and Mrs. A. V. Mar-

DR. W. C. ROBINSON

Dr. W. C. Robinson, professor of ecclesiastical history, church polity and missions, at Columbia Theological seminary, Atlanta, Ga., will speak before the Y. M. C. A. at the regular weekly meeting on Wednesday evening, April 24th. Dr. Robinson is a magnetic speaker to whom audiences of college students have been especially attracted. He comes to Clinton to bring a message that no student should miss.

FURMAN DROPS VARSITY MEET

Presbyterians Win Handily At Greenville. Frosh Lose To Baptist Yearlings.

Presbyterian's varsity track team scored its second victory of the season when it handed to Furman university the small end of a count that read 80-50. The frosh reversed things by bowing to the Hurricane by an equally decisive score. The meet was held on Manly field and track, at Furman university.

Roy Hogrefe stepped out in fine style to rake in the honors on the hundred yards, two-twenty, and broad jump. In each event Jimmy Green, also of P. C., took second, to rank as second high scorer of the meet. In the century, the low-hurdles, and the high jump, Presbyterian made a clean sweep of the three places that count, while in the broad jump and two-

Williamson Heads The Collegian; Thornley Given PaC-SaC. Business Staffs Elected.

The Collegian and the PaC-SaC were given into the care and keeping of fresh leaders for the coming year, at the annual elections held on Wednesday evening. These men will take over the guidance of the publications next fall.

L. R. Williamson, of Sumter, S. C., was elected as editor of The Collegian. Williamson has been prominent as a writer for the magazine for two or three years. He has shown a great deal of interest in writing and will undoubtedly make a good leader for The Collegian.

To the business department A. O. Jackson and J. A. Babb were named. Jackson will be business manager and Babb will have charge of the advertising end of the magazine. Both have worked extensively with this phase of the magazine and will relieve the editor from any financial worries.

The PaC-SaC passed into the hands of Fant Thornley, of Clinton, S. C. Thornley is a hard worker and has considerable artistic taste. He faces his task with the probability of getting out one of the best annuals of recent years.

The PaC-SaC will be managed by Crawford and Keels. R. S. Crawford has already established himself as a business man through his postiiono as business manager of The Blue Stocking. I. M. Keels is a go-getter who is certain to stabilize the finances of the year-book through his energy as advertising manager for the coming year.

Junior-Senior Plans Are Made

Final preparations for the Junior-Senior celebration have been made, and everything is in readiness for the big event. Invitations will be sent out this week-end. A large gathering is expected next Friday evening, April 26th, when the banquet will be held in Judd hall.

The contract for the banquet has been let to the Woman's club, with Mrs. Blakely in charge of the menu. The club has an excellent reputation as caterers in affairs of this sort, and promise a good meal to start off the festivities. Music will be furnished by Gene Wofford.

The toasts have been reduced in number, and only three will be made. I. M. Keels, president of the junior class, will open the "talkie" program with a few words of welcome and some remarks directed toward the seniors. Marshall, of the senior class, will respond to this toast in behalf of his class. Mr. McSween, president of the college, will make an address of welcome on behalf of the college—interspersed, no doubt, with the delightful wit and humor for which he his famous.

Decoration of the dining hall will start early next week under the direction of Billy Barron, chairman of the committee. He will be assisted by Mrs. M. W. Brown, whose valuable suggestions for Pan-Hellenic did so much toward making the decorations at that time so effective.

Mrs. A. V. Martin, president of the College Dames, has offered the services of that organization to aid in the chaperonage of the dormitory where the girls will be located. The middle section of Smyth hall has been selecte for the use of the girls at this time.

GEORGIA BODIES UPHOLD SYNOD

Atlanta Presbytery Is Most Recent To Fall In Line. Move Is Very Reassuring.

Standing squarely behind the action taken by the Synod of Georgia last fall, when it pledged its support to Presbyterian college, the Georgia presbyteries, have without exception, ratified the move.. Atlanta presbytery, largest and probably the most influential presbytery in the state, fell in line early in the week to complete the number.

Such an emphatic stand for Presbyterian college by our neighboring state is a great encouragement to the college. Throughout the year, P .C. has had repeated evidences of renewed confidence from every side South Carolina Presbyterians have pledged their support with enthusiasm, as never before. In every department and from every agency, there have come

Hogrefe Gets Jump At Tech

Roy Hogrefe, sprint flash of South Carolina and captain of P. C.'s varsity track team for 1929, took first honors in the broad jump at the Southern Relays last Saturday afternoon, April 3th. With a jump of twenty-three feet, one and one-quarter inches, Hogrefe out-distanced his nearest competitor by nearly eight inches to take the event. This is the best jump Hogrefe has registered since his phenomenal leap of 23 feet, 11 3-4 inches in the meet with U. S. C. in 1927.

The winning of this event at the Southern Relays, over a field that included the best jumpers in the Southland, definitely establishes Hogrefe as the greatest jumper to compete this year in the South. Roy has three more meets in which he will wear the Garnet and Blue, before receiving his diploma. South Carolina fans will have a chance to see him in action in both the State and S. I. A. A. meets, which are to be held in Clinton on May 4th and 11th respectively.

Other entries for P. C. at the relays were Ritchie and Hogrefe in the century, Grafton in the high jump, and a sprint-medley team of Ritchie, Hogrefe, Green, and Ketchum. Although no points were made in these divisions, P. C. nevertheless stood well in the final reckoning with the five points secured in the broad jump.

P. A. ROBERTS IS STUDENT CHIEF

I. M. Keels Named Vice-President. Jimmy Green Is Secretary. Council Chosen.

At the annual elections, held on Wednesday evening, April 17th, Philip A. Roberts, of Carthage, N. C., was named president of the student body for the year 1929-30. Roberts is a popular member of the rising senior class who is prominent in student activities. He is a letter man as member for the past two years of both the basketball and baseball teams; and as a member of this year's rifle team, of which he is captain. Roberts is also president of the local chapter of Sigma Upsilon, literary fraternity, and is a member of the International Relations club. He has been secretary of the council for the past year. Roberts is a member of Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity.

For vice-president, I. M. Keels, of Columbia, was elected. Keels has been president of the junior class and is a letter man in basketball. He is one of the most popular men on the campus. Keels is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity.

Jimmy Green, of Atlanta, Ga., was named as secretary of the council. He has won distinction as a three-letter man in his sophomore year. Especially on the football field, and on the cinder path, Jimmy is well known and admired. He was one of the sophomore councilmen for the past year. Green is a member of Chi Tau Epsilon social fraternity.

Other councilmen who were elected were J. A. Babb, of the senior class, T. M. Johnston and B. R. Young of the rising junior class, and Cheatham and Gillespie from among the rising sophomores. One freshman member will be elected from the new freshman class in the late fall.

P. C. Wins From Clemson In Tennis

Clemson college gave way before the Blue Stocking tennis team to the score of 4-2, in a match played in Clinton on Friday, April 19th. In every case except one, the matches were carried to three sets, indicating the closeness of the competition between the two teams. P. C. showed great improvement in form and took the match largely through the maintenance of steady play.

The best matches of the afternoon were in the first and second singles between Jackson of P. C., and E. Johnson of Clemson; and between T. Johnston of P. C., and McCarley of Clemson. The first three singles matches went to Presbyterian college.

College Heads Meet At Clemson

On Wednesday, April 24th, there will be held at Clemson college a meeting of the presidents of all colleges in the Fourth Corps area that have R. O. T. C. units. From P. C., President McSween, and Lieut. A. N. Taylor, of the military department, will be present.

The meeting is for the purpose of discussing the various problems confronting units in this section of the country. The viewpoints of the presidents will be heard on these problems, and steps taken to offer aid in solving them. A new president and a secretary of the organization will be elected.

A SQUARE DEAL

A few [illegible] items in the newspaper world have served as excellent evidence of the difficulty of getting a square deal. [illegible] It is astonishing how adroit a newspaper can be when covering the defeat of the home team. Some papers put in a truthful headline, but content themselves with merely hiding it in a place where moth and rust have very little chance of corrupting it or anything else, for that matter. Others follow the example of a rather popular South Carolina paper in printing headlines that are misleading, to put it in a mild way.

The specific case that brings forth this comment is the recent write-up in The Greenville News of the P. C.-Furman track meet. It will be remembered that the paper ran a headline that read "Furman Breaks Even in Track Meet," or some such baloney. The article then went on in small print, after the damage had already been done, to say that P. C. won the varsity meet and Furman captured the frosh contest.

[illegible] make us that the sports editor of The Greenville News actually thinks that things were even that day. [illegible] ly to marvel at his knowledge of col- [illegible] had won and the frosh been defeated, can you imagine The Greenville News claiming that the Hurricane had merely broken even? Don't make the poor boys laugh.

It is unfortunate that Clinton hasn't a large daily newspaper. Carolina has The State, Furman The Greenville News, Citadel The News and Courier, and Wofford The Spartanburg Herald, to make capital of their victories and minimize their defeats. P. C. must stand by and see everyone minimize her victories and whoop it up on the defeats. Some day, some time, somewhere, dear friends, we hope to see a newspaper that will give just a wee bit of credit where it is due. Newspapers are getting to be as bad about sports as they have always been about politics. A staunch loyalty for the home team is to be expected and admired—but there is such a thing as carrying it to the point of being narrow-minded and unfair.

Even The Blue Stocking, which is strictly a college newspaper and might be expected to throw sand in folks' eyes, doesn't blush about admitting a defeat. Some people want their choice to win so badly that when they lose they try to twist things around and make it look like a sweeping victory. Others prefer to be a good sport about it.

EVERYDAY HONESTY
(Borrowed)

There are few people who were not fed up on the old maxim, "Honesty is the best policy," during the period of their adolescence, and the number who contest this statement is still smaller. But is honesty the best policy? Surely it should be, but the astonishing fact that honesty has a black eye, in our present-day world, stares us in the face.

For instance, in the common man of life ,we are told that frankness is a virtue, but the frank person is usually shunned. The complaint is, "He is too blunt." Well, is "blunt" the word, or is it "truthful"? Truth hurts —and few of us present a flattering picture if we are painted accurately. Yet we raise our voices in praise of honesty and patronize a dressmaker who tells us we have a figure that looks well in any style, or a hairdresser who vows that a red glint to our hair is vastly becoming, even though our complexions are a natural olive. It is as we would have it.

Then in school and colleges—there are students who work hard and make a sincere effort. Often they are rewarded. Sometimes they are not. There is the other student, the parasite who copies notebooks and skims book reviews for parallel—the student who is mostly bluff and would probably pop like a balloon if stuck with a pin. Both of these travel side by side and apparently reap the same profits. It is not fair and yet no one is to blame save the parasite, and, to be sure, he will never remedy the condition.

Politics appear to be corrupt. Money puts many a dishonest man in office. Bribes work miracles. What is one to do? It is almost an argument against honesty and sincerity. Should anyone start naming the cases in which he has seen dishonesty triumph over truth, he would give out of fingers and toes before he was half-way through.

"Honesty is the best policy." It sounds good, but what proof have we? Things happen daily that make us discredit the statement and question its truth. Something should be done, and the surest remedy is for each individual to seek only those persons and things that are entirely honest and try to conform to the rule of honesty in his everyday living. As long as we continue to say things like this, we should certainly make a sincere effort to prove them.

THE STATE MEET

The State track meet is two weeks away, yet interest is already developing. This is largely because all the dope points to an unusually close race between the four teams entered. Everyone in the state has remembered the [illegible] University of Georgia team and still some [illegible] spoken of their [illegible] Carolina [illegible] and [illegible] has been [illegible] Furman [illegible] Clemson, however, still remains something of an unknown quantity. It will be with great interest that Presbyterian track men look to the newspapers for the results of Clemson's coming contests with the other two contestants of the state race. Clemson has a strong team, and won the championship last year. P. C. is back again with a strong bid for the honor.

One item that is in favor of the Clinton team is that P. C. has shown strength where others have shown weakness. That is, unless Zobel runs in the state meet, P. C. should have the best chance in the sprints. Hane of Clemson, is a fast man, but he can only take one place, and the Presbyterians have three fast men. Then, too, Hogrefe, with his recent jump of over twenty-three feet at the Tech Relays, is a cinch with the broad jump, with Green a probable second.

The other teams, on the contrary, are all strong in the weights. If they will just fight it out and arrange things with an eye to the equality of man, it will all be in P. C.'s favor. But there is one hitch to this beautiful program, and that is the reputation Clemson has for always turning out some first-class distance men. Presbyterian will have to muzzle the Tiger on the long treks or it will be difficult to win.

THE ELECTIONS

When elections come around every April, they invariably bring thoughts of commencement and summer days again. It is the first event that really brings us face to face with the stark reality of passing spring. It seems only a few days ago that we were casting our ballots for the present officers, and now they are getting ready to "fold up their tents like the Arabs and as silently steal away."

As a matter of fact, this is, in a way, the beginning of the next school year. As soon as the new administration has taken over the reins, we will have a chance to see just what life on the campus will be like next year. All that will be lacking is the freshmen.

GEORGIA IN LINE

The news that all the Georgia Presbyteries have ratifeid the action of the Georgia synod in sharing Presbyterian college with the Synod of South Carolina is encouraging. It makes a warm spot all its own in the hearts of Presbyterian college students and the many friends of the institution. If this isn't the final indication that next year will be a banner year in every way, we want to know the reason.

On every hand, P. C. has had repeated evidence of the faith of the public in the college. The institution is now more popular in this and neighboring states than it has ever been. The stage is all set for the big act. When the curtain rises next September, it will be on the biggest cast of characters that the college has ever known. Presbyterian college is at the threshold of a greater existence.

COLUMBIA SEMINARY HOSPITALITY

Columbia Theological Seminary, Atlanta, has always professed a cordial feeling toward Presbytreian college and her students. The reception given the P. C. track representatives who went to the metropolis for the Southern Relays last week, more than makes good all the expressions of good will that have ever been spoken. It is hardly possible that the students themselves are so comfortably quartered and so well fed as were the P. C. men who stayed there.

And this was not all, for every member both of the faculty and of the student body, manifested a warm interest in the team and in the boys themselves. Every effort was made to accommodate the visitors and every courtesy possible was extended to them.

It is the aim of organized experiences of this kind that foster and a staunch feeling of friendship between two institutions. Just such experiences as this one have always marked the visits of Presbyterian college men to the Seminary. Columbia knows how to be friends, not only theoretically, but in actual practice. They know how to make boys feel at home, and how to make them want to come back.

Presbyterian college and Columbia seminary are sister institutions in that both are Presbyterian. In addition, there is a strong tie that binds them together, for P. C. men have gotten into the habit of going to Columbia for training in the ministry. A visit to the seminary in Atlanta seems like a visit to a post-graduate department of P. C. It is understood that there are many of our students who plan to go there next fall.

Erskine Victor By Big Score

With a high wind doing tricks with the ball, causing pitchers to walk many men and fielders to misguage many a fly, the Erskine college Seceders defeated the Presbyterian college Blue Hose here Tuesday, 11 to 5. Sixteen men got bases on balls.

Adair, Blue Hose pitcher walked four men in a row in the first inning to give Erskine its first counter. Again in the ninth he gave a base on balls with the bases full. Presbyterian's rally in the eighth, which scored four runs, was nipped after four hits and a hit batter.

Caldwell, pinch hitter sent in for the Blue Hose in the seventh, had a perfect day with a double and a single for two tries. Hindmann was the batting star for Erskine, getting two out of four. One was out of the lot and the other would have gone for four bases but for ground rules.

Here And There With the Colleges

Commenting on the recent student body ruling at N. C. State to the effect that any student who misses a class without an excuse be required to pay a fine of fifty cents, The Emory Wheel remarks that 5,355 cuts were taken at Emory during the fall term, and figures that if the same rule were in vogue at Emory, the student body would be poorer by some $2,677.50. Mercer experimented with penalties for cuts last year, but decided that the method which had been previously in force—that is, allowing each student one week of cuts during the term and cutting his credit for each cut over the alotted number—was the best solution to the question. —Mercer Cluster.

Night football will come into national prominence in 1929, according to an article in the March College Humor. Several schools have played football at night in the past as an experiment, and so satisfactory were the results that it is believed that night football has come to stay.

At least it will be brought into the national spotlight next November, when Coach Knute K. Rockne's Notre Dame eleven meets Coach O. M. Solem's Drake university, Missouri valley eleven at Soldier's field, Chicago. —N. E. News.

These women again. European universities, at the instigation of male students, are considering means of relegating women to separate classrooms.

The overpowering effect of odors from perfumes and rouge in classrooms is obnoxious to professors as well as to students, the latter declared. At the Sorbonne (whatever it is) it was said, "They annoy us in our work. In the law schools, their bobbed hair, rouged lips and cheeks, and even blackened eyebrows and lashes, strike a note entirely out of harmony with the traditional solemnity of the French judicial system."—The (Auburn) Plainsman.

Underclassmen seem to be superior in sports and other activities at many colleges. The Chicora college freshmen won the basketball championship at that school. At Erskine, the sophomores came out victorious. These and many other instances are a sure sign that the talent at our colleges is becoming better and better among the lower classmen.—The Gamecock.

Officers of the student body publications of N. C. State will be paid next year, according to The Technician. Editors and business managers of The Technician and Agromack, year book, will receive salaries from the central fund, if it is earned. Any surplus [illegible] the board of publications to act as a [illegible] says The Technician. The board also decided that all nominees for positions on the staffs of any college publication would be required to have a scholarship average above that of the student body.—Mercer Cluster.

"Is she sick?" asked the man of pills and potions.

"Not exactly."

"What's the matter then?"

"Well,this morning she got up at the regular time about four o'clock, milked the cows, got breakfast for the hands, done her housework, churned, and along about ten o'clock she said she felt a little tired. I expect she needs a tonic, or something."—Rutgers Chanticleer.

A SQUARE DEAL

A few recent events in the newspaper world have served as excellent evidence of the difficulty of getting a square deal in print. It is astonishing how adroit a newspaper can be when [illegible] put in a truthful headline, but content themselves with merely hiding it in a place where moth and rust have very little chance of corrupting it—or anything else, for that matter. Others follow the example of a certain popular South Carolina paper in printing headlines that [illegible] to put it in a mild way.

The specific case that brings forth this comment is the recent write-up in The Greenville News of the P. C.-Furman track meet. It will be remembered that the paper ran a headline that read "Furman Breaks Even in Track Meet," or some such baloney. The article then went on in small print, after the damage had already been done, to say that P. C. won the varsity meet and Furman captured the frosh [illegible].

[illegible] to say that the sports editor of The Greenville News [illegible] thinks that things were even that day. [illegible] to point to an unusually close race between the four teams entered. Even [illegible] team in the meet has accumulated [illegible] University of [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Newberry Wins From Hose, 5-2

The Newberry college baseball team defeated the Presbyterian college team here last Saturday afternoon by the score of 5 to 2. Newberry scored first in the second inning and P. C. tied it in the fourth. Presbyterian scored in the sixth, giving them the lead of 2 to 1. Newberry came back in the eighth and ninth with heavy hitting and with errors by the Blue Stocking team were able to score four runs. Adams showed up especially well in pinches while pitching for Newberry, and Young of P. C., pitched a good game except in the eighth and ninth innings. Young and Dunlap hit best for P. C. Newberry's hits were well distributed.

mathematical, and laboratory practice. This would seem to indicate that he is the best prepared man who is studying physics at Yale.

President McSween mentioned in announcement that the search for a man to fill this position had covered the entire country from California to the East, and from Illinois to Texas. It is learned that in the neighborhood of twenty applications were received from students of fifteen leading graduate schools.

Mr. Seeger has assisted in physics instruction at both Rutgers and Yale. Concerning his teaching, Dr. Zeleny, chairman of the department of physics at Yale, has said, "Mr. Seeger is an exceptionally good lecturer with a good voice. He not only expresses himself clearly, but entertainingly."

Mr. Seeger's home is in Elizabeth, N. J. His present address is Sloan Laboratories, Yale university, New Haven, Connecticut.

Blue Hose Take Furman Game

(From The Greenville News)

Coming from behind, the Blue Stockings of Presbyterian college took an eleven inning game from the Furman Hornets in Greenville yesterday, 6 to 4. An error by Tidwell in the ninth cost Furman the game.

Leading the Blue Stockings, 3 to 2, at the beginning of the ninth, Furman went on the field and their lead was swept away when, with one down, Tidwell made a bad throw to first on an easy out. Young doubled and Caldwell scored. In the eleventh Young led off with a single and with a walk, a bonehead play, a wild throw by Elrod, a sacrifice hit, P. C. marked up three runs. Bonnette drove one of Young's fast ones over the left field wall in the last half but here the scoring ended.

Although Elrod gave up only two hits he was unfortunate enough to be the losing pitcher. He entered the game in the ninth in an attempt by "Dizzy" McLeod, to stop the Blue Stockings, and he did for a while but in the eleventh he went under. The Greenville boy turned in five strike outs in his two and two-thirds innings on the mound.

Cass, of Furman, and Young of P. C., tied for hitting honors with three each. The P. C. pitcher was the outstanding player of the afternoon. He waged a pitching battle with the Furman hurlers as well as starting every rally of the visitors. He also scored two runs.

Bonnette, Furman catcher, led in extra base hits with a triple and a home run to his credit, accounting for two of the Furman runs.

FURMAN DROPS VARSITY MEET

twenty, her two entries finished one-two. In no event did P. C. fail to place.

The frosh did not fare so well. Hugs and Newman of the Purple team flashed away to win several events apiece, and the rest of the Furman rats gave an excellent account of themselves. The P. C. first year men registered firsts in the high jump, the quarter-mile, and the half.

Fans who are interested in doping meets will center their attention on the contests between Furman, Carolina, and Clemson. The figures in these meets, together with those from the six meets already held in the state, will go far toward indicating the probable outcome of the State track meet. Furman and Carolina meet today in Columbia to match their prowess on track and field.

The summaries follow:

P. C. WINS FROM CLEMSON IN TENNIS

One singles and first doubles were ceded to the Tigers. It was left in the hands of the second doubles team, W. Dunlap and Elliott, to determine whether P. C. should win the meet or have to be content with a tie. These men dropped the second set, but retrieved themselves to win handily.

The first singles was a closely fought contest. A. O. Jackson had a slight edge throughout, and stroked like a master. Both sets were drawn out into a wearing give-and-take of games, each man capturing his service. In the end, Jackson came through in fine style to break through Johnson's service and win, 8-6, 10-8.

Johnston's match with McCarley was a pretty exhibition of steady tennis. Johnston's strong service and equally deadly chop-stroke worked beautifully. After losing his service in the third set to give his opponent a lead at 6-5, Johnston pulled through to take the next three games and the set. The scores were 6-4, 5-7, and 8-6.

McCall had things pretty well in hand all the way. He dropped the second set but had little difficulty in capturing the third to save the match. In the fourth singles, Calvert of Clemson, defeated W. Dunlap of P. C., in three stanzas. The first of these two matches went to McCall at 6-4, 2-6, 6-3. The latter was won by Calvert at 6-4, 3-6, and 6-3.

Jackson and Johnston lost to Johnson and McCarley in the first doubles. A determined pull-up on the part of the losers gave them the second set with 8-6, but the Tiger team came back with little difficulty and won. The scores were 6-2, 6-8, and 6-2.

The match was cinches by Elliott and W. Dunlap, who displayed a good brand of tennis to win, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4.

words of confidence in the future of the college. This last pledge of support comes as the final evidence that P. C. is on the up-road.

After the rather dark days of last summer, the present condition of affairs is as the beginning of a new era. Past progress is as nothing to the excellent prospects for progress and growth that are now in veiw. It is just such support and confidence as this that enables P. C. men to look forward to a finer and greater Presbyterian college. Now for the large freshman class that will put P. C. definitely on its feet.

JUNIOR-SENIOR BANQUET HELD

Annual Affair Maintains Record Set In Past. "Good Time Had By All."

The annual junior-senior banquet of Presbyterian college, held on Friday evening, April 26, was a great success. The host of pretty girls, against the background of the tasteful decorations and the Japanese lanterns made a scene of charm and enchantment that will not soon be forgotten. It is considered to be the best junior-senior that has been held at P. C. in recent years.

Not least among the factors contributing to the success of the banquet was the well-prepared food which comprised the excellent menu. The Woman's club, which was in charge of this part of the function, may well credit for the pleasantness of the evening. The music, furnished by Gene Wofford and his Collegians, was an added feature that served to enliven the entertainment.

Toasts were by President I. M. Keels of the junior class, President A. F. Marshall of the senior class, and President John McSween of Presbyterian college. Keels, who also officiated in the capacity of toast-master,

Y. M. C. A. Hears Dr. Robinson

At the regular weekly meeting of the campus Y. M. C. A. on Wednesday, the students had the pleasure of hearing a delightful and inspiring address by Dr. W. C. Robnison, professor of Biblical history at Columbia Theological seminary. It was Dr. Robinson's first appearance before a group of Presbyterian college students, but it is hoped that the cabinet will have him here again.

The subject of Dr. Robinson's speech was the power of the personality of Christ in the Christian religion. Every religion under the sun has its special features, good and bad, but Christianity is the only religion in the world which centers around the activities and the teaching of one man. Christ is truly the dynamic of the Christian religion. This is shown in his teaching and in the supreme love which ma[illegible] for us.

At this meeting the new president, W. T. Barron, was installed, and also the new cabinet. It is hoped by all who are interested in seeing moral life at P. C. reach a higher plane that the student body will immediately fall in line and give the organization their full support.

Newberry Wins Here

The Newberry negative team, composed of Clark and Norris, defeated the Wofford freshman team, composed of Derrick and Taylor, in this section of the annual Newberry-Wofford-P. C. freshman triangular debate held here last night. The judges for the debate were Dr. Woodworth, Dr. Jones, and Prof. Gignilliat of the Presbyterian college faculty. The query for the discussion was "Resolved, That South Carolina should pass a law sentencing all prisoners to life imprisonment when convicted for the fourth time for a criminal offense."

P. C.'s freshman debating team is composed of Whiteside, C. W. Anderson, E. V. Anderson, and Murphy. They represented P. C. in the debates held at Spartanburg and Newberry, also held last night.

ERSKINE MAN WINS CONTEST

Greham Reid Takes First Place In Oratory. Furman and Wofford Take Places.

(From The State)

Rock Hill, April 26.—Greham Reid of Due West, representing Erskine, tonight won the 31st contest of the South Carolina Intercollegiate Oratorical association, held in the auditorium of Winthrop college. To Herman S. Ray of Furman, went second place, and to T. W. Herbert of Wofford, was given honorable mention.

Mr. Reid, whose subject was "The Cry of a Brother's Blood," is a junior at Erskine and is 21 years of age. Mr. Ray, who is from Japan, is 21, and is a senior at Furman. Mr. Herbert, who is from Spartanburg, is 20, and a senior at Wofford.

The nine male institutions of higher learning in the state were all represented. In addition to the winners, the speakers (listed with no reference as to how they finished) were: John Madison Younginer of Columbia, University of South Carolina; E. B. Hallsall of Charleston, College of Charleston; T. M. Johnston of Jefferson, Ga., Presbyterian college; J. C. Galloway of Lynchburg, Clemson; Herman L. Frick of Chapin, Newberry; Johnson Hagood of Aynor, Citadel. The judges made no announcement as to how these six men ranked in the decision.

The Winthrop orchestra played and the Freshman glee club sang. E. W. Culbertson of Newberry college, president of the association, presided. The Rev. B. R. Turnipseed of St. John's church, Rock Hill, made the invocation. J. Thomas Brown of the Winthrop faculty welcomed the visitors. The speakers, the officers of the association and the executive committee-

Spartanburg Hi Captures Meet

By virtue of some fine athletes who didn't know the meaning of the word "quit," Spartanburg high school took the big end of the score in a triangular track meet with Bailey Military institute and the Presbyterian [illegible] here Saturday. When the mile relay was completed, the score stood: [illegible] B. M. I. a close second with 42½, and P. C. third with 36. All events were run, jumped, thrown or what have you, in good time, distance or height, except the two-mile, which was not run on account of the high schools competing who did not list that event.

There were several men entered who are certainly going to be trouble in college if we know an athlete when we see one. Among these are: Baker of Spartanburg, who runs a pretty half and one-mile, and then caps it off with a wonderful 220-yard sprint to the finish; G. Davis of B. M. I., who steps a pretty 220 and then adds good time on the high sticks; Fulp of B. M. I. looks good on the javelin, as well as Carr and Carter, both of Spartanburg, on the discus and broad jump respectively.

Cheatham looked best for P. C. in the weights, while Senter looked good on the 440 and 880, with Collins tying him in a beautiful race on the half.

Summaries:

100-yard dash: First, Alley, Spartanburg; second, Rigby, B. M. I.; third, Fleming, Spartanburg. Time, 10.4 seconds.

The Blue Stocking Quits Early

Students will be interested to know that only two more issues of The Blue Stocking will appear before commencement. After due thought and consideration, it has been decided to cease activities on May 11th, a little over a week before exams start.

This step is to be taken in order that the business staff may have a little time to collect bills and make disbursements before exams. This will take some time, and it is felt that it should be disposed of before examinations, and their accompanying distractions, begin.

It is regrettable that there will be no issue of the paper that will carry the story of the S. I. A. A. track meet, which is to be on May 11th. However, both the editorial and business staffs consider it best to wind up all affairs well before commencement. In the past there have been times when unpaid bills have been allowed to hang over the summer months, but this is highly undesirable and every effort will be made to see that nothing of the sort happens this year.

PaC-SaC Work Is Progressing

The 1929 PaC-SaC is rapidly being prepared for its "coming out" clothes. The completion of the photographic work a week or two ago marked the last of the long and weary milestones that remained to be past. Since then Editor Jack O'Neal has made a clean sweep of the little details that always remain until the last minute, and it is learned that all material is now in the hands of the printers.

According to contract, the PaC-SaC will be in the hands of the students before commencement. Thanks to the alertness of O'Neal and the business staff in making their plans, there will be no strings tied to the year-book. [illegible] will be paid in full [illegible] check their names from the list.

Next year even the gentle pain of removing small amounts of money from individual students will be removed from the shoulders of the business staff of the annual. A clause has been inserted in the catalogue which provides for a slight increase in the literary fee. This will take care of the PaC-SaC and insures every man that his picture will be taken and printed without additional cost.

This step will make things much easier for next year's business staff, under the direction of Crawford and I. M. Keels. Editor Fant Thornley will soon be busy on plans for the 1930 yera book, it is understood.

Tigers Win In 10th

Clemson College, April 24.—Clemson defeated Presbyterian college in a 10 inning affair, 6 to 5, here this afternoon.

After Presbyterian college got a two run lead, Clemson scored three runs in the sixth, apparently putting the game on ice. The visitors retaliated in the eighth, however, when pinch hitter Odiorne singled to score Young; and Caldwell's liner to short was slowly played, enabling two others to [illegible] across.

Mike Zeigler singled to start the tenth, and the ball got away from

NEW LEADERS TAKE OFFICE

President and Members of Council Take Over Reigns of Student Government.

On Friday morning, April 26th, the president-elect and the recently named student council for 1929-30 were given the oath of office. The ceremony took place at the chapel hour, before the assembled faculty and student body.

Frank Pearce, retiring president, assumed charge of the meeting and took a few brief moments to express his appreciation of the splendid attitude of cooperation that the student body and faculty have shown during the year that is drawing to a close. He expressed confidence in the new council, and urged the continuance of such an attitude.

P. A. Roberts, president-elect of the student body, was called to the front. The ceremony of taking the oath of office was a very impressive one, the gathering maintaining absolute silence while the words were spoken by the two men.

Following this, Roberts took charge, and the newly-elected council was called to the front. The men who took the oath at this time were I. M. Keels, J. A. Babb, J. B. Green, B. R. Young, T. M. Johnston, J. A. Cheatham, and R. H. Gillespie. This completes the council except for the addition of one freshman member who will be elected from the freshman class next fall.

After his inauguration as president of the student body, Roberts took the occasion to thank the students for the honor they had conferred upon him. He appealed for cooperation and support, and added that he felt sure he and the council would receive it during the 1929-30 session.

Furman Takes Double Debate

Furman university defeated P. C. in a [illegible] debate no Thursday evening. The query for the debate was [illegible] Kappa Delta [illegible] ing the present debating season, having been used in the Wofford-Newberry-P. C. triangle, Carson-Newman-P. C., and Mercer-P. C. debates.

P.C.'s affirmative team, composed of T. E. Davis and J. T. N. Keels, opposed the Furman negative team in the debate held here, while T. J. Cole nad E. D. Brunson met the Furman affirmative team in Greenville.

G. G. Palmer presided over the debate held at P. C., and the judges were Rev. Edward Long, Rev. C. B. Betts and W. W. Harris. Furman was represented by C. C. Saunders and Bruce Thompson, who won a two to one decision over Davis and Keels. Both teams showed a great deal of ability and preparation, the furman team being the best team that has appeared at P. C. in quite a while. All four speakers were good, but Thompson of Furman, deserves particular recognition for his excellent debate.

Cole and Brunson lost their decision to the Furman affirmative team, composed of Beach and Barber, at Greenville, thus giving Furman a clear-cut victory over P. C. This is the first time that these schools have engaged in a debate and it is hoped that this will become an annual affair.

STATE MEET NEXT WEEK

Saturday Is Day Set for Track Competition In Clinton for S. C. Colleges.

On next Friday and Saturday, May 3rd and 4th, the State track meet will be held in Clinton on Johnson field. The annual track classic of South Carolina will be contested by Clemson, Furman, South Carolina, and Presbyterian. Last year the championship of the Palmetto state went to Clemson by a narrow margin over Presbyterian college. This year an even closer count is expected. Although there is nothing in statistics, a great many track fans find infinite comfort in comparing summaries of track meets in an effort to get out the straight dope. When this has been done with the results of the several meets between the four competitors, it appears that the outcome of the meet should lay between Clemson and P. C., with neither holding any advantage. However, it is always possible for any team to win, and all four will no doubt give an account of themselves on the field with a conviction that victory is to be theirs. Predictions are that competition in every event will be closer than ever before.

P. C. Teams In Atlanta Today

This afternoon, Saturday, April 27, the track and tennis teams are in Atlanta in competition with Emory university and Columbia Theological seminary respectively. The two squads left Clinton by the morning train on Friday, April 26th.

The track team advances to meet Emory university with dope neither on one side or the other. Emory placed well in several events in the Georgia State meet, held at Emory last Saturday afternoon, but the power of the Atlanta team for dual competition is unknown. The Blue Hosemen are in good shape and expect to put up a hard fight, whether defeating or defeated. Confidence is felt especially in the outcome of the sprints, and indeed, of most of the running events. Emory, on the other hand, is doubtful if P. C. will be able to regis-

THE HAPPY WARRIOR

The following excerpt from the New York Herald-Tribune is quoted in the March number of Ginn and Company's little publication called "What the Colleges Are Doing":

"All that a modern state-university president has to do is to produce, every few months, a learned paper to dazzle the countryside, manage the intricate machinery of his several-million-dollar corporation, keep his army of temperamental, absent-minded, underpaid professors cheerful and alert, understand what the university's archaeological expedition is doing in southeastern Abyssinia and raise money for it, deliver occasional uplifting chapel talks to the student body, attend the ball games, lunch with the rich alumni, who might give new dormitories or laboratories in honor of their favorite maiden aunts, entertain the visiting English lecturers (and arrange for the deans to entertain the Americans), keep in touch with the members of the state legislatures who are making up the budget for next year, and with bright new assemblymen who hope to make the headlines by denouncing frills in education, and lecture occasionally to the Norfolk County Cheese-makers Cooperative Association, the Suffolk County Grain Exchange, the Wessex General Ladies and Labor Council, and the Essex W. C. T. U., as well as the State Chamber of Commerce, the Societies, and the Veterans of [illegible] Wars, posting up to each and all how the University serves every citizen of the state and notably assists them in their particular tasks and problems."

With a few alterations of names and locations, the writer of this paragraph might well have been presenting an intimate cross-section of the life of President McSween of Presbyterian college. Although P. C. is not a state university, its president might well qualify as the president of a state university, if the above is a true conception of what happens to them.

During the few months that have elapsed since his acceptance of the presidency of the college, Mr. McSween has been globe-trotting with a vengeance. Leaving out the expedition to Abyssinia, he has probably engaged in every one of the delightful pursuits that are described in the quotation—and he has probably done two or three of them at once, when times became particularly pressing.

His tours have carried him westward to Texas, eastward as far as the Atlantic ocean would let him at low tide, southward to some point probably in the ower reaches of the Georgia jungles, and northward to where people roll their luscious r's and eat beans. A smart statistician, if in good form, might possibly tell us that if Mr. McSween had been a bug, and if he had been crawling across a map instead of choo-chooing up and down in the world, and if he had been dragging after him a fountain pen of suitable size—that the lines he would thus have drawn on the map of the country would have looked like a spider's web, and that South Carolina would have looked like one great and glorious blot on the'scutcheon.

Mr. McSween has probably spoken between 739 and 911 times in the Palmetto state since last September. He has addressed every conceivable type of organization, including civic clubs, and has traveled a good many more miles than it is from here to Ooltewah, Tennessee, and back again. Right now he is a great deal better known in South Carolina than the college is.

The president of Presbyterian college is a go-getter. Between his energy, his speaking ability, and his dynamic personality, he comes pretty near carrying everything before him, when on a campaign. It is impossible to estimate the number of friends that he has raised up for Presbyterian college through the clear and straightforward and convincing way he has of saying clear and straight-forward and convincing things.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY FOR COURTESY

During the next two weeks there will be held on Johnson field two major track meets—the State and S. I. A. A. meets. There will probably be a large crowd assembled for both events—and among these groups will be numerous high school students who have heard of P. C. and are coming to look us over before making a decision. Here is a real opportunity to demonstrate the courtesy for which P. C. is famous.

And aside from the outside visitors there will be the large numbers of athletes who will participate in the meets. There will probably be only four teams entered in the State meet, but a great many more are expected to be in Clinton for the S. I. A. A. affair. This will call for every effort on the part of Presbyterian college men to be accommodating. It is needless to say that P. C. men will sustain the fine name that they have built up for themselves through the years that have passed.

COURTESY AGAIN

P. C. has a good name in South Carolina for good sportsmanship, and for courtesy to visiting teams. This is a fine thing, and yet it all goes for naught if we cannot show at least ordinary consideration for our own teams. After all, our contests with other institutions are few in comparison with our contacts with ourselves. These latter come every day. If we do not honor our contacts and our undertakings among ourselves, how can we expect to go on being courteous to others when they come to P. C.?

In one sense, although we do not usually think of it is this way, the local R. O. T. C. unit is a P. C. team. It does not go further and do battle against other teams do on certain occasions, but it is nevertheless a team—and one that demands our heartiest cooperation. Because of its size, in comparison with our other teams, it calls for consideration both on the part of those in the unit and those who choose to watch maneuvers. It is a difficult task to handle a large group of men, and when there are distracting elements, it becomes well-nigh impossible.

It is deplorable that the onlookers who were present at the battalion inspection last Tuesday morning should have shown such discourtesy as to attract the attention of the inspecting officers and arouse their unfavorable comment. Aside from the difficulties that were placed in the way of the cadet officers in issuing and carrying out orders with distractions from the grand-stand, it was a discourtesy to the visiting officers.

The incident was no doubt due to thoughtlessness on the part of some of those in the grandstand. A majority of them had never attempted to issue commands on the drill field, and had little conception of the difficulties involved. There is every reason to believe, however, that P. C. students, with this little reminder and with the reputation that they have for courtesy, will see to it that inspecting officers never again have occasion to notice any laxity at Presbyterian college along this line.

LAST WEEK

Last week was a rather good one for P. C. sports. Although the two losses to Erskine and Furman respectively, on the diamond, were rather depressing, the tide was turned in the latter part of the week by a return victory over Furman in baseball, a victory over Furman by the varsity track team, and a victory over Clemson by the tennis team.

Te be sure, the track victory was tempered by the loss of the frosh contest to the little Hurricane, but this still leaves the count at .500, if everything is considered in the final reckoning.

THREE WEEKS

It is hard to resist the temptation to remark the fact that only three weeks from Monday the big fire-works start—and our seniors will be pulling out for a happy loafing spell before that, those of them who will have no exams. In four weeks, gentle reader, and no more, the thing will be over and we may bave a breath of relief as we wait for commencement to get itself over with.

Sometimes it is not easy to realize how quickly time passes. Doubtless there are some members of the senior class who look back at the pleasant days they have spent and are spending at P. C. and wonder just how four years can seem so short. The acid test of whether days have been pleasant or unpleasant is in the length they seem to be when we look back at them. Have you ever noticed how quickly an evening passes when you're in good company? But of course you have. And how about the length of the period just before dinner, when it's hot weather and the professor has become unusually droning and dull? How can a watch be so slow?

As a general thing, days or hours seem long, and months or years seem short. That is because the human memory has a rather convenient way of recalling only the high spots, when looking backward. And the high spots are generally the glad ones, because we like to recall them more than the other kind. Yes, four years can be years of bitterness or disillusionment—and yet they can seem sweet when we look back. All years are sweet years in our memories. People will always say, "Now, when I was a boy—"

THE ADVANCING SOUTH

In his search for facts relating to the industrial development of the Southern states, Arthur Coleman, associate editor of Holland's, The Magazine of the South, learned that the first railroad in the United States chartered for general use was in the South. Beginning with a brief mention of the historic "Tom Thumb" locomotive, followed by the "Best friend," which exploded after six months of successful operation on the South Carolina railroad, Mr. Coleman brings his readers down to modern Southern good roads and airways and shows what the South's transportation system means toward developing Southern business.

In the current issue of Holland's, he states that over 34 per cent of the total railroad mileage in the country is in the Southern states and that since 1860 the South has shown an increase in railroad mileage of 845 per cent, as against 465 per cent for all remaining states. The first steamship to cross the Atlantic, according to Mr. Coleman, was owned by Savannah capital and sailed from Savannah, Georgia. He says that last year Southern export values more than doubled those of the Pacific coast, while import values through Southern ports in the past quarter century, increased more than 840 per cent as against approximately 350 per cent for all remaining ports in the nation. Southern ports handle 42 per cent of the country's total watter-borne tonnage. Export values from Galveston and Houston alone exceed the combined ports of the Pacific coast. Navigable rivers of the South handle over 17,250,000 tons of commerce annually. Texas bus lines carry 4,500,000 passengers annually, and operate over 21,000 miles of highway. In 1928 there were, in the Southern states, a total of over 2,900 miles of air mail routes and more than 300 air ports and landing fields.

"As these various phases of the commercial world are expanding, so is expanding this entire region—industrially, socially, economically— rising head and shoulders above every other section of the nation until its preeminence, so swiftly and so soundly attained, is the wonder of the United States today. But as its people prosper in the world of business and trade, they are giving thought, too, to those things in life which make for cultured and happy minds; for beauty and charm and grace of living. They are giving their attention more and more to the planning and esthetic improvement of their cities and their towns and even their rural sections. Their forethought is repaying them richly in dividends immeasurable in terms of financial gains; and, as is always true when men do worthwhile things without thought of money, they are being repaid in money, also. Money which, in turn, is put back into further service for an appreciative people."

Here And There With the Colleges

Lay Off, Brother

Among the latest arrivals in editorial controversial circles is the one between The Citadel Bulldog and The Johnsonian of Winthrop. It all started with a slighting remark in the April Fool edition of The Bulldog to the effect that a better name for The Johnsonian would be "Sound and Furies," and the slightee came back with the retort that anyway The Bulldog was always growling and that its bark is worse than its bite; to which The Bulldog remarks that the Johnsonian was to the well-ordered journalistic mind like a scrambled egg to an epicure. Not that we're partisan in the quarrel, or anything like that, but we'd advise The Bulldog to lay off before he gets hurt; a mere man never got anywhere arguing with a woman, even editorially.—Mercer Cluster.

Just Plain Horse-sense, Eh?

Many people think that unless a person knows definitely what he is going to do when he enters a university, he should not come. I don't feel that way. Any student will pick up a few smatterings of education and culture on account of environment. To my mind, the individual who gets everything out of college, except education, is far better equipped for life than the person who gets nothing but education. I don't mean to belittle education, but I do mean to say that education is not the only factor to consider.—U. of Ga. Red and Black.

Collegiate Value

College students are expensive products, according to statistics obtained at the University of Pittsburgh. It is estimated that the usual undergraduate costs his parents an average of $21,000 from the time of his birth to his graduation from college. The extremes were placed at about $58,000 on one end and a little over $14,000 on the other. This suggests the question, will the graduate's income be a four per cent dividend on the investment that has been made on his life?—The Florida Alligator.

The Faculty Speaks

University of Mississippi, Oxford. —(U. P.)—An atmosphere of tenseness pervaded the University of Mississippi campus here Wednesday following dismissal of the editor and feature editor of the University yearbook and the threat of a faculty committee to place a board of censors over all student publications.

Fergus L. Lloyd, editor of the yearbook, and Howard Thames, his feature director for the publication, have been "indefinitely dismissed on charges that the book contained scurrilous and libellous matter."—U. of Ga. Red and Black.

In Russia

It is an interesting fact that seven of the nine men who control Russia never went to school. Over here we are told that a man can't successfully operate a peanut parcher without an education. The fact that those men are without school training does not seem to be of much weight in Russia. Maybe if they had had the advantage (?) of schooling, they wouldn't make as good rulers as they do; maybe they would ruin Russia. Who knows.—The Auburn Plainsman.

Ho, Hum!

Southern students are "grossly lazy," according to a New York debutante, who visited in Athens, home of the University of Georgia, recently, and who considers them so because they don't dash hither and yon, as it were, going to classes, etc. Gee whizz, who wants to be in a hurry going to classes these warm sleepy days? And anyway, as the Red and Black says, there's a rule against us being as fast that way as Northerners.—Mercer Cluster.

Schools To Stage Big Carnival

A big carnival, enlivened with twenty snappy side shows, will be staged in Copeland's hall on Tuesday night, April 30th. The curtain rises promptly at eight o'clock and a crowd that will pack the house is expected.

The carnival is being given under the auspices of the city schools with several of the teachers in charge of the event. In addition to the "big show" and the Broadway sidelights, there will be confetti, pop corn, candy peanuts, red lemonade and an honest-to-goodness cake walk. Everybody is cordially invited and the whole family if brought to the frog pond is assured a "croaking" good time. The general admission will be 10c, the proceeds to be used for school purposes.

State "Y" Meet Held In Columbia

The regular annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. for colleges in the state of South Carolina was held Friday, Saturday and Sunday of last week at Twin Lakes, a few miles out from Columbia. Representatives from every college in the state were present except Newberry. An exceptionally good meeting was held and work of the "Y" over the state was considered in detail.

While this annual meeting is really a conference, the time is spent primarily in training officers for their work in college for the coming year. A program of study of Christian work and problems was carried out, and many of the difficulties that confront the "Y" on the campuses were considered. The main speaker at this year's conference was John McSween, president of Presbyterian college. Mr. McSween made three addresses to the members of the conference, all of which were very interesting and highly beneficial. The discussion groups were lead by Mr. Loomis, Southern "Y" secretary, and Mr. Bell, director of "Y" work at the University of South Carolina.

During the course of the conference the usual state business was gone over and the budget for the coming year worked out. As was planned, the money needed from the South Carolina "Y" for this year was $700, which was to be raised by the eight colleges in the state according to enrollment of the student body.

With the closing of the meeting Sunday, the officers for the coming year were selected. D. E. James of Wofford, was elected president; Mr. Cooksley of the Citadel, was named vice-president, and O. W. Chapin of Presbyterian college, secretary and treasurer.

The committee in charge of Camp Adger gave reports and the joint meeting of the "Y. M." and "Y. W." will be planned for sometime in October. The conference was a big success and gave much inspiration to the new officers who are to carry on this work for the coming year.

Circulation At Library Increases

The circulation report for the library for the month of March reveals the startling fact that, despite the fact that Pan-Hellenic broke into the round of study and decreased circulation below normal for almost a week, the circulation for the month was the largest the library has ever had. The total number of books used by the students of which a record was made was 1402. Of these over seven hundred were taken from the library, to which must be added those taken from the reserve shelf for overnight use. The reserve shelf accounted for the use of six hundred and ninety-eight books.

Literature still leads the list of classes with a total of two hundred forty-four, closely followed by fiction and biography. However, the aesthetic taste of the student body has sadly declined, if the circulation report is to be taken as a guide. Not one book on the fine arts was circulated for the whole month of March.

The library added thirty-six books to the shelves in March, exclusive of government publications. These thirty-six required one hundred and fifty-five new entries in the card catalogue. This does not count any books from the Smyth collection of Caroliniana as the accessioning and cataloguing of this collection has not been started as yet.

made a few remarks of welcome to the visitors and to the seniors. He spoke warmly of the years of pleasant association that the junior class has spent with those who are about to leave P. C.

President A. F. Marshall responded in behalf of the senior class. He recalled briefly the delightful days of the brief sojourn on the campus of Presbyterian college and closed with sentiments of best wishes to those who will be left behind to carry on.

Mr. McSween's talk was characteristic in its humor, spice, and effective thoughts. On behalf of the college he extended a hearty welcome to the feminine guests, and complimented the students of Presbyterian college on the excellent taste they had shown in their choice of Southland beauty.

The loveliness of the scene and the beauty of the decorations and setting, occasioned much comment. Everything was cleverly planned to the smallest detail, and executed perfectly. The decoration committee deserves a great deal of credit for its excellent job.

The honorary guests were: Mr. and Mrs. John McSween, Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Brown, Mrs. Sloane Harper, Mr. and Mrs. Walter [illegible], Mr. and Mrs. [illegible], and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hunter.

"nip and tuck" and the outcome will very probably depend on the last few events or the relay. This has been the case before, in meets between the two institutions.

The tennis team will meet Columbia seminary on this trip. Those making the trip were: A. O. Jackson, T. M. Johnston, W. B. McCall, W. Dunlap and Manager Spencer Elliott. They will probably play in the order named, with Dunlap and Elliott playing in the second doubles. It is impossible to advance any dope on the contest, for little is known of the strength of the seminary's team.

Sigma Upsilon Resumes Schedule

On Thursday evening, April 25th, Isis chapter of Sigma Upsilon, national honorary literary fraternity, met in Professor Gignilliat's room for a called meeting. Various unavoidable conflicts had interfered with the past two meetings, and the club found itself sadly behind in the programs arranged. The meeting was especially called by President Roberts to line up the records and fix the program for the next meeting, which will be held on May 9th.

The men who will prepare papers for the next meeting are E. B. Martin, P. A. Roberts, B. H. Dickson, and T. J. Cole. After this matter had been straightened out, Professor Gignilliat spoke to the members for a few minutes about the progress made this year, the excellent attendance record, and the spirit of real interest and coliat spoke to the members for a few suggestions for work next year were made by the members, and the meeting was adjourned.

Societies Meet

Work in both literary societies was rather short this week due to the absense of several members who were on the program and did not attend because of a conflict with a practice of the varsity and freshman debating teams.

In the Pikadelt society there were only three speeches: A declamation by Murphy, a book review by T. M. Johnston, and a humorous speech by J. I. Copeland. The Eukosmian society had a speech by W. E. Johnson, which was in the form of a memorial to the late Marshall Foch. After this speech toasts were made to Colonel Leroy Springs, P. C.'s great benefactor, by Burdette, and E. V. Anderson, with A. McQueen acting as toastmaster.

men sat on the rostrum. The judges were: Judge E. C. Dennis of Darlington, Dr. A. Vermont of Converse college, Edward Guerry of Charleston, Prof. J. T. Brown of Winthrop college, and A. W. Huckle of Rock Hill.

To the winner went the coveted association medal and to his college went the Sylvan cup. To the second place man went an association medal. These presentations were made by President Culbertson, under whose guidance the association has had a most successful year.

At the annual business meeting Friday morning O. T. Cooksey of the Citadel was elected president. Other officers named were: A. T. Tamsbey, College of Charleston, vice-president; R. W. Stokes, Wofford college, recording secretary; R. H. Ackinson, University of South Carolina, corresponding secretary; L. Ross Lynn, Presbyterian college, treasurer. Members of the executive committee will be: F. B. Farr, Clemson college; D. M. Lawton, Erskine college; Bruce Thompson, Furman university, and H. L. Shull, Newberry college.

Clinton Man Gets School Promotion

Friends and relatives here will learn with interest of the recent election of A. C. Holland to the position of superintendent of Jones county schools, North Carolina. Mr. Holland is a son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Hamp Holland of the Pea Ridge section near here, and a graduate of Presbyterian college. In addition to his teaching position, he is proprietor of Cape Fear Printing company, Falcon, N. C., and editor of a religious magazine. The following item in reference to his new work is taken from the Raleigh News and Observer:

oy Speaks At Joint Meeting

On Thursday evening, May 2nd, Dr. E. Hoy, Jr., delivered an interest- address before a joint meeting of International Relations club and local chapter of Chi Beta Phi, nal honorary scientific fraternity. re were about thirty members of two organizations present at the ting, which was held at 7:30 in Dr. ncer's class room.

Dr. Hoy is a biologist of considere reputation. For a decade he has d the post of departmental head at abyterian college. During this time has been hard at work on various earch problems, and his publicas of the observations he has made, e received national recognition. It well known that Dr. Hoy has been ed to the University of South Car-a, where he will head the biology artment, beginning next fall.

n his address on Wednesday even-, Dr. Hoy took as his subject the ts of geographical distribution of ogical forms. He outlined the diseries of geology which serve to exin some of the interesting phe-nena in connection with distribu-. After this had been given as a kground, Dr. Hoy went on to point the ways in which nature conls distribution, and the effects of control.

Perhaps the most delightful part the paper was a discussion of va-s instances wherein man has vio-d the laws of nature, with disas-s results. A few of these instances e resulted in the introduction of boll weevil to the southern part of United States, the introduction of Mediterranean fruit fly to Amerand others with equally disastrous ults.

Dr. Hoy concluded with a brief conration of the international scope biology. He pointed out the fact biology considers neither nation-y nor race nor breed. A discovery de by an American biologist is ed with equal enthusiasm in Engd, France, Germany, India, and na. It is one of the few fields that not been tainted by the feeling of tionalism.

Blue Stocking To Be Delayed

The next issue of The Blue Stocking will appear on the campus on Monday, May 13th, instead of Saturday, May 11th. This change has been made in order that there may be included an account of the S. I. A. A. track meet, which is to be held on Johnson field next Saturday afternoon. This issue will be the last of the year. If no change were made in the date of appearance, there would be no record of the meet in The Blue Stocking files.

Bobby Caldwell To Lead Basket Men

On Wednesday morning, May 1st, Bobby Caldwell, of Sumter, S. C., was unanimously elected captain of the Presbyterian college basketball team for the year 1929-1930. Caldwell is in his third year with the varsity team, besides having made his class numerals with the freshman team in his first year. He has successfully held the berth of center on the team, and has been a consistent star at the game.

In addition to his activities on the basketball floor, Bobby is one of Coach Johnson's pitchers with the baseball team. Here his coolness and perfect control have won many games for P. C. Besides all this, Caldwell has held,for the past year, the office of vice-president of the junior class.

It is felt that with this modest and popular young man at the helm, P. C. may well look for great things from the hoop-men next season. Not only is his own work on the floor without reproach, but his personality is one that inspires confidence and a maximum of effort on the part of his fellow players. The basketball team has indeed done well in giving Bobby Caldwell this reward for his years of service with the team.

Douglas Is Visitor

Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Douglas, of Columbia, S. C., were on the campus as guests of Professor and Mrs. Woodworth on Thursday, May 2nd. Dr. Douglas, now president of the University of South Carolina, and formerly president of Presbyterian college, is known and loved by every student of P. C. He has, since his acceptance of his office with the university, maintained his contact with the institution in Clinton, and is known as one of P. C.'s finest friends. He always shows a deep interest in the affairs of the college, and is an active member of the alumni association.

HOSEMEN WIN FROM EMORY

Take Track Contest, 66-65. Held In Atlanta Saturday. Ritchie Makes Century In 10.

The Presbyterian college track team registered its third victory out of four starts when it amassed 66 points to top the 65 point total of Emory university last Saturday. The meet was staged in Atlanta, on the Emory track. A week previously, the Atlanta team had run up 20 points to take third place in the Georgia State track meet. It is interesting to note that the winner of this meet, University of Georgia, is the only team that has defeated Presbyterian thus far this spring.

Logan, the all-around track man of Emory university, was high-point man of the day with 21 points. This versatile athlete entered and placed in every field event. In the pole vault, after having tied for first place the week before with something over twelve, to share in establishing a new Georgia record, he failed to do better than tie for first with Fewell of P. C., and one of his team-mates. His other Gillespie To Represent P. C.

According to an announcement made in chapel on Friday, May, 3rd, by President McSween, R. T. Gillespie, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., a member of the present junior class, will act as the representative of Presbyterian college in the state of Georgia during the coming summer. His duties will begin early in June and will continue for the entire summer, it is understood.

Gillespie will spend the summer touring the state. He will speak in churches, and before organizations of every kind, besides personally meeting every available prospect. The administration feels confident that many new men will be won to the standards of Presbyterian college through this medium of personal conference and encouragement.

Dick Gillespie has been prominent as a public speaker ever since he has been in college. In his freshman year he was a member of the frosh debating team, besides winning the declaimer's medal, open to members of the freshman and sophomore classes. This contest is a yearly affair and is staged during commencement week.

Last year Gillespie was the representative for P. C. in the State Oratorical contest. Speaking on a program with orators from every college in the state, he won honorable mention.

CLINTON PREPARES TO RAISE $50,000 FOR PRESBYTERIAN

Fund Raised To Be Applied On Liquidation of Presbyterian College Debt. Canvass To Begin May 21 With No Let-Up Until Goal Is Reached. W. P. Jacobs Elected Chairman. Executive Committee and Canvassers To Be Named In Next Few Days.

A city-wide campaign to raise $50,000 in Clinton for Presbyterian college, will be launched on May 21st. This decision was reached at a conference held Monday night presided over by President McSween, and attended by a number of citizens representing the various religious and civic organizations of the community.

It was the sense of those attending the conference that now is the opportune time to inaugurate the drive to raise Clinton's quota in the debt liquidating campaign to be launuched in the state, beginning in the presbyteries of the Piedmont section. The "opening gun" by the respective teams is to be fired in Clinton and the interest and support accorded the movement here, is expected to have an encouraging and helpful influence in other parts of the state. The opinion was expressed by several present, that if the undertaking is successful here, it will prove a strong incentive to other towns and cities in the state-wide effort that is to be made within the next year to raise $350,000 to wipe out the institution's indebtedness and place it on a strong financial basis. Those attending the meeting expressed themselves as heartily in sympathy with the movement and no lack of enthusiasm on the part of those who are to direct the drive is felt.

In the preliminary organization, a central committee was named to sponsor and endorse the Clinton drive. This committee elected W. P. Jacobs to head the undertaking as chairman. A nominating committee was appointed to serve with Mr. Jacobs in naming an executive committee charged with the details of the campaign. This committee will be selected this week, the publicity campaign inaugurated, and everything will be in readiness when the canvass officially opens on May 21st.

Pledges to the campaign may be paid in cash to the canvassers or according to the following quarterly schedule: One-fourth cash on or before July 1, 1929; one-fourth on or before October 1, 1929; one-fourth on or before January 1, 1930; and one-

SENIORS GET ALLOWANCE

Cut Privilege Given By Faculty To Students Making Grade of B. Starts Next Year.

Seniors, beginning with the session 1929-30(are to have a special privilege, according to an announcement made by President McSween to the junior class on Tuesday, May 1, after the chapel hour. Mr. McSween went on to say that the faculty has seen fit to rule that seniors will be allowed one week of cuts per semester, provided a grade of B or better has been made in the course the previous semester.

This concession is a continuance of the privilege now accorded to the entire student body. It will be remembered tha tthe catalogue for next year bore the announcement that this cut allowance is to be removed after the

Preliminaries Held For Today's Meet

The preliminaries of the State meet, that much-tooted affair of South Carolina trackdom, were run off yesterday afternoon, on Johnson field. No records were broken. The men who could have broken them were content to qualify and conserve their energies for the finals today. The only men who really "put out" were those who could not break records anyway, and were struggling to so much as qualify for the big doings.

The results of the two heats in the century made it apparent that the field in this event would be an exceptionally fast one. In the first heat, Hogrefe and Harvin came clear for the first two places, while Green of P. C., and Rubenstein of Carolina, tied for third honors. It was decided that the only fair way to settle the matter was to make room for seven men in the finals, instead of six. The second heat served to qualify Ritchie of Presby-

Jackson Heads S. K. A. Frat

Sigma Kappa Alpha, local honorary scholastic order of Presbyterian college, held a meeting after chapel on Friday morning, May 3rd, for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year. As has been the custom in the past, A. O. Jackson, as the leading man of the senior class in scholarship, was elected to the office of president. He succeeds W. D. Allair, high man of the graduating class. Jackson immediately took charge of the meeting and proceeded to receive nominations for the other offices.

For vice-president, C .W. Grafton, of Haichow, China, was named. Grafton is second in scholarship among the rising senior class. J. B. Green, of Atlanta, Ga., was elected secretary-treasurer. Green stands second in the list of rising juniors.

The membership of the club consists of those men elected by the faculty and initiated last week. They are, in order:

To the senior order: A. O. Jackson, C. W. Grafton, R. T. Gillespie, W. B. McCall, R. S. Crawford.

To the junior order: W. L. Plaxico, J. B. Green, O. A. Dunlap, J. W. Walkup.

To the sophomore order: G. K. Smith, R. H. Gillespie, H. H. Welch, V. S. White, R. B. Ferguson, and W. P. Ferguson.

[illegible] kindly consider [illegible] the discussion, and it is expected that a large number of students will be there.

The Y. M. C. A. has held a wonderful place in student life during the past year. Especially did it attract interest and awaken thought through the series of meetings conducted in February and March by Dr. Brimm. During these meetings, which took the form of open forum discussions, many questions of vital interest to students were thrashed out. In each case Dr. Brimm opened with a short outline of the subject as he saw it. Then the meeting was thrown open for popular comment or questions. The response not only in numbers attending, but in frank discussion was encouraging. It served to prove to the students themselves that the "Y" could hold a place of really vital interest in their daily affairs.

But these days are not over. Although it is not yet decided what will be the policy and program of the new cabinet for next year, it is certain that this organiation will see to it that the Y. M. C. A. keeps up its hold on student interest and activity. With the cooperation of the student body the Y will surely become the greatest force on the campus of Presbyterian college.

Mr. McSween himself is intensely interested in the development of a stronger [illegible] at P. C. He has placed himself squarely behind the cabinet, and will no doubt give many helpful suggestions to them as they plan next year's work. With his dynamic personality behind the movement, and with the excellent cabinet that is now at work, we may be sure the P. C. Young Men's Christian Association will become, with the cooperation of students, a fine force for good in the life of everyone concerned.

SENIOR PRIVILEGES

The rather pleasant news regarding senior privileges has been enthusiastically received. The seniors themselves, of course, since they are the first direct beneficiaries, are very well pleased, to put it mildly. Furthermore, because every student expects to one day become a senior, there has been further rejoicing. After the rather dark days that followed the appearance of the catalogue, with its gloomy message in regard to cuts, this little ray of sunshine has done much to brighten things.

To be sure, the freshman may find that the prospects of cuts in his final year is not enough to make his eyes sparkle as yet; but when he comes to the eve of the Great Day, he will find that there is something infinitely delightful in the idea of being able to take a cut now and then, when in a pinch. And after all, the years pass quickly, and even a freshman will be surprised how soon his day will come.

NEXT WEEK

Next week will see the winding up of things. Activities and teams will begin to clear decks for action. Home [illegible] it has not already [illegible] and prepare for a short period of calm [illegible] Parris Island [illegible] and Clemson, will [illegible] Arabs, and [illegible] And in a men next Saturday, May 11th, the S. I. A. A. track meet in Clinton will mark the last event that does not bear the stamp of commencement.

The days that are at once happy and sad, are drawing on. There is happiness at the prospect of a season of rest and relaxation from the undeniably strenuous existence at college. Among the graduating seniors, there is no doubt an eagerness to get out and into the field where they hope and expect to conquer.

And yet, through it all, there will necessarily move an undertone of sadness. For many it will not crop up until the whistle of the train brings home forcibly the realization that the time has at last come for the severing of ties that are closer than we ever admit, even to ourselves. The "hard-heartedest' of them all will surely find that there is a spot in his [illegible] that has been [illegible]

Next to personal friendship, there will be the strong force that is called loyalty. It is a tenderness that we can [illegible] when the time comes to leave the place where we have struggled and triumphed and failed. Some are already feeling this queer tug at the heart-strings. Others, perhaps, will never feel it. But for the majority of us there will come, on commencement day as never before, a realization of what P. C. means to us.

THE PaC-SaC

Especially for the members of the graduating class, the PaC-SaC will be a priceless thing. In it they will be able to find a diary of the things that have happened during their last and most glorious year. They will find it something that they can look back on with the pride of achievement. It will be an embodiment of all the sweet memories they most want to cherish.

To the rest of the students, the year book will be a tie that will connect them with those who have gone. It will be a reminder of associations that have been beautiful and inspiring. It will bring back, on a moment's notice, faces, some of which we shall, perhaps, never see again.

Every PaC-SaC staff leaves behind it a legacy to the college that they are seldom credited with. Most people do not realize how much heart-ache and worry are bound up between the [illegible] of a copy-book. Many people will never know of the nights that have been spent in real work before the finished product could be submitted to the students. It is hardly possible for the average person to conceive of all the things, big and little, that can go wrong before it is all over. And yet the staff must meet and solve all these difficulties. True, there is considerable honor attached to the editorship of the PaC-SaC, but there are few editors who do not realize ere the task is done that the honor is a little thing compared to the work that it required. Truly it is a work of love.

PHYSICAL ED

A notice on the bulletin board this week served to remind students that everyone will be required to take part in the athletic program that has been planned for next year. It is understood that a certain amount of exercise or gym work will be required of all students beginning next fall.

Of course those who are constantly out for one or another of the various branches of sports will not be affected. It is not for them that the new system has been devised. Rather is it for these boys, who, either for pressure of academic work or lack of interest, fail to get the proper physical training and development.

Early next fall a physical exam card will be made out for every man. This will carry such details as chest measurement, height, weight, muscle measurements, eye, ear, and nose condition, and others. This kind of exam will be made each year, to check up on those who are showing improvement, and to offer aid to those who are not. A [illegible] of this kind [illegible] thing. It discourages the lounge-lizards from neglecting their physical [illegible] and provides a [illegible] for the student body as a whole. In addition, it may possibly bring to light many good prospects for athletic teams, who for various reasons have never thought it worth while to come out for the team.

PUBLICITY

Just the old, old question of publicity again. Just a mild curiosity about one or two little things. The realization has now come that it is no use to try to ask for publicity—unless it's someone else that it victorious, and then we get plenty of it.

P. C. goes to Atlanta and defeats Emory university in track. As far as South Carolina is concerned, there is nothing in the papers except the usual notices about the premier of Jugo-Something having a second wife divorced, and some little town in Utah puts in a new sewage system.

A P. C. man (and P. C., after all, is [illegible] Carolina's glory), wins a first place at the Tech relays. If it [illegible] any other college in the state, [illegible] would have been headlines two inches high on the sport page. But as it is, P. C. achievement warrants notice by one paper in the state. The rest of them smile kindly behind their darkglasses and continue their heavy slumbers. We give up!

WATER, WATER, EVERYWHERE!

If next week repeats the performance of this week, there will surely be a good wading meet next Saturday. Coming on top of these days of rain, another week of it would make the track and field so sloppy as to kill all interest in the meet. However, there's still life, and consequently there still remains a spark of hope. Preparations are going forward for the biggest and best meet Clinton or any other place in South Carolina has ever seen.

EXCHANGE

Yale's Preferences

The university seniors, according to the list of preferences in the annual class vote announced recently in The Yale Daily News, prefer a Phi Beta Kappa key to a major "Y" earned in ports, incline towards Harvard as their favorite college next to Yale, and in answer to the question, "What man, now living, do you admire most?" cast a tie vote for Col. Charles A. Lndbergh and "my father." They believe English to be the most valuable subject, and psychology the least valuable.—U. of Ga. Red and Black.

As the Movies Make It

The college life pictures have achieved an immense popularity with the American public as a whole, as evidenced by the multiplicity of pictures that have been produced upon this theme. But the tide is turning against them. The American collegians are rising in rightful indignation against these biased and Midas-tainted pictures.

We see from a press report the other day that the manager of the theatre at Princeton has cancelled his booking for "Varsity," because he states he does not desire to have his theatre wrecked.—Clipped.

"Blow Some My Way"

The University of Vermont was recently donated a generous supply of cigarettes by the manufacturers of Old Golds, a full carton being given to each student in order to win him to that brand.

If it worked, and perhaps it did, there is now "Not a Scoff in a School Full," up at Vermont.—Gamecock.

NOTED WOMAN TO SPEAK HERE

Hon. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Wyoming's Former Governor, To Be Heard Here In Vitally Interesting Lecture.

From out of the West "where women are women" comes Hon. Nellie Tayloe Ross of Wyoming, who has the distinction of having been the first woman-governor in the United States. Mrs. Ross will lecture here at the coming Redpath Chautauqua this month, her subject being "The Governor Speaks."

There is nothing of the strident feminist about Mrs. Ross. She is essentially charming and womanly. "To the eye," says a noted writer, "she is everything a woman politician should not be, according to popular conviction. She is pretty, stylish and above all, feminine. She is slight in stature, and no weight worries have as yet assailed her."

But she has convictions and the courage of them, and as governor of Wyoming she hung up a record which will always be an inspiraiton to her sex. Her ability was not only recognized in her own state, but she achieved nation-wide recognition. So much so that Chauncey Depew, in the New York Press, said, "In the light of the efficiency and ability displayed by Gov. Nellie Tayloe Ross of Wyoming, I see no reason why a woman should not make a good president."

Mrs. Ross is a magnetic, compelling speaker, and her lecture here will be of outstanding interest. She is a popular contributor to leading magazines. No woman in the country is better qualified to discuss the place that women may and should take in the affairs of the nation.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO COME SOON

Two Summer Conferences At Presbyterian College Next Month. Strong Faculties Are Announced.

The Young People's intermediate and senior summer conferences will be held at the Bresbyterian college of this city, on June 12-18 and June 18-25.

The intermediate conference is being inaugurated for the first time. It will appeal to boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 15 years. The young people will be divided into clans and will have a daily program somewhat similar to the Young People's conference, but less strenuous.

Col. Joseph H. Cudlipp of Baltimore, head of the Young People's division in the the State Sunday school work in Maryland, will have charge of the conference. Associated with him will be Mrs. Cudlipp, Mrs. Geo. W. Sheffer, synodical field worker; Rev. S. J. L. Crouch of Clemson college; Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Bryan of Whitmire, and Rev. Marshall Dendy of Newberry.

The Senior Meet

The senior conference, June 18-25, will again be presided over by the Rev. C. K. Douglas of Manning, as manager. Mrs. W. O. Brownlee of Guerrant, Ky., will serve as dean, and John Holland Hunter as registrar and treasurer. It is expected that fully three hundred young people will matriculate for the convention which will be the ninth of its kind held under the auspices of the Presbyterian synod of south carolina.

Program and Faculty

The following program and faculty has been announced for the week:

Rev. B. R. Lacy, Jr., D. D., Bible.
Rev. John McSween, inspirational addresses.
Rev. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., D. D., Presbyterian fundamentals.
Rev. H. W. Pratt, D. D., story of the Presbyterian church.
Rev. Flournoy Shepperson, D. D., stewardship.
Rev. Donald W. Richardson, D. D., foreign missions.
Mrs. H. L. Cockerham, home missions.
Rev. Homer Hammontree, evangelism.
Rev. S. K. Phillips, Christian Endeavor.
Mrs. George W. Sheffer, Sunday school methods.
Mrs. W. J. Roddey, Jr., recreation and group games.
Rev. John W. Davis, chief councillor for boys.
Mrs. F. L. Martin, chief councillor for girls.
Mrs. W. O. Brownlee, dean of conference.
Rev. C. K. Douglas, conference manager.
Mrs. John H. Hunter, registrar and treasurer.
Mr. Hammontree will lead the singing and the vesper service.
The athletics will again be directed by Mr. Phillips.

McSween Talks At 'Y' Session

'At the weekly meeting of the campus Y. M. C. A. Wednesday night, O. W. Chapin, who was recently elected vice-president of the organization for the coming year, gave a report of his trip to Columbia last week where he attended the State Y. M. C. A. convention which was held at Twin Lakes near Columbia. Many of the leaders of Y work in the state were present and gave inspiring and instructive talks on current campus problems as they are found in modern educational institutions. The object of the Y. M. C. A. work was defined as being to make as many men as possible Christians and to help them to maintain the standards of Christianity once they have been attained.

Following Mr. Chapin's report, President McSween was called upon, and he delivered a brief extemporaneous lecture with his customary charm and forcefulness. He stressed the idea of applying Christian principles all through the week instead of merely once a week at the Y meeting. He also called upon the Y to present to the students an aggressive and definite program for their edification. Any organization that survives must be a militant one and must never be allowed to become stagnated and polluted.

At the conclusion of the meeting President Barron of the Y cabinet, asked the students for their hearty support in making the Y an increasing force for good on the campus and in lifting the moral plane of the college to an even higher plane than it holds at present.

PRELIMINARIES HELD FOR TODAY'S MEET

terian, Hane of Clemson, and Eppes of Carolina.

Since only four men could run in the finals of the 220 yard dash, and the low hurdles, these events took the nature of real competition. In the 220 yard dash, Hogrefe and Harvin qualified in one heat, while Ritchie and Hane made good in the other. The low hurdles races were perhaps the prettiest of the day. Three heats were run off, making it necessary for the judges to pick the first in each heat and the fastest second man. Those to qualify were Blakeny of Clemson, Boineau of Carolina, and Pearce and Marshall of P. C.

In the high barriers, Blakeny led one heat to the tape in 16.2 seconds. He was followed by Boineau of Carolina, who will also see the finals. The second heat was taken by Kennedy of Carolina, who also clocked the distance in 16.2. Green of P. C., finished second but was disqualified for knocking over too many hurdles. The privilege of running in the finals thus fell to Lachicotte of Clemson, and Rhodes of Furman.

Ritchie led one heat of the quarter in an easy 53.5, while Green of Clemson, taped the other in 54.5.

champions, is bringing a strong team.

Presbyterian will present a white hope in its trio of sprinters, Hogrefe, Ritchie, and Green. Hogrefe, winner of the broad jump at the Tech relays, is regarded as a sure thing for that event.

Little is known of the strength of the other teams that are entered, but Oglethorpe is practically sure of fifteen points through Eubanks, the lithe young athlete who won the high jump at Tech, and placed second in the high sticks.

It has been announced that Coach Alexander, of Georgia Tech, will referee the meet, and Stegman, of Georgia, will be the starter. The judges will be Meeks, Doonan, and Thomas.

Mother: "I simply can't afford to buy you a new slicker every week!"

Collegiate: "But, Ma, I gotta be in style and have my girl's picture on it, don't I?"

They grinned when the waiter spoke to me in Scotch. He was tight.

Societies Hold Weekly Meets

The literary societies held their regular meetings on Tuesday night. Prof. Gignilliat made a short talk before both groups, planning the work for next year and getting suggestions from the members as to certain improvements that would aid the work. During this next session Prof. Seegers will have charge of forensic activities and will undoubtedly be of great aid to the debating teams. Prof. Swedenberg will assist in the work, and his experience along this line while in school here will enable him to give valuable suggestions from time to time. It is hoped that with such splendid assistance P. C. will be able to put out a real debating team next year and that a great deal of interest will be taken in it by the students.

The program given in the Pikadelt society was as follows: A humorous talk by R. M. Fraser, current events by S. Eubanks, and an extemporaneous speech by J. I. Copeland. The program for the Eukosmian society was in the form of a presidential campaign. Snipes nominated Tom Carr for the Democratic candidate for president, and Brigman nominated Jeff as the candidate for vice-president. White and Myers nominated Henry Austinn and A. Mutt for the Republican candidates. Hamilton made a talk on Indian medicine men and magicians.

HOSEMEN WIN FROM EMORY

achievements were a tie for first in the high jump, a first in the shot-put, a second in the broad jump, and places in the discus and javelin.

For Presbyterian, Ritchie annexed the most counters, his total being fifteen. This flashy sprinter was caught by Emory officials at the remarkable time of ten seconds flat for the hundred yard dash. He is one of the four men who have ever made this time on Emory's track, the others being Hogrefe, of P. C., Charlie Paddock, and a University of Georgia man of past fame. In the quarter, Ritchie came from behind of the last curve to tie the Georgia record established by Kontz, of Tech, last year's conference champion. The time in this race was 52 seconds. In the 220, Ritchie took first with 22.8 seconds.

Martin, running his first mile race, came in with first honors in the creditable time of four minutes 50.2 seconds. Green took the high barriers, while Hogrefe annexed the broad jump to complete the total of Presbyterian's first places.

The summaries follow:

100-yard dash: First, Ritchie, P. C.; second, Hogrefe, P. C.; third, Vogel, Emory. Time, 10 seconds flat.

220-yard dash: First, Ritchie, P. C.; second, Hogrefe, P. C.; third, Vogel, Emory. Time. 22.8 seconds.

440-yard dash First: Ritchie, P. C.; second, Jalouk, Emory; third, H. Wyatt, P. C. Time, 52 seconds flat.

880-yard run: First, Roberts, Emory; second, Ketchum, P. C; tnird, Emory. Time, 2 minutes, 7 seconds.

Mile run: First, Martin, P. C.; second, Nunan, Emory; third, Ketchum, P. C. Time 4 minutes, 50.2 seconds.

Two-mile run: Frist, Emory; second, Means, P. C.; third, Emory.

High hurdles: First, Green, P. C.; second, Hendryx, Emory; third, Wyatt, P. C. Time, 16.4 seconds.

Low hurdles: First, Pearce, P. C.; second, Marshall, P. C.; third, Emory. Time, 26.2 seconds.

Shot Put: First, Logan, Emory; second, Templeton, P. C.; third, Emory. Distance, 42 feet, 3 inches.

Pole vault: First, Logan, Emory; Fewell, P. C.; and Hitchcock, Emory, tie. Height, 11 feet, 3 inches.

High jump: First, Logan, Emory; second, Dell, Emory; third, Wyatt and Grafton, P. C. Height, 5 feet, 10½ in.

Discus: First, Logan, Emory; second, Crawford, Emory; third, Templeton, P. C.

Javelin: First, Crawford, Emory; second, Gosnell, P. C.; third, Templeton, P. C.

Broad jump: First, Hogrefe, P. C.; second, Logan, Emory; third, Green, P. C. Distance, 22 feet.

Relay: First, Emory. Time, 3 minutes, 34.4 seconds.

Prof. Sturgeon At Chemistry Meet

During the past week, Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, of the chemistry department, has been absent from the campus. On Sunday he left the sunny clime of the Southland to visit Columbus, Ohio, where he is attending the meetings of the American Chemical society. It is understood that his plan is to return to the campus in time to see the track meet this afternoon, but at the time of going to press this has not been confirmed. However, Professor Sturgeon is a dyed-in-the-wool track fan, besides serving as an official in all P. C. meets.

SENIORS GET ALLOWANCE

current college year. This step was taken because the faculty judged that students were abusing the privilege and taking the wrong attitude toward absences.

Students who are planning to carry courses next session that they are not carrying now, will have the opportunity to transfer their good grades to count for those courses. That is, the undrstanding is that sneiors will be allowed a week of cuts in as many courses as they are now making B or better.

Mr. McSween said that it was his hope that this action would be made a permanent thing as a senior privilege. Students of the lower classes will no doubt hail this with enthusiasm.

The ruling made by the faculty was after consideration of a petition offered by the present junior class. For some time the faculty has been considering several ways in which some special concession could be made to seniors. The present step was considered to be the most practical, as well as the most desired on the part of those concerned.

They Get a Full Bag, Too

The fearful dean should read any "What Young Men Are Wearing" column in the magazines that cater to college youth. There college men are being told that a neat conservative appearance is a "valuable asset" and that "anyone in the business world who hopes to make good is lost without it." The greater manufacturers depict in full-page ads the terrible tragedies that befall those who have no "Sox-Appeal" and the Arrow collar people are out gunning for the informal roll-collared shirt of the out-of-style "drug-store cowboy." Even the coonskin coat is passing. — The Davidsonian.

Montaville Flowers To Speak At Approaching Chautauqua On Vital Subject To Young People.

"What Young America Is Thinking," is the subject of the challenging lecture which Montaville Flowers, brilliant publicist and educator, will deliver here at the comnig Redpath Chautauqua—a lecture devoted to the vitally interesting subject of what is going on in the intensely active minds of the young people of today.

This address is the result of an unusual experiment in education. In one year Mr. Flowers addressed over 100,000 high school students in fourteen states, delivering a message which brought out the mental attitudes of American youth on basic life subjects.

Nothing like this experiment had ever been tried before, and Mr. Flowers' investigations brought him into unusual prominence. Articles by him have appeared in such magazines as World's Work; and the Reader's Digest has printed many of these articles in shorter form. Newspaper editorials and reviews have conveyed his ideas to a tremendous reader public. His work has secured the enthusiastic endorsement of the educators of the nation.

Mr. Flowers' lecture appeals equally to young and old.

igers Claw Their Way To Victory With Presbyterian a Close Second. Four Records Smashed During Afternoon's Festivities.

The Tigers of Clemson college, reating their performance of a year ro, captured the State Track meet, ld in Clinton on Saturday afternoon, ay 4th. Their total of 6- points gave em a comfortable margin over Presterian college, winners of second ace with 49 1-2 points. The other ams competing were University of uth Carolina, with 30 1-2, and Furan university, with 24. The Tigers mped into an early lead and mained it throughout, placing in every ent.

Four records went by the board dur- g the course of the afternoon's fesvities. In the first event, Lineberger, Clemson, won the mile run to estabsh a new record of four minutes, 38.8 conds. This was nearly a second bet- r than the mark set by Boyce of uth Carolina, when he captured e event in the 1927 meet with four inutes 39.4 seconds.

The second mark to go down before e flying heels of the runners, also ent to Clemson college. On this oc- sion it was Andrews, the lanky o-miler, who bettered the previous cord of 10 minutes 17.6 seconds in s event. The present record stands 10 minutes 13 seconds.

Only one field event record was oken. This time it was Smith of rman, who achieved the honor. Af- r Kennedy of Carolina had already attered the record of 174 feet, 7

Future Ministers Formally Organize

Last Thursday those students that contemplate the ministry as life work organized for the purpose of working on the campus as an individual group to better the Christian conditions on the campus and make a study of the Presbyetrian church in its government and other matters pertaining to the ministry.

It is the idea of the ministerial club to group together with a purpose that has not heretofore been practiced at P. C. There are many that are going into the ministry and do not know the work, the church organization or the problems which they must face in their life's work. Their aim will be first to aid in campus activities and then make a study of these other matters concerning future work. They hope to carry on a sort of class in some of these problems with a member of the faculty or the president as leader.

Little will be done with this until next year. A committee will be chosen to draw up a constitution so the

FINAL CURTAIN FOR COLLEGIAN

Editor Martin Closes Career As He Presents Well-Rounded Issue. Reviews Given.

The spring number of The Collegian, the last issue of the 1928-1929 staff, came off the press Friday. Up to usual form, perhaps even better, J. R. B. Martin has put into this number stories, poems, and reviews which make The Collegian of interest to the students and give those of literary taste and ability an opportunity to express themselves. Considering the financial handicaps "Bruce" had to work under this year, he is to be commended for the issues which he and the staff have published.

The title alone to F. M. Hart's "Pin Diggers" will cause one to pause and investigate the contents. Well written, maybe a little exaggerated (as college stories are wont to be these days), Frances has cleverly portrayed the co-ed, no, not as a gold-digger this time, but as a frat pin collector.

"Night Thoughts" is an interesting story, attractively written and so holds the reader's attention that the description, which fills the paragraphs, helps and practically makes the story without the plot. It leaves the reader to wonder as to the outcome—yet is satisfying.

"Beauty for Ashes" and "From the Life of a Wanderer" are well worth reading and interesting stories.

"Spring Fever," the heading to a roup of poems, gives one the impression of "In the spring a young man's fancy—etc." However, they are to be

RELAY DECIDES CLOSEST MEET HELD HERE IN RECENT YEARS

Smith of Furman, Breaks Javelin Record. Brady of Louisville, Betters Jump Mark. Edmunds of Transylvania, Eclipses Vault Record. Eubanks, Hogrefe Star.

By T. H. Grafton

Placing in seven events, the Presbyterian college track team took the thirty-fourth meeting of the S. I. A. A. athletes at Clinton last Saturday afternoon. The team scores were as follows: Presbyterian 29; Mississippi college 25; Oglethorpe 25; Georgetown 19; Furman 17; Louisville 12½; Louisiana State Normal 15; Southwestern 8½; Transylvania 8; Millsaps 3.

The meet went to the Blue Stockings on the relay, where a little boy named Wyatt, and another one, equally little, named Ritchie, stepped out in front before the flying feet of a great quartette from Louisiana State Normal. Ritchie, who had lost the 440 yards run by attempting to set a new state record for the first half of it, came back in this event, and his last quarter was one of the most sparkling runs ever seen on the local track. It was worthy of a great athlete, after being totally eclipsed earlier in the day, to come through with the magnificent spurt that enabled him to pass two runners and clinch the flag in the closing moments of the meet as a well-filled grandstand rose and cheered in the delirium of joyous triumph.

Another little man, and all of P. C.'s point-earners were little, turned back from the finish of the 100 yards dash with a tired but happy expression on a war-like countenance. The hand of Lonnie McMillian was laid on his shoulder, and the two greatest athletes that ever wore the colors of

Reception For The Graduates

A reception will be given by the College Dames, in honor of the graduating class, on the Plaza of Presbyterian college campus at five o'clock on the afternoon of Monday, May 27. All of the members of the class of '29, and their guests, are expected to be present at this, the final social function of the year.

The College Dames have cooperated wonderfully with every organization on the campus to make the social year of the college one of great success. The group has always been ready with excellent suggestions and material aid whenever it has been needed. In every case their efforts and interest have served to "put across" some event in fine style. However, it is felt that this reception, which is to be solely in their own hands, will surpass all other functions of this kind to stand as one of the brightest spots of the year. The graiuating class and their guests will not fail to be present on Monday afternoon, May 27th.

The Blue Stocking takes the liberty at this time of expressing to the College Dames, on behalf of the student body of Presbyterian college, the heartiest appreciation for their interest and help during the past year.

Means To Head Cinder Path Men

At a meeting of the varsity track team held on Saturday evening, May 11th, immediately after supper, J. E. Means was elected captain for the coming year. Means has just completed his second year with the cinder path enthusiasts. Asa two-miler of merit, he has shown the resolution and tenacity that best characterize the spirit of P. C. With a remarkable improvement of form that resulted from hard and conscientious work on the track, Means has stepped out this spring as one of the best distance men in the state. He well deserves the honor that his team-mates have conferred upon him. Means is a member of Alpha Kappa Pi social fraternity. .

Rising Sophomores Name Bill Collins

At a meeting of the freshman class, held on Tuesday morning, May 7th, Bill Collins of Chester, was elected president for next year. Collins was prominent in dramatics this year, as well as in sports. He made his class numerals in both football and track.

D. M. McNaull of Columbia, was named vice-president of the class. For secretary, R. H. Gillespie of Atlanta, Ga., was chosen, while Senter was elected treasurer. G. C. Adams is historian, and George Smith, poet.

COLONEL GLASGOW

[illegible], who P. C. has a pretty well established R. O. T. C. unit, things move along smoothly enough. The battalion is taken as a matter of course, and it is doubtful if many of the students know anyhting at all about its past history. For there was a time when everything was not like a bed of roses for the P. C. Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Less than [illegible] was problematical as to whether or not the war department would grant a unit at Presbyterian college. The course was not very popular at that time, nor was the size of the student body sufficient to furnish the personnel required. It looked as if P. C. was not "laid out" for military training.

However, in the fall of 1920 Colonel Edward L. Glasgow arrived to assume charge of the unit. He at once took hold with characteristic decision and purpose, and set about to put things on a sure footing. From that time till the present the prestige and popularity of military training has grown by leaps and bounds. Today it is not a question of getting enough officers, but of selecting the required number from the overflowing list of applicants.

Ever since P. C. men have been attending the summer camp session at Camp McClellan, they have made a good [illegible] of the [illegible] and there is a great deal [illegible] P. C. has ranked second, third, and have never ranked far from the top. When one stops to consider that P. C. is, perhaps, the smallest college [illegible] corps area, the record looks good.

The major share of the credit for this remarkable improvement goes to Colonel Glasgow. He has labored patiently and [illegible] nearly a decade, never allowing himself to become discouraged, never admitting defeat. As he looks back over his handiwork, he may well feel proud.

Aside from his work in Clinton in a military capacity, Colonel Glasgow has won the admiration and love of all with whom he has come in contact. He has established himself as a good citizen, a good neighbor, and a good friend. Above all, Colonel Glasgow is all that is meant by the term "a Christian gentleman." He is always courteous, always thoughtful, always friendly, always kind.

It is with regret that the students, the college, and the town of Clinton, will bid the Colonel and his family, farewell. They will all do so with the knowledge that Colonel Glasgow has made a definite contribution to the welfare of Presbyterian College.

SENIORS

"The tumult and the shouting dies—the captain and the kings depart." Some of them have already departed, and others will follow later in the week, to return to the campus for a few days during commencement week. This has been the big year for the seniors. This has been the year when they have received their greatest honors. This year they have been leaders—have been smiled upon benignly by the professors—and have had the dominant place in the annual.

Next year another class will come into glory. For a few months it will have the wheel and student affairs will run accordingly. Then there will come another commencement week—and another class will have gone forth to become a memory.

Seniors are probably realizinz that college was [illegible] happier than many of the years that lie ahead. That is the way of things. We treat them lightly until they are gone and then our only wish is that we had made the most of them while they were with us. College, after all, in spite of the physical labor of making athletic teams and the [illegible] mental labor of passing courses, is just a huge club. How many of us will ever have a job that [illegible] most all months off—and all the evenings? How many of us will be able to rest for an hour during vacant periods, at the office?

And then, of course, there are two sides to this regretting business. Now that the seniors are ready to leave, we begin to see, more than ever, how much we need them.

LAST BLUE STOCKING

This is the last Blue Stocking for the college year 1928-1929. The advertising manager can now hibernate until next fall, and the spiders can get to work on the old editorial typewriter. No more will the present freshmen taste of the terrors of folding papers of a Saturday afternoon, let peace and serenity descend into our midst.

This is by way of being a gentle farewell to the student body on the part of the staff. Here's hoping it will be a great summer for everyone and that everyone will be ready to go when registration day comes next September.

Remember that next year is slated to be the greatest in the history of Presbyterian college. Remember to bring several freshmen with you. Tell them about our gym, with its new swimming pool, our fine dormitories, our good food, our excellent track—and our great leader, Mr. McSween. Next year the freshman class will be the biggest we have ever had. And it is only the beginning. P. C. will continue to have big freshmen classes, and big sophomore classes. The day is past when P. C. may be regarded as a small college without prospects.

The town of Clinton has agreed to raise $50,000 for the college. With this evidence of confidence, and with the determination and untiring efforts that has been shown by all who are connected with the college, there is not a chance that P. C. will not step up in the next few years.

THE COLLEGIAN

With the just-published Spring Issue of The Collegian, Mr. Bruce Martin, the editor, sheathes his pen. There will be no more manuscripts for him to worry over, and no more copy to read at the laast minute. With this issue he has fulfilled his duties.

Mr. Martin has plenty to be proud of. He has succeeded in getting out a magazine that has been really interesting to students on the campus. Not only that, but exchange comments from other colleges have been highly complimentary. His magazine has been full of interesting features that bear the distinctive stamp of the editor.

Next fall Louis Williamson is to take hold as the editor-elect. He will find that he has a hard task before him in maintaining the high standard that has been set by his predecessor. However, Williamson has been working steadily for the magazine during the past years, and has all the qualities of a good editor for a publication of this type. He is expected to give to the students of Presbyterian college the best and most interesting Collegian that has ever been printed.

THE BLOCK "P" BANQUET

It is intended that the Block "P" banquet shall become a permanent feature of the social life at Presbyterian college. For some time it has been felt that some function of this kind should have a place on the program of the college year. It serves a two-fold purpose in giving athletes a chance to celebrate, while at the same time it brings the boys together to receive their certificates. In addition, it offers some recognition and distinction to men who have worked hard to bring glory to their alma mater.

This kind of banquet is an improvement on previous years. Up until this time the plan has been to have a football dinner, but none for any other men. The present arrangement is an acknowledgement that other teams are gaining in importance and in recognition. It offers an added incentive toward athleitc achievement.

Next year the Block "P" banquet will have gained a sure footing as one of the most delightful of P. C. social events. It is certainly to be hoped that every year it will be as pleasant for all concerned as was this, the first one.

EXAMS

Exam-time has once more come around. Next Monday you will begin to see boys walking around with that harassed look on their faces. You will sometimes see boys coming from exams with a dazed look on their otherwise intelligent looking faces—the same expression that one sometimes has when unexpectedly hit below the belt-line. Yes, professors sometimes have an uncanny way of piercing you with a glance that ferrets out every little passage that you don't know.

And then, of course, there is that other type, the fellow who will blandly hand you enough questions to keep you busy until day after tomorrow. And he is always the stickler for having papers in on time!

Once in a lifetime one meets with the unparalleled rarity of the professor who neither makes 'em hard nor long. You walk in. You jot down a few thoughts. You light a Murad and walk out. But beware of that kind, for more often than not they prove your destruction. Beware!

THE MINISTERIAL GROUP

The work planned by the newly-organized ministerial group will fill a crying need on the campus of Presbyterian college. Not only will it serve to stimulate religious activity on the campus, but it will also give ministerial candidates a chance to get used to public speaking of the kind they will later do as preachers. There is a fine opportunity for a group of this kind to do religious work in and around Clinton.

COACHES HERE AND THERE

There are coaches and coaches. Some are good sports and others are sometimes called by the same term. Last Saturday at the State Meet P. C. had a chance to see both kinds. Nor was P. C. the only one to see things.

NEWSPAPER POET TO APPEAR HERE

Miss Anne Campbell To Give Entertainment, "Everyday Poetry," At Approaching Chautauqua.

Anne Campbell of the Detroit News, who will give her delightful entertainment, "Everyday Poetry," at the coming Redpath Chautauqua here, is famed as the only woman in the country who writes a poem a day. Newspapers reaching between three and four million readers now carry daily a feature poem by this popular poet.

Miss Campbell's poems are notable for their sincerity, their optimism and the familiar, everyday things of which they tell. Her work is frequently compared to that of Edgar Guest.

"Everyday Poetry" is a friendly, intimate talk in which Anne Campbell tells her audience the adventures of a newspaper poet and where she finds fresh inspiration for a poem a day. She illustrates her talk with numerous readings from her poems, presented in the inimitable fashion that is Anne Campbell's very own.

Clemson Wins In Ninth Inning

With a six score rally in the ninth inning, Clemson broke a one to one deadlock to defeat Presbyterian college Tuesday, 7 to 1.

Clemson scored a run in the third inning but was tied in the eighth when Ross Lynn connected for a home run. In the ninth, after Clemson had made the winning run, Presbyterian began to make errors and coupled with weak pitching, the visitors easily ran up the large score.

Mahaffey, Clemson, pitched beautiful ball, allowing the Presbyterians only four hits. Young, Presbyterian, gave up only three hits until the ninth inning when he was relieved by Caldwell.

The Ghost of the Vagabond Son

By Himself

If a widower starts going out with the ladies too soon after the death of his wife, folks are more than likely to raise a howl, and the same thing applies to a ghost. If said spirit walks abroad in the land of the living too soon after leaving his mundane existence, there will certainly be considerable cain raised. Therefore this one who was officially buried on January 12, 1929, felt reluctant to put pen on paper and address his old audience. However, at this time, he feels that he may 'get by" with it.

In the first place, it was comorting to know that while one was conducting a column called "Week By Week At P. C." and this column was being cussed and discussed (mostly cussed), several boys were getting the credit who were entirely innocent. Among them were Paul Milus, "Shiek" Fraser, "Chip" Grafton and M. M. McInnis. Here and now I absolve them from this supposedly heinous act.

Now it so happened that one day since my "death," I was drinking—er—water of course—that I had found in an old cellar. It was very strong [illegible]. I mean water—of course I do—and the blooming stuff—I mean, don't you see—the water was kinder rancid—or something. Well, pretty soon I got real—darn it, I mean that I got to feeling pretty good. Finally I got so—I mean that I sat down on the cellar floor of course. And then, bloom my time if things didn't get to going funny. And I got to feeling so funny that I thought I was a Freshman at old P. C. again, and that the year was 1939. I will try to tell you something about my experiences if you are not already asleep.

Well, as I was saying, I was a freshman and the year was 1939. Mr. McSween was president and I overheard them getting up a committee to keep him from getting any more money for the college. It seems that he had already raised so much that the interest on the little bit that they had loaned out was bringing in some three or four million a year. And wait, here is the best news.

Long about 1935, Chicora and Converse hopped up and came shaking a leg into Clinton. And to save us, we couldn't get them gals to leave. No, sir, just camped on us, and made eyes at us, and blew kisses at us till it was too tantelizing for anything. Well, we just opened our arms and took them in. And since then, buddy, the prettiest girls in this merry old Southland have been P. C. co-eds.

But that ain't the worst by far. A whole lot of new rules have been made, and they are terrible. Yes, sir, something should be done about it. Here are a few of them:

Every boy must have at least five dates with a co-ed each week.

He must never leave without kissing her good-bye. (This rule is stringently enforced by Drs. Kennedy and Brimm.)

Every boy must propose to at least a half-dozen co-eds while attending said college. Diplomas will not be given men who cannot meet this requirement.

Every girl must consent to marry at least one boy while she is a resident here. She is urged by the faculty to take her time though, and most of them wait until their junior year to make this choice.

Boys and girls must hold hands while crossing the campus, going to and from meals, and especially when going up town.

Each boy must place his right arm around a co-ed during classes. He is also required to keep her entertained while the professor is talking. Failure to do this punished severely, by making the boy get up before the class and make a correct and unfaltering proposal to two fair damsels at the same time.

Finally, each student must faithfully promise upon his or her honor and upon his or her father's pocketbook that they will take the partner that they have chosen and elope on graduation day.

The dean announces that post graduate work on "Taking care of a nursery" will be offered next year. Please apply early.

Gentlemen, it is great to live, but this hangover is terrible. I'll never drink any—water, of course, any more. A mint julip suits me to a tea pot. Bon voyage, messieurs.

CLEMSON WINS ANNUAL STATE MEET

inches, set by the famous "Red" Smith of Furman in 1926, Smith came through with a remarkable throw that lodged in the turf exactly 177 feet 9 3-4 inches from the line.

The closing triumph of the meet was the relay, in which P. C.'s team, composed of Green, H. Wyatt, Hogrefe and Ritchie, shattered the existing record by more than five seconds to set a new mark at three minutes, 27.9 seconds. The old record was set by Fuurman in 1926, when Hammet, Meeks, Smith, and Kremer covered the mile in three minutes 33 seconds flat.

High point honors went to Roy Hogrefe, captain of the Hosemen. He amassed twelve and a quarter points when he took first in the broad jump, seconds in the century and furlong, and shared in the relay victory. Ritchie, also of P. C., stood second in the final reckoning by virtue of victories in the furling and quarter, and another slice of the relay triumph.

Besides winning the mile, Lineberger clumped the half-mile to win easily in 2:02.4. Lineberger is one of the most promising runners in South Carolina, running his races with a beautiful, easy stride and plenty of endurance.

The prettiest events of the day were the two-twenty dash and the low hurdles.In the first of these, Ritchie, Hogrefe, and Hane, the latter from Clemson, finished in the order named, with a scant yard between first and third places. The low hurdles was closely contested. All four men cleared the ninth barrier in the same stride, but Pearce of Presbyterian, nosed out Boineau of Carolina, for first place at the tape, with Marshall, a P. C. man, but a hair's-breadth behind.

The following sponsors were present: Miss Bill Putnam for Captain Roy Hogrefe, Presbyterian; Miss Elizabeth Young for Bob Fraser, P. C. manager. Miss Grace Moody for Carolina's captain; Miss Annie Sloan and Miss Gene Klaugh for the captain of Clemson's team;; Mrs. John McSween, Presbyterian, honorary; Miss Nell Hunter, Miss Rody Lane Brown, Miss Almena Milling. The meet was run off without any delays by Coach Walter Johnson of Presbyterian. Carter Newman, a Clemson track star of past days, and holder of the present state record in the half-mile, acted as starter. A great deal of credit is due the three P. C. managers, Fraser, and his two assistants, Kennedy and Jackson, for their work which put the track in such excellent shape.

The summaries follow:

100-yard dash: First, Hane, Clemson; second, Hogrefe, P. C.; third, Green, P. C.; fourth, Harvin, Clemson. Time, 10.1.

440-yard dash: First, Ritchie, P. C.; second, Powell, Furman; third, Jordan, Clemson; fourth, Wyatt, P. C. Time, 51.3.

120-yard high hurdles: First: Blakeney, Clemson; second, Kennedy, Carolina; third, Boineau, Carolina;; fourth, Lachicotte, Clemson. Time, 15.9.

220-yard dash: First, Ritchie, P. C.; second, Hogrefe, P. C.; third, Hane, Clemson; fourth, Harvin, Clemson. Time, 22.7.

880-yard run: First, Lineberger, Clemson; second, Powell, Furman; third, Ketchum, P. C.; fourth, Newman, Clemson. Time, 2:04.4.

220-yard low hurdles: First, Pearce, P. C.; second, Boineau, Carolina; third, Marshall, P. C.; fourth, Blakeney, Clemson. Time, 26.4.

Javelin: First, Smith, Furman; second, Kennedy, Carolina; third, O'Dell, Clemson; fourth, Beall, Carolina. Distance, 177 feet, 9 3-4 inches. New record. Old record, 174 feet, 7 inches.

Two-mile run: First, Andrews, Clemson; second, Finn, Clemson; third, Means, P. C.; fourth, Hearn, Clemson. Time, 10 minutes, 13 seconds. New record. Old record, 10:17.6.

Broad jump: First: Hogrefe, P. C.; second, Howard, Clemson; third, Green, P. C.; fourth, Boineau, Carolina. Distance, 22 feet, 6 3-4 inches.

Pole vault: First, Rogers, Carolina; second, Fewell, P. C.; and Craig, Carolina, tie; fourth, Adams, Ferguson, and Smith of Clemson. Height, 11 ft.

High jump: First, Kennedy, Carolina, and Rembert, Carolina, tie; Wyatt, P. C., Gosnell, P. C., O'Dell, Clemson, tie for third. Height, 5 feet, 9 inches.

Discus: First, Lester, Clemson; second, Davis, Clemson; third, Major, Furman; fourth, Templeton, P. C. Distance, 128 feet, 1-4 inches.

Shot put: First, Wood, Furman; second, Lester, Clemson; third, Vance, Clemson; fourth, Davis, Clemson. Distance, 38 feet, 5 1-2 inches.

One-mile run: First, Lineberger, Clemson; second, Vincent, Furman; third, Martin, P. C.; fourth, Cardwell, Carolina. Time, 4.38.8. New record. Old record, 4.39.4.

Relay: First, P. C., Green, Wyatt, Hogrefe, Ritchie; second, Furman; third, Clemson; fourth, Carolina. Time, 3.27.9. New record. Old record, 3.33.

BLOCK "P" FEAST IS INTRODUCED

honorary guests were W. J. Bailey, donor of the Bailey Memorial stadium; W. P. Jacobs, chairman of the recently organized Clinton $50,000 drive for Presbyterian college; John McSween, president of the college; Coach Walter A. Johnson; J. H. Hunter; Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, and Dr. J. B. Kennedy. Fifty-four letter-men, representing outstanding athletes in football, basketball, track, baseball, boxing, and tennis, were present to receive their certificates.

The excellent dinner was planned by Mrs. Myrtle Hunter, matron of Presbyterian college. It lived up in every way to the reputation that she has long held for events of this kind.

After the meal Roy Hogrefe said a few words as president of the Block "P" club. He then spoke of the generosity of Mr. Bailey, whose gift of $10,000 made possible the erection of the splendid stadium that stands at Johnson field. The first speaker of the evening was John McSween, president of the Presbyterian college. His message of commendation for the work of the athletes this year was preceded by his usual witty and delightful appetizer. Mr. McSween was followed by W. P. Jacobs.

The closing item of the program was a talk by Coach Walter Johnson. He thanked the assembled men for their faithfulness in their work for P. C. during the past year, speaking with especial warmth of the graduating men who have been laboring for four years on the field. After this, the certificates were awarded to the various men.

After the guests had left, the wearers of the "P" were asked to remain for a few minutes for the purpose of electing officers for next year. Philip A. Roberts, of Carthage, N. C., was named president for 1929-1930. The other officers elected were R. B. Caldwell of Chester, as vice-president, and R. T. Greene, of Black Mountain, N. C., as secretary-treasurer.

organization can begin the first thing next year. P. A. Roberts was elected as president, Hazelwood as vice-president, and J. H. Pruitt as secretry and treasurer. There are about thirty men in P. C. that are studying for ministerial work. Around these men a solid organization should develop that will take an outstanding part in the life of the campus.

PRESBYTERIAN WINS S. I. A. A. MEET

the Presbyterian college looked each other in the face. Hogrefe was about half of the P. C. team, and his scintillating run in the short dash, in which his twinkling legs carried him a full yard ahead of Adams of Georgetown second, Green, Presbyterian, third, and Farnsworth, Southwestern, fourth, reminded one of his palmier days two years ago when he ran away from runners in every competition. The time was 10 1-10 seconds. The Blue Stocking captain was also a winner in the broad jump, fourth in the 220 yards, and ran a fast leg on the winning relay.

In what was perhaps the greatest mile ever seen in South Carolina, Bailey of Louisiana State Normal, won out after being repeatedly challenged and displaced for the lead by Cates, Louisville, second, and Nall, Millsaps, third. The last quarter of this race was accomplished in sixty-two seconds,and the outcome remained undecided until the last stretch was reached. The time was 4:32.3.

Eubanks, Oglethorpe, was the individual star of the afternoon. He was an easy winner in both hurdle events, and won seconds in the high jump and broad jump.

Three records fell. Smith, Furman, allowed the javelin to escape from his fingers and wing a record-breaking flight of 187 feet 7 1-2 inches before Newton's Law of Universal Gravitation took charge and brought it back to Mother Earth. Edmonds, the skyscraper from Transylvania, brushed some of the cobwebs out of the heavens when he soared 12 feet 8½ inches in the pole vault, the best ever done in the state. And Brady, Louisville, a bespectacled lad from the great rum city, languidly lay out over the bar as it hung at 6 feet 1 3-8 inches.

A summary of local talent achievements shows that Hogrefe dispelled illusions as to his speed by annexing the hundred and taking fourth in the 220. Ritchie was third in the latter race. Ketchum, by one of his usual marvelous sprints, took fourth in the half-mile. Pre-meet dope fell by the boards in the low hurdles as Pearce and Marshall trailed the flashing Eubanks for second and third. The Blue Hosed runners were not favored to place in this event. Then Templeton scooped up a point in the javelin, and Hogrefe and Green made seven in the broad jump, the old P. C. standby for the garnering of history-making markers. And then, of course, that relay. Green was first, and ran a fast quarter, but Wyatt was slightly behind as he started out. His lap was a beautiful run, cutting down many yards of lead in the last moments. Hogrefe held his own, and Ritchie took the baton well up in second place. He trailed the leaders until the last curve was past, and went to the fore, winning by inches at the finish line.

The meet was the second association triumph for P. C., as the Blue Hosed gladiators had meerged triumphant from the Birmingham arena in 1927. The day marked the last appearance of Captain Hogrefe, Pearce, and Marshall, whose points totalled 17¾.

The summaries follow:

440-yard dash: First, Berry, Louisiana Normal, 59.9 seconds; second, Cochran, Mississippi college; third, Smith, Louisiana Normal; fourth, Kelly, Mississippi.

100-yard dash: First, Hogrefe, Presbyterian, 10.1 seconds; second, Adams, Georgetown; third, Green, Presbyterian; fourth, Farnsworth, Southwestern.

Shot put: First, Bell, Oglethorpe, 40 ft. 9 3-4 inches; second, Wood, Furman; third, Branch, Mississippi college; fourth, McKissick, Oglethorpe.

120-yard high hurdles: First, Eubanks, Oglethorpe, 15.6 seconds; second, Rhodes, Furman; third, Hawkins, Georgetown; fourth, Turner, Mississippi.

High jump: First, Brady, Louisville, 6 feet 1 3-8 inches; second, Eubanks, Oglethorpe; third, Edmonds, Transylvania; fourth, Jones, Mississippi.

Two-mile run: First Price, Mississippi, 10 minutes, 29.3 seconds; second, Wright, Southwestern; third, L. Johnson, Mississippi; fourth, Nall, Millsaps.

220-yard low hurdles: First: Eubanks, Oglethorpe, 25.7 seconds; second, Pearce, Presbyterian; third, Marshall, Presbyterian; fourth, Farnsworth, Southwestern.

Broad jump: First, Hogrefe, Presbyterian, 22 feet, 3-4 inch; second, Eubanks, Oglethorpe; third, Green, Presbyterian; fourth, Edmonds, Transylvania.

880-yard run: First, Williams, Louisville, 1 minute, 59.9 seconds; second, Hawkins, Georgetown; third, Powell, Furman; fourth, Ketchum, Presbyterian.

Javelin: First, Smith, Furman, 187 feet, 7 1-2 inches;; second, Allen, Georgetown; third, Wood, Furman; fourth, Templeton, Presbyterian.

220-yard dash: First, Adams, Georgetown, 26.6 seconds; second, Cochran, Mississippi;; third, Ritchie, Presbyterian; fourth, Hogrefe, Presbyterian.

Pole vault: First, Edmonds, Transylvania, 12 feet, 8 1-2 inches; second, Brady, Louisville, and Ford, Southwestern, tied; fourth, Turney, Mississippi.

Relay: First, Presbyterian, 3 minutes, 25.8 seconds; second, Louisiana State Normal; third, Georgetown; fourth, Mississippi. Presbyterian team, Green, Wyatt, Hogrefe and Ritchie.

Referee: Alexander, Georgia Tech; starter, Stegeman, Georgia.

VOLUME XI PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., SEPTEMBER 21, 1929 NUMBER 1

WORK BEGUN ON COLLEGE DRIVE

W. P. Jacobs Named General Chairman of State-Wide Campaign To Liquidate Debt.

The state-wide Presbyterian College Program of Deliverance will be headed by William P. Jacobs of this city, as general chairman, it was announced at a meeting of the board of trustees at the college on Tuesday.

Announcement also was made that C. M. Bailey had accepted the position of chairman for zone number 1 in the campaign. Zone number 1 is composed of Piedmont, South Carolina and Congaree presbyteries.

W. J. Bailey, it also was announced, has accepted the treasurership of the program.

At the Tuesday meeting members of the board—there were seventeen present, worked out details of the program which has as its goal the raising of $350,000 to clear away the college indebtedness and thus place the institution on a firm foundation for future growth.

Announcement of Mr. Jacobs' acceptance of the general chairmanship was made by Rev. John McSween, president of the college. Mr. Jacobs said he realized the deep responsibility he was undertaking and declared he was accepting the position only because he felt certain he would have the whole-hearted support of all members of the board and of all loyal Presbyterians in the synod of South Carolina.

Mr. Jacobs will head the work of organizing campaign forces in the eight Presbyteries of the synod of South Carolina. Campaign chairmen will be obtained in all the eight presbyteries, and these presbytery chairmen in addition will obtain chairmen for the groups into which the presbyteries

Ministerial Club Gets Good Start

Ministerial students will be active on the campus and in some of the smaller churches in and around Clinton this year. At a meeting of the Ministerial club on Saturday evening, September 14th, Dr. Jones and Dr. Brimm, of the faculty, made talks in which they outlined a tentative program for the year. The forty students who are now members of the organization expressed themselves as being in favor of giving aid to small churches by teaching Sunday school and Bible classes and by helping with the singing.

The club plans to cooperate in every possible way with Dr. Jones and Dr. Woodworth in their church work as well as with Dr. Sullivan, the touring evangelist for this section. Numbers will be sent out each Sunday to Lydia mill and to Watts mill as well as to Bethany and Owings churches and to the State Training school.

It is further planned to hold devotional meetings twice each week during the college year. These meetings will be held on the second and fourth Thursday evenings of each month. Definite programs have not yet been arranged for these meetings, but it is expected that plans will be ready for announcing at an early date. An executive committee, appointed to take charge of this matter, is now working on this phase of the work. The members of the committee are M. T. Murphy, E. E. Wade, N. P. Clinton, and J. H. Hazelwood.

Ministerial students who have not already affiliated with the club are urged to do so at once in order that they may be included in the schedules. As many men as care to join can be used each Sunday.

Local Club Gets Charter

The members of Chi Tau Epsilon fraternity wish to announce to their friends that the petition, presented to the Beta Kappa national fraternity last spring, was accepted at the summer conclave held in Jamestown, N. Y. The exact date of installation has not yet been set but is is expected sometime in the near future.

P. C. AGAIN GETS S. C. TRACK MEET

Blue Stockings To Be Hosts Again On May 3rd. Sturgeon Name Association President.

Charleston, Sept. 16.—Clinton, S. C. has been awarded the annual track meet of the South Carolina Intercollegiate association, and Presbyterian college will be host to the trackers on May 3.

This became known today in a statement from D. S. McAlister, of the Citadel, secretary, who was re-elected for another year, along with President H. E. Sturgeon, of Presbyterian college. The election took place at the annual meeting of the association at Presbyterian college.

Tennis again will be placed under direct supervision of the association, according to Secretary McAllister. Every state institution with the exception of Clemson, Erskine and University of South Carolina was represented at the meeting. Eligibility of football candidates was discussed, but none of the boys was thrown out.

Coach Tommy Scaffe, of Wofford, and Professor Petit, of the Furman law faculty, were named to the tennis committee, and given power to act on the date of the state tennis meet.

Next year's meeting will be held at Laurens.

Four New Men On P. C. Faculty

Presbyterian college opened the 1929-30 session with four new faculty members. Of these, one, Dr. St. Clair Hays, of Clinton, has been previously connected with the college, notably on the occasion of Dr. Hoy's leave of absence in the spring of 1928. Dr. Hays is association with the college this year as head of the department of biology, a position left vacant when Dr. W. E. Hoy accepted the headship of the same department at the University of South Carolina.

The vacancy left by the death, last winter, of Professor A. T. Fant, is being filled by Dr. Raymond J. Seeger, whose home is in Elizabeth, N. J. Dr. Seeger is an alumnus of Rutgers, where he was prominent in campus activities until his graduation, in 1926. His subsequent work in physics has been at Yale university. In every course taken in his three years of graduate work Dr. Seeger achieved a high scholastic standing, his work receiving its greatest recognition when he won the Loomis fellowship. This fellowship, bearing a stipend of $1500 is awarded annually to the candidate for the doctor's degree who stands highest in competitive examination covering the entire field of physics. The fact that Dr. Seeger won this honor would seem to indicate that he was the best-prepared student in the

FOOTBALL MEN READY TO GO

Team Will Be Light But Fast. Spirit On Field Is Good. Nearly Thirty Men Practice Hard.

By O. W. Chapin

If the Garnet nad Blue banner is not at the top of the pole at the end of the footballseason, it certainly will not be the fault of the team or of the coaching. When Coach Johnson put in his call for early practice this fall, 26 men reported, and from the second of September the wearers of the Garnet and Blue have plugged away, worked themselves into good condition and with the coaching of Walter Johnson, assisted by McMillian, Eichelberger and for a while by Hindman of the B. M. I. team, the squad is looking fine and rapidly getting in readiness for the opening game, one week off.

The first string outfit will be dynamite this season, without a doubt. While the squad will, as is usual for P. C. teams, be outweighed by every opponent, every one is far from pessimistic in his views of the years prospects. Coach Johnson has developed a fast, shifty team that will give any one trouble, and before the season is

Clinton Hi Boys Strong For P. C.

Of the fourteen boys in the 1929 Clinton high school graduating class, twelve are now students at Presbyterian college as members of the freshman class. Two members of the class did not attend college, circumstances only preventing it from being a one hundred per cent P. C. contingent. Those entering college last week were: Eugene Bragg, Jim Davis, Reid Lockman, William Pitts, Lawson Abrams, Grady Adair, John William Dillard, George Dominick, Bothwell Graham, James Horton, Harold Johnson and John Odiorne.

Lenoir-Rhyne Is First Game

The Blue Hose grid warriors will meet Lenoir-Rhyne college on next Saturday, September 28, at Shelby, N. C., according to an announcement made Friday by Coach Walter Johnson and Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, president of the athletic cuoncil. The game will be played on the fair grounds at Shelby, the occasion being the final day of the Shelby fair.

Little is known of the strength of Lenoir-Rhyne's football team, and there is consequently no "dope" available. In the past some good squads have fared forth from the institution. Like the Blue Hosemen, they are reputed to be scrappers, so the game should be a sharp encounter throughout.

In addition to its intrinsic interest as the first game of the season, the clash will attract attention as a sort of index to the subsequent games. P. C. will have a chance to see how the new system of plays will work—and Coach Johnson will satisfy himself about the relative worth of the men on the squad. It is expected that The Blue Stocking will be able to give more satisfactory information in next week's issue.

SWIMMING POOL, GIFT OF COL. SPRINGS, NEARING COMPLETION

Will Be Up-to-Date In Every Detail. Filtering and Cleaning Systems Items of Interest. When Completed October 15th, Will Be One of Finest Pools In the State.

Work on the new swimming pool, it is reported, will be completed by October 15th. At that time Presbyterian college may claim ownership of the finest and most modern natatorium in South Carolina. This new unit, another gift from Colonel Springs, will complete Leroy Springs gymnasium, as fine and as well equipped a college gymnasium as may be found in the South. Complete with a pool that is perfect in every detail, and furnished with every improvement that science has conceived, the new swimming pool building will stand as a beautiful monument to the generosity and friendship of one of P. C.'s most distinguished and valued supporters.

Announcement was made last spring that the pool would be added to the physical plant of the college for use this fall. Accordingly, work was started during the summer months, and the building was well-nigh finished when the football squad reported in Clinton for early practice on the first of September. As The Blue Stocking goes to press there seems to be little work remaining except the actual tiling of the pool. This will require several weeks, after which students will be permitted to try their swimming and diving prowess.

Although definite plans have not been made public as yet, it has been intimated by persons who ought to know, that the conclusion of work on the pool will be followed closely by a ceremony of dedication. This will be one of the gala occasions of the college year—a day on which Presbyterian college will formally accept the pool and endeavor in some small way to show her appreciation to the donor.

The new swimming pool will be the

DEBT CAMPAIGN OUTLINE GIVEN

Goal Is To Free Colloge of Debt, Raise Additional Endowment and Retain "Grade A" Rank.

Presbyterian college is undertaking this fall a financial campaign known as the "program of deliverance."

The goal of the campaign is $350,000, and the fund is to be raised in a state-wide organized appeal throughout the synod of South Carolina and among the alumni of the college.

The program is designed:

1. To free the college from the burden of debt.

2. To assure the college's receipt of three conditional endowment gifts totaling $148,000.

3. To assure retention by the college of its "A grade" standing and membership in the Southern Association of colleges.

It is pointed out by President McSween that with the college delivreed from its debt of nearly $350,000 the institution will be on a sound financicl basis for future development. The church, too, will be delivered to some extent from burdensome annual payments for college operating expenses.

Three gifts—two of $50,000 each, and another of $48,000—have been offered the college on condition that the debt be cleared away by January 1, 1931. This is another reason for the undertaking of the campaign at this time.

Addition of $148,000 to the present endowment of $338,000 will bring the sum up nearly to the half-million dollar mark. This, with a normal annual contribution from the church, will enable the college to meet the requirements of the Southern Association and thus retain its "A Grade" standing.

Work of organizing the state-wide forces for the campaign now is proceeding. Headquarters for the program have been opened in the Y. M. C. A. room of the gymnasium.

Military Dept. Names Officers

Military activity at Presbyterian college began on Monday morning, September 16th, when the battalion met for the first time. At that time the entire drill period was used for organization of the unit and for making out the proper rolls. Following the policy of the military department, the entire proceedings went forward under the direction of the cadet officers. The members of the staff were present but they did not take part except in an advisory way.

The unit this year is under the command of Cadet Major C. W. Grafton, of Haichow, China. P. A. Roberts, of Carthage, N. C., will serve as adjutant, with the rank of junior captain. R. S. Crawford, of Chester, S. C., holding rank as senior first lieutenant, will serve as the battalion supply officer.

The senior captaincy this year has fallen to the capable hands of W. B. McCall, of Marion, S. C. He will command "A" company. At present this company is composed entirely of sophomores. While the remainder of the Dramatic Group Announces Plans

Plans are already under way for a Dramatic club program that should rank that organization as one of the livest on the campus this year. Interest on the campus is running high and it is expected that many students will ask for positions in the cast of the first play. According to present information, the club intends to stage its first performance of the fall term on or about October 19th.

The first meeting of the year was held in Dr. Spencer's class room on Tuesday, September 21st, immediately after dinner. At that time elections were held and there was an open discussion of the year's work. C. W. Grafton, of Haichow, China, was elected president of the organization, and T. M. Johnston, of Greensboro, Ga., was named for the position of secretary-treasurer. It was decided by an unanimous vote to ask Mrs. M. W. Brown to undertake again the directorship of the plays staged by the club. At that time the clubs also decided to ask Dr. Seeger, head of the physics department, to act as critic and advisor.

Letters have already been written to Winthrop college, Converse college, Greenville Womans college and Erskine college, requesting engagements for various dates before Thanksgiving. If any or all of these dates are secured, the Dramatic club is assured of an interesting season. Further announcements will be made at an early date.

FRIENDSHIP

Those who have been in love tell us that love is the greatest thing in the world. Those who have not experienced that incomparable thrill are wont to cast their votes for friendship. If life were likened to a meal and if it were permissible to call love the strawberry ice cream that is served just before the cigars, it might not, then, be amiss to call friendship the good old bread and meat that is the "raison d'etre" of the well-known boarding house reach.

Presbyterian college has every reason to believe that friendship is, if not the greatest thing in the world, at least one of the very greatest—a sort of first cousin once removed. Everything on the campus stands as a lasting monument to the generosity and good will of friends—not merely of a few friends, but of a host of them.

Perhaps the finest of all the gifts that have ever been made to Presbyterian college is Leroy Springs gymnasium—a plant that has served to rank P. C. among the best-equipped small colleges in the South. For several years students have enjoyed the privilege of "working out" on its spacious floors, watching intercollegiate contests within its walls, lounging in its spacious lounge room, and dressing in its well-furnished locker rooms.

Colonel Springs, however, did not stop when he had built merely the best gymnasium in South Carolina. Last spring he expressed the fullness of his generosity when he made it known that he would complete the physical plant of the college by the addition of a swimming pool. The donor of Leroy Springs gymnasium is not one given to idle words. During the summer months work was started on the pool. Now as this work is nearing completion it is apparent that he has outdone himself. In every detail the new swimming pool is to be perfect. Its appointments will be modern in every respect. When it is completed, Presbyterian college will be the proud possessor of a pool as fine as any swimming pool—anywhere.

More Friendship

But this is not all. While there is one notable friend who has been outstanding in the magnitude of his gifts, there are hundreds of others, living throughout South Carolina and Georgia especially, who entertain toward the institution at Clinton a feeling of the heartiest good will. Mr. McSween, in the visits he has made through this territory since last fall, has found much to encourage him. The difficult task of piloting the college through a crucial year has been made easier for him by the repeated expressions he has heard regarding the future of P. C. Loyal friends in Clinton lined themselves staunchly behind the college last May when they opened the debt-campaign with such gifts as can leave no doubt of their sincerity. With this concrete evidence of whole-hearted support as a starting point, the South Carolina-Georgia campaign is ready to materialize. It is a pessimist indeed who does not believe that the debt, so long the powerful and ever-present enemy of the college, will meet its Waterloo before the middle of November.

THE YEAR BEFORE US

It was predicted last year that the session 1929-30 would be one of the most successful for P. C. since the college was founded "back thar in '80." From present evidence it seems that this was no day-dream. On every hand the scenery is reddened by the rosy hues that herald the dawn of a new and far brighter day. Instead of singing "Gone are the days when my heart was young and gay," P. C. may well tune up its instruments for a little close harmony on something like the lilting strains of "Blue skies smiling at me, nothing but blue skies do I see." Although the past week has been one of clouds and rain, it has nevertheless been one of the many weeks of "Blue Skies" that will go to make up the fiftieth year of Presbyterian college.

LOOK AT FOOTBALL

The football field is a good place to start if you want that "let's-get-hot" spirit. A hard-working squad that has everything but steam-heated uniforms is going through the drills every afternoon on Johnson field. Go and look them over. For numbers they may not remind you of the invasion of the Huns, but for sheer concentrated essence of wildcat they ought to make your liver jump up and cut monkey shines inside you. Larger squads and heavier men may murder P. C.'c Blue Stockings between now and Thanksgiving, but here's one who is willing to bet that every opponent will know he has been in a football game—and I don't mean touch football either. There'll be "a kiss for every care"—but not the kind of kiss you're thinking about. This kind of kiss is that sweet caress that happens when one mass of muscle and bone strikes another at high speed. P. C. may not defeat all of her opponents this season but she'll certainly come pretty near to scaring them to death when one or two of those flying, twisting, hurtling backs begins to make tracks down the field. If Green or Galloway ever gets loose it will take a regular Hawkshaw, and I don't mean an amateur one, to trace his path down the field. Not even a clue will be left.

A FINE FRESHMAN CLASS

Even at the risk of making the rats hopelessly swell-headed it should be said that one of the best reasons for optimism is the fine group of new men who have registered for the coming year. As Mr. McSween has already said, it is the best looking freshman class that has ever enrolled in Clinton. If this class is followed each year by another just like it, there is little danger that P. C. will ever lose the fine reputation it now holds all over this section of the country. Presbyterian college wants gentlemen above all, and in the Class of 1933 she is not disappointed.

AND NOW THE COLLEGE PAPER

With this issue The Blue Stocking again enters the lists as a champion of everything that is to the best interests of P. C. It is, and ought to be, the greatest instrument in bringing the student body closer together—in making one group interested in another—in stimulating that intangible fire that we love to call "the P. C. spirit." Every event of campus life that has a wide-spread interest, finds its way into the columns of the weekly paper.

Students can help The Blue Stocking immeasurably by soliciting subscriptions at home. Send them a copy of the paper this week and see if they don't wish to receive a weekly edition that will keep them in touch with every phase of campus life. By sending you to this college they have shown their faith and interest in P. C. What better investment could they make than to insure a weekly "letter home" from the college?

DRAMATICS

With an early start and a wealth of material from which to choose the cast of their first play, the Dramatic club seems to be in for a great year. Interest on the campus is greater than ever before and a large number of men will no doubt be watching the paper for announcements of the first performance. With the help of Mrs. Brown, who will direct, and Dr. Seeger, who has kindly consented to criticize and help, the club is expecting to stage some excellent comedy and drama before next June. Plans, it is learned, are already well under way, and a special effort is being made to secure a number of out-of-town engagements before Thanksgiving comes around.

MILITARY

The great improvement in the appearance of the battalion in the new uniforms has occasioned favorable comment about the campus and in town. The fact that so many students are wearing the uniform all day, on the campus and about town, is in itself the heartiest endorsement for the efforts expended by the military department last spring. As soon as uniforms are fitted on every member of the R. O. T. C. unit, P. C.'c battalion should compare favorably in appearance with any other unit in the state. It will then remain for everyone to work together toward the perfection in drill that will rank Presbyterian college along with Clemson and Citadel in military prestige.

An Oklahoma City paper boastfully said Monday that their Robinson street was only a cow-path forty years ago.

Many things can an do happen in forty years—what was then a cow-path is now a very popular parade ground for all manner of jackasses and a roosting place for half-dressed chickens.—Poteau (Okla.) News.

"According to the fashion news from Paris, women's belts are now at the normal waist line. Where's that?"—Ed Pointer in the Boston Globe.

Somewhere between the ankles and the neck, Ed.—Sam Hill in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Chanute ice-cream manufacturer advertised that he would give a cone free to every boy who called at the plant and brought along his dog.

One dog was reported near collapse after assisting all the boys in one neighborhood to obtain their cones.—Topeka Journal.

Take It From Liz

Folks, this is Liz, a new member of The Blue Stocking staff. We can't show you her face because you'd be sure to recognize her and that would spoil things, of course. She is rather bashful and would not consent to the use of her picture unless we agreed to hide her face. It's really rather good-looking but she doesn't want you to know it cause she has enough trouble with boys asking for dates as it is. However, she has very kindly consented to give you a sample of her wisdom (which is extraordinary for a girl of her age). Every week she will tell you something you ought to know. This week she hasn't time to speak to you fellows but she expects to be back every week, so watch out for her. If you see her on the campus, treat her courteously or she might change her mind about serving on the staff.

McMILLIAN ROUNDING FROSH GRID SQUAD INTO FINE SHAPE

By L. C. Jackson

And again Coach Lonnie McMillian sounded the call for freshman football. At the last roll call some thirty-five first year men answered "here." Little information can be drawn from Coach Lonnie, but after looking the squad over, it semes that the team this year will be more of the speed-demon type than one dpeending so much on weight. Plenty of reserve material is on hand, so substitutions may be expected frequently. However, speed in the backfield is not all, for at last the frosh have some backs of the line plugging variety. Stamps and Hamer seemingly have the ability to hit most any one's line for a few extra yards.

So far only one change has been made in the schedule carried last year. The Furman freshmen have been dropped and the young Seceders from Erskine have been added. However, the present schedule is not complete, with Coach McMillian working on one more game. But even without that the year's work will be plenty of trouble. The first game will be called on Johnson field, October 3rd, with the Wofford Terrier Pups as opposition. But from all reports the visitors from Spartanburg will not be anybody's "duck soup," so the Baby Hose are going to have to do lots of polishing up before that date. No anxiety need be felt as to the polishing, however, for any one who has seen Coach Lonnie Mac work his team, knows that they will be as nearly perfect as possible when the time for the first whistle arrives.

The chief worry at this time is the lack of weight in the line, but with a little more practice, it will be a regular "Light Brigade" when it comes to charging and may well be depended on when a hole is left for one of the fleet backs to scamper through.

Several men have been showing up well in practice so far and great things are expected of them during the coming year. Among these, Adams from Charleston, is doing good work at quarter. This slender blond did his cavorting for Charleston high school last year and was chosen by the scribes of the state for all-state honors. Perrin of Abbeville, is also doing nice work at the barker's post. For the present, Hamer, who received his prep school training at Dillon Hi, seems to be the pick of the fullbacks. He has the weight and the and the drive to ram the line and he is showing ability to back up his own forward wall. Stamps from Thornwell high, and Lockman, a Clinton high product, have the inside track for the halfback position, but they are getting a run for it from Pollitzer, Watson and several others. Good wingmen are plentiful, with Copeland of Spartanburg, and Pinson of Greenville high, leading the field, but getting a close race from E. Graham, Nettles, Woodside and Wiley. Another promising-looking flankman is Osman, an Indiana product, who is plenty trouble on a cinder path and should be also on the gridiron. The tackles include: Ewing, Holmes, Elliot, and Martin. Carr, G. Graham, Brown, and Clarke are fighting it out for the guards, while Rampey and Wilson are alternating at guard and center. G. Barron is another pivot man with promising prospects.

The schedule at present is as follows:

October 3—Wofford at Clinton.
October 11—Carolina at Columbia.
October 25—Erskine at Clinton.
NoNvember 16—Newberry at Clinton.
November 23—Citadel at Charleston.

JOKES

A new method of taking trout from the San Jacinto mountain streams has been discovered.

It appears that two local fishermen were having poor luck whipping Strawberry creek, when one suggested that the bait be soaked in some of the bootleg one of them happened to have brought along. This was tried, and at the first cast the rod bent nearly double, and it took the combined efforts of the two sportsmen to reel in the prize.

Then it was discovered that the worm had seized a big fish by the throat and was choking it.—Hemet (Calif.) News.

Physical Ed Now Required

Physical education will be a requirement for graduation from Presbyterian college hereafter, according to an announcement made by Coach Walter Johnson in chapel on Tuesday morning. Coach Johnson made a short talk in which he gave a brief outline of the plan, and closed by calling a meeting of all men who are not out for either varsity of frosh football this fall.

It is understood that all students will be required to put in two hours of approved physical exercise each week throughout the college year. Some men will take their work-outs in the gymnasium, others will take their's out of doors either on the tennis courts or the athletic field. Many men have chosen to get in their weekly exercise through the agency of the exciting and well-known game of touch-football.

For a large majority of the students the new regulation wil mean but a slight change in weekly plans. Nearly all students are in the habit of taking sufficient exercise to keep themselves physically fit. The new order of things has been designed especially to work in the cases of those men who are not out for any of the athletic teams and who are not in the habit of getting out-doors regularly. For these boys the rule should serve as an agency toward better health and a greater enjoyment of campus life.

In conjunction with the physical exercise requirement, students will be given a thorough examination each year. The results will be kept on file from year to year in order that the department of physical education will have some check on the improvement shown by various men. The same system was employed at P. C. a number of years ago. At that time it was very popular among the students.

Coach Johnson also plans to give individual attention and special corrective exercises to any students who are physically defective. In the past he has helped more than one man to develop a defective limb, to straighten a curved spine or to build up muscles in cases where disease or long illness had resulted in dangerous weakness. The new system should do much to prevent sickness and minor ailments on the cmapus.

WORK BEGUN ON COLLEGE DRIVE

have been divided. The group chairmen will have charge of the work of securing church chairmen and church committees.

A grandson of Dr. William Plumer Jacobs, founder of the college and of Thornwell orphanage, Chairman Jacobs has been quite active in civic, religious and educational work. He is widely known among the Presbyterians of the state and he is devoted to the cause of Presbyterian college.

Mr. Jacobs points out that the raising of the $350,000 fund is necessary to relieve the college of the burden of debt, to eliminate annual interest payments on the debt, to assure the receipt of conditional endowment gifts, and to point the way for future growth of the college, the church and Christian education.

Members of the board voted to give their unqualified support to Mr. Jacobs and to assume active work in the campaign. They will begin at once the recruiting of a great general committee which will be brought together for a rally at the college on October 4, the day of the P. C.-Mercer football game.

The board members include: R. T. Fewell, Rock Hill; Dr. W. M. McPheeters, Decatur, Ga.; Dr. R. R. Wallace, Chester; C. Bissel Jenkins and Rev. J. W. Hickman, Chareston; Prof. A. J. Thackston, Orangeburg; Dr. W. R. Barron and Joseph Walker, Columbia; Dr. G. G. Mayes, Winnsboro; John T. Woodside and L. L. Barr, Greenville; Rev. W. A. Hafner, Gaffney; Rev. R. W. Park, Lake City; W. R. O'Bryan, Heineman; H. M. McLaurin, Wedgefield; Dr. H. Tucker Graham, Florence; L. B. Stevenson, Hartsville; Dr. T. Ellison Simpson, Darlington; Dr. E. C. Doyle, Seneca; Lloyd Smith, Easley; Dr. R. F. Kirkpatrick, Anderson; C. M. Bailey, Clinton; Rev. E. D. Patton, Laurens; Dr. F. E. Harrison, Abbeville; H. E. Davis, Florence; R. Hayne King, Atlanta; Colonel J. D. Fulp, Greenwood.

Why Not One At P. C.?

(From The Clemson Tiger)

Newspaper men, you are most royally welcomed to the Tiger's lair this season. "Mutt" has had a handsome new press box erected just for your use and comfort. It is glass enclosed and electric heated, and telephone and telegraph connections are being made. It is the only enclosed, equipped press box in the state. You can write to your heart's content without being hampered by the elements. Quoting Carl Weimer of The Greenville News: "It's going to take a hardboiled guy to pan the Tigers after an afternoon of such comfort as is offorded by the new press box." Congratulations, "Mutt."

over it should be the Waterloo of more than one opponent that entered the game too full of confidence.

Headed by Captain Beckman, P. C.'s line will be composed of Blakely, Hamilton, Cheatham, McQueen, Martin, as best bets as first stringers, while Gillespie, Jones, Copeland, and Templeton are all dependable at any time to fill in. McNaull has filled the position of center with amazing ability and will be a big factor in the line. Fortson will be the second string center. On the ends this year the fans will see Ross Lynn better than last year, and more dangerous. Clinton, Bennett and Ferrene, all veterans at the wing position, are due on the job and looking fine. With this aggregation of linesmen, P. C. has, indeed, a reason to be optimistic.

A glance at the backfield this season in practice leaves no doubt as to who the big threat will be. Jimmie Green is there, and all there. Around this flashy little quarterback is built the team. Jimmie is better than ever. His punting has improved to the extent that none on the field can beat him, while his passing, like his old form at toting the ball, is among the best in the state. Along side Jimmie in the backfield there will be "Skeet" Galloway, versatile half, with a football head and a knack of getting the ball down the field, which makes him a valuable man, to say nothing of his kicking and passing ability. "Snooks" Dunlap is filling the shoes Dick Greene left vacant this season and doing it in the fashion that leaves no doubt as to what will happen in the games when he is backing up the line. Young, Ritchie, Dunlap, Smith, and Senter, are all contenders for the backfield and all will see plenty of service before the season closes.

Only two games are scheduled in Clinton this year. The first is with Mercer the first week-end in October, and the other is with Newberry on Turkey day. A glance at the schedule shows no set-ups for the wearers of the Garnet and Blue. The season opens next Saturday with a game with Lenoir-Rhyne college, at the Shelby, N. C., fair. Following this P. C. meets Mercer in an S. I. A. A. game. In rapid succession comes Furman, Carolina, Citadel, Wofford, Erskine, Wake Forest and Newberry. This takes in every team in the state save Clemson. Three are out of state games.

department of physics at Yale last year. Dr. Seeger was married during the summer just past. He and Mrs. Seeger are living in the home occupied last year by Professor and Mrs. Gignilliat.

Capt. R. E. Wysor, infantry, U. S. A., is the new head of the military department. Captain Wysor comes to P. C. after several years of service in Panama. His home is in Virginia and he is a graduate of Virginia Military institute, at Lexington, Va. The remarkable progress made in the first week of military work is sufficient endorsement of Captain Wysor's ability to organize things and to handle college men. Numerous expressions have been heard to the effect that this year's unit will be the best in the history of the military department of Presbyterian college.

H. T. Swedenberg, M. A., of Greenville, S. C., and a graduate of Presbyterian, has been added as associate professor of English to take the place of Prof. G. W. Gignilliat, now on leave. Professor Swedenberg received his diploma from P. C. with the class of '28. While an undergraduate he was major of the battalion, president of Pi Kappa Delta, and a member of every other honorary order on the campus. Since his graduation he has been a student in the graduate school of Columbia university, New York. He completed the requirements for the master's degree in August and will officially receive his diploma in December.

First Church Welcomes Frosh

Last night at eight o'clock the First Presbyterian church, under the sponsorship of the Woman's Auxiliary, gave a reception in honor of the faculty and student body of Presbyterian college. An invitation, read by the president in chapel was all that was necessary; the students turned out in goodly number and absorbed punch and cakes in rapid fashion between bits of conversation with the belles of the town.

This annual affair at the Presbyterian church is for the purpose of getting the new students as well as new members of the faculty acquainted with the people of the church and town. The majority of the students are Presbyterians and such a start gives them a good opportunity to know the people and affiliate themselves with the Clinton church during their four years in college.

As the students entered, they were greeted by a punch bowl presided over by one of the ladies of the church. Then they were tagged and sent through the terrors of a receiving line composed of prominent church members and some of the faculty; but this was soon forgotten as the sight of more punch bowls, cakes and girls greeted the eye.

Not as large a per cent of the student body turned out as is usually the case, whether due to coolness of the weather or to previous engagements. Nevertheless, those that were present had an enjoyable time and can vouch for an evening well spent.

Jackson has been assigned to the first platoon, and Second Lieutenant D. L. Wood to the second platoon. Jackson is from Marion, Alabama, and Wood from Sarasota, Florida.

"B" company is under the command of Cadet Captain C. J. Martin, who hails from Mullins, S. C. A. G. Thornton, of Chester, S. C., commands the first platoon, ranking as first lieutenant; while B. H. Dickson, second lieutenant, is in charge of the second platoon.

D. D. Beckman, of McClellanville, S. C., holds rank as captain and is in command of "C" company. W. E. Johnson, Clinton, S. C., is first lieutenant, and C. A. Senn, Laurens, S. C., is second lieutenant.

The band will be under the command of W. C. Dendy who holds rank as captain. Cadet First Lieutenant J. S. Dendy and Cadet Second Lieutenant J. H. Hazelwood have also been assigned to the band.

Additional second lieutenants have been assigned to the companies as follows:

"A" company—J .A. Babb, J. F. O'Daniel, J. W. Milam, J. W. McQueen.

"B" company—R. S. Beckham, L. R. Williamson, J. L. Cooper.

"C" company—G. B. Telford, E. E. Wade, T. G. Ellis.

YO-YO CONDEMNED

For the drawing and quartering of the man who invented this game of "Yo-Yo" we enthusiastically volunteer. It is just about the most triflnig device that ever fascinated a world with sober work to do. Don't start it, because you can't stop it if you do. It will haunt your dreams and interrupt your prayers. Already it has driven some of its victims to drink, and soon from many a sanitarium ward may be heard cries for "Yo yo yo and a bottle of rum."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

SWIMMING POOL NEARING COMPLETION

final unit of a physical plant that has attracted considerable attention. An Associated Press writer, visiting on the campus to get "the low-down" on the Blue Hose grid squad several days ago, expressed the opinion that P. C. has, for its size, the best physical equipment to be found south of the Mason and Dixon line.

The new pool will bring about a change at the Clinton institution. Swimming classes will be organized during the year and it is expected that every student will at one time or another take part in the swimming program of the college. President McSween has intimated that before long swimming may be added to the requirement for graduation. This custom has already been adopted in many other schools and colleges. As an example in South Carolina, Winthrop requires natatorial proficiency before granting a diploma. Such a requirement would be a fine thing both for the college and for the individual. Every year the newspapers bear the news of scores of person who have lost their lives through lack of ability to take care of themselves in the water. The establishment of compulsory instruction would do much to eliminate such accidents.

Interesting features of the new pool are the purifying system, the heating plant, and the cleaning equipment. The filters have been so arranged that clean, pure water will replace the old every eight hours. This will insure clean, healthful water at all times. Sediment may be removed from the pool without draining, by a sort of vacuum cleaning attachment which scours the bottom. The heating unit will serve the entire gymnasium, thus lightening the load of the central heating system, which has been overworked for the past few years. New water mains have been installed and there will never be any shortage of water for the shower baths or for the pool.

Game To Be Played Here Next Friday. Past Defeats To Stir Varsity To Action.

Presbyterian college will play her first home games of the 1929 season when the Wofford freshmen and the Mercer varsity teams journey to Clinton to meet the Hosemen on next Thursday and Friday afternoons. The Thursday clash will be the first of the season for the Blue Sox. On Friday the Mercer Bears will meet Coach Johnson's men in the feature event of the home-coming day program.

After trying out their strength against a fast and hard-fighting aggregation from Lenoir-Rhyne today, the varsity team will be in good shape to meet the Mercer men. Whether they win or lose today, the Stockings should be vastly improved by next Friday. Plays will have rounded into working shape, players will have gained confidence and experience, and Coach Johnson will have satisfied himself as to the best men and the tactics adap-

"Y" STARTS ON YEAR'S WORK

Billie Barron To Lead Organization In Active Year. Drive for Members To Be Made.

Under the leadership of Billie Barron, president, the Y. M. C. A. has laid plans for a very extensive as well as interesting program for the coming year. It is the hope of the cabinet to make the "Y" a greater factor in the life of the students and they hope to interest them and get as many as will take an active part in the work.

In order to accomplish this the cabinet plans to make a personal survey, covering every student, ,and get as many as possible sign an active membership card. This card will carry the following pledge: "I hereby pledge myself as an active member of the Y. M. C. A. at Presbyterian college to: 1. Make the purpose of the association my own personal program of allegiance and service. 2. Lead students to faith in God as revealed in Christ. 3. Promote the growth of Christian faith. 4. Promote wholesome social relations at P. C. 5. Attend "Y" meetings whenever possible and take an active part whenever called on to do so in whatever capacity desired.

The members of the cabinet will see each student sometime this week and give him his membership card to the "Y" and at the same time give him an opportunity to sign for active membership. It is hoped that a goodly number of the students will be interested enough in this so that there will be a good foundation on which to base the work the rest of the year.

The program for the month of October is to be in the hands of the classes. Each class is to be responsible for a program one week. The seniors are to have charge the first week of the month, the juniors the second, sophomores the third, and freshmen the fourth. After this a program for the next three months will be made by the cabinet and carried out.

Plans are also being made for the annual fall retreat at Camp Adger. This is the meeting of both men and women of the state and is the most-looked-fordward-to of any in the during the course of the year. Leaders of "Y"s from all the colleges of the state get together and discuss and try

Warriors Leave For Battlefield

Head Coach Walter Johnson and Line Coach Hugh Eichelberger left with the varsity football team at noon yesterday for Shelby, N. C., where they will meet a strong team from Lenoir-Rhyne college, located at Hickory. The game will be played at the fair grounds and the occasion will be the Shelby county fair. It is expected that there will be a large crowd at the fair, and that the stands will be wellfilled when the game is called, on Saturday afternoon.

After stiff workouts early in the week and light signal drills on Thursday afternoon, the coaches expressed satisfaction at the condition of the team. No serious injuries have shown up, and every man is in the pink of condition. There was manifested a great deal of pep in Thursday's workout and it appears that the squad is eager and full of restless energy.

Twenty-four stout warriors took leave of the campus yesterday. Walker and Manager Charlie Rigby took the train to look after the uniforms, while the remaining men left in cars. The list includes: Captain Beckman, Green, O. Dunlap, Young, Grafton, Lynn, Ritchie, Martin, Senter, Blakely, Ferrene Cheatham, Gillespie, Galloway, Jones, B. Dunlap, Hamilton, Means, McNaull, Fortson, McQueen, Rigby and Walker.

CALL ISSUED FOR RIFLEMEN

Twenty-five Men Appear As Candidates. Arrangements Being Made for Work.

Bull shooters who want to try their hands on a .22 rifle will soon have an opportunity to do so. As soon as the proper arrangements can be made, try-outs will be held for the 1929 rifle team of Presbyterian college, according to an announcement made to the military men by Captain Wysor, early this week. All men will be put through the regular marksmanship course as soon as the indoor range in the gymnasium can be opened for practice.

Last year P. C.s first rifle team attracted considerable notice on the campus. Competition was held with eight or ten colleges, and although only a single match was won the team made a very creditable showing. The new field of sport was recognized by the college through the awarding of specially-designed letters — a "P" mounted within a target.

A number of letter-men are back this year but they will have a hard time winning their berths again. At the first call, issued last Wednesday morning, about twenty-five men signified their desire to try out for the team. Of these only ten will engage in intercollegiate competition as members of the rifle team.

The targets to be used in all official matches are already familiar to a great many students who watched competion last year. The bull's eye is about the same diamteer as that of a .22 cartridge and the total area in which points may be scored is less than three inches across. The guns used are regulation army .22 caliber target guns, and the range is fifty feet. P.

TO HOLD RALLY FOR P. C. DRIVE ON COLLEGE CAMPUS FRIDAY

Several Hundred Pastors and Laymen Expected To Be Present At Beginning of Debt Liquidation Campaign. Will Be Guests At P. C.-Mercer Game In Afternoon.

The campus will be the scene next Friday, October 4, of one of the largest Presbyterian gatherings ever held here.

The occasion will be the rally of the general committee of the Presbyterian college program of deliverance to mark the official launching of the $350,000 campaign.

Between 250 and 400 pastors and leading laymen from all parts of the Synod of South Carolina will attend the rally, which will begin at 10 A. M., and in which the student body will play an important part.

For one thing, the student body will be represented among the speakers by R. T. Gillespie, Jr., who will point out the great interest the students are manifesting in the movement to clear away the college debt and thus assure the future development of the institution on a sound financial basis.

Either the glee club or a quartet will provide vocal music for the gathering, while at the close of the morning meeting of the committee (the session will end at 12 noon), the entire student body will gather at the chapel to sing several college songs and give a few assorted cheers for the committee members.

The committee members will be guests of the college at dinner at 1 o'clock and will also be guests at the P. C.-Mercer football game in the afternoon.

It is hoped that every student will be on hand to make the general committee members welcome, for upon the success of this great rally depends much of the success of the entire program of deliverance.

According to the plans of the rally day it is the intentions of the committee to divide the state up so as to better cover all sections. First the state is to be divided into three zones. Then the presbyteries of these zones will be divided, which in turn will be divided into groups. W. P. Jacobs, general chairman of the campaign, has been working hard to make the arrangements to have this rally a great success and if things work as planned the campaign will start off with a boom.

Following the meeting of the members of the churches, laymen, etc., there will be dinner served in Judd hall for all and then free admission to the P. C.-Mercer game will be granted the visitors.

Plans for the campaign were discussed at a meeting of the executive committee of the program at the college on Tuesday afternoon. The program also was to be presented before the synod of South Carolina at the meeting in Anderson this week.

Rapid progress in the organization of forces for the $350,000 program of deliverance of Presbyterian college, is reported by William P. Jacobs, general chairman, and Rev. John McSween, president of the college and associate general chairman for the program.

New campaign leaders named this week include:

C. M. Bailey, Clinton, chairman, of Zone No. 1.

Col. A. L. Gaston, Chester, chairman of Zone No. 2.

Rev. John W. Davis, Kingstree, chairman of Zone No. 3.

Mr. Bailey, widely known manufacturer and business man, will have charge of the organization of the campaign forces in Zone No. 1, which includes the Piedmont, South Carolina

ACTORS SOON TO GIVE PLAY

Mrs. M. W. Brown Again Directs Work of Dramatic Club. Date Chosen for First Appearance.

After deliberating seriously over a collection of nearly a dozen plays, Mrs. M. W. Brown, director for the Presbyterian College Dramatic club, has selected "The Genius," a three-act comedy. According to present plans, the club will present its first production in Clinton on the evening of October 19th. After this performance the play will be given several times in other towns if dates can be secured.

Mrs. Brown is also ready to announce the tentative cast. The feminine parts have not been quite settled as yet, but it is understood that Clinton girls will be asked to join with the dramatic club as in the case of "Second Story Peggy," the play staged last March. The boys tentatively chosen are Osman, Murphy, Johnston, Collins, Hamlin, Bill Blakely, Caskey and Grafton.

It is expected that practices will start early next week. Time and place for practices have not been determined yet but as soon as these matters have been decided the club will settle down to three weeks of real hard work. The men concerned are very enthusiastic and Mrs. Brown feels that with diligent practice the play will be even better than "Second Story Peggy," which met with such high commendation last spring.

FROSH PREPARE FOR 'PUP' GAME

First Year Men Showing Up Fine Under Tutelage of McMillian. Play Wofford Here Thursday.

With another week of hard practice behind them the freshmen pig-skin artists continue to look better and are improving daily under the ever watchful eye of Coach Lonnie McMillian. The menu for the past week, even in spite of the terrible weather, has been large platters of scrimmage and then two or three extra helpings. But the effect is already showing up in that the whole squad has improved so much on both offensive and defensive play that it doesn't even look like the same bunch of gridiron enthusiasts as the ones of a week ago.

One great addition to the backfield who has been showing up exceptionally well during recent practice is Barrett, pile driving fullback, who received his preliminary football education at Bailey Military institute, and if you doubt this writer's word, just ask any of the reserves who played against him at Greenwood last year. With Stamps to aid him in plunging the line and backing up his own forward wall, the frosh teams will be few and far between, who will be able to "hold that line" or to make much yardage through the Baby Blue Hose. Stamps is another who has been showing up mighty well this week, and he still remains the heady, consistent, hard-driving "Shorty." Copeland, a brainy end, and Carr, a pow-

WOFFORD AND P. C. FROSH

The first football game on Johnson field for the season 1929 will be the clash next Thursday between Lonnie McMillian's Baby Blue Hose and the Terrier Pups from Wofford. This game will give that far-famed "P. C. spirit" an opportunity to get into real working order. The new songs and yells will be tried out for the first time—and the Sox will have a chance to endear themselves to their Alma Mater by emulating that ferocity and never-say-die attitude that have always characterized Calvinist teams. It is up to sophomores, juniors, and seniors as well as the first year men, to see that the grid season starts off in the right way. Every loyal P. C. man will be expected to be in the stands next Friday to lend his enthusiastic support to those men who are receiving their first taste of what it means to fight for the Garnet and Blue of Presbyterian college.

MERCER AND HOME-COMING

Coach Johnson's blue-jerseyed men will trot out to the field the following day to see what can be done about this serious matter of the Mercer Bears. In this case there will be more than college spirit to urge them on. Older students will recall the first game with Mercer, played in Macon during the season of 1927—that game in which the elusive and miraculous "Phoney" Smith did all his tricks and beat the Hosemen by something like twenty-seven to six. More still will cherish and nurse the rancor of last year's eight-second-to-play affair, when the Bruins, with the game practically over, completed a pass to a fleet-back who tripped his way to the goal line some sixty yards away. This 7-6 defeat is not a pleasant thing to remember. P. C. hopes to wipe out the unpleasant memory by trouncing the Mercer men next Friday afternoon on Johnson field.

Win or lose, it will certainly be a fine football game. This year's aggregation of Blue Stockings has plenty of power and speed in the right places. An aggressive line and a lightning backfield working together like clockwork on a new system of attack should be enough to furnish a very pleasant reception for the visiting eleven.

Next Friday is also home-coming day—an additional reason for believing that the Hosemen will outdo themselves on the gridiron. Many of the old graduates will be on the campus—among them men who have worn the P. C. colors on the same field in previous years. They will be here to give their hearty support and backing to the team. They will be here to see P. C. win, and P. C. believes that they will be satisfied when the last whistle has blown that afternoon.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

During the last week a few subscriptions for The Blue Stocking have crept in. They have been gladly received, but are no doubt very lonesome. There are yet a host of people interested in the college—alumni as well as others—who have not sent in their check to cover the subscription fee for the year. After this week it may be impossible for the college paper to send out copies to those who were on last year's mailing list but who have failed to renew for the present session.

There are no doubt many who have very good intentions but who have simply put the matter off. The management of the paper can no longer brook delay. Unless subscriptions come in, a number of names will have to be dropped from the mailing list.

THE PaC-SaC

Editor Fant Thornley, of the PaC-SaC, has been working energetically on the college annual. The photographer has already completed his work on the campus—such of it as may be completed at this time. In addition it is understood that the book is definitely taking shape and will be prepared for the publisher well in advance of the time required. It begins to appear that the PaC-SaC may come dangerously near to making its appearance before commencement! Such an event has occurred so seldom in the history of the college that it will border on the incredible.

WATER, WATER, EVERYWHERE—

Mercy is a terrible thing if, as William Shakespeare once described it in a moment of ecstasy, "it droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven." Rain is a blessing in the right place and at the right time; but when the place is Presbyterian college and the time is football time (and a solid two weeks of it at that), one begins to wonder if there are not other blessings which would be equally as acceptable. True, it is most pleasant to sleep with the sweet sound of rain beating forever on the ear—but alas! life cannot be all sleep. Between sleeps there is that monotonous and irksome task of picking one's way from dry (yes, I said "dry") spots to dry spots, with ever and anon the delicious sensation of sinking above one's shoe-tops in the shoe-shiner's delight. Collars, we are led to believe, were so designed as to allow ample space for nice wet raindrops, and spinal columns were added to human frames in order to provide tickling channels for the torrents that brave the collar-portal. After two weeks of saturation, it is generally agreed that a spell of good old dry rain would be welcome.

GO ON YO-ING

Yo-yo-ing is a very, very virile and masculine sport. It develops the muscles of the body, sharpens the faculties of the brain, and encourages coordination. How gratifying it is to see a great big man, (the kind that is just built for yo-ing), hard at work in his daily workout! See how the eyes are brightened; how the breath comes thick and fast! Notice the bulge of his arm muscles and the healthy glow on his skin as he struggles to dominate the movements of the massive yo! Ah, how the old folks must delight over the change that has come over the youth of the land. No more the puerile game of football. Dear me, no! Let us forget those gentle practices of a past generation and devote ourselves to something worthy the attentions of a man. Let us do away with football practice and turn the field over to the yo-enthusiasts.

Yo-yo-ing is certainly the easiest way to attain a gentlemanly bearing. Someone recently called attention to a man who was demonstrating the height of nonchalance—he was plodding dismally through the rain, yo-yo-ing like a hardened veteran! It is possible that the Murad will be neglected in favor of the yo-yo, as the one unfailing agency for nonchalance?

It is none to early to be organizing a yo-club on the campus. Such an organization, dominating, as it would, the greatest interests of college life, should be a great thing for P. C. A number of excellent slogans at once suggest themselves: "Our yo-ers as good as yours," "Let us yo as of yore," "Join and let us help you yo yo' yo," are a few of the more obvious ones. Then think of the many beautiful songs that could be adopted: "Yo-yo the clouds away," "Your yo-er isn't your yo-er no more," "Give us a yo and we'll go home," and a host of others.

Come on, fellows! Get behind this thing! Let's put P. C. on the yo-map. Show your school spirit and yo with a will. Let's put Presbyterian college at the top in yo-ing!

Take It From Liz

Dear Miss Liz:

I was so glad to see that you started your darling column. I am just so excited. I am a junior who has been working hard for five years and now my big chance has come. I saw my heart's desire at the picture show last night. She is just the sweetest looking thing. When she looked at me I thought I would just die. She has the sweetest nose and the sweetest eyes. One of my friends told me that she never goes with anyone but her great big strong men. Do you think I have a chance with her?

I am in a pink of hope.

Oswald.

Dear Oswald:

I am very interested in your case. I believe from your handwriting that you were born under a lucky star. Remember that "when poverty comes in at the door, love flies out of the window." Also remember that "even the weariest river winds somewhere safe to sea." Try my advice and let me know how things turn out. I feel sure that you will get along fine.

Dear Miss Liz:

Won't you please help me. I am a sophomore with a load of trouble. For the past few years I have been happily married. I loved my wife devotedly and she loved me; that is—until a few days ago. We had eight darling children. I can hardly write now for thinking of them,—my darlings, Horace, Knute, Isaac, Algernon, Enid, Cordelia, Agememnon, and Xanthippe.

But suddelny last week my wife left me, and oh! the sorrow of it—the hopelessness of it all. She left the children with me. I shall never forget them.

And here is the only word she left: "I couldn't live with no man who eat the lettice of his salad."

Please tell me what to do. I am so worried about my biology mark.

Broken-hearted.

P. S.—Who do you think will win the woild series?

Dear Broken-hearted:

As Columbus said when he discovered America, "Ils ne passeront pas." Thus did the immortal discoverer, four hundred years ago, utter words which apply exactly to your case. I wonder what can be wrong with you to bring on this terrible misfortune. Are you a member of the Book of the Month club? Have you had your iron today? Have you done your fifteen minutes a day with Dr. Elliot's five foot shelf? Most men have dry scalps—here is the relief you need. If things do not turn out all right do not be despondent, for it cannot always be fair weather. After all, you might be in a much worse position. What if you had nine children instead of only eight?

Editor's note: From the many letters received by Liz since her announcement in The Blue Stocking last week, she chose the above two at random. You will find that she has the rare ability to go sympathetically straight to the core of things and

Activities At Fort McClellan

Presbyterian college was represented at Fort McClellan during the past summer by something like twenty-eight students from the class of '30. With one exception the whole group passed the physical examination and in a few days were settled down into the routine of camp life. There were commissioned offices to be filled, and tours of guard to be taken. One day a student would be major on the drill fielld and the next day, perhaps, he would be admiral in the kitchen and have charge of all the vessels. But whatever took place in the line of camp activities Presbyterian's representatives were ready for their share.

A baseball team composed of Babb, Thornton, Williamson, Roberts, Martin, Cooper, Milam, Johnson, and Senn was defeated in their first game. What might have been an otherwise dull contest was enlivened by the spectacular work of "Circling" Senn in right field, and Johnson's footwork around third base.

Entries for the water carnival were delayed, and P. C. did not have any representatives in the aquatic events.

A team was entered in the track meet. Jack Martin made the only points for Presbyterian by placing in the four-forty.

Perhaps the best showing in any branch of athletics was made in the boxing tournament. Ellis lost to Johnson of the Citadel. Thornton dropped a decision to Merriweather of Tenn. Cooper was given a technical knockout over Deutch of L. S. U., but lost his next fight to Johnson of the Citadel. Jack Dendy won from Cheek of Dahlonega and then was defeated by Bull of the Citadel. Johnson lost to Pearson of Clemson. After going to the finals, Dickson lost by knockout to Fitzgerald of Tenn. D. Lorenzo Wood was runner up in the welterweight division, losing to Gassaway of Clemson.

Almost everyone who went to the Fort expressed themselves as having enjoyed the training period; and Lieutenant Taylor stated that he was very well pleased with the showing made at McClellan.

LIBRARY NOTES

The librarian spent the month of June at the college cataloging the Smyth collection of Caroliniana given the library by Capt. Ellison . Smyth last spring. This collection has attracted a great deal of interest among student of the state's history. Several have been here this summer to gather information that would be difficult or impossible to obtain elsewhere. When this collection and the Jones collection of Caroliniana are completely cataloged and made accessible it is expected that the Presbyterian college library will attract still more South Carolina historians.

The Jones collection is named for Dr. F. D. Jones of the faculty, who, as chairman of the library committee for several years, has been especially interested in collecting material on early South Carolina. Dr. Jones taught a course in South Carolina history last year for the benefit of those students in the college interested.

NAME McSWEEN SYNOD HEAD

Presbyterian college, and to John H. Young of Clinton, for his gift of the president's home. The body endorsed the campaign for the liquidation of the debt and gave a rising vote of confidence to President McSween for his work at the college in the past year and his untiring efforts to get the college out of debt.

There seems to be a lot of sentiment over the state concerning the consolidation of Presbyterian college and Chicora. Much can be gained by such an action, both from the standpoint of financial and executive control. While nothing was done about it at the meeting this week, the matter was mentioned. This means that in the next few years something definite might be done concerning this consolidation. As both are under the same control, and it is certain that the combination of the two would be a gain financially, more can be looked forward to concerning this in the future.

and Congaree presbyteries.

Colonel Gaston, active in legal, educational and religious circles, will direct the campaign work in Zone No. 2, which is composed of Enoree and Bethel Presbyteries.

Zone. No. 3 includes the Pee Dee, Harmony and Charleston Presbyteries and will be organized under the leadership of the Rev. Mr. Davis, who is pastor of the Presbyterian church at Kingstree.

All three zone chairmen are now busily engaged in obtaining the consent of leading Presbyterians to serve as chairmen and associate chairmen for the campaign organizations in the Presbyteries which make up their respective zones.

HOSE READY FOR MERCER

ted to his 1929 squad of grid warriors.

The Calvinsits will enter the game with a great deal on their minds next week. NoNt in so short a time is it to be forgotten that the Bears have twice defeated the Hose in the past two years—once by a decisive score, and once by the margin of one point after a heart-breaking last-second rally. This year the Clinton team will face their visitors with a group as strong as that which lost to "Phoney" Smith in 1927—and this time there will be no flying "Phoney" to do as he pleases.

Unless today's game brings reason for changing the line-up for the Mercer set-to, the following team will probably carry the burden of home-coming day honors: Ends, Lynn and Ferrene; tackles, Cheatham and Blakely; guards, Martin and McQueen; center, McNaull; quarterback, Young; halfbacks, Galloway and Green; fullback, O. Dunlap. In addtion, there is a man to substitute for each position, a man who is able to give a good account of himself.

It is safe to predict that Presbyterian will not go scoreless. The tricky plays Coach Johnson has introduced this year are designed to get men loose—and the backfield is designed to take every advantage of each of those loose spells. Galloway, Green, Young, and Dunlap are all speedy men who know how to handle themselves in a broken field. Green has already displayed his wares on more than one occasion to the delight of all South Carolina fans. Galloway, although new to varsity ball, has done so well in prep and high school games as to have a well-established reputation. Young is remembered for his excellent generalship and stellar playing on the 1927 freshman squad Orell Dunlap is a plowing, plunging back who laps up every chance at an off-tackle play and backs up the line in great style.

The line is aggressive and unusually speedy. Lynn, back at his wing position after nursing a bad leg for the latter part of last season, is bigger and better than ever before. Blakely, a massive tackle who engenders a feeling of security in the P. C. fans, is back to the dynamite tactics that made him a favorite on the frosh team two years ago. McNaull, at center, has the uncanny ability to slice through the line at opportune times to snag men for big losses.

The first year men are a mystery as yet, and as such will no doubt attract a good crowd when they play on Thursday. However, they have been showing up well against the varsity and the indications are that they will have a fine team. One thing is certain, they will show that they have learned from their older brothers just what the term "P. C. spirit" means.

erful guard or tackle, are the ones that have made life miserable for the opposing backs during the past several days.

Few more twenty-four-hour periods are left for practice before the frosh meet their first big test in the Wofford Terrier Pups. The Blue Sox of last year downed the Spartanburg aggregation by a score of 6 to 0, and it is hoped that the freshmen of this year can repeat with even a larger score, but it doesn't pay to count the chickens before they are out of the incubator for you may rest assured that the eleven the Wesleyans send on the field will be a scrappy, peppy, plunging, driving outfit. However, don't think for a minute that they won't have their hands full, for the freshmen have clearly demonstrated in scrimmages with the varsity that they're nobody's slouches when it comes to the offensive part of the game and they are just an epidemic, panic or what have you? on defense. Pound keeper, bring on thy Pups.

6-0 WIN CHALKED UP IN FIRST HOME GAME

Dunlap, With Perfect Interference, Breaks Through Line and Races 67 Yards For Only Counter In Gruelling Encounter.

Matt, Brilliant Mercer Halfback, Proves Worthy Foe. Makes Beautiful Runs

By Bill Varn,
Staff Correspondent for The State

The Garnet and Blue of Presbyterian college rode to a spectacular triumph in a hard-fought game on Johnson field Friday afternoon, as the flying feet of Orel Dunlap, behind great interference, crossed the goal of the Mercer Bears and handed the Palmetto eleven a 6 to 0 win over the Georgia Baptists.

The stalwart defense of a Presbyterian line that seemed to utter the words, "They shall not pass" was sufficient to repulse a determined and equally brilliant Mercer attack that seemed destined to score at least four times.

The Blue Stockings, set for a battle and determined that history would not repeat itself, mustered just enough offense to offset the running of one great little Mercer back, Matt, a fit successor to the shoes of "Phoney" Smith, and opened the way for a winning touchdown in the second quarter before hundreds of Presbyterian alumni.

Through a fine stand in the opening minutes, P. C. had staved off a Mercer threat and in the second quarter, the Blue began to assert itself against the Orange and Black.

After a punt, the pigskin lay on the Presbyterian 33-yard line, when on a quick opening, Orel Dunlap dashed through the line and found himself open in the secondary Mercer defense. He twirled past a clawing Bear, and another closed in behind, but the flying feet of Jimmy Green, great little Blue Stocking back, were alert to his opportunity, and clipped Alderman as he reached for the runner.

Galloway spilled the Mercer safety, Matt, and Dunlap continued on, 67 yards to the goal and ultimate victory.

Matt's brilliant runs, always a threat, always a sourse of worry, were uncorking gains of yard after yard, until tired and weary of the hopeless battle, he left the game with scarce three minutes to play, amid one of the greatest ovations ever seen in Clinton. His offensive and defensive play marked him as one of the S. I. A. A.'s best.

Outside of that second quarter offensive that saw Dunlap gallop to a win, the South Carolinian's were outclassed on the offensive, but stood firm on the defensive in the face of a Mercer attack that threatened their goal time and again. Only on one other occasion did P. C. threaten, and that was after a twisting, curling, thrilling dash of 20 yards by Jimmy Green to the Bears' 10-yard line, but there they were halted in the last quarter.

Capt. Dill Beckman, injured early in the game, stuck to his post with the fortitude of a hero, and along with Gus Blakely, hefty tackle, and Ross Lynn, P. C.'s stellar end, bore off the honors of the day for the line. This trio of South Carolinians were in every play. They smashed through on defense, and they opened up on offense, but were aided materially by their fellow linesmen.

DEBT CAMPAIGN OFFICIALLY OPENS WITH GREAT RALLY

College Auditorium Is Scene of Representative Gathering of Leaders Who Will Direct Activities In Synod of South Carolina. Different Phases Are Discussed.

JACOBS, McSWEEN, LAPSLEY, GASTON, GILLESPIE, DAVIS, BAILEY, DOUGLAS AND BYRD SPEAK

More than two hundred leading Presbyterian laymen and pastors representing all parts of the state gathered on the campus Friday for an inspiring rally that officially opened the $50,000 program of deliverance for the college.

Cheered on by the students with songs and yells, these men, members of the general committee for the program, spent a day here and left filled with inspiration and determination to make a success of the financial campaign.

Business and professional men, laymen and pastors were among the speakers, presenting all sides of the problem and the opportunity confronting the college and the church. The appeal of the students was presented by R. T. Gillespie, Jr., of the class of 30. Gillespie told the men assembled in the chapel that the students were looking to them to assure the retention by the college of its "A Grade" standing and membership in the Southern Association of Colleges.

President McSween, in a stirring address, asserted that delivered from without, the college can go on to an increasingly greater measure of service.

Speakers from all walks of life pointed to the value of Presbyterian college as an agency for the advancement of the church and of the cause of Christian education, and stressed the urgency of the need now confronting the institution.

Perhaps the keynote of the whole meeting was struck by Colonel A. L. Gaston, of Chester, widely known attorney and religious leader, who declared that "the future of the church depends to a great degree upon our Christian colleges."

"Upon Presbyterian college depends the future of the Presbyterian church in South Carolina," asserted Colonel Gaston, "and upon the future of the church depends the businees, financial, social, political and spiritual life of our state. I would as soon see my own church close its doors as to see this college close its doors. We must make this program an unqualified success."

C. M. Bailey, Clinton manufacturer; Dr. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., pastor of First church, Columbia; William P. Jacobs, Clinton business man and general chairman of the campaign, and Rev. John McSween, president of the college—these were among the speakers who pointed out the various phases of the life of the people of the state as affected by Presbyterian college, and upon which the future of the college depend in large measure.

In spite of floods and almost impassable roads, every presbytery in the Synod of South Carolina was rep-

The Collegian To Appear Soon

The fall number of The Collegian will make its appearance on the campus early in November, according to an announcement made by Editor Louis Williamson after a staff meeting last Wednesday. All material submitted for consideration should be in the hands of the editor not later than October 15th, he said.

Plans have been outlined, by which the college magazine will be more interesting than ever before. Mr. Williamson plans to devote several pages to free verse, since there are several men in the student body who have proven themselves especially adept at this kind of writing. Several stories have been promised already.

The 1929 Collegian will be dressed in a new cover. This time it will masquerade in a beautiful red that should catch the eye and invite a perusal of the contents. It is understood that several other features are to be altered in order that the magazine may be as attractive as possible to students.

YEARLINGS TIE WOFFORD PUPS

19-19 Is Score As First Year Men Appear In Season's Opening Game. Good Stuff Seen.

In the first game of the season, played on Johnson field Thursday afternoon, the present crop of freshmen showed that they had plenty of that old P. C. spirit when they came from behind with a fourth quarter rally of two touchdowns to tie the Wofford frosh 19 to 19. However, the game should not be judged by the score, for it should have been the homelings' game in a walk, and it would have been had it not been for terrible breaks against them. But even this hard luck didn't so much as slow the boys down, as evidenced by their late rally. During the entire first half and most of the fourth quarter the Blue Hose almost continuously kept the ball in Wofford territory, and by far outclassed them in every way. Three times Coach Lonnie McMillian's charges threatened seriously and three times they scored.

The Hose scored first in the opening session when a continuous drive down the field, following an exchange of punts, netted the coveted six points. After Wofford's second punt, which Watson returned to the 40 yard line, Barrett tore off left tackle for 25 yards. Wofford promptly substituted an entire team, but this didn't help much, for the march to the goal line kept right on. On the next play Stamps

PRESBYTERIANS WIN AT SHELBY

Green Leads Blue Stockings To Victory Over Lenoir Rhyne In Season's Opening Game.

Shelby, N. C., Sept. 28.—Led by a flashy halfback, Jimmy Green, Presbyterian college defeated the Lenoir-Rhyne eleven here this afternoon, 15 to 0, in a game played before 3,000 fans at the Cleveland County fair.

A deadly aerial attack and fast end runs were largely responsible for the P. C. victory, although bad passes from center were damaging to Dick Gurley's Mountain Bears. The regular Lutheran center was not in the lineup, due to injuries which will keep him for the remainder of the season.

Early in the first quarter, Hatfield, Lenoir-Rhyne center, snapped one high over Hager's head on his 15-yard line, and although Hager recovered the ball, he was downed for a safety. A few minutes later P. C. added a touchdown to the safety on a long pass, Dunlap to Lynn, and a sweeping end run by Green. Try for point failed.

At the end of the quarter a 30-yard pass, Jones to Kiser, had the ball on the Presbyterians' 4-yard line. The Dramatic Club To Play At Converse

The senior class of Converse college will sponsor a performance of the Presbyterian College Dramatic club this fall, according to a letter received by C. W. Grafton, president of the club. The date of the performance will be November ninth. Under the direction of Mrs. M. W. Brown the organization has been working regularly this week on "The Genius," a three-act comedy by William C. and Cecil B. DeMille. A local presentation of the play will be given on the evening of October 19th, accordnig to present plans.

Members of the cast are Marvin Murphy, Tommy Johnston, Bill Collins, "Caesar" Myers, Medora Browning, Alma Davis, Georgia Blakely, Bill Blakely, James Hamlin, Mike Caskey, John Osman, and Chip Grafton.

Practice is progressing very nicely, it is reported, and it is certain that everything will be in readiness for a great performance on the nineteenth.

WHAT'S YOUR NAME?

What's your name? Is it just a handle—a label—a device used to distinguish you from the other persons that go to make up the mass of humanity? Is it just a tag for professors to use when they make out their grades? Is it merely something for folks to put on envelopes when they write to you?

Don't think that these are foolish questions for they are not as trivial as they appear on the surface. There are too many people to whom their own names have little meaning other than as a convenience—a thing used to avoid confusion. John Doe is simply John Doe; "John," to distinguish him from Phil and Jim Doe; "Doe" in order that he may not be mistaken for John Hinkledorfer of John Punkleheimer.

You are a man. What's your name? Isn't it more than a label? Why, it's a word that is borne by father, and your grandfather. It's a name that has gathered significance with every act those people have done in years gone by. It is your trade-mark—your brand—your passport. It is your claim to the honor of your family. It is the solid foundation on which you may build your life.

You have had the experience. "Mr. X, I want you to meet John Doe." And Mr. X says: "John Doe! Say, are you any kin to the John Doe of Podunk? You don't say! Well, it's a little old world, isn't it? Twenty years ago Jack Doe and I played on the same football team at Alma Mater. Jack was one of the hardest hitting fullbacks in the game. Well, I'm sure glad to know you!"

And so it goes. You are not just Doe, or Brown, or Jones, or Smith. You are one of THE DOES, THE BROWNS, THE JONESES, THE SMITHS. As you go through life you stand or fall just as surely on the reputation of your name as you do on your own deeds. By that reputation and that name you may be boosted at once to a place of respect in your community; or by that name you may be hopelessly handicapped at the very start. It is unfortunate, but true.

Surely here is something worthy of thought. Perhaps you have always thought of your name as the one thing in the world that is absolutely yours. Yes, it is yours; but it is not yours alone. You may do with it as you like—honor it or shame it; but the result does not die with you. As Mark Anthony said at the funeral of Caesar, "The evil that men do lives after them."

Some day, if it is not looking too far ahead, you may have a son. His name, too, will be Doe; and a Mr. X may one day have occasion to say: "Doe? Any kin to a fellow named Doe who went to P. C. along about 1930?" And what is it going to mean to your son? Will he be known as the son of a man who was a good sport, or a good student, or a loyal friend?

You may think of college days as days in which you are entitled to have a good time. Yes, but that is not all. While you are here you are building a reputation. You will go away from Presbyterian college catalogued and graded, not only in the registrar's files but in the memories and hearts of the faculty and students. What is your catalogue number to be? What will be your grade? Will you go with your name at the top of the list, or at the bottom?

Again I ask you. Student of Presbyterian college, what is your name?

THE FLOATING UNIVERSITY

On Wednesday morning the sun came back to P. C. How unfortunate! It was all that prevented Presbyterian college from being South Carolina's Floating University. The sailors at the winches were making ready to heave anchor,, the look-out in the crow's nest was clearing his throat for the seaman's cry of "Steamer in sight off the port bows!" (if that is what a seaman cries), the ship's doctor was laying in a supply of Mother Sills Seasick Cure, and visitors were preparing to hurriedly make their exits before the captain should give the order to cast off.

But now—alas! The tarpaulins have been replaced over the melancholy winches, the look-out has retired to his dismal psychology notes, the ship's doctor is wondering what to do with his mammoth supply of Mother Sill's, and the wretched send-off parties must remain to console the broken-hearted passengers. Until it rains again the unhappy anchor must remain in its muddy home.

SWEET SPIRITS OF RAT

The "P. C. spirit" has been guaranteed at least four more years of life. There is no chance of its demise until the Class of 1933 has forever bidden the campus farewell. Thursday's game with Wofford's Terrier Pups should be enough to convince the most pessimistic of observers that the rats have truly inherited their share of Presbyterian's spirit.

Each year the faculty and upperclassmen of Presbyterian college are wont to look forward eagerly to the first football game played by the first year men.. It is the first opportunity the frosh have to show whether or not they are to be ranked along with every other class that has ever matriculated in the Clinton institution, as loyal, scrapping, aggressive, enduring, never-say-die sons of a worthy and honored alma mater.

Our Mother may now rest, her eyes shining with unspoken pride. The newest crop of sons has made the grade. They have run the first race—and they have run it well. They have met the enemy—they have tasted battle—they have felt that inner fire that burns without ceasing in the heart of every son of the Garnet and Blue.

And yet it is not so much the wonder over. For weeks the watchers have felt sure that there could be nothing but credit in the deeds that are to be done by the freshman class. They have worked hard, never complaining, never shirking, never "laying down," when Coach McMillian has called for extra work or grilling scrimmages that last until dark.

The P. C. spirit is born in a man's heart when he is first entitled to call the campus his. It grows with each deed that he does for his college. Now that the first fight has been passed the rats can only feel a strengthening of that pride that has been theirs in the name of Presbyterian college.

Open Forum

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

The student body of Presbyterian college is composed primarily of fools and liars—this is the conclusion that we drew from the words of a gentleman who recently spoke in chapel. This gentleman proceeded to read Section 4 or Article I of the Constitution of Presbyterian College. This article follows:

4. Hazing shal not be participated in.

(a) Hazing shall be defined as any act of physical violence offered a freshman or freshmen against their will by an upper-classman.

After reading this, he said that any upper-classman who "applied the rod" to a freshman was a liar because he signed, upon entering college, a pledge in which he promised not to haze. He further stated that if the freshman took the beating he was a fool.

However, if we may venture to do so, we would like to suggest to the gentleman that there is another side to the question. We would like to call attention to Section 1 of Article VI, which follows:

1. All freshmen shall be required to abide by the written and unwritten laws and customs as adopted and laid down by the student body.

If it has not been a custom in the past to mete out a reward to freshmen who "hoss" upper-classmen, we must have only imagined that we were commanded to "grab ankles" so often our freshman year.

If we are to accept the conclusion that is so evidently indicated by the words of the gentleman mentioned—then on "rat night" a mob of fools and liars paraded publicly in the streets of Clinton. We believe that if the citizens of the town had held this attitude toward the students the parade would have been stopped.

In the past, each freshman class was asked to vote on the customs adopted for the regulation of the freshman class, and every year they voted to continue them. We voted for them our freshman year. We believe that the mild form of discipline regulating freshman conduct at Presbyterian college is not objectionable.

It is unquestionable that the gentleman would be right if the students went so far as to treat freshmen in a brutal or inhuman manner, or if they imposed on them; but with few exceptions the things done to freshmen are done in a good natured way. They are, almost without exception, taken in the same manner by the frosh. Many frosh come to college with an irritating and exaggerated feeling of their own importance. They soon learn the attitude of the upper-classman toward "horsing"—yet they continue the practice. Surely, after the first day they cannot plead ignorance. We believe that the freshmen enjoy the thing as much as the upper-classmen. Personally, we had much fun by "hossing" upper-lassmen our freshman year; and we received our just rewards.

There are students at Presbyterian college who still do not think that their actions constitute a violation of the matriculation pledge. Likewise, with all due respect, they do not like to be called liars. We beg, therefore, that those who intend to call names in the future will first look open-mindedly at the question from all sides in order that there may be no exaggeration of the injustice done to the parties concerned.

Sincerely yours,
A STUDENT.

LITERARY

The literary societies began their year's work Tuesday night under the direction of Professors Seeger and Swedenberg. This year there are to be two societies—one for upper-classmen and the other for under-classmen, Dr. Seeger having charge of the upper-class society. The programs are to be arranged by months and the first month is to be devoted entirely to extemporary speaking. At Tuesday's meeting the following subjects were discussed: Should P. C. and Chicora be combined? the traditions of P. C., and the new every-student athletic program at P. C. No one was called upon, but the speeches were entirely voluntary.

After the meeting Dr. Seeger made a short talk, and the election of officers followed. B. H. Dickson was chosen as president; S. Eubanks, vice-president, and E. V. Anderson, secretary.

Flimsy Step-Ins And "Panties" Predicted For The 1930 Shiek

Chicago, Sept. 22.—The shiek of 1930 will "outdo the peacock and the rainbow."

In other words Solomon, in all his glory, was never arrayed like man will show next summer.

The authority for all this is Miss Daisy Dugan, president of the artists' models and mannequins, in discussing plans for the advance show of male attire to be held here next month.

The apparel for mere man during next summer will be flimsier, and flashier than ever dared by his flapper sister. In fact his work-a-day garb should be packed into his vest pocket—if he wore a vest. But, the vest is passe.

Silk shirts will be back. They will be collarless and sleeveless and open at the front to display the manly chest and will flow in graceful lines outside the trousers, rather "panties," because the 1930 style outlaws trousers.

And, the "panties" wil be short—six inches above the knee in fact.

Shoes? Pumps? No, no! Man will wear rolled socks and sandals..

Now comes the—well, you name it. Man's under-garments will outstrip, or out-skimp, the flapper. He will indulge in combinations, step-ins, teddys—all of the unmentionables which have caused him to envy woman for years and years.

His color ensemble will outdo that of woman for while fashion decrees pastel effects for the coming season for women, the male will be decked out in the loudest color scheme that can be devised.

WHAT KIND OF MEN LIVE IN CHICAGO?

Take It From Liz

Dear Miss Liz:

My faith in you is sadly shaken. I took your advice when I went to see my little picture-show darling—in fact I carried same out to the very letter. You were certainly right about love flying out of the window when poverty comes in at the door. When I gave her that crack and she found out how broke I was, things were practically at an end right there. I have never saw a lady grow cold so quick. Remembering your letter I followed up quickly with that hot line about weary rivers winding somewhere safe to sea. She reacted different from what I expected, I can tell you, Miss Liz. You would have been most terrible hurt if you could have saw her and hear what she said. She told me I was one tiresome stream of unconsciousness that would be safer seeing some other girl. Now I ask you, Miss Liz, what had a fellow ought to do in a case like that?

I am most awful despondent as I take my pen in hand to write you this here letter.

Oswald.

Dead Oswald:

I am beginning to think you haven't "It." After carefully thinking over your case I have decided that there is only one course open to you—go to see some other girl. This time, Oswald, I think it would be better to pick someone more suited to your peculiar type, if you see what I mean. What you need is a girl who is beautiful but rather dumb.

Dear Miss Liz:

I eagerly read your column last week and I think it is just too CUTE! I don't see how you can ever tell just what people NEED when they're in trouble. I really don't. You are ALways so sympaTHETic and that is why I am coming to you, now that I have got myself into the most AWful situation.

I am a girl who is a student at a CERTAIN COLLEGE in this state. Last spring I went with six boys and got their fraternity pins and now, would you beLIEVE it, Miss Liz, I've done forgotten which pin is which boy's and all. I know I am going to be just too embaBARrassed when any of them come to see me this fall.

I am enTIREly relying on you, dear Miss Liz, to tell me what I ought to DO.

Lots and lots of love,
Cynthia.

Dear Cynthia:

I just feel somehow that you are the kind of a girl who can take care of herself rather well. There are, of course, several ways to get yourself out of your embarrassing position. After considering most carefully I feel that there is one that is sure to be most satisfactory. Try this—eat onions, pawn the fraternity pins, and spend the money on a nice new dress to wear when other boys come to see you.

Editor's note:—It is most encouraging to note that people from other colleges are beginning to come to Miss Liz for advice. She is most willing to do anything she can for anyone who is in trouble. If you don't want to sign your name, just put any old thing and she will answer you by that name. Address your letters to "Liz, Care The Blue Stocking, Clinton, S. C." and watch the next issue for her remedy.

BLUE HOSE WIN OVER MERCER

After a bad punt from the toe of Jimmy Green, plus the great running of Matt of Mercer, had given the Bears a foothold in Presbyterian territory, Blue Stocking fans cheered their team on when a score for the Georgians semed almost certain. But the heights were open, and P. C. held to see Mercer fall back for a moment—all that was needed.

The second period had hardly opened. An exchange of punts had marked its beginning, and the Garnet and Blue was on its own 33-yard line. Lynn and Cheatham opened a hole in the line. Orel Dunlap slashed through off tackle. He swung out and evaded Alderman, with Jimmy Green close behind. Alderman started a dive 30 yards back of the scrimmage line, but his hands never touched their goal. Just at the right moment, Green, the idol of Presbyterian fans, threw his weight fairly across the path of the Bear, and the Mercer man bit dust.

Dunlap thundered on. Blue Stockings rose around him and only the safety man lay ahead. Galloway was through like a streak. A blue jersey crashed into an orange clad lad, and only an open field lay ahead. It was beautiful work and Dunlap scored. Grafton went in to kick the point, but an alert Mercer back broke it up.

Following this Matt went wild. Time and again the Bear reeled off yardage, and P. C. fans watched in amazement, but P. C. players reiterated [illegible] pass." Taking [illegible] was good for 16 yards and the [illegible] Monroe again failed to kick goal.

And then came the fire works. After Wofford had been penalized 15 yards for holding, they punted to Perrin on their own 45-yard line. Perrin returned 30 yards, showing beautiful broken field running. When three attempts at the line netted only four yards, Stamps passed over the goal line to Nettles for a touchdown. Stamps failed to kick goal. P. C.'s last marker came after Carr had recovered a Wofford fumble on his own 42-yard line. Graham then saved the day with a neat driving snag of Stamps' 30-yard pass. On the next play Nettles took a pass from Stamps for 20 yards. Stamps got four yards at right guard and then passed to Perrni, who took it over into the promised land of foot ball. Adams was sent in for Stamps and failed in his attempt to kick goal but Wofford was offside and the Hose got the extra point that meant a tie or a defeat.

For Wofford, Rogers, Alexander and Scott stood out in the backfield play, while Thompson, Jackson, and Kinney did the big work in the line. However, picking the stars on the Blue Stocking roster is another proposition, for there was not a single man who played that did not make his presence known and felt. Too much can not be said for the ends. Copeland's work on defense was 99 99-100% pure—pure arsenic. Pinson, Graham, and Nettles were not "also rans" by any means. Graham had an edge on the other two by virtue of his fine offensive and defensive work in the fourth quarter. Ewing showed up well at tackle, and Captain Carr turned in a brilliant performance at guard. As for the backs, that's still harder, but Stamps, Perrin and Barrett probably did the best work, with the passing of Stamps coming in for great honors.

Mercer took to the air in an attempt to tie the score. The Bears tried 21 forward passes, only three of which were completed to net only 27 yards, three being intercepted and returned for substantial gains and 15 going wild as Presbyterian linesmen rushed the passer. The Blues tried only three, but all went wrong.

made two yards at center, but Watson lost six on an attempted reverse. Then a pass, Stamps to Perrin, put the ball on the three-yard line. Barrett got a yard at center and Stamps duplicated. Barrett was then thrown out of bounds on the four-yard line, but Stamps took things in his own hands and went around left end for a touchdown. Copeland failed to kick goal. Barrett was hurt soon afterward and had to retire from the game after a sterling exhibition at full back.

Things rocked along about evenly until the third quarter and looked as if the game would end 6 to 0, but Wofford got a break. Early in the third settee, Wofford punted to P. C.'c two-yard line where they recovered after the P. C. safety man had touched the ball. On the next P. C. was offsides and penalized one yard. Alexander then went over for a touchdown. Scoot kicked goal. Another marker for Wofford soon followed after a straight march down the field, greatly aided by the passing of Rogers. Alexander again went over for a touchdown and Monroe failed to kick goal. The Terriers' third and last touchdown came in the early moments of the fourth quarter when a pass from Rogers to [illegible] was good for 16 yards and the [illegible] Monroe again failed to kick goal.

Saturday Morning For Calesthenics

The military department has decided to make use of the Saturday morning drill periods, to which they are entitled this year, for calesthenics and organized mass games. The department therefore requests that the unit will form every Saturday morning clad in old clothes or other accoutrements which do not mind a little dirt. It is especially requested that the uniform shall not be worn.

PRESBYTERIANS WIN AT SHELBY

South Carolinians held in the opening of the second quarter and punted out of the only really dangerous spot of the afternoon. After the first quarter, the Lutheran passing attack, Jones and Hager to Kiser, was repeatedly smothered.

In the third quarter two passes, Galloway to Green, for a total of 35 yards, sent over the final touchdown for P. C., Grafton, subbing for Galloway, dropkicked for the extra point.

Green, Presbyterian halfback, was the leading ground gainer and outstanding star, although pushed closely by Young and Senter.

Jones, fullback, led the Lenoir-Rhyne offense, while Poovey, substitute tackle, led both elevens in smashing line plays.

Line-up:

DEBT CAMPAIGN OFFICIALLY OPENS

resented at the rally.

Dr. Lapsley, who spoke directly upon the church's educational need, asserted he saw in Presbyterian college the source of the three things needed by the citizenship of the state. He declared that from Presbyterian college come the men who are assuming the pastorates of South Carolina Presbyterian churches; the men who are assuming lay leadership in the churches, and the influence that "is keeping the stream of intellectual thought true to evangelical Christianity."

Mr. Jacobs, spoke, as he said, "as one business man to another," and he showed that Christian training made for an enlightened, honest business life in South Carolina. He appealed to the business men who are members of the Presbyterian church to do everything in their power to insure the future operation of the college upon a sound financial basis.

Mr. Bailey's speech was an assurance that the business men of the church have faith in the future of the college, while President McSween urged the Presbyterians of South Carolina to do everything in their power to keep open this source of trained leadership.

Other speakers included Dr. R. T. Gillespie, president of Columbia Theological seminary, Decatur, Ga.; Rev. John W. Davis, of Kingstree, chairman of one No. 3; Rev. C. K. Douglas, of Manning, president of the alumni association; R. T. Gillespie, Jr., representing the students, and Dr. S. C. Byrd, president of Chicora college, who declared that the "best thing Presbyterians can do for the church in South Carolina at this time is to assure the success of this program of deliverance."

Bill Carr To Lead Frosh Gridsters

At a meeting of the freshman football squad Wednesday night, William H. Carr of Spartanburg, was elected captain of the 1929 Baby Blue Hose. If the frosh had searched far and wide, hither and thither and elsewhere besides, they could not have found a better man for the honor than Bill Carr, as he is popularly known on the campus. He is a clean, hard-fighting athlete of the type that will bring more honor to P. C.'s unequaled reputation. He knows football as a true P. C. gridiron warrior should.

Bill played three years of the pig skin sport at Spartanburg high, and during that time received commendation from all who saw him play. Two of these season's he worked at guard and the third at end. This year he has been shifted back to guard, and all who saw the Wofford game w[illegible] that he was "plenty trouble" [illegible] opposition. FURMAN WINS HARD-FOUGHT GAME FROM PRESBYTERIANS

Annual Gridiron Encounter With Baptists Results In 12 to 0 Score. Blue Stockings Put Up Stiff Opposition But Do Not Succeed In Crossing White Line.

Greenville, Oct. 11.—Furman's big purple Hurricane, still lacking the coordination which Dad Amis and company have been seeking for weeks, had a terrible time subduing Walter Johnson's speedy Presbyterian eleven here this afternoon, the Blue Hose holding the Hurricane scoreless in the first half and bowing after a magnificent struggle against odds in the latter half, 12 to 0.

Furman's first touchdown was handed them almost on a silver platter, Lucie Stewart, giant red-haired Texan end, crashing through to block a punt behind P. C.'s own goal line and falling on the bounding leather for a touchdown. The try for point failed..

Presbyterian's elusive backs, Galloway, Green and O. Dunlap, knifed through the Hurricane for repeated gains, but the Hurricane always found the knack of bracing. Threatened in the first half when Burnett, Furman back, fumbled and P. C. recovered on Furman's 25-yard line, a pass, Galloway to Green, placed the ball on the 1-yard stripe. A pass, Green to Dunlap to Galloway, netted six yards and placed the ball on Furman's 4-yard line. Here Furman's huskies dug up several fistfuls of grass and threw back the Blue Stocking ball carriers four times as they attempted to plow the remaining yardage through the line. Furman punted out of danger.

Local Concerns Show Loyalty

Many students no doubt noticed the attractive display in the window of Keillers Drug store advertising the Mercer-P. C. game. Such cooperation from Clinton firms shows a fine interest in the college and a hearty backing of everything that concerns it. Another example of this gratifying loyalty to P. C. is shown by L. B. Dillard, who placed tickets for the game on sale in his store during the week. Such actions should be heartily appreciated by every member of the student body. It is hoped that in the future other places of business in Clinton will join in a sort of campaign to make every home game the biggest success possible.

Press Association Plans In Making

The first official communication regarding the 1929 meeting of the South Carolina Intercollegiate Press association, was received by the editor yesterday. Election of Blue Stocking representatives will probably be held during the early part of next week.

This year the long-standing custom of determining the best publications by vote of the delegates, is to be discontinued. Following a measure passed at the meeting last fall, the decision this year will rest in the hands of judges who are competent to rule on such questions.

The meeting will be held the week before Thanksgiving, in Greenville. Furman university and Greenville Womans college will be the joint hosts. Last fall the meeting was held in Columbia, with U. S. C., Columbia college and Chicora acting as hosts.

SWIMMING POOL ABOUT READY

Laying Of Tile Now Going On At Rapid Pace. Expected To Be Completed In Two Weeks.

Not many more days now, before the water will be sloshing into the pool, the spring-board will be springing beneath the weight of husky swimmers, and the rafter will ring with the shouts of young men at play. To use the oft-quoted words of the unfortunate monkey whose tail became too closely associated with the lawn-mower, "It won't be long now!"

The long expected day is but a few tomorrows from us now. The last phase of the construction, the tiling of the pool, is fast nearing completion. Workmen and expert tilers have been applying themselves to the job for the last few days and have already made considerable headway. At the time of going to press, nearly half of the work has been done. It is not too optimistic to suppose that the last and most difficult task will be completed before as much as two weeks have elapsed.

It has not been so long since students on their way to the athletic field were forced to carefully circumnavigate a vasty hole in the ground. The cavity has been expertly and beautifully lined with immaculate white tiles. What was once a gaping space, open and free to the four winds of the heavens, has now been enclosed into a snug rendezvous where male bathing beauties may promenade in comfort on those cold days that winter brings to Clinton. Where is that ugly hole that once scarred the fair campus of Presbyterian college? Gone! Gone, yes, and soon it will be forgotten.

P. C. Tooters Toot At Furman Game

Although Furman emerged from the game yesterday with the large end of the score, they did not cop all the honors of the day. If the opinion expressed by disinterested observers is worth anything, P. C.'s band got the better of the Furman band in a hard-fought contest that lasted throughout the game. The Presbyterian musicians outdid themselves, both in the stands while the game was in progress, and on the field between halves.

Marvin Murphy, the stellar Presbyterian drum-major and baton-twirler, led the Blue Stocking blowers and beaters in a masterful way, completely out-twirling and out-stepping the Furman twirler and stepper. The band blew their shiny curled-up horns like true P. C. horn-blowers should. As one tobacco-juice-spitting onlooker was heard laconically to remark, "That band can blow the beatinest music (patooey!) I ever seen."

It is rumored that, in view of yesterday's bandial success, the band will journey to Columbia with the football team next Friday when the Hosemen meet Carolina's Gamecocks. Whether or not the game is a thriller, the crowd will certainly get its money's worth of real low-down music. Members of the band will have an opportunity to blow their own horn (what a privilege!) to their heart's content.

NAME LEADERS FOR CAMPAIGN

Further Selection of Laymen and Pastors Bring Debt Raising Plans Forward.

Chairman and associate chairmen have been obtained for the twenty-eight groups into which the Synod of South Carolina has been divided for the carrying out of the Presbyterian college $350,000 program of deliverance.

These group chairmen and associates are now busy, in turn, obtaining the services of chairmen for the churches in their respective groups. Each church in the synod is to have a chairman and a campaign committee, with the pastor as associate chairman, to carry on its part of the movement to raise the funds necessary to deliver Presbyterian college from the burden of debt.

When the organization is complete—the church chairmen are to be obtained by October 17, and the church committee by October 24—more than a thousand laymen and pastors will

HOLIDAY GIVEN NEXT FRIDAY

College Authorites To "Let Out "School" So That Students May See Carolina Game.

Friday, October 18th, the date of the P. C.-Carolina football game, will be a holiday, according to an agreement reached last Thursday. The game will be played in Columbia on the afternoon of the 18th, and it is expected that a large number of P. C. students will be there as a result of this decision.

For several years it has been the custom of the faculty to give one holiday during football season. A choice of dates is usually given, and the student body is allowed to choose by popular vote the date it wishes. This year the faculty gave students their choice between the dates of three games. The dates were those of the Furman game, Friday, October 11th; the Carolina game, Friday, October 18th; and the Wofford game, Saturday, November first. After considerable discussion in open meeting of the student body last Thursday it was decided by a large majority of those present, to elect the day of the game with the University of South Carolina.

With the results of this week's games, P. C.-Furman and Carolina-Maryland, in mind, there should be a great deal of interest in next Friday's game. P. C. has, this year, one of the strongest, fastest, and most aggressive teams in her history. Carolina, likewise, has a speedy backfield and a ferocious line. It is undeniable that something is bound to "pop loose" when the two teams clash on Melton field next week. Students who are able to attend the game may be assured that there will be a great contest that afternoon.

A galaxy of stars will trip onto the field next Friday. For the Gamecocks, Zobel, Boineau, Rhame, Julian Beall, and others of equal worth and fame will perform. And of course every Presbyterian college man is familiar with the names, legs, faces, headgears, and reputations of such men as Jimmy Green, "Skeet" Galloway, "Snooks" Dunlap, Gus Blakely, Ross Lynn, and their cohorts. Every one is eager to see what will happen when Birds and Stockings meet on the gridiron. Be there and yell your fool head off next Friday afternoon.

FRATERNITIES PREPARING FOR ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP INCREASE

Tuesday, October 29th, Is Set As Day for Completion of Activities To Secure First Year Men As Recruits. Pan-Hellenic Council Formulates Rules for Observance.

Fraternities will enrich their memberships by additions from the freshman class on Tuesday, October 29th, this year. The date and manner of extending bids are announced by the Pan-Hellenic council. The action was taken at a meeting of the council last Thursday afternoon.

This year proceedings will be managed after the principles inaugurated last year. Bids will be extended in writing through a member of the faculty committee on fraternities and acceptance will be made by the freshmen in the same manner. Last year the plan was tried with success. All were agreed that this method of bidding men was more satisfactory and fair than the old plan whereby fraternities gave their bids in person.

The rules announced by the council are printed below:

Each fraternity shall turn into the chairman of the faculty committee in sealed form a list of all bids extended by 1 P. M., Oct. 28.

Those men who are to receive bids will be notified on the following morning at the chapel hour. The same will go to Dr. Spencer's room between the hours of three and four of the same day, Oct. 29th, and shall there secure paper on which to signify their choice, first, second and third, of fraternities which they desire to join. This paper shall be filled out in the presence of the chairman of the faculty committee on fraternities, and handed to him in sealed form. No fraternity man shall be allowed to enter said room during the above mentioned hour.

The chairman of the faculty committee shall post a list including only the men accepting bids and what bids are accepted, not later than three o'clock of the following day..

There will be a "silent period" from 1 P. M., Oct. 28, to 4 P. M., Oct. 29, in which a fraternity man will not be allowed dates with a freshman, nor avoidable contact of any kind, no mention of fraternity matters, and no fraternity man shall be instrumental in having outside influence put on a freshman.

By this plan no bids will be given personally, and nobody will know what bids are rejected except the members of that fraternity and the members of the faculty committee. In this way a fraternity may extend as many bids as it wants to without fear of being accused of being bumped. The freshman is also allowed the privilege of signing up for the fraternity which he wants to join without endangering his chances of getting another bid.

It is hoped that the fraternity men on the campus will cooperate with the council in this, in trying to provide a better and fairer way of pledging.

DEATH CLAIMS FRIEND OF P. C.

Heart Attack Fatal To Clinton Business Man. Former Member of Board of Trustees.

J. Isaac Copeland, 61, well known merchant and leading citizen of Clinton, was called into the great beyond Saturday afternoon shortly before five o'clock at Dr. Hays' hospital.

Six weeks ago Mr. Copeland suffered a heart attack and was advised by his physicians to relinquish his duties and take a complete rest. His condition failing to satisfactorily improve, he was removed to the hospital ten days ago. Here he gradually grew worse until he quietly passed away. The news of his sudden death spread rapidly over the city and brought genuine sorrow to a wide circle of friends who knew him intimately and held him in high esteem.

The funeral service was held Monday morning at 11 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church and the attendance filled both the auditorium and Sunday school rooms to capacity. Out of respect to the deceased, the banks, stores and business houses of the city all closed at the funeral hour to pay a last tribute to a departed friend and fellow merchant. The flowers were ex-

Work Progresses On "The Genius"

"The Genius," the three-act comedy which is to be given by the Dramatic club of Presbyterian college, will be presented to a Clinton audience on Monday evening, October 21st, instead of Saturday, the 19th. This decision was reached by the members of the club during the past week after certain new developments had been brought to their attention.

The cast has now been hard at work for nearly two weeks, and reports have it that things are rounding into shape very nicely. All who have seen the practices or who have read the play are agreed that it will certainly be a very comical comedy. The cast has been admirably chosen by the director, Mrs. M. W. Brown, and each of the company is enthusiastically entering into the spirit of the play.

Interest in the play has been steadily on the increase since the announcement, made last week, that a date has been secured for a performance to be given at Converse college, in Spartanburg. It is also hoped that one or two other dates may be settled in the course of the next few days, but as yet nothing definite has been heard from these sources.

Sigma Upsilon Gets In Motion

Isis chapter of Sigma Upsilon, national honorary literary fraternity, will meet this year on the first and third Thursday evenings of every month, it was decided at a meeting of the organization, held in Dr. Jones' classroom last Tuesday at noon. Members who were not present at the meeting are urged to take notice of the announcement, and to be present next Thursday evening, October 17th. Announcement as to the exact time and place of the meeting will be made in chapel or at dinner early next week.

EDITORIALS

ABOUT OUR OPEN FORUM

During the past week the editor has received two letters replying to the letter which appeared in "Open Forum" last Saturday. Owing to a circumstance which is no doubt due to misunderstanding, these letters cannot be printed in the columns of the paper. In both cases the writers thoughtlessly omitted to sign their names. Although signed names are not printed in connection with letters printed in the Forum, it is absolutely necessary that the names should be affixed to the letters in order that the editor may know to whom the responsibility rightfully belongs. It is clear that The Blue Stocking cannot print anonymous letters.

Responsibility for articles or opinions appearing the the college paper naturally devolves upon the editor. The editorials themselves are direct expressions of his opinions. It is hardly reasonable, therefore, to expect him to accept, as well, the responsibility for opinions expressed by the student body at large.

The Open Forum column is a medium through which students may express their opinions and air their views. The paper disclaims liability for the ideas that are expressed. This does not mean, however, that it will print any and every signed letter that reaches the hands of the editor. On the contrary, every missive, of whatever nature, will hereafter be edited most carefully. Nothing shall be allowed to appear unless there is at least some concrete complaint or some constructive criticism. Letters dealing solely in personalities, as in the case of one of those unsigned epistles received through the mail during the week, will under no circumstances be printed. It is urged that timid persons who wish to browbeat others or use abusive language, should either write their anonymous letters direct to the object of their scorn, or else retire into a shady corner until they have summoned courage sufficient for a personal encounter. The editor does not feel very pugilistic this fall and is not pining for opportunities to fight for the opinions expressed by others—especially when he has no way of knowing who the person is.

It is offered as a gentle suggestion that complaints be made through the business manager's office whenever it is possible to use this channel. As Mr. McSween pointed out in chapel last week, the college may hardly be expected to correct causes for grievances before the proper authorities have been notified.

Perhaps it is best for the matter now under consideration to be dropped without further comment. The person most vitally concerned has shown his wisdom and good judgment by ignoring it. Surely his friends in the student body can do no better than to follow his excellent example. Further comment by one side will only lead to comment from the other, and the result will be added publicity to a matter which will otherwise die of insufficient nourishment.

MILITARY JURISDICTION

In spite of the events of last Thursday morning, students need feel no cause for alarm. There will be no mutiny, revolution, or other disorder among the military forces at Presbyterian college. The offender is now well in hand. He has been placed under arrest and will shortly be tried by a general court-marital made up from among the members of the senior military class.

The whole plan is a device employed by the commandant to introduce a little realism into the classroom. The case of assault and battery was carefully staged with an eye to the stationing of witnesses. The case will be brought before the court as would any similar occurrence in the army, and all the formalities of court proceedure will be carried through punctiliously.

It is possible that after the trial has been completed in class, a public demonstration will be staged for the benefit of the student body. Many students are no doubt interested in the proceedure of a court marital and would welcome an opportunity to witness such a performance.

Interest is running high in the senior class and it is expected that the trial will be carried through with the greatest success. Such actions as this serve to increase the popularity of a course, and to arouse interest that cannot but have its effect on the standard of work done by the class.

Take It From Liz

It is with the utmost regret that we print the following letter received this week from Liz:

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am very sorry to have to tell you that I can no longer continue my column in your paper. I have enjoyed the work very much (for I always feel gratified when I can help someone who is in trouble, don't you?) but I have a great many other duties at this time and am therefore compelled to give up my pleasant relations with The Blue Stocking.

I cannot bid you "goodbye" however, without leaving instructions for the poor people who asked for my aid. (Oh! How can I leave them helpless this way? But I guess it has to be done, doesn't?) I feel sure I have helped them over a few of the rough spots of life, and it is my only wish that my way could be clear toward continuing my modest little column. However, I suppose it is best for them to face life's hardships and disappointments alone. I have always fought my own battles and I know what they will suffer. (How my heart aches for them, poor dears!)

If Oswald has any more trouble with his affairs de coeur (is that what a Frenchman calls it or not?) try to help him as best you can. However, I just don't feel sure that he is the kind that gets along best with the girls. See if you can't divert his interests into other channels. .

Poor Cynthia was deeply in trouble when she wrote me last week. I thought over her case for a long time, and I am sure the advice I gave her has been helpful. (At least that is what I once did when I was in the same fix, and it worked admirably.) If she writes again and is still in trouble, send her to me—you know what my address is.

There's really nothing I can do about the poor man who has had so many children. I think it would be better if you should sort of carelessly lose any letters that come from him. Somehow I'm afraid if I give him any more good advice he will want to marry me or something, and then I ask you—what could I do in a case like that?

Well, Mr. Editor, (I could call you by your first name but that wouldn't sound right, would it?) I guess that's about all I have to say. Please tell my reading public for me that I'm awfully sorry I have to quit this way; but—well, you fix it up for me some way or other, will you?

Best wishes to your paper and to all the students of Presbyterian college.

Lots and lots of love from,
Liz.

P. S.—I hope it to be in Columbia next Friday. Couldn't I get into the game free, somehow. I just know P. C. is going to beat Carolina and I'm going to be right there yelling my head off for Coach Johnson's team.

LIBRARY NOTES

In spite of the larger student body, the students of Presbyterian college read less last month than any month last year. During the fourteen days the library was open for circulation only 459 books were taken out, compared to January of last year with over six hundred and contrasted with April with over fourteen hundred. Literature still leads with a circulation of one hundred fifteen, while works of fiction found less than half that number of readers. The fine and useful arts tailed the list with three each.

"The Wave," by Evelyn Scott. This has been one of the best sellers in the United States and a recent Literary Guild selection. It is a historical novel of the Civil war written with a piercing vividness.

"Mr. Punch's History of the Great War." This is an importation from England. Punch, the famous English comic publication, has furnished the material for this history in cartoon and humor of the world's most recent tragedy. The popular conception of the racial lack of humor in the English will be put to rest by anyone caring to read this wonderful book.

"1918-1928, A Short History of the World," C. Delisle Burns. Beginning with the rehabilitation of the world after the World war and a review of new conditions, as those existing in Russia, Burns goes into the Asiatic situation and makes some very plausible indications of the next developments in that field relating to world history.

"Cavender's House," Edwin Arlington Robinson. This long poem written in blank verse is the narrative of tragedy. Beautifully written and a wonderful character study it reminds one somewhat of Poe in his wierd and gloomy laments over his lost love. The story is that of a jealous husband who pushed his wife over a cliff twelve years before and returns to his home filled with doubt and longing. His disturbed nature contrasts strongly with the serene and beautiful spirit of his wife.

"Carolina Chansons," Dubose Heyward and Hervey Allen. This book of poems of the legends and songs of the low country was first published in 1922. To quote from the preface "Here the Frenchman, Spaniard, and the Englishman all passed, leaving each his legend; and a brilliant and more or less feudal civilization with its aristocracy and slaves has departed with the economic system upon which it rested."

Other books that have been catalogued and added to the shelves within the past week include:

"Any One Can Bake," Royal Baking Powder Co.

"Duke Endowment Yearbook No. 1."

"Guide To the Use of U. S. Government Publications," Edith E. Clarke.

"Algernon Sydney Sullivan," Anne Middleton Holmes. Presented to the library by the New York Southern society.

"American Institutions and Their Preservation," W. .W. Cook. Presented to the library by the author.

"Galvamamagnetic and Thermomagnetic Effects," L. L. Campbell. Presented to the library by the author who is head of the department of physics at Simmons college, Boston, Mass., and a former head of that department at Presbyterian college.

"The Second Empire," Philip Guedalla. Another importation from England.

"Garibaldi and the Thousand," A. M. Trevelyan. Also purchased from England.

"The Luck of Roaring Camp," Bret Hart.

"Foundations of Method," W. H. Kilpatrick.

"New Voices," M. Wilkinson. A study of the modern poets of America and England.

"Napoleon," H. A. L. Fisher. For a review of this ask any man in History 151.

Winthrop Pays Tribute To Dr. Johnson

In memory of their beloved friend and councillor, the girls of Winthrop college have had several large pictures made of their late president, Dr. D. B. Johnson. They have placed them in the main buildings on the campus to keep alive a perpetual memory of the "Builder of Winthrop."—The (Carolina) Gamecock.

We congratulate Dr. Snyder and wish him the best of success in his building up of Wofford.—The (Carolina) Gamecock.

Hilarious Vacations

On "the sidewalks of New York" during the summer of 1929 met what perhaps was the largest group of Converse girls ever gathered together in a single place during a vacation. Not that they were all there at the same time but that the different groups so a few hundred miles north.—Parley Voo (Converse.)

Soph Week At Winthrop

"Cuckoo! Cuckoo!"

That's merely a freshman announcing that it is 2 o'clock, and at two bells on Wednesday afternoon all was not well for her. That hour ushered in the four days of hilarity known as Sophomore Week.

This history of our Alma Mater does not record a class of better sports than these, our new sisters. Accommodating, entertaining and, above all, able to take a joke—these attributes have endeared them to our hearts. Why, actually, when one girl was asked to speak to a cow, she cheerfully acquiesced in this fashion, "Hello, dearie. How's your cud?"

Hurrah for such spirit! The sophomores grudgingly acknowledge it, the juniors loudly praise it, the seniors highly approve it and Winthrop college smilingly takes it unto herself and returns values untold.—Johnsonian.

Wofford Steps Out

Wofford college will have one of the finest athletic fields in South Carolina within a month if plans on foot can be pushed through in that time. An anonymous gift of sufficient funds to construct such a project was announced by Dr. Henry Nelson Snyder, president of the institution, in chapel yesterday morning.

The plans, as arranged by the donor and the college authorities, call for a seat 3,000 persons, a cyclone wire fence around the field and any minor features deemed essential to making Wofford athletic plant one of the state's finest. The steel material has been ordered and actual construction should be completed in a month, according to Dr. Snyder.—Old Gold and Black.

Georgia-Yale Game

Interest throughout the South is centering about the Georgia-Yale game, which is to be played in Athens this afternoon. This is the first chance football fans of the South have ever had to see a Yale football team in action. In addition, it is the longest trip a Yale team has ever taken.

The concensus of opinion is that Yale will defeat Georgia by a decisive score. However, this judgment has not appreciably injured the chances for a record crowd, from all reports. Enthusiasts from all over this section of the country are journeying to Athens today, and the stands should be well-filled.

Playing on home soil, and backed by a multitude of Georgia supporters, the Bulldogs should put up a real fight. Nothing should be surprising. It is our opinion that the score will be rather close. Yale should win by a small margin.

Growing enthusiasm for the program has been noted throughout the state, for the program not only will deliver the college from the burden of debt, but also will deliver the church from the burdensome emergency contributions for college operating expense and life-sapping interest payments on the debt.

Purpose Of Military

The primary purpose of the Reserve Officers Training corps is to create a corps of trained reserve officers, who, in the event of war, will be called upon to train and lead the citizens of the national army.

The average student in reading the above paragraph, without going any deeper, very naturally may draw the conclusion that the course in military training has only one object in view, i. e., to creat officers. To a certain extent true, but in that creation there is another objective in view, which, after all, ,is the real purpose of your military training.

The ultimate aim is to develop you into patriotic, physically sound, upright and disciplined citizens.

Physical fitness, the discipline of self-control, respect for authority, the habit of obedience and the spirit of initiative and cooperation: qualities so essential to success in any walk of life, and which are the very soul and foundation of all military training. These are the things that we are working for. And in the course in military science offered at this college you have an instrument at hand for the development of these qualities and principles that make for better and more efficient citizens. .

B. Hipp, C. P. Robinson, Dr. S. C. Hays, E. J. Adair, T. D. Copeland, Prof. A. V. Martin, H. B. Workman, C. R. Workman, D. E. Tribble, W. E. Neighbors, W. J. Duncan, J. Hamp Stone, D. W. Mason, L. H. Davidson, B. L. King and S. Gary Dillard.

Mr. Copeland was born near here on June 17, 1868, the son of David T. Copeland and Mattie Adair. With the exception of one year when he was employed in Statesville, N. C., he spent his entire life in the city of his birth, and was graduated from Presbyterian college in 1886.

In 1902 Mr. Copeland was married to Miss Lola Casey of Anderson. She survives him and in addition two daughters, Mrs. M. C. Dendy of Newberry, and Miss Marion Copeland of this city; by two sisters, Mrs. John H. Pitts of near here, and Mrs. W. B. Farr of Durham, N. C., and by two brothers, John M. Copeland of Renno, and W. D. Copeland of this city, with whom he was associated in business.

The death of Mr. Copeland removes from Clinton a figure long familiar in the business, educational and religious life of the community. He had served for several terms as a member of city council, was a member of the board of health, Clinton lodge No. 84, Knights of Pythias, Woodmen of the World, Chamber of Commerce, and a director of the Commercial Bank. For several years he served as a member of the board of trustees of the Presbyterian college, and for the past 28 years as a member of the governing board of the Thornwell orphanage, being at the time of his death, chairman of the executive committee of that institution. For 32 years he had been the senior member of the firm of J. I. Copeland & Bro., and was frequently referred to by traveling salesman as one of the best posted hardware men in the state.

Mr. Copeland was long identified with the city's religious life. He was a devoted member and elder of the First Presbyterian church where his record for faithfulness was unexcelled. For twenty years he served as its Sunday school superintendent. He loved the cause of Christ with an unyielding devotion. He loved the Word of God and made it the man of his counsel.

Mr. Copeland was gentle, kind, unassuming and reserved, but quietly took his place unpretentiously in the community as a citizen. He was a good neighbor, a faithful husband and father, a good churchman, and a good citizen. He leaves a good name, hundreds of friends and a wide circle of loved ones who are grieved by his passing, and who knew him as a friend to all, an enemy to none.

FRESHMEN MEET CAROLINA TODAY

eleven from Presbyterian, but when the game is over, there will most likely be several Chicken feathers scattered around on the Carolina field.

So far, few casualties have hit the frosh squad but they hit in the strongest places. Barrett, who hurt his shoulder in the Wofford game, has about recovered from that injury, but has since suffered a sprained ankle. However he is expected to start the game at full. Copeland, star end, has a bad hand, but the seriousness of the injury is unknown at the present time. His starting is unlikely but he may be used in case the Biddies start making too much progress around that end. Ewing, hefty tackle, also is on the injured list with a badly sprained ankle. His starting is also doubtful, but it is hoped that these men will be in condition for the contest, as their absence would be sorely felt.

Any one who happened to see the game last week with the Wofford frosh will easily realize that the game of this week will be a man-to-man fight from start to finish. In the aforementioned game, the Baby Hose showed that they had plenty of defensive strength and, when applied, could put plenty of dynamite in their offensive attack. If the Stamps to Perrin, and the Stamps to end pass combinations are working smoothly, the Gamecocks may expect a shower of pigskins from the ozone.

If Copeland is in condition he will probably be on duty at the right wing. If he is not, Graham, who put up such a nice fight in the last quarter against Wofford, will most likely fill his shoes. Elliot and Ewing have the inside track for the tackle position if they are in playing trim. Captain Carr and Rampey will probably get the call for the guards, with Wilson at center. Stamps is the likely starter at quarter, with Adams in reserve. Barret is slated to answer the call at full, with Perrin and Watson at the halves.

FURMAN WINS HARD-FOUGHT GAME

lap, Galloway and Ritchie menaced the Hurricane throughout the game. Their passing attack threatened at times to disorganize the whole Purple defense.

Herman Hughes, Gordon Pearson and Tood Pipkins, sophomore backs, and Joel Deery and Kenneth Case were outstanding for the Hurricaners. Pearson went into the game as a substitute and ran 47 yards once to place the ball on P. C.'s 13-yard stripe. Two more plays put the ball on the 6-yard line but the Blue Stockings held like a concrete wall and the ball went over after four futile thrusts at the line. Pearson later, however, took the ball over for Furman's second and final touchdown.

The game was marked by unusual roughness, a free for all fist fight being narrowly averted when a Furman and Presbyterian player mixed it up during the heat of play. They were pulled apart and sent to the showers, and the game continued. Furman was penalized more than 50 yards for roughness, most of the penalties being against Holmes, rangy 200-pound Texan tackle.

Freshman Love

Along about this time of every college year, students of fellowmen and lovers of big words have a wonderful opportunity to observe what might be called a psychological phenomenon. Members of the freshman class can be caught wearing that far away look that can mean but one of two things—either he has indigestion or else he is in love. And since food at Judd hall is well prepared it follows by the process of elimination that the freshman involved must be at least mildly infatuated with some member of the "Dear, damned, inconstant sex."

To the lonesome and home-sick freshman the friend of his high school days suddenly becomes the girl of his dreams—veritably a pal after his own heart. Then follows an exchange of letters with sundry quotations distance lending enchantment sence making the heart grow Tell such a freshman that "Love is nothing but the urge with a little sex thrown over it" and he will you for your ignorance of tial bliss that he enjoys. Riding on the wings of the into realms of sheer delight is bumping against the ol mind a break with "The G be infinitely worse than Death has to offer.

Nor does the cynic need his studies to freshmen a the proverbially grave, sometime exhibit the pla Which might prompt a re the adage, "There's no fo old fool."

ABY HOSE TIE BIDDIES esbyterian First Year Men Hold Four Carolina Teams In Check. Good Defense Shown.

Last Saturday afternoon, the freshn of Presbyterian stopped four werful University of South Carolina me Chick teams and deadlocked em nothing to nothing. The Sox ayed jam-up football during the en- game and were continually throwg the fleet Carolina backs for losses. e Biddies were evidently expecting set-up but they got fooled in more an one way, for the "Fighting Hose" re in there fighting the whole time d itwas almost impossible to gain them consistently.

Few real threats were made by eith- team, though they were both able get to the 30-yard line almost at ll. But there they met a stone wall d they either had to punt or give the ball. The Columbians pushed er eleven first downs to three for e Blue Hose.

Musselwhite, Freeman, Fleming and rnes, were by far the outstanding rformers for Carolina. Copeland, nson, Ewing, Barrett and Adams atured for Presbyterian. The latter as sent in for Stamps when that orthy was hurt and did a good job at e quarter post, usually electg to play a safe game and punt on second or third down.

A play by play account of the game llows:

First Quarter

Copeland kicked to Carolina's 15- rd line. Fleming returned to the 27- rd line. Fleming failed to gain at nter. Freeman failed to gain at left ckle but the play was called back d P. C. was penalized 5 yards for ing off-sides. Parrott fumbled and as thrown for a 5-yard loss by Copend. Parrott then got 9 yards at left ckle. Freeman got a yard at center d it was first down. Pinson then rew Fleming for a 4-yard loss. Parott got another yard at left tackle. C. was again penalized 5 yards for T-sides. Fleming got 3 yards at left ckle and Freeman got 5 at left ard. Fleming failed to gain at right ckle and Ayes punted 44 yards to errin on the 10 yard line, who returned 5 yards. Barrett got 3 yards on reverse and Stamps made 2 at right ckle. Stamps' shoulder was hurt and e was taken from the game. Substiution: Adams for Stamps. Adams anted to Carolina's 40 yard line and arnes returned to the 44. Fleming illed at right end. Freeman got 4 ards at left guard, and Carnes got 2 ore at left tackle. Ayes punted to the C. 10 yard line where Atwell downd the ball. Adams punted 39 yards nd Carnes returned 3 yards to the 3-yard marker. Fleming lost a yard left tackle, and Barrett threw arnes for a loss of two more on an ttempted end run. A pass from Parott to Carnes was incomplete. Parott punted to P. C.'s 35-yard line here Atwell again downed the ball. errin failed to gain at left tackle. dams then punted out of bounds on arolina's 42-yard line. Fleming got yard at right guard. An entire team as substituted for Carolina, as the uarter ended.

Second Quarter

The writer will have to apologize ere. He was unable to get all the ames of the substitutes and will be nable to name the ball-carrier a reat deal of the time. Carolina got a ard at right tackle and then added nother 4. One of the new substitutes ot off a terrific punt of 2 yards that ent into the stands. Lockman failed

GEORGIA SYNOD TO MEET HERE

1930 Session of Sister Presbyterian Body Is Scheduled for Clinton. Hears About P. C.

Rabun Gap, Ga., Oct. 17.—The Presbyterian synod of Georgia will meet next year at Clinton, S. C., the first time the organization ever has gathered outside the state.

The invitation to meet there was accepted after delegates had heard glowing reports of the Presbyterian college at Clinton, which the synod helps to maintain, and the Thornwell orphanage, another of its interests, which also is located at Clinton. Speakers pointed out that the meeting still would be on its own ground.

An effort to bring the South Carolina synod into joint session with the Georgia body next year was forecast. The Rev. Samuel Bowles of Clinton, treasurer of the orphanage, extended the invitation.

Meantime the synod awaited action by the Florida synod, in session at Ocala, Fla., on an invitation for that body to join in support of the college at Clinton. A decision by the Floridians was in prospect for Saturday, according to reports from Ocala, after submission of the invitation, which was approved here yesterday. It was reported that the Florida synod apparently was not generally in favor of the proposal.

The largest enrollment in the Clinton college's history was reported to the synod by Dr. G. G. Mayes of Winnsboro, S. C., who praised the administration of the Rev. John McSween as president.

Pool Tiling Is Nearly Complete

The swimming pool will be completed some time during the coming week, the contractor reports. Tiling has been nearly finished, the floor of the pool being all that remains as The Blue Stocking goes to press.

However, it will probably be another ten days or perhaps a fortnight before the natatorium is opened. There yet remains considerable work before the official opening can take place. The entire pool must be gone over with ash to clean the tiling and remove all surplus cement. When this is done the grounds outside the building will be made presentable.

At any rate the pool will be open for the use of students soon after November first. After that time Coach Johnson hopes to start organized swimming classes. It will not be long before P. C. is represented by a swimming team.

The pool, when finished, will be laid off according to the strictest rules of the National A. A. U. Everything required to lend authenticity to the records made in the pool will be provided. The Presbyterian college natatorium will undoubtedly be as fine and as well equipped as any in this section of the country.

P. C. STUDENTS AT SEMINARY

Prominent in the student body of Union Theological seminary, Richmond, Va., are graduates of Presbyterian college. Jack Roberts, '28, is president of the middle class and a scholastic leader. John Bright, also '28, is a leading member of the same group.

Jay McDonald Davis, '29, is the only addition made to the P. C. group this year. Davs is a member of the junior class.

Prepare For Citadel Game

Coach Johnson's Hosemen will go into preparation on Monday for next week's game with the Citadel. The game will be played on Saturday, October 26th, in Charleston.

The advance dope makes Citadel a heavy favorite for victory, but it is expected that the Blue Stockings, smarting from recent defeats at the hands of Furman and Carolina, will stage a determined come-back and give the cadets a sharp fight.

The team will leave Clinton on Friday morning, arriving that afternoon, probably in time for a light workout after the trip.

STATE Y. M. C. A. HOLDS MEET

Camp Adger Is Scene of Gathering. Discussions Led By Several "Y" Heads.

The second annual state Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. retreat for South Carolina was held from Friday noon to Sunday evening of last week-end at Camp Adger, the state "Y" camp for boys during the summer. There were forty delegates representing the majority of the schools for both men and women of the state as well as leaders from various parts of the South.

This is the second attempt to have a retreat of both sexes in the state and has proved successful and in all probability will be continued each fall in the future. It gives the students an opportunity to discuss their various problems in work on the campus as well as a chance to see what other organizations are doing and the progress they are making. The chief purpose of the retreat is to develop the leaders of the "Y" in work pertaining to campus problems and try to solve some of the difficulties if possible.

Year Book Photo Work Is Excellent

A great deal of pleased comment has been heard about the campus since the proofs of the PaC-SaC pictures were shown last Thursday. Large numbers of students were sufficiently satisfied to order extra copies for distribution among their friends. There can be little doubt that this much of the annual, at least, will be much better than ever before. Indeed, from present indcaitions there is every reason to believe that the 1930 year book will be the very best that has ever been sent out by a P. C. student body.

The staff is to be complimented for their choice of photographers. It is entirely possible that students will even be glad to show their annuals around to the folks when they go home next summer. In the past it has too often been the case that students feel rather inclined to cover up their own photos when the book is on exhibit.

As one person so aptly stated it, "Any photographer can take a picture that looks like you; but it takes a skilful one to take one that will satisfy you. What you want in a picture is just enough of you to make the thing recognizable—the rest should be sheer improvement on your looks." If this is the criterion of satisfaction in photographic work, then White's studio of New York, must certainly have sent us a very skilful photographer.

COLLEGE CLUB TO GIVE PLAY

Dramatic Organization To Present "The Genius," a Three-Act Comedy, Monday Night.

The Presbyterian college dramatic club will make its Clinton debut for the college year 1929-30 at the Florida Street school next Monday evening. At that time the club will present "The Genius," a comedy in three acts, by William C. and Cecil B. de Mille. Subsequent to this performance the club will take the play to Spartanburg where they will play before the students of Converse college on November 9th.

The play is reputed to be one of the funniest and most entertaining that has ever been presented in Clinton. Characters, situations, and lines all contribute to make a delightful combination that should provide an enjoyable evening for all who are there.

The P. C. dramatic club achieved a good reputation last March when the first play was given. "Second Story Peggy" will long be remembered for the pleasure it brought to Clinton play-goers. Next Monday's play is even better and funnier than "Second Story Peggy." The cast is essentially the same, with the addition of several men who are remembered for their excellent work in the freshman play last spring.

DEBT GROUP MOVES ALONG

Church Chairmen Named To Lead Campaign. Others To Be Announced Later.

The organization that will carry on the Presbyterian college $350,000 program of deliverance continues to develop steadily, with the naming of church chairmen, associate church chairmen and church committees. Laymen are acting as church chairmen, with the pastors as associate chairmen.

When the organization is completed through the formation of church committees there will be more than a thousand persons ready to conduct the campaign. The intensive effort formally opens on November 10, and will continue through November 19, but the special gifts work is already under way under the leadership of William P. Jacobs, general chairman, and

PaC-SaC To Have Beauty Contest

The PaC-SaC is to carry a new feature this year. In addition to the usual sponsor section there will be a beauty section, and all students will be eligible to enter girls. For a fee of fifty cents each student may enter one female of his own choice. These entries must be in the hands of the editor not later than November fifteenth. The photographs will then be dispatched for the verdict of the judge. It is understood that only one beauty will have the honor of appearing in the pages of the PaC-SaC.

Editor Fant Thornley announced in chapel on Thursday that the judge for the contest would be either Cecil de Mille or John Gilbert. The fact that one of these two famous movie stars is to give the pictures the "once over" should, in itself, be enough to arouse considerable interest in the feature. The staff hopes that many students will submit entries.

CAROLINA IS VICTOR, 41 TO 0

University Men Go On Rampage and Smother Blue Hose Under Big Score In Columbia.

By Bill Varn in The State

Playing a very alert game with their entire fleet of "pony express" backs literally running wild, the South Carolina Gamecocks decisively crushed the fighting Blue Stockings of Presbyterian college on Melton field yesterday afternoon by a 41 to 0 score.

Crip Rhame, little Gamecock quarter, had received the opening kick-off on his own 20-aryd line and dashed 80 yards through the entire Presbyterian outfit for a touchdown, there was little doubt as to the outcome. The Birds were alert to every opportunity, and a great defense against the P. C. air attack placed them in scoring position time after time.

Nealy all of the six touchdowns resulted from long, elusive runs around the wings or from passes, with all of the Carolina ball carriers taking a hand. Bru Boineau, though he did not score a touchdown all afternoon, was a shining light as he galloped and twisted through several times to penetrate deep into P. C. territory, barely missing getting into a clear field a number of times.

Presbyterian never had a chance. A battling Gamecock line baffled every attempt to gain through the forward wall, the backs broke up or intercepted all but two of the Blue Hose passes, and the determined defensive play smothered the lighter Blue brigade behind the line of scrimmage many times.

The Blue Hose never came closer than midfield in their futile attempts to reach the South Carolina goal, fighting with their backs to the wall from whistle to whistle. Their nearest threat at scoring came in the closing minutes, when a pass grazed the fingers of Ross Lynn, Presbyterian end, just as he reached for the flying oval with a clear field ahead.

But it was on defense that the Garnet and Blue covered itself with glory. The Gamecocks had trouble with the P. C. line, mainly due to the fine play of the ends, and three times this courageous defense stopped the Birds completely inside of the 10-ard line. Carolina failed to have the necessary punch, and only on one occasion in the last quarter, with P. C. battered and beaten, did they crash through the line for a touchdown.

Carolina scored in every quarter, counting one touchdown in each of the first two periods, nad two in each quarter of the last half. Five of the six points after touchdown were converted by Boineau and Zobel, the former making three.

Probably the smartest and prettiest play of the game came in the last quarter after the sixth touchdown, when Zobel dropped back to try a placement for the extra point. Either a bad pass or fumble caused the receiver to miss, and the oval rolled to the side. Zobel saw a mass of Blue sweeping in to block it, and with sudden decision picked it up, shook off his tacklers and circled his left end for the point. He received a great hand for his heady work.

Ross Lynn and Bennett, Presbyterian wingmen, were the best performers for the visitors, making most of the tackles and rushing the passer to make a number of Bird aerial attempts go wrong.

Jimmy Green, little blond dynamo, who formerly starred for Columbia high in his younger days, was completely covered by the Carolina line

EDITORIALS

THE UPPER CLASS

The following very sensible editorial is quoted from the Grapevine, weekly paper of Radford State Teacher's college, East Radford, Virginia:

There are more ways of classifying students than simply calling them freshmen, sophomores, juniors, or seniors. There are frivolous students and sober students, friendly and unfriendly ones, pretty ones and those who are the opposite of pretty. There are those who grind away at their books day and night and never know what goes on beyond the edge of their study-table, and there are those who go into all sorts of extra-curricular activities. There are all the classifications into which the psychologists divide the freshmen; there are those who came to college to have a good time; and there are others who came because they really wanted to study.

There is still another method of classification.

Everybody knows that it is the first quarter that makes or breaks a college career. The start has a great part in deciding the finish. During these first eleven weeks of opportunity to be grasped or missed—a period of forming habits good or bad—students' minds will be whetted to a keener inquiring aliveness, or will settle into heavy indifference.

Most of them will be studying (but not all). Some will be trying to "get by"—and will, with a barely passing grade. Others will aim for higher grades, for a distant "cum laude"; these too will reach their goals. But three months after the final examinations, some of them will have brains blissfully unencumbered with knowledge.

A small and wise minority will aim for something better; they have come here to learn. These are they who read and inquire and listen, becoming better informed all the time, storing up important knowledge for that not-far-distant day when they will be teaching; they are building background.

Some of these may be separated again into the smallest group of all—those who think, really think clearly and intelligently and fearlessly about the real values of things they hear and read, and choose the things of most worth to keep, to believe in, to hand to others. They are those who consider what they hear in lectures or read in textbooks was said or written for an earnest and important purpose, and therefore worth attention and thought. They are the sort who, had they lived in early days of less opportunity, would possibly have walked miles for a book to read. They want to learn, not only facts about things, but great truths about life itself; truths that shine, fixed and eternal, in a firmament wholly beyond the vision of the unthinking.

FOLLOWERSHIP

We are constantly being reminded that we should take every opportunity to develop leadership. Business, politics, teaching—every field wants leaders. Colleges are asked to recommend leaders. It is "leadership, leadership, leadership" that we hear from morning till night, until many of us find that we are forgetting the other qualities that go to make up the well-rounded man.

Yes, of course the world needs leaders; but it also needs followers, and in many places it needs them very badly. In the mad scramble to be the big splash in the puddle we forget that there can be no splash unless there is something for the splasher to splash in—that is, there can be little leadership unless there is a great deal of intelligent following.

Any bigoted fool can be a leader if he has the right push, the right "brass," the never-say-die spirit; but it takes a real man to accept a subordinate position and go about his tasks without grumbling. If the truth were told we might be surprised to learn that in many cases it is the follower who does the work while the so-called leader gets the credit. The leader cannot do everything. He is the organizer, the director, the instigator. Before anything can be accomplished there must be at his command a number of people who can faithfully carry out instructions.

We should try to be leaders; but at the same time we should realize that we cannot all lead. Let us vie with the rest, but if we are vanquished in honorable conflict, let us accept second place and put a shoulder under the load. Let us try to be good sports. If we cannot be the man who sits at the desk and signs the checks, let us at least emulate the man who makes the wheels go round.

The world is full of followers—poor followers. They follow because they must. "I will either be best or nothing at all," they say, and in most cases they are nothing at all. In all walks of life we find these men-stranglers, shirkers, know-nothings, no-nothings. They throng the police courts and the jails, and the reformatories. In college we find them cropping out in the eternal "gripers"—men who are forever talking and never doing anything.

Leaders are men who have come out on top. We should take off our hats to them as men who have the ability to dominate and control the actions of others. Should we forget, however, to doff our bonnets to those rare souls who can swallow the bitter pill of disappointment and go on with smiling faces and willing hands?

GRADES

Monthly grades are a nuisance, aren't they? Here we were, right in the midst of a big time when flooey! Professor Whozits puts up one of his pet grades and all we can do is cower and wait for that awful letter from home. Of course, it makes little difference to us personally. A little thing like a grade? Don't make me laugh! Old Whozits doesn't like me, that's all. Why say! dja catch that time in class when I gave him that fast comeback? You know—he says so-and-so and I come right back at him with so-and-so. Snipped him right off next to the ground, yessir. You know, he never did forget that. I made three A's and two B's under him after that and what does he do but stick up an "E" on the report. I'm not like one of these fellows who can sweet talk the old guy and get an A—not me! I'm telling you like it is. Blank doesn't know a bit more about that stuff that I do, but look what he gets. It's a lot of sweet-talk and dingle-plucking—that's all it is. The only reason I don't get grades like he does is just because I won't use the methods he uses. Fact is, I don't believe in 'em. Why, I'd rather flunk all my courses and leave college than take all the sass he does from his professors. I mean I'm telling you the straight stuff like a friend.

EXCHANGE

The Sunday Movie

The Sunday movie issue is as yet roasting over the coals. Practically all of the actions taken so far by both sides have merely been gestures. From now on the question will be fought out under ground, so to speak. One must place one's ear to the ground to follow the comedy. The voices of the students, of course, continue to clutter the atmosphere like so much Swiss yodeling.—The Plainsman.

No?

Aren't "bull sessions" funny? They start with sporting news, drift to politics, ease on to personalities, jump to love affairs, slide into pet gripes, slow down with "shop talk," and drop on any doggone thing. Great things, this education, what?—The Plainsman.

Correct Attitudes

Some students bury themselves in a sea of theory and research, forgetful of the constantly changing society in which they will presently have to compete on a very practical basis; others participate in outside activities to the neglect of class room duties. It is perfectly obvious that the student must have some appreciation of relative values.—Selected.

A New Curriculum

Clarence E. Little, in the August Scribner's, has an interesting article entitled "Women and Higher Education," in which he brings forward some very interesting views on the much discussed subject of women in colleges. He says that women are more conservative than men in their social life, their religion, and their sports, and that as a rule they are more conscientious. He suggests a new curriculum for the women's colleges, the foundation of which is to be in the field of woman's greatest interest, like human biology, and in the fine arts which must serve as a cultural background for her children. Then he believes women should study history, economics, and politics, because "women need to know more of the work which men have been trying—with indifferent success — to accomplish."—Parley Voo.

Atlanta Falls Again!

We first saw the Yo-Yo at New Orleans in early August. We thought the good old Crescent City had gone crazy. We fervently prayed Atlanta might be spared. Within a few short days Memphis was engulfed, the Birmingham district quickly followed suit. Knoxville, Canttanooga, Nashville, Chicago and even Milwaukee are now infested, to our own certain knowledge. Atlanta's sales-resistance at last crumbled, we have now gone blooey! Cincinnati alone remains inviolate, we had difficulty in explaining to the Swiss just what the thing was. We have seen several otherwise dignified members of our club engaged in this pastime. But perhaps we are too critical. Yo-Yo may have its good points at that. Personally, when we find time heavy on our hands, we much prefer to twiddle our thumbs. Twiddling one's thumbs requires practically no mental concentration, and the physical exertion is reduced to a minimum.—The Traffic Club Broadcast.

Hints To Freshmen

Furman University.—Here are just a few pointers left out of the "Y" handbook thru mistake. They are printed here for the benefit of the new boys.

1. Don't smoke cigarettes. Upperclassmen will keep you broke buying them.

2. Don't tip your rat caps to sophomores. Familiarity breeds contempt.

3. Don't go in the pool immediately after a meal. It is dangerous to swim on a full stomach, and very few of you can swim on your backs.

Educational Contacts With American Red Cross Show Significant Trend

Addressing an audience at Harvard last summer, an official of the American National Red Cross observed that multitudinous forces were striving continuously to penetrate the surrounding walls of the country's educational system, to impress it in some way, influence its trends, or utilize it otherwise.

The fact that these well springs of education are so guarded makes it especially significant that the American Red Cross is accepted at increasingly numerous points of contact between its services and those of educational bodies and institutions throughout the nation.

This association of the Red Cross with the nation's educational programs begins with earliest school years, and flourishes in the highest institutions. It ranges through a variety of Red Cross services of intense practicality.

Today, in physical education department of leading universities, the American Red Cross course in swimming and life saving, and first aid, is standard. Some of these courses originally were conducted by Red Cross representatives, and are now continued under experts trained and qualified according to Red Cross requirements. Some of the best instructors in these subjects who have served on the Red Cross staff formerly were college athletes, members of swimming teams, crews, etc.

Women's colleges not alone have adopted the Red Cross courses in home hygiene and care of the sick, and nutrition, but many give credits for completion, including extension credits to teachers who take these courses.

Summer courses in the fundamentals of Junior Red Cross administration were given the past summer at 197 state universities and normal schools. The Junior Red Cross "credit course" was given this year at Teachers college, Columbia university, New York; George Peabody institute, Nashville, Tenn.; University of Wisconsin and University of California.

Another Red Cross summer course in the atmosphere of a center of higher learning was afforded at the University of North Carolina, where Red Cross representatives gave first aid instruction, first to a policie officer's group, which so impressed the heads of the institution as to lead them to request special lectures to a class of athletic coaches, composed of students from nine states.

These university contacts of the Red Cross are fitting cap-tones to foundations laid in the primary grades, and extending through high school and preparatory years, modifications of the aforementioned Red Cross courses being used, with credits granted by a number of schools for completion.

The combination of infusion of ideals of service with practical instruction enabling the individual student to render such service in a material as well as spiritual sense, makes the appeal of the Red Cross. It leads, as the student matures, to a deeper interest frequently exemplified in community service in later life. Here too, the Red Cross stands ready, its local chapters the medium for such service.

Strength of Red Cross activities is measured by generall Red Cross membership, enrolled annually from November 11 to 28.

Poet's Love

My love is pure as the morning dew,
She doth trust me as I trust her,
And no wild storms of jealousy
Need ever in my bosom stir.

My love is like a fragrant flower—
P. S.—I got to stop. I just seen her going down the street with that darn Joe Ward.—A. L. Ramsey in College Humor.

It is no longer true that a grill has to have a lot of clothes to get any notice in society.

Down To Brass Tacks

Before I married Maggie dear
I was her pumpkin pie,
Her precious peach, her honey lamb,
The apple of her eye.
But after years of married life
This thought I pause to utter,
Those fancy names are gone, and now
I'm just her bread and butter.
—Pathfinder.

An old-fashioned marriage is one that lasts at least until they get to Niagara Falls.—Judge.

Then there was the Scotchman who kissed the neighborhood baby every time it finished eating an ice cream cone.

Slave (wildly): O son of heaven, protector of the poor, director of public safety and chairman of the board! The flee circus is loose in the harem!

Pasha: Oh, hell! I suppose that means I'll have to scratch the favorite.—Reserve Red Rat.

"How did you get your wife to quit burning the toast?"

"I told her that it didn't match the kitchen."

Officer: "So your wife is lost, eh? Can you give a description of her?"

Husband: "Well, she has bobbed hair and she wears here dresses up to her knees."

Chicago Cop: "Wotcha shootin' that guy for?"

Gangster: "None of your damned business."

Cop: "Don't get smart now or I'll run you in."

Never mistake asthma for passion. Ohio State Sun Dial.

THE SALUTE AND ITS ORIGIN

From time immemorial subordinates have always uncovered before superiors, and equals have always acknowledged each others presence by some courtesy—this seems to be one of the natural, nobler instincts of man.

Manly deference to superiors, which in military life is merely recognition of constituted authority, does not imply admission of inferiority any more than respect for law implies cowardice.

The salute is the soldier's claim from the very highest in the land to instant recognition as a soldier. While the personal element naturally enters into the salute to a certain extent, when a soldier salutes an officer, he is really saluting the office rather than the officer personally—in other words the salute is rendered as a mark of respect to the rank, the position the officer holds, or to the authority with which he is vested.

The custom is supposed by some to have come from a Roman practice dating back to the Gorgias, or even earllier. In those days assassination was so common by the dagger that inferiors coming into the presence of superiors were required to raise the hand, palm to the front, thus showing that there was no dagger concealed in it. Time and custom have modified the requirement to the present method.

There are others of a romantic turn of mind who favor this version: In the days of jousts and tournaments, after the crowning of the Queen of Love and Beauty, the knights passed in review before her throne. Each as he drew near raised his mailed right hand to shade his eyes—a chivalric way of intimating that he would be dazzled by her beauty—this knightly homage passed on down the ages to become the soldier's salute.

Mandy: "Whut's the matter, Sam? Don't yo' love me no mo'?"

Sam: "Sho Ah does, honey; Ah jest restin'."

Campus Book Agent: "Sir, this encyclopedia will tell you anything you want to know."

Joe College: "Is that so? You turn to the page where it tells who killed Cock Robin and read it off to me."—Ohio State Sun Dial.

at right tackle. A pass from Adams to Pinson was good for 16 yards and a first down. Barrett failed at right guard and Perrin then fumbled on a reverse and lost 10 yards. Odiorne went in for Perrin. Carr for Hamer and Nettles for Pinson. A pass from Odiorne to Barrett was incomplete and the ball went over on the 45-yard line. Two attempts at left tackle failed and then a fleet back got 5 yards over center. Carolina then punted out of bounds on P. C.'s 28-yard line. Barrett lost 3 yards at center and then punted to Carolina's 34-yard line where Copeland downed the safety in his tracks. Two attempts at the line gained only one yard and Carolina punted to the Presbyterian 37 yard line where the ball was downed. Substitution: Holmes for Ewing. Odiorne made 2 yards on a reverse over right guard. Fleming was sent back in for Carolina. A pass from Adams to Barrett was good for 22 yards and a first down. Barrett made a yard at tackle and P. C. was set back another 5 yards for off-sides. Lockman lost a yard at tackle, and another pass, Odiorne to Barrett, was incomplete. Adams punted to Fleming on the Carolina 20-yard line and he returned 5 yards. Fleming failed at right tackle. Another play over tackle netted 11 yards and a first down. Fleming got 5 at center and 4 more were added at right guard by another back. Fleming reeled off 8 more over right tackle for a first down. A pass from Fleming to an end got 20 yards and another first down. Fleming got 8 yards at left tackle and another play in the same place added one. Clarke went in for Brown. Fleming got another yard at right guard for a first down. Ramsey was sent in for Wilson just as the half ended with the ball on P.C.'s 23-yard line in Carolina's possession—first down.

Third Quarter

Again in the third and fourth quarters, substitutions came so fast that it was next to impossible to keep up with them. Copeland kicked to Carolina's 15-yard line to open the half and Thomas brought it back to the 30-yard line. Carolina's ball — first down. Fleming got 3 yards at left tackle. Copeland threw Carnes for a 5-yard loss behind Center. A pass from Carnes to Fleming was complete for 23 yards and a first down. Fleming failed at center. Carnes failed at right end. Another pass from Carnes to Atwell was good for 21 yards and another first down. Carnes made two at left guard. Carnes added 5 more at left tackle. Fleming lost 3 yards on a fumble. A pass from Carnes to Fleming was knocked down by Barrett. The ball went over to P. C. on their own 30-yard line. Adams failed at right tackle. Barrrett punted to Carollina's 32 yard line, out of bounds. A fake reverse by Carnes netted 8 yards. Fleming was stopped without gain at right end. Adams knocked down a pass from Carnes to Fleming. Fleming punted to Adams on P. C.'s 18 yard line. Adams brought it back 10 yards. P. C.'s ball on their own 28-yard line, first down. Copeland was hurt on the play—time out P. C. An attempted pass from Adams was intercepted by Fleming and run back to the 20-yard line. Carolina's ball on P. C.'s 20-yard line, first down. Carnes got 6 yards at left guard. Carnes then failed at right guard. Fleming got 2 at right tackle. Fleming added four more at center for a first down. Substitution for P. C.: Clarke for Brown. Fleming failed at center and Carnes got 1 at right tackle. Freeman added 3 at center. The ball was on P. C.'s 4-yard line, but Carnes fumbled on the next play and before he could recover and get started, Copeland hit him for a 5-yard loss. The ball went over to P. C. on the 9-yard line. Adams punted to his own 32-yard line. Copeland and Barrett hit Fleming in this tracks and literally flew back with him to the 38 yard line. Carolina's ball, first down. Carnes got 3 at left tackle, and a pass from Fleming to Jones was incomplete, but Carolina was penalized 5 yard for off-sides. Substitution, P. C.: Wilson for Clarke. Barrett knocked down a pass from Carnes to Fleming. Barrett hit Fleming for a 1-yard loss at right end. Fleming punted to P. C.'s 4-yard line and Adams returned 2. The quarter ended with the ball in P. C.'s possession on their own 6-yard line.

Fourth Quarter

Barrett got 3 yards at left tackle. Adams then kicked to his own 43-yard line and Fleming returned 2 yards. Fleming got four yards at right tackle. Freeman then added 5 at right guard. Ewing was hurt on the play. Time out for P. C. Freeman got 2 yards at right guard and a first down. Adams grounded a pass from Carnes to Atwell. Carnes made 2 yards at right guard. Barrett intercepted a pass from Carnes on the 15-yard line and returned to the 22-yard line. An attempted pass from Adams lost 2 yards. Fleming grounded a pass from Adams to Copeland. Adams was hurt. Time out for P. C. P. C. off-sides, 5-yard penalty. Adams punted to the 50-yard line and Fleming returned 21 yards. P. C. sbstitution: Odiorne went in for Watson. Nettles for Pinson. Freeman failed at center. Slye got 1 at center. Sub for P. C.: E. Graham for Ewing. Slye made 2 yards at right end. A pass from Fleming to Jones lost a yard. The ball went over to P. C. on her own 26 yard line. Barrett got 4 yards at right tackle. Odiorne added 3 more on a reverse over center. Lockman got 4 at center for a first down. Adams failed to gain at right end as the final whistle blew.

STATE Y. M. C. A. HOLDS RETREAT

The main speaker this year was Dr. Jackson, vice-president of North Carolina College for Women, who made four addresses during the retreat. Dr. Jackson is especially interested in problems of racial differences and industrial work and the chief discussions were centered around these two problems which are daily becoming more and more into the notice of the people of the South.

R. O. Magill, Southern secretary, of Atlanta, led the men in their discussions of campus problems, and Theo. Vaughn, of Clemson, was devotional leader.

Miss Mary Scudder, dean of women at Winthrop, was the leader of the woman's discussion group, assisted by the Winthrop general secretary, Mrs. C. K. Grauel. With this staff as leaders in the discussions, the retreat made much progress and accomplished much in the way of inspirational benefit.

Probably the two most interesting and most discussed questions this year were those of the Negro problem, how it was to be handled and what steps were being made toward its solution and the problem of the trouble over the labor question in the mills and textile centers of the South. Dr. Jackson is the Southern chairman on the committee on racial problems and has made a careful and extensive study of these questions.

At the closing meeting on Sunday it was voted unanimously to hold the conference at Adger next year and a committee consisting of Hurt, of Furman; Friday, of Clemson; Miss Cobb, of Converse, and Miss Lavender, of G. W. C., was chosen to make the necessary arrangements.

Chairmen have been named also in all the other presbyteries, and their names will be announced later.

The church chairmen and pastors are now building up their church committees.

Another step in the program of deliverance will be the exchange of pulpits throughout the Synod of South Carolina on Sunday, October 23. Dr. H. W. DuBose, of Spartanburg, chairman, and Dr. F. D. Jones, of Clinton, associate chairman of the speakers bureau for the campaign, are arranging the exchange.

and backfield. He failed to get away, and for the day had to relinquish the leading roles to Ritchie, track star, and Senter, a tiny little back, who ran well but due to lack of concerted offense was held safely by the Birds.

The contest marked the 11th meeting between the two institutions, and gave Carolina eight victories to three for Presbyterian. The decisive score yesterday came as a distinct surprise to the Carolina followers, who expected Presbyterian to give the Birds some real opposition.

The Blue Stockings, after they were hopelessly routed by the Gamecocks, took to the air to try to score, but in vain. The P. C. backs threw 17 passes in desperation, and completed but two in the early stages for 17 and 18 yards, respectively. Eight were intercepted by eager Carolina players, one of them being returned for a touchdown, and seven were grounded.

GOOD PLAY BY DRAMATIC CLUB

"The Genius," Three-Act Comedy Makes Good Hit. Players Act Parts Well.

"The Genius," a three-act comedy, by William and Cecil de Mille, was presented by the dramatic club of Presbyterian college Tuesday night at the Florida Street school, and came off in fine style, making a big hit with the audience. Full of laughs and interwoven with a good plot, "The Genius" is a modern play that proved to be very interesting. It is the intention of the club to present the play several times at various nearby schools.

Jack Spencer, a rich young man in love with a girl who loves art, appeals to three poor artists to teach him some kind of art so that he may marry the girl. After analizing the situation, it was decided that Spencer should sign his name to the work of the three artists and take the part of a genius, being the teacher of the three. Fame comes to Spencer over night and he finds himself acclaimed by the world of art. He is about to marry his girl when the ward of one of the three artists unintentionally fits herself into the routine of art work so that Spencer falls in love with her. To extricate himself from the engagement of the girl he used to love, he denounces himself, only to find that none are willing to believe him. In conclusion he breaks with the first girl by telling her his art will be ruined by marriage to her. She is willing to do this for the love of art, so Spencer is free and marries ward of the artist.

The play is cleverly written and full of interest throughout. "Chip" Grafton, playing the part of the German,

COLLEGE PRESS TO MEET SOON

Annual Meeting of Association To Be Held In November. Furman and G. W. C. Hosts.

Greenville Womans college and Furman university are to be the hosts of the annual State Press association this year. The meeting is to be held November 20-21-22. Last year the meeting was held in Columbia and the year previous at Presbyterian college. It is an affair looked forward to by members of the college publications as not only one of literary interest but social as well.

As is the usual occurrence, The Blue Stocking staff, The Collegian and PaC-SaC will send representatives from the respective editorial and business staffs. While the elections of who shall be chosen to go have not been held, it will probably be done in the near future.

According to the plans this year, students will stay with people in Greenville. Meetings will be held at Furman and G. W. C., and, if the usual programs are carried out, there will be some delightful social functions mixed in.

The association is a strong institution in South Carolina. It has held annual meetings for a number of years and with practically every college in the state being a member.

It is a custom for each publication to enter a story and editorial, chosen from the best published for the year. The Blue Stocking has entered this. The best is then chosen from the state as well as the best college paper, literary magazine and annual.

McCRAVY BROS. COME TUESDAY

Popular Singers and Musicians To Give Performance for Benefit of PaC-SaC.

Under the auspices of the PaC-SaC, the McCravy brothers will put on an entertainment at the Florida Street school Tuesday night at eight o'clock. The price is twenty-five cents for college and school students and fifty cents for others.

The McCravy brothers are of a nation-wide reputation, having made numerous records for the Brunswick, Victor and Okeh companies, many of which have been heard on victrolas in Clinton. They have also done extensive broadcasting in various parts of the country. Among their selections are numerous Dixie melodies, present day classical and jazz music, which will give a variety to suit every taste.

Both of these men are products of South Carolina, being natives of the neighboring city of Laurens, and one of them attended Presbyterian college some years ago.

The proceeds of the program will go to this year's PaC-SaC.

RIFLE MATCHES ARE ARRANGED

Tryouts Continue and Team Will Be Picked Next Week. Three Opponents Accepted.

Nine challenges have been issued and three matches have been definitely fixed for the P. C. rifle team this year. Tryouts will continue next week and the team will be picked on Friday or Saturday. According to present plans eighteen men will be selected. Although only fifteen men may shoot in any one match, this larger number will be picked—a measure that is taken to provide for unavoidable absences and for sickness.

The matches already arranged are with Mississippi A. & M., N. C. State, and the University of Alabama during the weeks ending February 1st, February 22nd, and March 8th respectively. Challenges have been issued as follows: For the week ending January 11th, University of Georgia, The Citadel, Clemson, and Alabama Polytechnic institute; for the week ending January 25th, Emory university, Virginia Military institute, and Virginia Polytechnic institute; for the week ending February 22nd, Georgia Tech, and University of Florida.

Men who are chosen for the team, and who comply with the proper conditions, will be awarded the distinctive letter given by the college—a "P" superimposed on a target.

All rifle competition by the team will be on the fifty-foot indoor range in the gymnasium. The rifles used are regulation army .22 caliber target guns, and the range is fifty feet. The target is less than two inches in diameter, the bull being approximately of the same diameter as that of a .22 caliber bullet. Four position are fired, ten shots for each position—prone, sitting, kneeling and standing.

GLEE CLUB IS WARMING UP

Organization Gets Early Start. Material Is Abundant. Georgia Tour Is In Prospect.

By starting two months earlier this fall, and having a capable director, it is the intention of the glee club to make this year's work, from the point of interest and from amount of travel, better than it has ever been. M. C. Dendy is director, and with the experience gained from handling the club last year, he intends to improve and raise the program so that it will far excel those in the past..

Material this year is more abundant and there is some excellent talent among the boys. The club will be larger than it has been and an eight-piece orchestra will accompany the songsters. From the orchestra comes a variety of three differet solo instruments, and the club intends to add novelties to their performance to make it more interesting.

The program will be shaped so that performances can be held any time after the fiftcenth of December. There will be several entertainments in nearby towns between Christmas and the end of the semester. After examinations there will be a tour in Georgia lasting ten days. While this trip is not definite in the lesser details, the general plan is to go by bus, stopping at one town in South Carolina, and for the next nine days give performances in various parts of Georgia.

It is agreed by the members of the club that this year's music is much prettier and of larger variety than last year. There will be no solos on the program, but a few extra numbers will be given by the orchestra, which, along with novelties and saxaphone additions, should make the program very attractive.

There will be a local entertainment at the orphanage chapel, as well as in surrounding towns and colleges.

DEBATE PLANS TAKE SHAPE

Subject Is Selected and Correspondence Being Had To Line Up Opponents.

Under the auspices of the Pi Kappa Delta, national forensic society, work is already under way for debates this year. It is hoped that the students will take a greater interest in the work this season and plans are being made to meet more schools and operate on a larger scale than has been done before.

The first eliminating tryouts will begin the latter part of November and the final selection made by the second week in December. Usually the first debate is held immediately after the Christmas holidays, which necessitates making all preparations before school closes. The subject to be used this year is, "Resolved: The nations should adopt a plan of complete disarmament except such forces as are needed for police purposes." This subject was selected by the Pi Kappa Delta and will be used in all the debates in which Presbyterian college participates.

While no schools have been scheduled this early in the year, correspondence is being carried on with Carson - Newman, Hampden - Sidney, Wake Forest, either Chicora or Winthrop, Wofford and Newberry. The meet with Carson-Newman will be here and with Wake Forest there. There is always a triangle debate with

FIRST YEAR MEN DOWN ERSKINE

Blue Hose Yearlings Run Away With 38-0 Game Here Yesterday. Barrertt Scores Four.

The Baby Blue Hose of Presbyterian college crushed the fighting little freshman Seceder eleven from Erskine college here Friday afternoon by a score of 38 to 0. The Hose were able to gain almost at will and did not have to punt a single time during the whole contest that seemed to move with something like the speed of an over-loaded freight train. They rolled up 26 first downs to the Seceders' one, and should have scored more than they did, but seemed to lack the punch when nearing the goal line. However, don't let all these statistics fool you into thinking that the Due West boys weren't putting up a scrap. They were out-weighed, out-numbered and the Hosemen showed their advantage in experience. Still the P. C. squad was not at its top form, being slowed up by injuries, and at times the team was almost lifeless. The injury jinx held Captain Carr, Stamps, and Woodside out of the game altogether and slowed up such worthies as Ewing, Barrett and others. As all these men put up a beautiful game, there is no use to dwell on that phase of the game.

Several unique things occurred or didn't occur in the game; among these is the fact already mentioned that the Hosemen did not have to boot the ball a single time. Another was the play in which Adams passed into the arms of

Dr. Brimm Leads "Y" Discussion

Wednesday night the junior class had charge of the Y. M. C. A. meeting, with Dr. D. J. Brimm leading the discussion on the subject, "Be ye doers of the word, and not receivers only." It proved to be one of the best meetings held so far this fall. Everyone recalls the interest shown in the meetings last year when Dr. Brimm led a series of discussions on topics of interest to college students and the meeting this week did much to arouse the interest that was manifest last spring.

Next week the sophomores are to have charge of the meeting, and the following week the frosh will handle the program. For the past two weeks the policy of letting the classes run the meetings, get the speakers and have complete charge, has been tried, and is the success continues with the trial of the remaining two classes, the cabinet intends for this method to be worked out for an indefinite period.

Each class is electing men to have charge of the programs for their group who will act as chairmen for each program. The use of active membership, which has been tried with the senior and junior classes, seems to be working out well and gives the heads of the "Y," as well as the chairmen of the classes, a more interested and select group to work with. The same plan will be used in the case of the two under classes this coming week.

While the active membership is for those students who are more interested in the "Y" and care to devote more time to it, the rest of the student body are not excluded in any way. Every member of the student body automatically becomes a member upon registration and pays the fee for the year's membership. Each student should take upon himself the duty of attending meetings and helping out, whether an active member or not.

PLEDGE DAY

For many P. C. freshmen next Tuesday will be one of the most important days of their entire four years at college. On that day they will pledge themselves to the fraternity of their choice—a matter which is not as simple as it sounds. On that day they will choose not only the fraternity whose emblem they wish to wear, but also the group of boys whose friendship they value most highly — the froup they think is most in harmony with their own ideas and ideals.

Choice of a fraternity is a serious matter that should not be decided offhand. It is a choice not for an hour, as the songs put it, not for a day, not for a year—but for always. For some, perhaps, it will be a promise that becomes practically null and void after commencement—for others it will be a promise that carrries with it life-long friendships, life-long associations, life-long memories of the sort that one likes to dig up and relive after they have lain in one's heart for long years.

Of course pledge day does not mean the choice of one group of friends at the expense of losing all the rest. When Tuesday night comes around there will still be some two hundred odd boys on the campus. Friends, if they are of the right kind, will still be friends; there will be no alteration there. The difference will be in that a certain little circle has grown tighter, a circle which has your heart for its center.

For these freshmen Wednesday morning will bring something different, unless the difference has already come. On that morning a certain feeling of group responsibility will come. As they walk about the campus they will begin unconsciously to single out this man or that man from the bunch he is walking with. "Those are my friends. He is my brother." It is not a case of slighting the others; but of an involuntary honoring of one

A fraternity is a brotherhood; and "brotherhood," as applied to the right kind of fraternity, is not a meaningless word. Whether you resist it or not, you will find that the pin bearing the letters ABC or XYZ means "brother" to you. The man is not a blood-brother or a legal brother, but he means to you everything else that the word connotes. At sight he becomes a man whose heart and everyrthing else within reason is yours for the asking—not in a foolish, extravagent way; but in the sincere and affectionate way.

Membership in a fraternity is a treasure that may easily be, but seldom is, abused. An insincere man would find little difficulty in selfishly taking to himself all the advantages of the organization without giving anything in return. When he signs the pledge card he accepts the prestige and standing of the group; but there is nothing except his own pride and inherent ideals of gentlemanliness to compel him to give the same kind of intangible returns. Dollars and cents must be given to maintain good standing, but companionship and affection are voluntary gifts.

Give and Take

The fact that membership in a fraternity is so seldom abused is easily explained. Bid day comes before pledge day. Before a man may choose he must receive a bid—a token of unanimous faith on the part of the fraternity. A fraternity makes mistakes, of course, since it is a group of humans; but it is not often the case that the man who seems, in the first test, to be a mistake, turns out in the end to be a big asset.

A fraternity is a give-and-take affair. The members receive, but they must also give.. The organization gives, but it must also receive. The fraternity that gives most to its members is the fraternity that receives most from them.

NOVEMBER

It is almost here—November. Shall we say it is just another month from among the nine that make up the college year? Is November no more than the time between October and December? Let us say, rather, that November is one of the twelve personalities that go to make up the year.

A tang in the air—drifting, swirling leaves—slow, yet beautiful, death—this is November for you. The year is getting old. It's hair is falling out, its complexion is turning gray-brown. The winds have come to sigh ever so softly over the bare branches and the barren fields, to croon a lullaby as nature prepares for another death—another sleep.

There is a poignant something in November. It makes a fellow want to get out his smoking jacket and draw a chair before the fire for his favorite pipe-dreams. Soon December will bring temporary death to the world and the sort of sweet, still beauty that only goes with death. But now we are in the transitory stage. Every day more leaves will take on their bright autumn colors, relax their stiffening fingers, break loose, and flutter dreamily to the earth.

October is the sprightly old spinster trying to maintain appearances—December is the monarch lying in state with his white locks smoothed over his brow—November is the courteous old gentleman, counting his friends as they slowly leave him to answer another roll-call.

October is green and brown—December is white and brown—November is the color of sunshine as it looks when seen through a goblet of rare old wine. November is th ehandshake before the doro is closed and the bolt thrust home—November, with its fading, wistful, dreary smile as though realities had gone and memories had taken their place . . . November.

LIBRARY NOTES

Among the titles added to the library shelves in the past two weeks may be found some very interesting reading:

Sherwood Anderson, Winesburg, Ohio. A book of tales of small Mid-West town life.

John R. Tunis—Sport$, Heroics and Hysterics. Mr. Tunis is a sports writer for the New Yorker and the New York Evening Post. In this book he shows the commercialism that is being forced on amateur sports, tennis, golf and football, by the high pressure publicity of the modern press. This sensational book is very interesting.

Anne Nichols—Abie's Irish Rose. This is the prose treatment of the famous play that enjoyed such a long nad prosperous run in New York. Everything hinges on the love of a Jewish boy for an Irish girl and the problem they have with their parents. Love and comedy are mixed in equal portions to give an unusually entertaining book.

Carl Sandburg — Good Morning, America. A group of one hundred sixty-two poems written since 1922. All the humor and the bare love of America stands out in this book of poems by one who has been called America's second Whitman. Sandburg has caught the rythm of America and transferred it to his own.

Fiction that has been added includes.

Butler—Way of All Flesh.
Glasgow—They Stooped to Folly.
Parkman—The Oregon Trail.
Wharton—The Age of Innocence—the Pulitzer prize winner of 1921..

Other books added to the library shleves are:

Avey—Readings in Philosophy.
Bagger—Eminent Europeans.
Davis—Life on a Mediaeval Barony.
Dow—Society and Its Problems.
Eddington—Stars and Atoms.
Fath—Elements of Astronomy.
Lurie—Makes 'em Laugh Again!

What's Wrong With Our Schools?

"What is the matter with the schools? Everything," says Alonzo See in his book entitled "Schools." Not a single phase of our present day school system escapes the keen satire of his words. In fact, so great is his criticism and so strong is his satire that it is almost humorous. He says, "We have a nation to save. To save the nation the children must be rescued from their mothers and from the pedagogues, the women must be rescued from themselves, and men must rule their homes again." The curricula of our high school and colleges are especially attacked by this critic.—The Hornet.

Prize Offered To Football Players

Coach Prause, at Charleston, S. C., has offered two gold medals to the players of the Bulldog machine. One medal will go to the player who exhibits the best tackling during the season. The coaching staff will act as judges and the medals will be presented at the annual football banquet which takes place at the end of the season.—The (Auburn) Plainsman.

Duke University Broadcasts

Duke university is one of the few universities of the South that have a regular broadcasting hour. The Duke university band and orchestra and those others who possess talent get their chance before the mike. The Duke radio hour begins at eight each Tuesday evening and "The Chronicle" invites all its friends to hook up on WPTF and enjoy the programs—The (Clemson) Tigerr.

Girls Build Sorority House

Girls at the University of Maryland built themselves a sorority house, laying the bricks and moving steel beams themselves. Professor Watkins, faculty architect in charge of construction, said the girls could have built their house entirely by themselves if they had so wished.

Down here the women are so hot tempered their first reaction to a pile of brick is to throw one at the biggest man in sight. And as for steel beams, moon beams, and beaming expressions . . . even more damaging.—Gamecock.

Co-ed Likes Theologs

The theologs are appreciated by somebody.

"I like to go with theologs. They show me such a good time," said a co-ed, student at Emory, a member of the graduate school, in the registrar's office last week.

"I'd rather go with theologs than with medical students, or law students, or students in the college."—Emory Wheel.

Teachers Wanted

The American colleges and universities in Cairo, Assiut, Beyrouth, Smyrna, Constantinople, Athens, and Sofia, every year secure a dozen or more graduates of various American colleges of this country to teach for a period of three years, with the privilege of continuing longer if acceptable. Teaching is done through the English language. The salarry seems to be sufficient to make it possible to secure plenty of applicants. The work is in one of the most interesting parts of the world.—The (Furman) Hornet.

Blondes Again

First thing we know the jails will be preferring blondes. Gentlemen, "drug-store cowboys," shieks, and freshmen have already been accused of preferring the little white-headed angels. No? And now, it seems that football coaches are falling for blondes. At least, recently when the Texas Aggies faced Tulane, Tulane's entire backfield was composed of blondes.—The (Auburn) Plainsman.

FIRST YEAR MEN DOWN ERSKINE

an Erskine back, the ball bounced out, and the ever-watchful Pollitzer grabbed it and "sold out" for a gain of forty-three years, only to be downed on the two-yard line by the man who knocked the pass down. Still another was an off-tackle play in which Barrett was stopped by a whole mass of Erskine players, but he jumped up and they seemed to ride him on their shoulders for two or three extra yards. Another is a thing not often seen in football, that of an end calling signals. The gentleman of this case was Mr. Stanley, the very brainy Seceder left flankman.

Neither team made a serious threat until late in the first quarter when the Hose really made a concerted drive. The period ended with the ball on Erskine's 2 yard line. Barrett put it over in two tries as the second quarter opened. Copeland failed to kick goal. In the first, the Due Westers were unable to put any punch in their drives and were continually having to punt. The Blue Sox were listless and although able to gain almost at will in midfield, they were met by sterner opposition near the goal line and were unable to muster enough drive to tally. The second marker came shortly afterwards when Chisolm of Erskine, fumbled and a Blue shirted warrior recovered on the visitors' 21-yard line. One the next play Lockman circled left end for 12 yards and a first down. Adams added 3 more around the opposite flank and Perrin duplicated over right tackle. An Erskine man was badly hurt on the play and time was called. As play was resumed, Barrett hit center for another 3 yards and six more points. Copeland again failed to kick goal. This ended the scoring for the first half.

The second half saw a new team, in play at least, take the field for the Hose. They showed more drive, a more varied attack, and better all-round play, althoughh they did mess up two beautiful chances to score. The opening of the half saw one of these. After Watson returned a punt to Erskine's 30-yard line, Barrett got 8 yards at left tackle and then an extra 2 yards in the same place for a first down. Lockman then rolled up another with a 10-yard sprint around the left flank. The quarterback then decided to try Barrett four times in an attempt to score again. He got 5 yards at right end on the first try, 2 at left tackle on the second, and then one each on two successive line plunges over center, but the pigskin still lacked exactly 35 3-4 inches of crossing the last white marker. It was Erskine's ball on their own 1-yard stripe The Blue Sox passed up one more chance to score, but took advantage of all their other chances. Probably the most sensational of the touchdowns was the last one. Westerlund punted to the 50-yard line and Watson returned 25 yards. On the next play, a pass from Odiorne to Lockman was good for another 25 yards and a touchdown. Adams kicked goal. Then a near upset came. Adams kicked off to Westerlund on his own 15-yard line and that gentleman returned to the 5-yard line and passed everyone but Pollitzer, who stopped him just as the whistle blew to end the game.

The Seceders' only first down came as a result of a nine-yard dash through tackle. They put it across on the next play. The Due Westians only show at offense was their ability to return kickoffs for long gains, which they did with remarkable regularity.

Westerlund was by far the outstanding back for Erskine. He got off punts well and did practically all the ground gaining for the visitors. He also showed up well on defense. Stanley, Bell, and Robinson were the shining lights in the line. For P. C., Barrett (who made four of the touchdowns), Pollitzer (who acted like a greased eel in home waters), Adams and Lockman featured in the backfield, while Copeland, Hamer and Pinson showed up best in the forward works.

The line-up:

P. C. (38)		Erskine (0)
Pinson	le	Stanley
Elliott	lt	Allgood
Hamer	lg	Rogers
Rampey	c	Robinson
Brown	rg	Leslie
Ewing	rt	Bell
Copeland	re	Stevenson

payable in five quarterly installments. By pledging such a sum the alumnus will be joining a group of alumni known as the "110's."

Alumni outside the state have been asked to send in their subscriptions, while the alumni inside the state have been urged to make their pledges to the church chairmen in their city or town, and to cooperate in the campaign work.

It has been pointed out that joining the "110's" will mean only a matter of a little more than $2 per week from each alumnus over the period of payment, beginning December 1, 1929, and ending December 1, 1930 — five quarterly installments.

Organization of committees in all the churches of the synod, a work that is now under way, will bring the campaign forces up to a total of more than one thousand layment and clergymen.

Strong commendations of the work being done by Presbyterian college and endorsements of the present program are pouring into Clinton as the work of organizing for the state-wide program progresses, it was announced by William P. Jacobs, general chairman for the program. .

In a letter to Rev. John McSween, president of the college, Dr. R. T. Gillespie, president of Columbia seminary, declared recently that "the church has no more valuable agency for producing trained leaders than her college at Clinton."

In another statement, Dr. Henry Wade DuBose, of Spartanburg, declared that there is "no duty more urgent" than this movement to place the college upon a sound financial basis.

The South Carolina presbytery. at its meeting in historic Rocky Springs church near here last week, passed a resolution strongly endorsing the campaign and urging the united support of clergy and laity.

GOOD PLAY BY DRAMATIC CLUB

Otto Vogelsburger, proved to be the making of the play. He well portrayed the part of a German musician, and filled the play with gutteral remarks of clever saying and impressions that were very realistic, and added much to the play.

"Turk" Osman had the role of Spencer, and played the part of a day-made genius to perfection. The ward of Otto was played by Miss Medora Browning. She was the model of the artists, the mascot of the three, and turned out in the end to be the girl who married the genius.

Some of the best laughs of the play were through the acting of "Mike" Caskey and "Caesar" Meyers, who took the part of girls. Making girlish remarks with giggles between, two pseudo women threw the audience into roars of laughter. One took the part of a society girl dedicating her life to art, while the other was a school girl seeking the autograph of the genius.

The other two artists were T. M. Johnston and "Bill" Collins, the former being a sculptor, and Collins a French painter. Georgia B. Blakely played the girl of art whom Spencer wanted to marry, and Alma Davis took the part of her mother. "Red" Murphhy, in the role of art critic, did some fine acting and filled the part well. Hamlin was a would-be artist, Bill Blakely, a business man, and Ellen Copeland, a society lady.

Under the direction of Mrs. Marshall Brown the play went smoothly and showed the results of much work on her part. She had chosen the cast well with reference to the positions they filled and they portrayed them well.

Converse college is booked for the next performance, which will be Nov. 9.

DEBATE PLANS TAKE SHAPE

Wofford and Newberrry, in both the freshmen and varsity, and efforts will be made to get at least one girls' school, which has never been done in the past. Besides these there will be added several dual debates over the state, and perhaps with Mercer.

In the past few years interest in debates has become lax and it is the hope of those in charge to arouse more enthusiasm and put forensic work on a higher plane. With the above subject, it will be easy to get good arguments on both sides of the question and even in the literary societies there should be some good discussions on the question. .

ually this game is the last of the season for the Blue Hose and played on Thanksgiving, but a conflict in schedules necessitated a change this season.

The Hosemen left with the determination of giving the Bull Dogs an upset if possible. The Citadel has one of the strongest teams in the state this year and the game will probably be the hardest remaining on the Garnet and Blue schedule. Last year the P. C. team was defeated by their worst score of the season by the Cadets, and the year preceeding that the Charlestonians won a hard-fought game by a 7-6 score.

Neither Martin nor McQueen will be able to play in the game today.

Backed by the tradition of the Citadel never being easy to beat on their home field, the Blue Stockings face a hard contest this afternoon. has not been defeated by any the state this year and only by son from outside the state.

CITADEL WINS TIGHT GAME

Calvinist Line Makes Remarkable Stand. Cadets Score In First and Fourth Periods.

By Henry Cauthen

In The Charleston News and Courier

A stubborn line of big, game Scotchmen and a pair of swift, perilous backs knocked heads and used their might to harass and hamper the Citadel Bulldogs for the sake of Presbyterian college Friday, but the Cadets had enough to overcome this Calvinist combine and win by 14 to 0.

Hard-earned was this Cadet victory, and not much did the Presbyterians miss tying the score before the Citadel scored its second touchdown, and there is no telling what might have happened if this had occurred, no telling how much it would have jumped up the already stout resistance of the best Presbyterian team Charleston has seen since the days of Jimmy Stamps and his helpers.

Whittington got most of the yardage in a drive that started on the Cadets' 23-yard line and carried on over the goal line for this second touchdown, the score that really won the

McCravy Brothers Give Concert

The McCravy brothers of Laurens, nationally known victrola and radio artists, met with an enthusiastic reception at their Clinton concert, given under the auspices of the PaC-SaC last Tuesday evening at the Florida Street school. Although the weather was against them, a slow rain falling during the afternoon and evening, a creditable crowd turned out for the entertainment.

Accompanied by their sister, Miss Margaret McCravy, the two brothers, James and Frank, gave a varied program that entranced the audience from the start. Sacred numbers, comedy numbers, Negro spirituals, comic dialogue, and popular music, all joined to make the evening a delightful one. The trio showed their versatility by including piano, violin, banjo, and vocal numbers.

The concert was the first of a series of entertainments which the PaC-SaC intends to introduce to Clinton audiences during the college year. The proceeds from these programs will go to help pay for the college annual.

Presbyterians To Hear Dr. Green

Dr. J. B. Green, member of the Columbia seminary faculty of Atlanta, will occupy the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church both tomorrow morning and evening, in the absence from the city of its pastor, Dr. D. J. Woods. Dr. Green is one of the prominent ministers and teachers of his denomination and will be heard here Sunday with a great deal of pleasure. He is the father of Jimmy Green of Presbyterian college, outstanding member of the varsity football team.

A strenuous rushing season is over, and more men than ever before in the history of fraternity life at Presbyterian college have pledged themselves to life membership in the brotherhood of their choice.

Following the custom inaugurated last year, bids were issued through the faculty committee on fraternities in sealed form. This was done on Monday, October 28th. On the following morning a list of all freshmen receiving bids was posted on the bulletin board in the administration building. These men reported to Dr. Spencer,

BUSIEST PART OF CAMPAIGN DUE

List of Church Chairmen Completed. Jacobs, McSween Busy With Group Meetings.

Organization of forces for the Presbyterian college $350,000 program of deliverance speeded up this week as the date for the formal opening of the intensive portion of the campaign drew nearer.

The week just closing saw the completion of the list of some 250 church chairmen and their 122 associate church chairmen—the pastors. The week saw, too, the formation of campaign committees in perhaps half the churches, with the remainder of the chairmen promising to complete their committees during the coming week.

As a result of this activity in organization, William P. Jacobs, the general chairman, and President McSween, as associate general chairman, expressed satisfaction over the progress that is being made.

Nor were Mr. Jacobs and Mr. McSween idle. With sixteen group meetings being held in many sections of the state, with special gifts work to conduct, and with the organization work to supervise these two leaders have been extremely busy.

Both Mr. Jacobs and Mr. McSween have been speaking at a number of the group meetings, which are being held for instruction and inspiration of the campaign workers. And they have been canvassing the prospects for larger gifts.

Alumni and alumnae, realizing the importance of this effort as it concerns the future of the college, also were responding with increasing interest to the appeals sent out by Rev. Charles K. Douglas, alumni president. Quite a number of the graduates now have joined the "110's," a group of alumni subscribing $110 each to the fund. These pledges are payable in five quarterly instalments.

The intensive effort of the program opens formally on Sunday, November 10, with every church committee beginning the canvass of prospects. Reports on progress will be made on Tuesday, November 12; Friday, November 15, and Tuesday, November 19, the day set for the closing of the period.

By the close of that period it is hoped that the entire $350,000 fund will be subscribed, and that the college thus will be assured of relief from the burdens of debt and interest payments.

Players Go To Converse Soon

The Dramatic club of Presbyterian college will make its first out-of-town appearance next Saturday evening. The performance is to be given at Converse college, Spartanburg, under the auspices of the senior class of Converse. All arrangements have been completed, and the club will have its final practices in the early part of next week.

According to present plans the cast of the play, together with the members of the orchestra, which is to furnish music between acts, will leave Clinton immediately after lunch next Saturday. The group will proceed to Spartanburg where they will meet to carry on the last minute preperations. They will have the honor of dining with the Converse student body that evening.

The play, "The Genius," a three-act comedy by William C. and Cecil B. de Mille, was presented to a Clinton audience on October 21st. It met with a great deal of favorable comment as an hilarious comedy, well acted and well staged.

STUDENTS HEAR DR. T. W. LINGLE

Davidson Professor Gives Fascinating Talk On Travels In Mesopotamia.

Inaugurating a series of instructive addresses by outside speakers—a series that is to continue throughout the college year—Dr. Thomas W. Lingle, of Davidson college, spoke to the student body and faculty in chapel on Thursday, October 31st. Dr. Lingle is a warm and enthusiastic friend of Presbyterian college, being personally associated with many faculty members in the past. For a long number of years he has been professor of French at Davidson.

Dr. Lingle chose as his topic a distant land, celebrated in literature and history, the crade of civilization — Mesopotamia. In a fascinating and informal way he carried with him the imagination of his hearers as he reviewed his recent travels in the Near East. Interesting sidelights contributed from a wealth of personal experience joined with authoritative references to history and geography to hold the rapt attention of his audience from start to finish.

Dr. Lingle emphasized the important position held by Mesopotamia, now Iraq, in the history of the world. He pointed out numerous institutions of our own day that take their origin from the land between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. In addition, he conjured before the eyes a vision of the country through the vividness of his word pictures.

The usual chapel hour was omitted on Thursday morning. Classes were shortened ten minutes each, allowing an hour just before dinner for Dr. Lingle's address.

TERRIERS BEAT BLUE HOSE, 13-6

Jimmie Green Dashes 86 Yards On Kick-off In Third Period To Give Hose Only Score.

The Wofford Terriers handed the Blue Stockings a defeat yesterday at the Spartanburg County fair by a score of 13-6. Playing good ball, the Methodists, with a slightly heavier team and perfect interference, pushed the ball over the goal line twice, while the Calvinists scored but once. Jimmie Green trotted 86 yards through the Wofford line for a touchdown on a kick off in the third period, making the tally for P. C. and giving the stands the thrill of the day.

The game was a clean and hard-fought affair. Wofford in straight drives put the ball over in the opening minutes of play, and then settled back and played defense the remainder of the half. Twice in the first half P. C. was in scoring distance but was held off.

Opening the second half with a drive similar to the one in the first part of the game, Wofford again crossed the goal line. It was then, when the spirits of P. C. seemed lowest, that Jimmie made his spectacular run. Probably the best way to follow the playing of the Blue Hose is by the plays. Here is the way the P. C. team worked.

Galloway made fifften yards returning kick--off. Walker made three over right tackle. Green lost one over right tackle. Green punted 32 yards. Wofford made four first downs and scores touchdown. Offside, P. C. Galloway returned kick-off 22 yards. Green got four over right guard. Incomplete pass, Galloway to Lynn. Green punts 30 yards. P. C. offside. Galloway gets no gain through center. Bennett recovers punt. First and ten, P. C. Galloway lost two through center. Green gets seven over right tackle. Pass, Galloway to Lynn, intercepted. Green punts 41 yards. Wofford penalized 25 ards. Quarter

Green returns punt 5. Galloway one through center. Wofford offside on a successful pass. Dunlap over center for one yard. Green makes one over

Erskine Friday In Anderson

Erskine steak is next on the menu for the fighting Blue Hose. The game, scheduled for next Friday, November 8th, at the Anderson County fair, is one that should attract the attention of those who look back over the season when the dust has settled after Thanksgiving. P. C. and Erskine play much the same type of game, each presenting an attack that hinges on fast running and accurate passing.

Erskine, conquerors of Wofford and Newberry, and long-to-be-remembered losers to Furman and Carolina, is given an even break with the Calvinists by those who have experience in picking winners. All are agreed that the game will be spectacular and exciting, with both teams scoring one or more times. It will be the kind of contest that keeps spectators on the edge of their seats, ready to jump up, trample their neighbor's toes, and sit down on his hat while he is sitting on theirs. You'll know the winner and the score when the game is over.

PLEASURE, CONTENT, AND HAPPINESS

Pleasure, content, and happiness are three terms which we are prone to confuse. On the surface, perhaps, they appear to be synonymous; but as we probe the deeper significance of the words we find them to be separate and distinct. It does not require much thought to distinguish the first one from the last two. Pleasure is external—a sensation; contentment and happiness are internal—they are profound "feelings."

The difference between pleasure, on the one hand, and happiness, on the other, is admirably brought out in a recent magazine article, "Pleasure vs. Happiness," by O. A. Owen. He says:

"The Oriental philosophers draw a beautiful distinction between objects of human desire, dividing all gratifications into two classes. Fortunately the English tongue yields two words exactly fitting the distinction: Pleasure and Happiness.

"Dancing, rich viands, silks, kisses, travel, mansions, pictures, jewels—are pleasures, along with a thousand other earthly or outward delights that money can command. They are not necessarily wrong because they are pleasures.

"Happiness is, as Perlmutter would say, another thing. To love and be truly loved, to have a serene religious faith, to be respected and esteemed, to lie down at night and not fear, to have no torturing memories of all the ill deeds done—such things are happiness, and money cannot buy them. . . ."

"The Oriental distinction is real. A man now fighting his way to millions may as well remind himself that they will get him pleasures galore, if pleasures he wants; but that happiness is just as near to him now as it will be then."

There is, in addition, another distinction—the distinction between contentment and happiness. Here the difference is less sharply defined. Perhaps there are some who will even deny that a difference exists. "I am contented," they say, "ergo, I am happy." It may be that they are right. Contentment, to be sure, is a form of happiness, just as pleasure, to a lesser degree, is a form of happiness.

Content is passive; happiness is active—there is the point. Content, we may say, is the placid, serene sort of happiness. Nothing to strive after and yearn for, nothing to be desired—that is content. It implies satisfaction with the world, and with your own life—just as it is. The song says, "Happy as a cow, chewing her cud." It would be more fitting to say "Contented as a cow, chewing her cud," for the cow, standing dreamily in the shade, lazily switching her betasseled tail and rhythmically masticating her cud is indeed the world's most perfect picture of contentment.

Happiness is not like that. Happiness is an irresistible urge—a contagious tune that simply demands to be sung. It is almost an out-and-out dissatisfaction with things as they are. It is restless, spirited, effervescent. It cannot be hidden. Happiness shines from your eyes and betrays itself with every motion and every spoken word. It is like a month-old kid, frisking and capering from rock to rock on the mountain-top.

Pleasure is superficial; happiness and content are profound. Content is passive; happiness is active. Pleasure is the goal of those who have no depth. Contentment is the reward of those faithful souls who are always correct; never risking, never gaining, never losing; never looking eagerly forward, but always looking back.

Happiness is neither a goal nor a reward. You may happen on it when you are least expecting it. It is here today—gone tomorrow. Elusive, tantalizing, deceptive, untrustworthy; it brings you ecstasy and leaves you despair. Yet once you have found a little of it, what taste is there for pleasure and content?

THE ERSKINE GAME

Those who have followed South Carolina football this season will not have to be told that the P. C.-Erskine game next Friday will be one of the high points of both schedules. Not that P. C. is the most important team played by Erskine, and not that Erskine is the largest college played by P. C.—anyone knows that such is not the case. Interest will center on the game because the teams should be equally matched, and because the outcome has always been in doubt until the last whistle is blown.

Erskine, we have heard, is decidedly "set" to beat Presbyterian. Smarting under last year's one-point defeat, and boasting an exceedingly dangerous passing attack as well as a speedy offense, they will enter the game with the idea of winning. And unless Coach Johnson's men are on their toes every minute of the game, that is just about what Erskine will get—victory.

However, Presbyterian is not asleep, and will not be next Friday when the teams sally forth to do battle on the Anderson fair-grounds. A staunch and sturdy line together with four alert and fast-stepping backs, will be there to entertain the Seceders for four quarters. Plays have been working with unusual precision and snap as the team prepared for Wofford this week. The squad has been showing a fine spirit. Unless Wofford proves to be a bone-crushing outfit, the Calvinists, win or lose, should have something of this will-to-win when they meet the Seceders.

It is a pretty safe bet that both teams will score. Erskine has tallied against both Carolina and Furman, neither of whom yielded a single point to the Hosemen. They will present Parkinson, Reid, and Hambright, a much-heralded trio that likes to keep the pressmen writing sixes--and, which is more to the point, they do it rather often.

Presbyterian, after three terrific defeats at the hands of Furman, Carolina, and Citadel, is just getting into second wind and real-mid-season form. Injuries are working off, bruises and cuts are healing, the morale of the squad is soaring. The line is working like clockwork on offensive and like nobody's business on defense. The backs are gaining confidence again. When next Friday comes around everyone will be raring to go. That P. C.-Erskine game will be a real football game.

CARS WANTED

The Dramatic club hereby issues a call for cars to take the cast of the play to Converse college next Saturday, November 9th. In all, there are about twenty persons to go. This means that the club needs four or five cars capable of carrying five passengers each. The cast of the play together with the members of the orchestra and one or two stage managers will make the trip.

Those who have cars or can furnish them are asked to report to either Chip Grafton, Mrs. M. W. Brown, or Tommy Johnston early next week. The club will pay for gas and oil for the trip, as well as one meal. Of course drivers will be admitted to the play.

As only four or five cars will be needed, those who wish to volunteer are asked to do so as soon as possible. The first ones to apply will be taken.

The group expects to leave Clinton immediately after dinner on Saturday. Announcement will be made later as to time and place of meeting in Spartanburg that afternoon. The club expects to return immediately after the conclusion of the play, or as soon thereafter as circumstances permit.

We, Too, Wish Him Well

Dick King, captain of The Citadel 1928 football team and all-State end for 1927 and 1928, was recently mentioned as a possible all-American by 1932. The prophecy was made by a sports writer of the New York World who covered an opening game between the Army Plebes and Bellefonte academy. In the write up the following was stated: "Dick King the great Citadel end, is making his football mark already. Here is a prediction, he will be all-American in 1932."

The paper also stated that Dick scored the winning touchdown by catching a pass and running 35 yards. —Bull Dog (Citadel).

Hire a Secretary

Four letters in one day are enough to satisfy the most ardent of men, even when they do not embody affectionate expressions from four beautiful young women, but rare is the man whose worth brings him such epistles. One Carolina student has been vouchsafed a quartet of love-letters in one day, however, and is not yet satisfied.

The lucky man is Alphonse Des-Champs, instructor in French, and the four letters came from Converse college, Spartanburg home for handsome women. There is cause for Mr. Des-Champs' lack of contentment, though. The four love letters were written by four freshmen at Converse, and they "took their pens in hand" under compulsion. Hence the absence of the perfect heart balm.—The Hornet (Furman.)

"Intelligence is just about the last thing a Princeton freshman likes to find in a girl, if any generalization can be drawn from a vote recently taken among the 490 freshmen here. The vote also indicated that, to the mass mind, constancy was a rather trivial consideration, and that if a girl was beautiful or if she was a good dancer or a ready conversationalist she could be a nitwit for all it mattered to the majority of the first-year men.

"The freshmen were asked to name 'the most most essential quality in the ideal girl.' Seventy-four, the largest number to agree on any single quality, decided that the one most essential was 'physical beauty.' Sixty-five, less esthetically inclined, voted for 'personality.' The third highest vote, 45, went to 'ability to dance well.' 'Good sense and humor appealed to 34 of the youthful Princetonians as most essential.

"Thirty-one favored an 'interesting conversationalist.' 'Constancy' came in fifth with 29 votes. Twenty-four of the freshmen looked upon 'brains' as most essential. Only 18 of the freshmen admitted that their taste was influenced by money; they voted for 'wealth.'

"Sixteen came to the conclusion that the most essential quality in the ideal girl was 'abstinence from drinking.' Nine arrived at the conclusion that a girl was ideal if she didn't smoke. Sixty-five gave up determination of the 'ideal girl' as a bad job and didn't vote."—As quoted in The State.

Ye Bohunkes Sallye Forthe To Do Battle Withe Worthye Redde Foe

Staging a dashing come-back comparable to the Yale rally which defeated Army last week, the Presbyterian college Bohunks (see note), with scant seconds to play, rushed, ran, tramped, stumbled, passed, and otherwise advanced the ball eighty yards to tie the Bailey Red Devils 6-6. The annual Bohunk classic was played in Bailey stadium, Greenwood, S. C., before a crowd of approximately one hundred and fifty fans.

J. E. ("Worthy Red") Means, Michael (Mike) Caskey, and D. S. (Temp) Templeton—surely these names will go down in the archives of history together with those of other P. C. stars who have shown themselves capable of filling football short orders with special delivery promptness. For Temp it was, and none other, who crashed through left tackle and raced sixty yards in the closing moments of play to place the Hunks in a position to score. Not long afterwards, and as the setting sun sat in its aura of splendor, suffusiug the crimson clouds with the delicate blush and tender hues of departing day, Mike Caskey drew back a graceful, sinuous limb and sped on its way the air-infated ovoid that was to settle, with such disastrous results to the victorious hopes of the Bailey warriors, into the waiting and eager appendages of Worthy Means. The disappointed Devils retrieved themselves and staved off possible defeat when they swarmed through to block the kick which Grafton directed at the bars.

Handicapped by the fact that they had had only two days of practice together, and by the fact that some of the players had never practiced with the outfit, it is indeed remarkable that the Bohunks acquitted themselves so nobly. Much credit is due to Coach-Captain Mike Caskey who organized, directed, and inspired his teammates to super-football.

Early in the game a fumbled punt gave the Red Devils their first opportunity to score. A speedy end swooped in and recovered on the Bohunks' ten-yard line. However, with necessity and defeat thus staring them so grimly in the face, the Hunks held like a stone wall and took the ball on downs, a performance which was repeated on the same ground on three other occasions before the final whistle allowed the agitated dust to settle. For the remainder of the first half the honors were about even, Caskey, Templeton, and Winters tearing off neat gains for the Hunks and Huges, Withers, Dabs and the Whittaker twins retaliating in behalf of Bailey. On several occasions the deadly passing attack of the Hunks presented a serious threat. The feature of the half was the "time-out," called by Captain Caskey in the first period. He strolled to the side-lines, secured his note-book, and returned to explain a difficult play to his teammates.

Between halves the Hunks might have been seen rehearsing a couple of "good 'uns" for use in the remaining minutes of play. Several ragged plays were perfected at this time, and one, the play on which Templeton made his breath-taking dash, was devised on the spot to meet the exigencies of the situation.

However, it was all to no avail. A rejuvenated and determined Bailey team forced the Hunks well back into their own territory where a fumble gave them the ball with goal to go. In three swift, crushing plays they had carried it over and Presbyterian hopes received an almost-fatal blow. Withers drop-kicked for the extra point but his kick went wide and the scoreboard, if there had been one like in the pictures, would have read Bailey 6—Hunks 0.

Thrice more did the hosts invade to the very portals of Rome, and thrice did brave Horatius at the bridge deny them entrance. Once, after taking the ball on downs on his own one-yard line, Caskey astounded the populace with a daring pass which lacked inches of both completion and interception. On the next play the ball was punted out of danger, only to be returned by a brilliant run on the past of one of the Whittaker boys. Here a stubborn resistance again wrested the pig-skin (which was probably cow-hide, but that is beside the point) from the Red Devils.

Really, kind friends, things looked just too bad. Scarcely three more revolutions of the second hand on the time-keepers watch and the game would be over — past — completed — carved inerasably upon the marble pillars of time. It is not a time to reach with indescribable melancholy for your hat, only to find that you have been sitting on it for three quarters? Ah, gentle reader, brave souls have steeped themselves in dismal gloom on such occasions as this.

But the Bohunks? Well, that is another story. No gloom here. The quarterback confidantly calls his signals, the team lines up—it's a reverse—no, a fake—a blue-clad back is hurtling through the line—he's loosé! he's gone! No, not quite! Red and and blue are mingled in a cloud of dust as the safety man hooks three fingers in the blue jersey and detains the runner on the twenty-yard mark. Time out! How many minutes to go? One minute and twenty four seconds.

Now they line up again. Caskey, on the same fake reverse, drags three tacklers to the fifteen yard mark. Templeton smashes right tackle for five more. Eleven to go and thirty seconds to play. They line up. It's a pass! A Bailey back rushes to bat it down. He brushes it with his hands—too bad! But wait! The ball has veered upward in a crazy arc—a red-headed, blue-jerseyed fellow is straining toward it—he's got it! No, he dropt it! No, he caught it! It's a touchdown—a touchdown! Red Means, trying to look as if it were an everyday event, modestly offers the ball to the referee as though to prove it really is the ball, and then the score really is tied up at 6-6. The kick is blocked and the scoring is ended. P. C. kicks off but before another play can be executed the time-keeper distends his cheeks, forces air through the whistle at a high velocity, and the game, by this token, is over.

(Note).—The etymology of the word "Bohunk" is much disputed. Archaeologists tell us that it is probably derived from the Persian word "boohunckuss," which means "third assistant to the general's stable--boy." The word may be differently traced back to the time of Chaucer. An obscure manuscript defines the term something like this. "Bohunkes are thoze individuwels who, whenn ye armie goeth forth to fyghte, must, perforss, remayne at hoome to scower ye pottes and pannes. Theyre worke is of ye hardesst kynd, yette they reseeve only ye slyghtest rewahrd, exseppte thatte which they may derhyve fromme satisfackshun atte theyre owhnne paytriotyam."

Polly: "The photographers never do me justic."

Molly: "You want mercy, not justice, dear."

Manager: "I advise you to let the villain shoot himself instead of taking poison."

Author of new play: "Really? Why do you suggest that?"

"It'll wake the audience up."

Each year the number of traveling salesman is decreasing. Who says the world isn't getting better?

There are two types of great men. One type burns midnight oil; the other sells midnight oil.

"Mama, can I go out to play?"

"What, with those holes in your pants?"

"No, ma'am, with the little boy next door."

"And you can cook like mother used to?"

"Yes, if you can stand indigestion like your father used to."

She: "Don't you know there are germs in kissing?"

He: "Say girlie, when I kiss I kiss hard enough to kill the germs."

He: "I've got half a mind to get married."

Ditto: "Well, that's all you need."

CITADEL WINS TIGHT GAME

game, for as long as the Cadets were only seven points ahead they were far from safe, for in Jimmy Green and Ritchie, Presbyterian had two backs who were threatening.

The dashing Green, often stopping only after more than one man had hit him, raced 60 yards once over the goal line after receiving a punt. It looked like he had a touchdown and a hush fell over the Citadel partisans, but the officials ruled he had stepped out of bounds on the Cadets' 40-yard line and the ball was brought back. This was in the third period and Citadel had only seven points. Had Green not overstepped the line and if P. C. could have added the extra point the score might have been tied. Green changed his pace and dodged superbly in his run.

That was the only time the Cadets were in grave danger, though they were always pressed and only in three drives did they click effectively enough for sustained marches. Two stalwart Presbyterian tackles, Cheatham and Blakely; a small but very mobile center, McNaull, a big guard, Beckman, and a crack end, Lynn, interrupted the Cadets' smooth running game as much as any line they have run into this season except that of V. M. I. These forwards went down only after a terrific fight and only after crossing the line of scrimmage as much as it had been crossed this season.

The Citadel got a "break" on the opening kick-off and almost profited from it. Green fumbled McIntosh's long kick-off, had to go back and get it and was downed on his two-yard line as he tried to come back. He punted to the Citadel's 35-yard line and on the first play the slippery Wilson cut back over his right tackle for 17 yards to the 18-yard line. He, Whittington and McIntosh pushed on up to the 12-yard line, but the Citadel fumbled and Blakely, who was to play such a powerful game, recovered for Presbyterian. Prior to the fumble the P. C. line stopped two Citadel plays dead.

Presbyterian punted out. Whittington tried to catch the ball on the run, fumbled on P. C.'s 30-yard line and Cheatham recovered for the up-staters. Green made a six-yard run and then one for 10 yards. Several exchanges followed and Green and Young made a first down on the Citadel's 42-yard line, finding a big hole on the left side of the Citadel line. Something went wrong there and Kirby finally replaced Roberts at left tackle. Ritchie lost seven on a fumble, but a P. C. pass got it back and six in addition and then Ritchie broke away for 22 yards on a reverse play to the Citadel's 20-yard line. Here Kirby came in and Roberts went out.

But this was as far as the Blue Stockings could go. Citadel's defense stiffened and did not yield another yard, the ball going over to the Citadel after a pass on the fourth down had failed. The Cadets reeled off two first-downs, the flashing Whittington making the second on a 16-yard run. But then McNaull and McQueen crashed through to stop two Citadel plays and Wilson punted to Green on P. C.'s 23-yard line. Green fumbled it and the rangy Kirby recovered for the Citadel. But McIntosh just failed to make a first-down on the 15-yard line and this opportunity for a Citadel score was lost. Green punted to Wilson on the Citadel's 40-yard line and the Cadets were at last off to a touchdown.

Wilson passed to Whittington for 13 yards to start it and then to Chapman for 15. McIntosh broke through a hole at left guard, put on a burst of speed and traveled 15 yards before Green, the last defense man, sunk him with a hard tackle, 16 yards from the goal line. Wilson and McIntosh carried it to the two-yard line to give McIntosh a chance to crash over with the score. McIntosh place-kicked for the extra point.

The second Citadel backfield, composed of Gray, Barbot, Jackson and Brasington, now came into the game with the second period nearing its end and worked up to the 30-yard line of the enemy in one drive, but could not score.

Shortly after the third period opened, Wilson and Whittington, with flashy runs behind devastating interference, carried the ball from the Cadets' 30-yard line to the same mark in P. C. territory, but they could not cross the line, a pass from Wilson tipping Brown's hands just over the goal line on the fourth down. Whittington had made a 22-yard run and Wilson one of 13 yards in this march. The rest of this period was dull and unproductive.

Just after the fourth quarter opened, Green got off a long punt to the Citadel's 23-yard line and then Whittington and Wilson combined in a brilliant 77-yard advance for a touchdown.

The little Georgia red-head really came into his own. He was an artist in following the fine interference of this drive. Wilson started it with a nine-yard thrust at tackle and Whittington came through with another of the same distance. Then he reeled off 20 as the Cadet interference swept the path clean. Chapman came in to help here with four and then Whittington flashed away again for 11 and then for five and then for nine as the crowd roared its approval.

"Red" was eating up the yardage. At last the P. C. stubbornness had been conquered. Wilson failed and he called on Whittington again and "Red" replied with nine yards at the right side of the Citadel line, where the gaining was being done. He had reached the seven-yard line now and was given a rest, McIntosh making the rest of the distance in one attack at the same right side over on the sideline, which he skimmed. McIntosh again kicked the goal and thereby got credit for all the scoring.

Dunlap got off a run of 21 yards and Lynn caught a pass to put the ball on Citadel's 40-yard line later in the period, but Gray stopped this advance by intercepting a pass on his 30-yard line and the Citadel got two first-downs in a row just before the final whistle.

It was a safe Citadel victory as it turned out but the Presbyterians left an impression of a tough fight and a threat.

Pass, Green to Ritchie, incomplete. Green punts 29 yards. Wofford penalized 15 yards. P. C. first and ten. Wofford off side. Pass, Galloway to Lynn, 8. Galloway gets 2 at left guard.

Every man on the P. C. team played a good game. Beckman and Blakely proved the mainstays in the line, while both Bennett and Lynn starred on the wings. Lynn made another step toward a berth on the all-state. Jimmie Green did some of the best punting of the season, getting off some beautiful kicks. Too much praise cannot be given any one. They all played good ball, recovering several fumbles, and at no time letting Wofford get away for any long runs.

P. C. had possession of the ball the majority of the time and except for Wofford's two drives the goal was never in danger. Despite the ten first and tens scored for Wofford against seven for P. C., the lads made 221 yards during the game.

chairman of the faculty committee, at 3:20 that afternoon. At this time they signified their first, second, and third choices of fraternities on the campus. Pledges were compiled by Dr. Spencer after comparison of the two documents.

The period between the time bids are issued and the time preferences are indicated by new men, is a "quit" period. During this time no fraternity man is permitted to speak to a freshman on the subject of fraternities, nor is he permitted to associate with freshmen in any capacity that is avoidable. This system insures fairness in pledging. Freshmen are free to make up their own minds, and to choose as they please. Fraternities issue their bids in sealed form, so no one need ever know whether or not any organization has been "bumped."

The list of pledges, as it appeared on the bulletin board last Tuesday, is given below: (Other pledges which have been subsequent to that time are not available for publication as The Blue Stocking goes to press.)

The men, it is understood, will be housed in "C" section of Smyth dormitory, while the girls will stay in town with certain friends who have already volunteered to act as hostesses for the occasion.

Arrangements for the program have not yet been entirely completed, but several items are ready for publication. On the evening of November 14th, the first day of the convention, a reception will be given in honor of the delegates. On the following evening a dance will add to the social side of the gathering. There will be two or three business meetings each day, as well as informal discussoin of common problems.

to meet in Clinton next fall in joint session with the Georgia body which two weeks ago accepted a similar invitation.

Within the past week the session of the First Presbyterian church has unanimously approved the idea and extended an invitation to the synod through its stated clerk, to meet in this city. No invitation was accepted by the synod at its recent meeting in Anderson, and it is stated by those in a position to know, that the Clinton bid will in all probability be accepted.

The coming of the two synods will be of inestimable value to their two intstitutions located here. It is expected that the Georgia visitors will be entertained on the orphanage campus, while the South Carolina delegates will be provided for at the colo in Presbyterian homes in t It is planned to hold the busi sions of the Georgia body Thornwell Memorial church, South Carolina organization First Presbyterian church. Student Officers To Wear Sabres

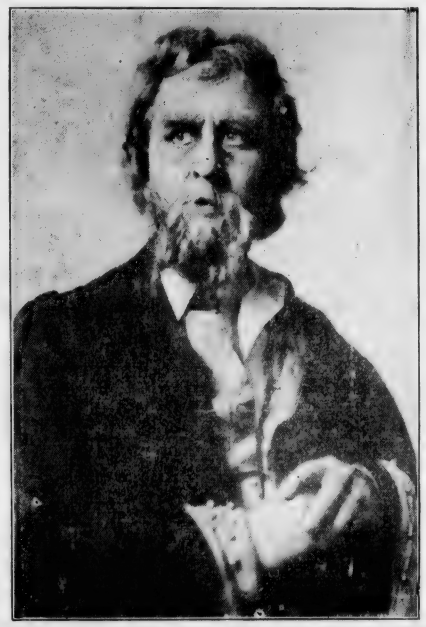
Cadet officers who are in actual ommand of units on the drill field ill carry sabres this year. This is not peculation; it is an assured fact. The abres arrived last Tuesday and the fficers have been practicing the manual during drill periods since that ime.

Since there are only eleven of these nstruments of warfare (parade-round warfare), available, officers will alternate in their use. On Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, the company commanders and platoon eaders will wear them. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, the seconds-in-command of the companies and the attached lieutenants will flourish their polished surfaces.



The addition of sabres will add to the snap of the unit. Especially on parade days will they show up to advantage. Captain Wysor is superintending the practice of the manual, and will continue to do so until officers are reasonably perfect in the manipulation of the long knives.

Armistice Day To Be Recalled

The Monday morning chapel period will be devoted to an Armistice day program. The bell will ring at eight-thirty and the exercises will begin promptly at eight thirty-five.

Band numbers and a speech by President McSween will be the features of the morning program. In addition, there will be, at eleven o'clock, a minute of silent prayer. The bell will toll at that hour and all classes are asked to suspend while students stand for a short period of reverence to those who died for America on the battlefields of France.

Frederick G. Lewis As Shylock

"MERCHANT OF VENICE" COMES HERE NEXT SATURDAY EVENING

The PaC-SaC Sponsors Appearance Of Shakespearean Production. Frederick G. Lewis, Noted Actor, Takes Part of Shylock. Company of 16 Coming.

Joseph Selman, prominent for many years in casts of New York successes, presents, under the auspices of the PaC-SaC, Frederick G. Lewis, as Shylock, in "The Merchant of Venice," at the Orphanage chapel, Nov. 16, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Selman, realizing that in recent years an increasingly large percentage of the audiences who attend Shakespearean performances is composed of school and college students, has organized a company of players which includes actor of national fame and will present these performances as part of a local educational program in conjunction with the leading colleges and schools throughout the South.

Naturally, the public will be invited to attend, but the idea back of the venture is to produce Shakespearean plays on a practical financial basis and to bring breath of life to a textbook subject for a generation who otherwise might not have the opportunity of realizing to the full the entertaining qualities, the beauty and rhythm and picturesqueness of the classic drama.

The star in the Avon players is Frederick G. Lewis, whose fame has carried him to London and to Rome and other world capitals in the principal roles of plays by Shakespeare, Ibsen and later writers. Mr. Lewis was associated with the companies of Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern and

ARRANGE JOINT SYNOD SESSION

Georgia and South Carolina To Hold Synod Meetings Here On October 7th, 1930.

Columbia, Nov. 2.—Nevt year for the first time ever known the Presbyterian synod of Georgia will have its annual meeting on South Carolina soil. Announcement was made here today that the synod of Georgia and the synod of South Carolina will meet jointly on October 7, 1930, at Clinton, S. C. The two state-wide church bodies will be guests of the Presbyterian college and of Thornwell orphanage, two institutions supported jointly by the two synods.

The Georgia synod will have its individual business sessions in the Thornwell Memorial church on the campus of Thornwell orphanage. The South Carolina synod will have its sessions in the First Presbyterian church ot Clinton. The delegates to the Georgia synod will be entertained in homes and dormitories on the orphanage campus and the delegates to the South Carolina synod meeting will be entertained on the campus of the Presbyterian college. There will also be joint sessions of a popular nature. It is announced, in the First Presbyterian church.

ANDERSON FAIR DAY BATTLE ENDS IN SURPRISING 44-7 SCORE

Blue Stockings Run Rampant To Pile Up Seven Touchdowns To One for Seceders. Erskine's Expected Air Attack Fails As Presbyterians Nip Plays In Bud.

(By the Associated Press)

Anderson, Nov. 8.—Erskine's "flying feet" failed to fly at Memorial field today and Walter Johnson's Blue Stockings, better mud heroes, playing an alert and aggressive game, sent the Seceders back to Due West on the small end of a 44 to 7 score. The widely herolded passing attack of the Seceders did not profit them much more than their running plays. The P. C. line, always on its toes, stopped the running attack before it could get started and the passing, except for a few minutes in the first quarter, was high and wide, falling on many occasions into the arms of P. C. backs and linemen.

A fair day crowd of approximately 2,500 people saw the game. The ma-

DEBT CAMPAIGN OPENS SUNDAY

All In Readiness for $350,000 Drive. Great Falls Is the First Church To "Go Over Top."

The first church "over the top" in the Presbyterian college $350,000 program of deliverance sent in its report to William P. Jacobs, general chairman, Friday.

The church is Great Falls, in Bethel Presbytery, which reported a total of $540, or $40 more than the church goal.

The report came from Colonel A. L. Gaston, chairman for Zone No. 2 in the campaign organization. L. M. Pittman is campaign chairman for the Great Falls church, while Rev. J. M. Forbis is pastor.

Great Falls is a small Chester county congregation and the fact of its having exceeded its quota was taken as an indication of ultimate success.

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the campaign on Sunday, and all churches are urged by Mr. Jacobs to attempt to reach their goals in time for the first report scheduled for Tuesday, November 12.

Some 1300 laymen and ministers, representing all parts of the Synod of South Carolina, are ready to begin the campaign that is designed to deliver Presbyterian college from its indebtedness.

Church chairmen and pastors will give short talks in the Sunday service in Presbyterian churches throughout the state, and in the afternoon the church campaign committees will begin the intensive canvassing of prospects.

As has been pointed out by Mr. Ja-

Dramatic Club In Spartanburg

The Dramatic club and orchestra left this afternoon, immediately after lunch, for Spartanburg. Tonight's the night. At eight-thirty they will present at Converse college their three-act comedy, "The Genius." The play was presented in Clinton on October 21st, and met with considerable success.

Those who comprised the group, including the cast of the play, officials of the club, and members of th orchestra, as well as drivers, were: Mrs. M. W. Brown, Alma Davis, Medora Browning, Georgia Bee Blakely, Mrs. J. B. Parrott, Mr. Parrott, Sergeant Parham, Mike Caskey, H. T. Swedenberg, Palmer, Williamson, Osman, D. L. Wood, M. T. Murphy, Bill Blakely, aney, Welch, T. P. Evans, R. Simpson, Brabham, W. C. Dendy, Bothwell Graham, Jr., T. M. Johnston, Bill Collins, "Caesar" Myers, J. A. Hamlin and Chip Grafton.

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE PROGRAM OF DELIVERANCE

What the $350,000 Fund Will Do

1. Deliver Presbyterian College from the burden of debt, meeting one of the requirements of the Southern Association of Colleges.
2. Eliminate life-sapping annual interest payments.
3. Deliver the church from burdensome emergency contributions for college operating expense.
4. Assure receipt of three endowment gifts totaling $148,000, offered upon condition that the debt be liquidated by January 1, 1931.
5. Bring the college endowment—by receipt of the three conditional gifts—up to very near the half-million mark, thus, with a normal annual contribution from the church, meeting another requirement of the Southern Association of Colleges.
6. Assure, through the meeting of the debt and endowment requirements, the retention by Presbyterian College of its membership and high classification in the Association.

THE LURE OF THE FAR-AWAY

[illegible] of flesh, a thing with hands and feet [illegible] and [illegible] the law of gravity, the pangs of hunger. A very inconvenient thing, this body of ours. Today it is here—tomorrow, at best, it can be but a few miles distant. If a man were to spend his life travelling he could yet reach but a few of the distant corners of the earth. Yes, there's the rub. A man's imagination may wander, but his body must remain at home. Perhaps that is why man loves to read of places he has not seen. Perhaps that is why life at times seems to us useless and disappointing. It is not Here that man is interested in—it is There, the place at the end of the road, the spot beyond the horizon, the other slope of the hill.

In books we love best to read of places we have never seen, and of things we have never experienced. If we have never been out of our native state we seek out the books that tell of Paris, Vienna, Monte Carlo, and India. If we are timid, what better than to curl up on the davenport with a story of the big, silent, dominant fellows? What skinny youth has not read breathlessly of the achievements of "Big Jim" Whoozits who pets a homeless kitten and then enters the game to dash about making touchdowns for Old Alma Mater? And if we should chance to have the kind of face which most of us have, we enjoy nothing more whole-heartedly than a story of some Rudolph Valentino, who, by raising an eyebrow, attracts swarms of women whom he must then spend his time evading.

And so it goes on through the moving pictures. Singapore, is a fine name for use in subtitles, for those who have seen the place are few in number. The French Foreign Legion is depicted on the screen and the gum-chewers halt the rhythmic motion of their patient jaws. We love to see our sun-tanned hero riding steadfastly across the big, wide, deserted, open spaces. If we were in any of these places we should very likely welcome a good reliable chance to come home.

But that is the nature of man, and perhaps it is better so. The body is tied down. What a blessing it is that the imagination is not in the same fix! Day dreams and air-castles—they are alike the property of the king and the beggar. The man with imagination gets along in the world, for it is his privilege to think of having things—and that is the first step towards possession.

It would indeed be a dreary life if we had to confine our thoughts to things we have and things we can do. Robert Browning said, "Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for?" To be always striving, always reaching for that which is beyond us; to set our goal higher than the highest we can attain; to turn our faces toward the best, although it can only be reached by the longest and hardest road—these are the beginnings of greatness.

Does the road lure you, winding away off out of sight? It is well. Look down the road and dream of the things you have never seen. You may never travel farther than the first bend, but you will be a better man for having nursed those thoughts and dreamed those dreams. Stretch out! Don't cramp yourself! Man's body is finite, but his mind and soul are infinite. The world is yours. It is a free stamping ground for your imagination. Take it and use it. A man is as big as his thoughts and ideals.

A HOME-COMING ISSUE

Next week's Blue Stocking will be a Home-coming issue. It will contain several interesting features which should help to attract alumni to the Home-coming day festivities, and to the Home-coming game with Newberry, to be played on Johnson field, Thanksgiving day. It is hoped that cuts will be available next week for use in this issue of the paper. The mats have been ordered and should be in early next week.

Home-coming grads will find much to interest them in Clinton on November 28th. They will find the handsome [illegible] and in the South. They will see another addition to the college plant, the President's home, which was presented last year. Besides these concrete and solid items of interest, they will find [illegible] and [illegible] entertainment and [illegible].

And then, of course, there is that big feature of the day—the Newberry game mentioned above. This football game has always attracted notice in the state. Newberry and P. C. have always staged a battle-royal on the gridiron, and that is what the fans want, whether the teams represent Harvard and Yale or Podunk and Oshkosh. They may rest assured that they will see football, and plenty of it, on that day. Newberry will send her Indians to Clinton with one of these very best desires to win. P. C., with that irking 13-6 thing of last year still rankling in sturdy breasts, will go out for results. Each team will be determined to emulate the celebrated irresistible force of offense and the equally heralded immovable object, when on defense. Any simpleton knows that when an irresistible force meets an immovable object, a situation arises that calls for the deliberation of the world's great physicists. When the parallel situation arises on Johnson field that day, not the physicists but the football fans and alumni will want to be there for a little personal observation and goodly deliberation.

It's a Big Event

Home-coming day will be a big event this fall. The campaign will be over and everyone will be in just the right kind of mood. What it needs right now is Publicity, with a capital "P." It needs newspaper publicity and it will probably get it; but more than that it needs "letter-home" publicity. Now is a very good time to be reminding your Dad and all the former P. C. men whom you know, that November 28th is THE day. Tell them to put a big ring around it on the calendar so they won't forget it. And when you see folks, just tell them they can't afford to miss the 1929 game between the Hoosiers and the Indians.

Just a Timely Word

And while we are on the subject, it might be well to remind you that your presence is needed, too, on Thanksgiving day. Don't get all excited making plans to go home. Do that some other time. There are lots of week-ends, and week-ends are longer than a single day anyway. Christmas, after all, isn't much farther away than Turkey day.

It is natural that returning grads want to see the fellows. They have seen most of the [illegible] before, [illegible] What they want is a good sample of the P. C. spirit, and a good handshake with their former buddies, if any of them are still in college. So let's all plan to be here that Thursday afternoon to do our part. An empty campus will make a poor home-coming day. Don't forget that.

Besides, how can the team do any good on the gridiron if the stands are empty? A lot of hearty yelling makes a man tackle harder and run faster, that's only natural. Of course the graduates will be there with lusty throats, but the organized cheering of the student body is indispensable.

Look at it from another angle. Fellows bum to the far corners of the earth and jump fences to see football games, you know that. Well, here's ones chance stay right here and see a game for nothing. You can walk right in the gate and look the ticket-taker squarely in the eye without flinching and wondering whether his hand is going to close over your collar with that firm grip that bouncers have. That's a rare thrill. Try it some time. Better still, stay here and try it on Thanksgiving day.

Last year Newberry sent a large crowd of students to the game. They raised a lot of whoopee and noise on the side-lines and put a lot of fight into their team. This year they will do the same thing. P. C. will have to step out if she wants to put up a better showing than Newberry. What we want is lots and lots of folks and a big hunk of noise per each. Thanksgiving is the big chance to do your stuff.

Ye Grande Olde Game

By B. H. Dickson

Whatever may be said to disprove the assertion that P. C. is a one-horse college, it cannot be denied that a least the horse's shoes are here as circumstantial evidence.

Perhaps the revival of ye ancient game has been brought about by the new compulsory physical education requirements—or perhaps not, but just suppose that such is the case. Who knows! Perhaps the recessive gene for horseshoes has been lying dormant for all these many years, held down by the more dominant desire to appear far above indulgence in such rustice pastimes.

Before any rash criticism is made of the revival of this delight of the olden haymakers, it might be well to reflect that it will take at least several centuries for the Yo-Yo to acquire such a wealth of tradition as has gathered around the footwear of "Old Dobbin."

Say what you want to on the subject, the game seems to me to have all the elements that make up a major sport—personal rivalry to stimulate effort, skill, chances for rallies—everything is there. "Whadda ya say to game? Jim and I will beat you and Jack." There's the challenge . . "Pitch First!!!"

"Thankful! What have I to be thankful for? I can't pay my bills."

"Then, man alive, be thankful you are not one of your creditors."

Did you hear about the deaf and dumb man breaking his hand hollering fire?

Nothing is a bladeless knife without a handle.

"Does Vera look her age?"

"No; she overlooks it."

When you are trying to make up your mind to kiss your girl and surprise her, don't kiss her, and surprise her!—Tenn. Mugwump.

"Will you marry me if I promise to cook three meals a day for you?"

"Yes, honey, but is it absolutely necessary for you to promise that?"

Co-ed: "No, no, I won't kiss you!"
Co-ed Boy: "Then I warn you—I'll play my ukulele!"

"I think I'll open up an office when I graduate."

"I'll probably turn out to be a janitor myself."
